NORFOLK, Va., April 14.—Special—Because of excitement in Hull, Eng., incident to recent Zeppelin attacks, the Treasury Department has accepted the excuse of Capt. Evangeline, master of the British steamer Iona, which arrived at Norfolk on April 7, and relieved that vessel of a fine of $5,000 imposed by Collector Hamilton for entering this port without an American Consular bill of health.

Capt. Evangeline swore that two Zeppelin raids upon Hull occurred within three days prior to his sailing, one occurring just before he appeared at the customs house for his clearance papers.

The office force, mainly women and youths, because of the older males entering the army, were thrown into confusion and his bill of health was inadvertently not included among his papers in consequence.

Condemned By Own Statement

British Foreign Office Makes Comment on Berlin's Latest Note—Guilt is Manifest

LONDON, April 14.—Special—Asked to give an official view on Germany's note to the American Government concerning the Sussex, the foreign office to-day made the following statement to the Associated Press, based on information obtained from admiralty officials:

"There is no resemblance between the Arabis class and the Sussex. The Germans are condemned by their own statement, which says that a submarine attacked a ship at 3.55 p.m., the exact time at which the Sussex was attacked.

"The submarine commander also reports that the forepart of the ship was blown off. No ship but the Sussex has suffered damage in any way resembling this. That the sketch of the vessel made by the commander of the submarine does not resemble the picture of the Sussex, said to have been taken from an English newspaper, will hardly cause surprise."

AMERICAN TROOPS IN CONFLICT WITH MEXICANS

Acute Situation Has Developed Over Mexican Troubles—Pershing's Force is in Danger—Carranza Demands U.S. Withdrawal—Washington Cabinet Acts

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Special—American troops in Mexico have had their first battle with natives at the moment General Carranza is urging their withdrawal.

On Wednesday night, while General Carranza's note was on its way to Washington, troopers of the Seventh Cavalry, under Major Tompkins, were fired upon in Parral, a stronghold in western Chihuahua, were pursued to the suburbs while the Carranza garrison took a doubtful part in the affray, and were attacked again during the night.

Complete information regarding the losses to the American troops or to the Mexicans had not reached Washington last night. Secretary of War Baker informed President Wilson that a brief despatch to the War Department said that, according to unofficial reports, one American cavalryman was killed, and that the troopers used a machine gun against the Mexicans.

Mr. Baker announced later that he had ordered General Funston to take any steps that might be necessary to prevent further trouble. When asked whether this might mean the enforced use of Mexican railroads for the movement of soldiers and supplies, he said General Funston was on the ground and would act as any emergency required.

Gen. Pershing is in command of the troops of the force to which the troops fired on at Parral belong.

BREWER PERMITTED TO SELL LIQUOR INDIRECTLY

Ship to Montreal and Back to Consumer on Different Track—To Assist Hotelmen—Number of Clauses Added to Ontario Temperance Act Last Night

TORONTO, April 14.—(Special.)—Clauses to assist hotelkeepers after prohibition were added to the Ontario Temperance Act during discussion of the bill last night.

One clause provides that "standard hotels," i.e., hotels which comply with new licenses, which will cost $1 each, will be under supervision of the license board and will be given the exclusive right among hotels to sell "soft drinks," cigars, cigarets and tobacco. Such hotels may be partially or totally exempt by the municipality from all taxation save for schools and local improvements.

Another clause provides that either the landlord or tenant of premises where bar licenses were held may terminate their agreements after three months' notice if they have the written consent of the board to do so.

May Continue Hotels.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, in introducing the new clauses, said that the government had decided that so many contingencies might arise that they had not thought it right to make the right of cancellation of agreements absolute. He agreed with the leader of the opposition that many hotelkeepers would want to continue their hotels at reduced rentals. The board would act as arbitrators. Their decision would be absolute.

The government had no intention of interfering with restaurants, grocers or others who at present had the right to sell tobacco, etc., said Hon. Mr. Hanna. The whole matter lay in that hotels which took out the license would have the right to sell these commodities, and those which did not, would not, he said.

Absurdity in Act.

The matter of the percentage of alcohol to be allowed in non-intoxicating beverages as defined by the act was not touched during the discussion.

An absurdity was pointed out in the act by Hon. Mr. Hanna himself who said that they could not help it, it was in the Manitoba Act. That was that a brewer could, under the act, ship liquor to Montreal on track No. 1 and back again to the consumer on track No. 2, while he could not sell direct. "Perfect farce," and Sam Clarke (West Northumberland). They might be able to find a solution, but he would not promise it, said the provincial secretary.

Wholesale Vendors.

Hon. G. H. Ferguson said during the debate over estimates that the license board might remain at five members and might be cut down to three.

Hon. Mr. Hanna said that druggists, both wholesale and retail, were disinclined to take out licenses to dispense liquor under the new law, preferring to continue their status under the Pharmacy Act. To overcome this difficulty "wholesale vendors" would be established. There might be two or three such throughout the province. There might only be one. The matter was not finally decided. The "vendor" will be a man in the trade appointed by the government.

No change will be made in the manufacture of native wines. Nor is any change made in the alcoholic strength of medicines.

President Satisfied Of German Guilt

Note on Sussex Ontrage is Regarded as Virtual Admission

WASHINGTON, April 4. — (Special.)—The United States is disposer to consider that Germany, in the last submarine note, has virtually admitted one of her submarine commanders is guilty of torpedoing the Channel steamer Sussex. President Wilson and Secretary Lansing today examined the official text of the communication from Berlin, and are understood to have reached this conclusion, although no announcement was made.

SIR SAM ARRIVES AT NEW YORK

Has Nothing to Say of Those Who Took Advantage of His Absence

Canadian Press Special

NEW YORK, April 14.—Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia and Defence, arrived here today on the American liner St. Paul, on his way to Canada to answer charges of of alleged favoritism in the expenditure of money for the purpose of war munitions for the Canadian Government.

"I regret having to leave England at the present time," he said. "But I am delighted with the opportunity to return and place each and every fact regarding the contracts for munitions where they can be exposed to the closest scrutiny.

"I have no comment to make on the conduct of those who, taking advantage of my absence, and from a feeling of nervousness almost bordering on panic, in the minds of the general public on all questions since the war began, attempted to divert to side issues an energy at a time which should be devoted to the cause of Canadian soldiers at thef ront and the Empire in general. Such persons may be within their privileges. During my two weeks' visit in England I had an opportunity of reviewing all the Canadian troops at Bramshott and Shorncliffe camps. I am delighted to state, on authority of Sir Archibald Hunter and General Steel, that the conduct and bearing of the Canadian troops while in London or in the trenches, is regarded as most exemplary, and worthy of their commendation."

Cobalt Stocks Begin to Move

Continued Advance in Silver Seems to Be Waking up Silver Shares

TORONTO, April 13.—The rise in bar silver continues, the white metal advancing another quarter of a cent yesterday to 63c. an ounce, thus getting within ¾c of the high of 1913 and within 1⅞c of the top level of 1912. This is a rise of 2¼c. so far this month. It was quoted at 30d per ounce in London. A despatch from that centre said that all mints are buying the metal, that stocks of silver are small there, and that arrivals of the metal from America are reported sold before they get there. This last does not agree with what is claimed regarding some of the silver shipped by various Cobalt companies to London, it being stated that some of the bullion at any rate is merely sent there to be stored and disposed of later when the metal has a further advance.

There was some evidence that the rise in silver was at last beginning to have an influence on the Cobalt market, some of these beginning to show signs of life on the Standard, a fair degree of activity obtaining in such stocks as Seneca-Superior, Beaver, Temiskaming, and Peterson Lake, all of whom are silver producers.

VICTORY FOR BRITISH TROOPS IN MESOPOTAMIA

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 14.—The defeat of Turkish forces in Mesopotamia by the British was reported officially today. In an engagement on the Tigris the Turks were driven back from one and one-half to three miles. The statement says: "General Lake reports that on the afternoon of April 12, our forces on the right south bank lines, a distance varying from one and a half to three miles. To do this they had to cross an inundated belt intersected by deep cuts, from five hundred to twelve hundred yards wire, extending from Tigris to the Umel-Brahm marsh.

On the left bank the water from Marses has been driven by a northwest gale into some of the enemy's trenches at Sannay Yat. The enemy was heavily punished as he took refuge from the flood in a new position.

Splendid Khaki Club Programme

The usual fine programme was presented at the Khaki Club on Wednesday evening and to an extra large crowd. The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. McColl who was assisted by Miss Jean Caldwell who sang "Killarney," "The Minstrel Boy" and two of the popular patriotic songs. Private E. Bullis of the Red Cross staff of the 80th contributed Kipling's recessional, "Boys of England," "Harbor of Love" and "Can't you hear me Calling." He has been very generous with his vocal talents since coming here and his numbers are highly appreciated.

Miss Caldwell kindly led in more than a score of choruses old and new that helped to complete as pleasant an evening as has been spent at the club. Though the attendance was extra large, no one went away without his share of the refreshments which had been provided in abundance by the friends of the soldiers.

You Can't Brush or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

QUEBEC SENATOR AGAINST RECRUITING

Chequette of Montmagny Denounces Government's Policy Declaring it a Waste of Time, Money and Men—Reaches the Limit of Unpatriotism

OTTAWA, April 13.—A bitter and gravely unpatriotic attack upon recruiting and upon the men who form the Canadian force for overseas was made in the Senate today by Senator P. A. Choquette, of Montmagny. It was a demand that recruiting be stopped, coupled with an extraordinary reference to the men enlisting, particularly in the city of Toronto. The speech, by reason of its extravagance, created a sensation in parliamentary circles, although the views expressed have been given before by Senator Choquette. What importance attaches to them lies in the fact that Senator Choquette is one of the most prominent and active of the Quebec Liberals. He is a former mayor of Quebec, a former judge of that province, and was called to the Senate by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1904. He made his attack today in connection with the passage of the fifty million dollar war appropriation. His speech evoked instant protests from many of the English-speaking members of the Upper House.

When the bill granting the Government $50,000,000 for immediate use in carrying on the war came up for third reading in the Senate, Senator Choquette said that he presumed part of this money was to be used for the purpose of carrying on recruiting. He wished, he said, to record his strongest possible protest against the continuation of recruiting at the present time. He took this attitude for two reasons. First, there were more men recruited than were being used—there were 135,000 men in Canada at present, who should be sent overseas before more were enlisted. Secondly, he opposed recruiting for the reason that there was a scarcity of farm laborers and it was not right that when the country was short of farm help men should be taken from the farms to enlist. It was the duty of the Government to stop recruiting. It was a waste of money, time and men to continue recruiting.

Senator Choquette said that he knew of soldiers who are hanging around the streets in Quebec who had been enlisted twelve months ago. It was a crime for the Government to have young lawyers and officers going into the parishes getting young men to leave the farms and go to the cities where they were liable to spend a year doing nothing before they were needed at the front.

"I repeat," said the Senator, "that it is a crime to take young men from the farms. "Many were recruiting in the winter simply to get a little money and were returning to the farms in the spring.

"Where does the money for recruiting go?" asked Senator Choquette. "Out of 2,365 men volunteering in Toronto, 1,224 men were rejected. Out of another batch of 1,744, 1,244 were rejected."

This indicated the class of men we were recruiting and paying for. He had received a letter from a loyal Tory in Toronto protesting against the continuation of enlistment under such conditions. These men were not Englishmen, not Irishmen not Scotchmen nor Frenchmen. They were the offsprings of prostitutes of soldiers in London.

Senator Choquette repeated that too many men were already enlisted. The men being recruited in Toronto at the present time were no good. And the men who were being taken from the farms could better serve the cause of the Allies in assisting production at home than they could by recruiting. The Government should see to it that the recruiters should be recalled from the parishes and the country districts.

"I have no sons to go to the front," concluded Senator Choquette, "but I have sons to defend this country if the time comes when it is attacked. I have nothing to say against the young men who are going to the front. I congratulate them on their courage. But we must be fair to the young men who do not deem it their duty to go to Europe at the present time. When the time comes to defend this country, to defend Confederation and to defend the Empire, we'll be there as well as the others."

Returns Home To Campbellford

On Friday evening Lieut. Colville returned to Campbellford from England where he had been for about three months. His homecoming was the occasion of a demonstration of the citizens who met him at the station and gave him a very cordial welcome. The mayor and council, the local company now in training here, and the 40th Regiment Band figured in the welcome.

On the arrival of the train Mayor Armstrong called the crowd to order and asked for three rousing cheers for Lieut. Colville and for the King and Empire. When the cheering subsided, Lieut. Colville expressed his pleasure at being here and his thanks for the magnificent welcome accorded him by the citizens of his native town.

It will be remembered that Lieut. Colville went to England with the 39th Battalion, C.E.F. in June 1915. After about three months in England he went to France, where he served with the 20th Batt., in the 4th Ontario Infantry brigade. About Christmas time he was obliged to return to England to undergo an operation, the effects of appendicitis. From the beginning of the year until March Lieut. Colville was in a hospital in London. He has completely recovered but has been given three months sick leave to recuperate. He is due in England on June 7th next.

THAT WONDERFUL STAMP

The new three cent stamp is proving to be a source of amusement to some people, and a cause for naughty words to others. Doubtless it is a wonderful production. There is a figure 1 on it, but it is not a one cent stamp; there is a figure 2 on it; but it is not a 2 cent stamp; there is not a figure 3 on it, but it is a three cent stamp. The big T. on it is supposed to mean—"Taint a one; "Taint a two; 'Tis a three; and the little c is suggestive of the naughty words that have already been said, by those who have mistaken the three cent for a two, and then added a one to make it three. Well, we shall have to brush up our mathematics—Windsor Journal.

A Terrible Climax to Verdun Fight

How Charging Germans Were Torn to Pieces by French Artillery—as Seen from a Dug-out

PARIS, April 13.—Yesterday I witnessed a great battle, the climax of the Verdun climax. What a fury of charge and counter-charge of two nations at grips on the blood-stained slopes among the shell-torn trenches these words could convey. In reality it is very different.

Imagine yourself in the dark cabin of a ship, the whole fabric of which shudders in the tumult of her mighty engines as you peer through a narrow slit at a quick changing cinema on a distant screen. For that was the Verdun battle as I saw it, save that those rapid glimpses revealed horrors no producer would dare feature.

Captain A. Had led me through a maize of trenches, now burrowing in hollows, now terraced across heights with sandbags, to an observation post, buried deep in a hillside due south of Cumieres village.

Night had fallen as we descended the steps into what seemed an ordinary workroom, furnished with stools and a table. The only window was a long embrasure, hidden outside by an ingenious arrangement of branches. Two officers and some soldiers are at work, the first officer announcing figures with an eye glued to his telemeter glass pivoted on a massive base—for the cannonade of the foe rocks the ground like the waves of a tempest—and the second officer bent over his calculation, then snapping orders to soldiers at the telephone. The officers are regulating the fire of a battery two miles in the rear upon the German trenches down to our right, near the river, where the enemy was massing for an assault. At the same time they directed a searchlight whose rays illuminates their field of vision. I take my glasses and stand by the embrasure.

"Follow the searchlight and you will soon pick out the German trenches and see the effects of our fire," says my guide. For some moments I looked, dazzled by the ray itself. It is like an immense white arm outstretched toward the horizon, barring my vision. Beside me the observer with his telemeter seizes his telephone and started to direct the searchlight.

"Higher. Not so high. Lower—that's right. Cut off the light. Open her. Steady now."

And the ray shifted and vanished, reappeared, grew bigger, and diminished, finally focusing on a far-off point, obedient to the orders like a pencil in a giant hand. As the receiver clicks back on the telephone I see clearly. It is a patch of field streaked diagonally by a dark line which is the German trench. Clouds of smoke obscure it at intervals, stabbed by swift flashes. I watch interminably, nothing changes. Then the observer throws another order into the receiver and a second ray doubles the field of view.

He turns toward his companion at the table and reels off figures in a level, unhurried tone. The latter transmits more figures who has resumed his telephoning. All three seem perfectly calm, but I sense a thrill of anticipation. Suddenly the field patch is covered with scurrying dots like a mass of excited ants, rushing forward across the light, out of the picture into the darkness. It is the enemy charging at last. Then a dense thunder-cloud covers everything. The searchlight's rays beat vainly against its yellowish walls. The glass trembles in my hand.

Light a nightmare vision, conjured by magic amid the smoke, a horrible scene is revealed, first dimly, then clearer, and finally very distinct in the sharp white light. The field, the dark line and the rushing ants have disappeared. In their place a ragged hollow, wherein blocks of earth, like huge tree trunks, roll and quiver. Among them the tiny dark things are writhing like fallen leaves fluttered by the breeze. Those shapeless objects are German soldiers. As the smoke cleared I distinguished arms upraised in agony. Some try to crawl upwards. They form heaps, sliding back together; as one mounts another drags him down.

Meanwhile, from the right of the scene what seems to be an immense black snake creeps forward. In the ray of the light it glimmers, and the observer beside me mutters "My God!"

It reaches the lip of the hollow, and the mass of crawling men quiver with a new agitation. It is the water of the Meuse overwhelming the Germans by the same concentration of melinite that ruptured the river's dykes. With frantic gestures the Germans fight upwards. There comes a flash, and another cloud patch, half veiling the chaos of earth and water and drowning men. Then the shells begin to fall rapidly, and the searchlight abandons the struggle against the smoke, swinging higher along the bare hillside. A few moments later it returns. I see a placid pool glimmering beneath the ray, save where an occasional spot of blackness is floating motionless. I look at my watch. Three hours have passed since we entered the post. That is what I saw of the greatest battle for Verdun.

WHAT WEAK WOMEN NEED

WE HAVE IT IN A REMEDY CONTAINING THE THREE OLDEST AND MOST FAMOUS TONICS KNOWN.

Vinol contains the three oldest and most famous tonics known to medicine, viz.—the medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, peptonate of iron and beef peptone.

That is why Vinol is such a wonderful remedy for weak, run-down persons, feeble old people, delicate children, and to restore strength after sickness. Read this testimony.

Savannah, Ga. "I was weak, nervous, run-down, had no appetite, and could not sleep. I had tried medicines without any benefit, and one day the nurse asked me to try Vinol. I did so and it made me feel like a new woman. It has restored my strength and I can do all my own housework. I would not take anything for the good Vinol has done me." Sarah White.

PLENTY OF NERVE

Last September, a lad by the name of Edgar Covert, along with one Keith Sharp, decided they would join the soldiers, and so ran away from home to Napanee and tried to enlist in the 80th Battalion, but being under age, they were not taken. They came home and remained the winter, being employed locally, until a few weeks ago they hiked out for Toronto with the hope of getting into a battalion there. However, under persuasion of his mother, the Covert lad came home and immediately enlisted with the 155th and is now quite contented. The lad Sharp secured a position in Toronto and remained there. We bespeak a faithful soldier for the lad who was so determined to fight for his King and Country, and may good luck always guard him against suffering. One thing that cannot be said of him, is that he is a slacker. He has indeed set an example for those who might have enlisted and did not.—Deseronto Post.

Germans Long Way From Beaten

Letters From Brantford Man Expressed Cheerful Determination

BRANTFORD, April 14.—(Special.)—"I hope this war will soon be over, but it won't do any good to say that, as the Huns are a long way from being beaten yet. I will be able to tell some stories if I ever get back, but that is a small possibility." So says a letter received by Mrs. M. F. Betts, just before she received word officially that the writer, her son, had been killed in action.

Apparently he had a premonition that something would happen, for in the letter he continued, "but a man shouldn't be afraid to die out here. That is the way I look at it, as a person sees fine fellows going under every day—brave men. So I am going to try to do my share. If I go under, don't feel bad about it, but be proud, for you can say I have done my best." His is the first break in a circle of ten children.

AMENDING THE RAILWAY ACT.

The bill calling for an amendment to the Railway Act, which was given its third reading in the House of Commons this week, would appear to be a subject for more or less criticism, in that it deprives the House of Commons of the right to pass upon final decisions, and gives the Board of Railway Commissioners full license to act. As now provided, before acting upon their charter privileges railway companies shall submit their location and other plans to the Board of Railway Commissioners, which may approve of or reject the same in whole or in part, or, if in its judgment there is no need for a railway line in the region proposed to be served, it may say so, and that will end the matter. The measure seems to be designed to create obstacles to the construction of lines of railway which may be thought likely to interfere with the prospects of socialistic enterprises which are being promoted in some parts of the country. There has been unjustified duplication of railway lines in Canada, and even public money has been voted to enable a second or a third line to be built in a country whose trade is effectively served by one line or two. The place to remedy this sort of evil, however, says The Montreal Gazette, is in Parliament. There are two systems of granting railway charters. Under one the men who think they see where a road will be profitable fill up certain forms, deposit them with the public official who has a duty in the matter, obtain a certificate of incorporation, and, under the general law, proceed with their works. Under the other plan the permission of Parliament is required through a special act for each projected road. The proposals of the bill in question are that after Parliament has exercised its judgment and passed bills to authorize the construction of lines of railway, its wisdom shall be subjected to the review of the Board of Railway Commissioners. This board is not specially qualified to perform such duties, and they should not be put upon it. The members who opposed the extraordinary propositions were right. The passage of the bill makes it appear as if the House of Commons was making a declaration of its incapacity to do the work that belongs to it.

CONVICTING ITSELF.

The inconsistency of Germany's attitude is noted in a recent note to the United States Government, and following developments relative to the torpedoing of the cross-channel passenger ferry Sussex. Germany a first denied the sinking of the Sussex. But proof of the form of affidavits of neutral passengers, and fragments of the incontestably German torpedo which sunk the vessel, were forthcoming. And what does Germany do now? It concocts a report stating that it is true one of the German submarines did torpedo a vessel in that vicinity on that day, but the vessel looked like a war vessel, and did not appear to the submarine commander to be at all like the pictures of the Sussex since published in English papers! As Great Britain is able to prove that no other vessel was torpedoed on that day in that vicinity, Germany stands convicted.

And yet, what does that matter to a people of such an equivocating nature?

* * *

In the House of Commons on Wednesday, Hon. C. J. Doherty informed Mr. Ernest Lapointe, of Kamouraska, that the answer of the Ontario Government to the petition for the disallowance of the provincial legislation providing for the appointment of the Ottawa Separate School Commission was received by the Justice Department on Monday last. The Minister of Justice said that the petition and the answer were under consideration. It was pointed out to him by Mr. Lapointe that the period of one year, during which the act might be disallowed by the federal authority, would expire on April 28.

The government of Ontario, in connection with plans for getting people into its northern territory, proposes to advance sums up to $500 at a low rate of interest to settlers who will go upon the land and make farms. Perhaps among other things, the success of the plan will help to settle the bilingual question. If those who are induced to become pioneers by the aid promised are like many of those who, in the past, have done pioneering without aid, there will be so many French speakers from Quebec among them that politicians will want their votes and efforts will be made to please them rather than to club them.

tee having the matter in hand passed eighteen will now pay a poll tax of $5 instead of $1, and in many cases nothing. The legislature committee having he matter in hand passed a bill Wednesday permitting municipalities to increase the poll tax from $1 to $5. The bill was introduced by the city of Kingston and was supported by Peterborough city council. The purpose of the new bill is to compel young men who have not been paying their proper proportion to patriotic funds and towards the upkeep of city improvements, to open their wallets and pay up.

The anniversary of the battle of Ypres, the famous struggle of April 22nd, 1915, when the Canadians fought a great and gallant and successful fight against the Huns, will be celebrated officially in Canada by the hoisting of the flags on all public buildings. The Government in a notice expresses the hope that private citizens will also fly flags on that day in commemoration of the splendid stand of the Canadians and as a mark of Canadian determination to carry on the work of the men who died at Ypres for freedom.

During the past year the village of Hastings, in the county of Northumberland, with a population of 850, has given $1,200 to the Patriotic Fund, $600 to the Canadian Red Cross, and $200 for British Red Cross. This was collected by direct taxation of ten mills on the dollar, and does not include private donations from those not assessed.

At a time when there is a shortage of dyes the millinery parlors are rather more gay than usual. This information is supplied to the Editor by an observant bachelor—Toronto News

One cheerful fact about that Royal Commission which is to investigate the Kyte charges is that press and politicians alike express confidence in both of the Commissioners, Chief—Hamtilon Hearld.

Ten thousand Manitoba boys will grow protatoes this year in the "Greater Production" campaign under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture. It is expected that one thousand acres of potatoes will be cultivated in this way.

The British Board of Trade has ordered that eight more firms be wound up under the Trading With the Enemy Act. The companies which, for the sake of profit, have dealings with the enemy sacrifice much more than they can hope to gain by their illegal conduct. Besides being most unpatriotic, they are foolish.

According to the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, introduced in British Columbia in the House by the Premier, a fund for the payment of compensation will be raised by assessment on companies, beginning next October, and the scheme itself will go into effect at the beginning of next year.

The citizens of St. John, N.B., after four years' trial of the commission system of municipal administration, have voted to continue it, the record being 4,092 for and 1,824 against. They seem, however, to have changed the commissioners. Perhaps, as in the case of Montreal, they found the theory better than the men trusted with the task of making it effetcive.—Montreal Gazette.

The abuse of privilege can hardly go farther than in the statement of Senator Choquette in his speech in the Senate, as reported in the Gazette. The "Honorable" Senator said that the class of men we are recruiting were "the offsprings of prostitutes of soldiers in London." Some of the very men he is thus insulting in the grossest way are recruited from his own constituency of Montmagny. We conder how they like it?—Weekly Tattler.

"THE LAD OUT THERE"

Oh, powers of love, if still you lean,
Above a world so black with wrath,
Where yet—as it has ever been—
The loving heart is desolate.
Look down upon the lad I love,
(My brave lad tramping thro' the mire.)
I cannot light his welcoming fire,
Light though the stars for him above.
Now nights are dark and mornings dim,
Let him in his long watching know
That I, too, count the minutes slow.
And light the lamp of love for him,
The sight of death the sleep forlow,
The old homesickness vast and dumb
'Amid these things, so bravely borne,
Let my long thoughts about him come.
I see him in the weary file;
So young he is, so dear to me.
With every ready sympathy
And wistful eyes and cheerful smile
However far he travels on Thought follows, like the willow-wren
That flees the stormy sea again
To land where not delight is gone.
Whatever he may be or do
While absent far beyond my call
Bring him the long day's marching through.
Safe home to me some evenfall!

"London Chronicle"

JUST EGGS

As an edible the egg is unsurpassed. Its nutritive properties in several respects are unequalled, while the uses to which it can be put in the preparation of food are innumerable and variable. Its instrument of being possesses the advantage of cleanliness and cheapness in keeping. Every family with a backyard and outhouse, if the municipal regulations do not interfere, can maintain a hennery, and every family can thus have that always desirable modicum—a fresh egg. In addition it is questionable if any better way can be found of practising the call of the day for production and thrift.

The consumption of eggs is increasing in every part of the world and increasing too at a rate that guarantees a fair and continuous return for any judicious investment. Abroad the demand is incessant, while at home the increase is well indicated by the fact that whereas in 1891 the consumption in Canada per capita was only 11.8 dozen, in 1911, according to the census returns, it was 17.39. That the consumption has continued to develop in this country has gone far ahead of the domestic supply, is proven by the statement made on the warranty of official figures that in 1914 we exported only 124,002 dozen eggs and imported the significant total of 11,274,108 dozen. Last year there was some improvement, but a vast deal remains to be done if satisfactory use is to be made of the opportunity that is offering.

Great Britain formerly imported immense quantities of eggs from Russia and from the Scandinavia countries. These sources of supply, if not entirely cut off, are seriously diminished in ability. With facilities for shipping in a fresh condition Canada has an opportunity of meeting the deficiency. To accomplish this not only must the number of poultry breeders be multiplied; but increased watchfulness be manifested in tending the flocks and in selection of stock. The average Canadian flock produces about 50 eggs per hen. The world's record is 314 eggs laid in one year by one hen, Lady Eglantine of Delaware. Just as there are pedigreed milking cows, so there are bred-to-lay fowl. It will pay you to dig out about them. A good breed of poultry is no more costly to keep, than a poor breed, and it is infinitely more profitable. Having the fowl the next thing is to see that the eggs are kept fresh. Candling is a simple method of testing eggs. A candling apparatus and instructions for handling may be secured free from the Federal Department of Agriculture.

In these times when there is a marked scarcity of male labour, and production of foodstuffs is so much called for, there is no more advantageous and healthful manner in which women and children can be employed than in the care of poultry. A light and pleasant occupation, asking only the application of intelligence and attentiveness, with sympathy, it is in reality a pastime. If instruction is required, or information needed, either or both can be had on application to the provincial departments of agriculture, or to the federal department, for pamphlets and bulletins on poultry and eggs and the candling of eggs. Private culture could increase, supplies thousands and thousands of dozens, thus releasing quantities for the export market, and farmers and their families could in many instances duplicate their output several times with comparatively little additional outlay and no great amount of extra exertion.

On the one hand it is doubtful if there is any more nutritive and wholesome food to be had for the household than eggs, while on the other hand it is certain that a large increase of production will benefit and enrich the country. In the hospital the use of eggs is ever on the increase and in the camp they are ever welcome guests. They can be made component parts of numerous articles of food that can be sent and supplied to the men in the trenches, and if gathered quickly they can be placed in cold storage and shipped fresh in quantities across the ocean.

TELLS OF ZEPPELIN RAIDS

Woman's Uncensored Letters Report Attacks near Greenock

ELIZABETH, N.J., April 13.—A letter that apparently slipped past the censor has been received by Robert Shepherd of this city from a niece, Miss Margaret Shea of Greenock. She tells of the German air raids and of the increase in prices due to the war, and predicts that the scarcity of workmen will soon result in an acute situation if not in the cessation of business.

Many attempts have been made to destroy the Sunbeam manufacturing plant, where aeroplane engines are constructed for the British Government, and on one occasion, says Miss Shea, German airmen dropped more than 300 bombs on and around the factory, causing the death of seventy-five civilians and wounding scores of others.

"Father keeps entrenching tools in the cellar in order to dig the family out should the house be destroyed over our heads in the course of one of these raids," the letter concludes.

"The Store With The Electric Man"

The Eternal Lover

by Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman

Abul Mukarram, Ibn Aswad's right hand man, a swaggering young Arab from the rim of the Sahara, had cast covetous eyes upon the beautiful prisoner, but the old shiek delivered himself of a peremptory "no" when his lieutenant broached a proposal to him. Then Abul Mukarram, balked in his passing desire, found the thing growing upon him until the idea of possessing the girl became a veritable obsession with him.

Victoria, from necessity, had picked up enough of the language of the sons of the desert to be able to converse with them, and Abul Mukarram often rode at her side, feasting his eyes upon her face and figure the while he attempted to ingratiate himself into her esteem by accounts of his prowess, but when at last he spoke of love the girl turned her flushed and angry face away from him and, reining in her donkey, refused to ride farther beside him.

Ibn Aswad from afar witnessed the altercation, and when he rode to Victoria's side and learned the truth of the matter he berated Abul Mukarram roundly, ordering him to the rear of the column and placed another Arab over the prisoner.

Thereafter the venomous looks which the discredited Abul cast upon Victoria oftentimes caused her to shudder, for she knew that she had made a cruel and implacable enemy of the man.

Ibn Aswad had given her but a hint of the fate which awaited her, yet it had been sufficient to warn her that death were better than the thing she was being dragged through the jungles to suffer.

Every waking minute her mind was occupied with plans for escape, yet not one presented itself which did not offer insuperable obstacles.

Even had she been able to leave the camp undetected, how long could she hope to survive in the jungle? And should by some miracle her life be spared even for months, of what avail would that be? She could no more have retraced her way to Lord Greystoke's ranch than she could have laid a true course upon the trackless ocean.

The horrors of the march that passed daily in hideous review before her left her sick and disgusted. The cruelly beaten slaves who carried the great burdens of ivory [illegible] brought tears to her eyes.

The brutal massacres that followed the forcible entrance into each succeeding village wrung her heart and roused her shame for these beasts in human form who urged on their savage and cowardly Manyuema cannibals to commit nameless excesses against the cowering prisoners that fell into their hands.

But at last they came to a village where victory failed to rush forward and fall into their arms. Instead, they were met with sullen resistance.

Ferocious, painted devils fought them stubbornly every inch of the way, until Ibn Aswad decided to make a detour and pass round the village rather than sacrifice more of his followers.

In the confusion of the fight and the near retreat which followed Abul Mukarram found the opportunity he had been awaiting. The prisoners, including the white girl, were being pushed ahead of the retreating raiders, while the Arabs and Manyuema brought up the rear, fighting off the pursuing savages.

Now, Abul Mukarram knew a way to the northland that two might traverse with ease and over which one could fairly fly, but which was impossible for a slave caravan because it passed through the territory of the English. If the girl would accompany him willingly, well and good—if not, then he would go alone, but not before he should be revenged upon her.

He left the firing line, therefore, and pushed his way through the terror stricken slaves to the side of the Arab who guarded Victoria Custer.

"Go back to Ibn Aswad," he said to the Arab. "He desires your presence."

The other looked at him closely for a moment.

"You lie, Abul Mukarram!" he said at last. "Ibn Aswad commanded me particularly against permitting you to be alone with the girl. Go to!"

"Fool!" muttered Abul Mukarram, and with the word he pulled the trigger of the long gun that rested across the pommel of his saddle with its wide muzzle scarce a foot from the stomach of the other Arab.

With a shriek the man lunged from his donkey.

"Come!" cried Abul Mukarram, seizing the bridle of Victoria's beast and turning into the jungle to the west.

The girl tried to slip from the saddle, but a strong arm went about her waist and held her firm as the two donkeys forged, shoulder to shoulder, through the tangled mass of creepers which all but blocked their way.

Once Victoria screamed for help, but the war cries of the natives drowned her voice.

Fifteen minutes later the two came out upon the trail again that they had followed when they approached the village, and soon the sounds of conflict behind them grew fainter and fainter until they were lost entirely in the distance.

Victoria Custer's mind was working rapidly, casting about for some means of escape from the silent figure at her side. A revolver, or even a knife, would have solved her difficulty, but she had neither. Had she, the life of Abul Mukarram would have been worth but little, for the girl was beside herself with hopeless horror.

For the better part of two hours Abul Mukarram kept on away from the master he had robbed. He spoke but little, and when he did it was in the tone of the master to his slave. Near noon they left the jungle and came out into a higher country, where the space between the trees was greater and there was little or no underbrush.

Traveling was much easier here, and they made better time. They were still retracing the trail along which the caravan had traveled. It would be some time during the next morning that they would turn north again upon a new trail.

Beside a stream Abul Mukarram halted.

He tethered the donkeys and then turned toward the girl.

"Come," he said, and took her hand.

CHAPTER X.

The Death Dance.

EACH day Nu realized that he was gaining rapidly upon those with whom Nat-ul traveled.

The experience of his other life assured him that she must be a prisoner, yet at the same time he realized that such might not be the case at all, for had he not thought of her a prisoner among the others who had held him prisoner, only to learn that one of them claimed her as a sister?

It all seemed very strange to Nu. It was quite beyond him. Nat-ul could not be the sister of Custer, and yet he had seen her apparently happy and contented in the society of these strangers, and Custer unquestionably appeared to feel for her the solicitude of a brother.

Curtiss, it was evident, loved Nat-ul—that much he had gleaned from conversations he had overheard between him and Custer. How the man could have become so well acquainted with Nat-ul between the two days that had elapsed since Nu had set forth from the caves beside the restless sea to hunt down Oo and the morning that he had awakened following the mighty shaking of the world was quite as much a mystery as was the remarkable changes that had taken place in the aspect of the world during the same brief period.

Nu had given much thought to these miraculous happenings, with the result that he had about convinced himself that he must have slept much longer than he had believed, but that a hundred thousand years had rolled their slow and weary progress above his unconscious head could not, of course, have occurred to him, even as the remotest of possibilities.

He had also weighed the sneering words of Curtiss, and with them the attitude of the strangers with whom he had been thrown. He had quickly appreciated the fact that their manners and customs were as far removed from his as they were from those of the beasts of the jungle.

He had seen that his own ways were more in accordance with the ways of the black and half naked natives whom the whites looked upon as so much their inferiors that they would not even eat at the same table with them.

He had noted the fact that the blacks treated the other whites with a marked respect which they did not extend to Nu, and, being no fool, Nu had come to the conclusion that the whites themselves looked upon him as an inferior, even before Curtiss' words convinced him of the truth of his suspicions.

Evidently, though his skin was white, he was now in some subtle way different from the other whites. Possibly it was in the matter of raiment.

He had tried to wear the strange body coverings they had given him, but they were cumbersome and uncomfortable, and, though he was seldom warm enough now, he had nevertheless been glad when the opportunity came to discard the hampering and unaccustomed clothing.

These thoughts suggested the possibility that if Nat-ul had found recognition among the strangers upon an equal footing with them that she, too, might have those attributes of superiority which the strangers claimed, and if such was the fact it became evident that she would consider Nu from the viewpoint of her new friends—as an inferior.

Such reveries made Nu very sad, for he loved Nat-ul just as you or I would love—just as normal white men have always loved—with a devotion that placed the object of his affection upon a pedestal, before which he was happy to bow down and worship. His passion was not of the brute type of the inferior races, which oftentimes solemnizes the marriage ceremony with a cudgel and ever places the woman in the position of an inferior and a chattel.

Even as Nu pondered the puzzling questions which confronted him his eyes and ears were alert as he sped along the now fresh trail of the caravan.

SUDDEN DEATH

Caused by Disease of the Kidneys.

The close connection which exists between the heart and the kidneys is well known nowadays. As soon as kidneys are diseased, arterial tension is increased and the heart functions are attacked. When the kidneys no longer pour forth waste, uremic poisoning occurs and the person dies, and the cause is often given as heart disease, or disease of brain or lungs.

It is a good insurance against such a risk to send 10 cents for a large trial package of "Anuric"—the latest discovery of Dr. Pierce. Also send a sample of your water. This will be examined without charge by expert chemists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y. When you suffer from backache, frequent or scanty urine, rheumatic pains here or there, or that constant tired, worn-out feeling, it's time to write Dr. Pierce, describe your symptoms and get his medical opinion without charge—absolutely free. This "Anuric" of Doctor Pierce's is found to be 37 times more active than lithia, for it dissolves uric acid in the system as hot water does sugar.

Simply ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. There can be no imitation. Every package of "Anuric" is sure to be Dr. Pierce's. You will find the signature on the package just as you do on Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for blood and stomach.

WORRY, DESPONDENCY.

Kidney Disease is suspected by medical men when patients complain of backache or suffer with irregular urination, disturbed, too frequent, scanty or painful passage. The general symptoms are rheumatic pains or neuralgia, headaches, dizzy spells, irritability, despondency, weakness and general misery. Worry is a frequent cause and sometimes a symptom of kidney disease. Thousands have testified to immediate relief from these symptoms after using Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets.

NEVER A FIGHT WITHOUT IRISH SAYS O'FLAHARTY

Bally Hun Plugged Me in the Leg With His Mauser Before He was Laid Out, Says Mike

"There never was a war that the Irish didn't have a part in it," said Trooper Michael O'Flaharty, Royal Canadian Dragoons, recently invalided back from the front for wounds received in action, "but the present one is seeing a lot of the Emerald Isle's best blood spilled for the cause of justice and the liberties of the world. I think I did my bit all right. I am a cavalryman from Winnipeg, but my regiment was sent out to the trenches as infantry and we worked as hard as any of the foot battalions. We had no bayonets either, and when the Germans charged, we had to beat them back with carbine and pistol fire. But we did it just the same, though a bally Hun plugged me in the leg with his Mauser before he was laid out.

"I am descended from a fighting family, the Domnhall O'Flaharty who led the Irish insurrection against Queen Elizabeth, and Grannile O'Malley, his wife, recently immortalized by a popular novelist as "Grana Queen of Battle," only she wasn't a heathen and a pirate as the writer has pictured her, but a good Catholic and a patriot who only fought for what she believed to be right. I would like to get back, but don't know; I am pretty badly shaken up and they may not let me enlist again."

ALBANY, N.Y., April 12.—Advocates of prohibition suffered a reverse to-day when the Assembly, by a vote of 69 to 57, recommitted Assemblyman Whitman's local option bill. Meet to Confer on Church Union

Representatives Discussing Situation Behind Closed Doors—Crisis is not Acute

TORONTO, April 13.—It was behind closed doors that the conference of the Union Committee of the Canadian Presbyteries held three meetings yesterday in St. James'-Square Presbyterian Church. It is a question, with Dominion-wide interest, whether the conference is of sufficiently serious import to cause a split in the Church or not. There are both union and anti-union members present from East and West, and they are taking good care that no information with reference to the supposed crisis shall get out.

That the Western Presbyterians will secede unless the union with the Methodist Church is carried out has been denied by Rev. A. B. Winchester, of Knox Church, who is an anti-unionist not on the committee. "A few unrepresentative men have been talking altogether too much on this matter," was his opinion. "I have heard but one or two men in the East suggest such a thing, and neither in the east nor the west is there a movement toward secession. It is only a few individuals who are using the thing as a scare-crow to test the church. If a union is not consummated, there is no organized movement to leave the Presbyterian Church," he stated.

At the present time in certain quarters church union in the West is held to be for the welfare of the Presbyterian body. But in this part of Canada petitions signed by both the clergy and by laymen are to the contrary.

Amongst those in attendance yesterday were: Dr. Clark and Dr. Campbell, of Montreal; J. H. Radcliffe, St Catharines, secretary; Dr. McMillan, Halifax; Dr. Forest, of Halifax; Mr. Paul, Montreal; Dr. McGillivray, Kingston; Principal Dyde, Robertson College; Principal Oliver, Saskatoon; Principal Gandler, Knox College; Dr. Welsh, Montreal; Dr. Jack, Sydney, Cape Breton; Mr. R. Even this synopsis came too late for extended comment by the newspapers The passage referring to the Sussex were regarded in official circles here as proving that the Germans torpedoed the Sussex, as it is asserted that no other vessel was torpedoed in that vicinity at that time.

LONDON, April 13.—Special—Swift MacNeill suggested in the House of Commons to-day that an act be passed depriving the "traitor" Dukes of Cumberland and Albany, cousins of King George, who are serving with the German army, of their British Peerages. Premier Asquith replied he did not believe the time of the House would be employed profitably with such legislation, as the Dukes already had been expelled from the Order of the Garter.

MAMMOTH TRUST CO. OPENED IN ST. PAUL, MINN., IN 3 MOS.

Harry W. Parker Named President of Institution Which Will Have Offices In Lumber Exchange—Farm Loans to be Firm's Specialty

Minneapolis is to have a new $1,000,000 trust company. Announcement was made recently that the Bankers' Trust Company and Savings bank which is being organized by business men and bankers of Minneapolis and the Northwest has elected Harry W. Parker, former cashier of the Merchants' National Bank of St. Paul, president, and will start business within 90 days. Mr. Parker has been active in banking circles in the Northwest for two years and is a brother of Sir Gilbert Parker, English novelist.

The new company has obtained a long lease on the banking quarters in the Lumber Exchange building, formerly occupied by the National City Bank. The company is capitalized at $1,000,000 with $300,000 surplus.

Mr. Parker announced this morning that the entire list of officers and directors will be made public within a few days. He stated that the organization has affiliated with a large number of country banks and will specialize in farm loans. An experienced and progressive local banker will have charge of the savings bank department. Those who have been active in the organization of the company are the largest stockholders and not one dollar will be assessed for organization.

The president of the new company was formerly one of the directors of the National Association of Credit Men and president of the St. Paul Association of Credit Men. He is regarded as the most expert credit specialist in the Northwest.

Mr. Parker entered the banking business in St. Paul with the old Merchants' National Bank as ledger keeper about 22 years ago. He rose from that position through all of the positions up to the cashiership and retained the position of cashier when the Merchants' National and the German-American banks were consolidated a few years ago. He resigned from that position in December, 1915, his resignation taking effect Jan. 1, 1916.

"A PAIR OF SIXES" COMING

"There has probably never been a play produced in New York City that received such glowing, bubbling criticisms as that given by the ordinarily very-hard-to-please metropolitan critics to Manager H. H. Frazee's production of Edward Peple's farce, "A Pair of Sixes" at the Longacre Theatre, New York. For once the writers allowed themselves to indulge in superlatives of praise without a stint, and they showed that even the critics had enjoyed themselves.

The opening paragraph of the criticism in the New York Times, (that most conservative of metropolitan papers) was so unusual that it is worth quoting: "When the curtain fell at the end of the first act of the new farce that came to the Longacre Theatre last evening, it seemed too good to be true that playwright and players could keep up fun all evening at so fast and furious a pace. But it was true. The audience that waited incredulously for that second act found it crammed full with fun all its own, and as for the third and last the people on the stage, shout as they would, could hardly make themselves heard above the howls of laughter that came from the other side of the footlights. The playgoer who cannot find amusement in "A Pair of Sixes" would have scowled at "Seven Days," sobbed at "Officer 666", and wept outright at "Seven Keys to Baldpate." There are not many adjectives left to adequately describe the heartiness of its quality as an entertainment."

This new farce will be seen at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday night, for one night only, with a cast of unusual excellence.

No Invitation To Dominions

Premier of Australia at Paris Conference as Privy Councilor

LONDON, April 13.—In the House of Commons Premier Asquith, replying to Sir Kinloch Cook, who asked if Premier Borden had been invited to the Paris conference, said it had not been suggested that any of the dominions would be especially represented. Premier Hughes of Australia, who was an Imperial Privy Councillor., had been invited to attend as one of the representatives of the Imperial Government. If it had been possible for any of the Premiers of other dominions to attend he need not say a similar invitation would have been extended to them.

Sir Kinlock Cook—"Was it not possible for Premier Borden, who is a Privy Councillor, to be present?"

Premier Asquith—"As I understand Premier Borden was unable to be here."

The Evening Standard to-night, previous to the above answer being given, said that until a week or two back it was expected that Premier Borden would be in England almost immediately. If things had thus happened the recent bother about Hughes and the Paris conference would probably never have arisen.

Improved Signals At Sault Locks

Northern Navigation will Build New Dock at Sarnia

SAULT STE. MARIE, April 13—The announcement was made yesterday by the United States Lake Survey Office that a new signal system will be employed for the convenience of vessels passing through the American locks at the "Soo" Canal this season.

"To replace the arrow signal which was used last year to designate the lock to be taken by upbound vessels there has been installed on the top of the watchman's shelter near the end of the east centre pier a signal composed of two inclined arms, which diverge upwards in the form of a broad 'V.' The arms are three-quarter inch conduit pipes, each with four white lights shown from tungsten bulbs, spaced in line equi-distantly along it. The lights are lighted either on the arm to the north or on the arm to the south as a signal that the lock on the side so indicated is to be taken by an approaching upbound vessel.

"In order that downbound vessels may know before coming within calling distance of the west centre pier whether there is sufficient water for them to take the Poe Lock, the draft on Poe Lock will be displayed at the watch station at the west end of the west centre pier. This information will be displayed in a manner similar to that at Brush Point, and the box will be properly lighted, so that the draft may be read at night."

CAUSES OF HIGH COST OF LIVING

The following extracts are from the report of the "Cost of Living Commission" and give some of the main causes for increased living costs in Canada: "The demand for better conditions and the general advance of the standard of living throughout all the ranks of the population are manifestly most potent causes of the increase of the demand for commodities, and therefore of the advances of prices."

"The wants of the people have been multiplied and diversified on every side. They demand more and better things. Their requirements are larger, more varied and more exacting.

"In itself the improvement in the standard of living is a sign of progress, but if not rationally guided and safeguarded the advance threatens to bring about a decline of the standard to a lower level.

"Reasonable creation and reasonable luxury may be necessary for modern progress, but the price has to be paid and the bill is found in our high cost of living."

The expenditude of $12,000,000 a year on automobiles in Canada is given as an illustration of great expenditure on and the increased cost of luxuries.

"The opinion is widely shared throughout this Dominion that inefficient service through lack of vocational training is one of the notable causes which have brought about the recent advance in prices of commodities, and that the teaching in the public schools should be supplemented by courses in vocational training. In order to promote and maintain industrial efficiency. The increased use of package goods instead of food bought in bulk is given as an item of increased expense, particularly as the fancy package and advertising must be paid for by the consumer while the net contents are often less than supposed.

CORN FOR AMMUNITION

It's an ill wind that doesn't blow the farmers some good. The armies of Europe look to them for a great deal of their supplies. The soldiers are fed and clothed with products of the farm and now are looking to the farmers for part of their ammunition.

Cottonseed oil is used to manufacture glycerine which goes into manufacture of nitroglycerine, and thus helps to put the price of seed to an of cotton have been used in a year in the manufacture of explosives. Not content with that, starch and alcohol are being used in composition of high power explosives.

The different industries in his country have more than doubled their consumption of corn on this account. A barrel of pork, a cask of alcohol, a side of beef or a consignment of explosives may not look much alike, yet in a measure they are concentrations of cotton, meal and corn. A soldier is clothed with cotton. His occasional bath is with cotton oil soap. His beef, pork, butter, eggs and condensed milk represent corn cotton; when he helps to fire a shell he is still using corn and cotton. His life is sustained, and that of his enemy taken, by the use of the same products of the farm. —Wall Street Journal.

FARMERS' ATTENTION

It is every farmer's duty during these times of war to produce the largest possible crop from every acre, and it is also his duty to guard it from loss.

Last year smut caused a huge loss, and if you intend using your grain for seed you should treat it first for smut, as the experimental farms have found that it will stay with the seed from year to year.

The most successful means of ridding your grain of this pest is to use FORMALIN before seeding.

We have just received a large supply of this and will be pleased to fill your order and give you any advice necessary as to use.

Grand Trunk News

The appointment is announced today of Mr. J. R. Melville, as General Agent, Passenger Department, Grand Trunk Railway System, at Toronto, and will be effective April 17th, 1916. It is a new appointment and will increase the effective supervision of the Grand Trunk's large and important passenger service in Ontario.

John Ramsay Melville comes of an old railroad family, several members of which came to Canada in the fifties to assist in the construction of the Victoria Tubular Bridge, designed to carry the lines of the Grand Trunk Railway over the St. Lawrence River at Montreal, and also took part in the construction of some of the early sections of the Grand Trunk Line. Mr. Melville was born in Montreal forty years ago, and entered the company's service as apprentice clerk in 1889. After service in the Accounting and Transportation Departments and City Ticket Office, Montreal, he was transferred to the General Passenger Department, May 1st, 1900, of which he became Chief Clerk for nine years, when he was appointed Chief Clerk to the Traffic Vice-President of the System, which he now relinquishes for his present position.

Roman Meal Prevents Tooth Decay because it provides in the dark parts and bran of grains the lime salts which harden teeth. It also has the coarseness which keeps them free from accumulations and promotes circulation in them. Best of all, it prevents absorption of poisonous substances from the digestive tract which are excreted by mucous membranes of the mouth as acids and which erode the tooth enamel, causing teeth to break down. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is thus a god-send to your child. Make it in porridge, pancakes, and baked form known as Roman Meal Nuggets. They are delicious when served with hot milk and cream.

KINGSTON

It has been brought to notice that soldiers are changing their army issue boots at local boot stores for lighter pattern boots, which is contrary to law. Officers commanding all C.E.F. units will ensure that the practice is discontinued.

The examinations of the students attending the School of Signalling will likely be completed by May 1st.

Lieut.-Col. Edwards, commanding 38th Battalion at Bermuda, is in Ottawa making arrangements for the battalion to be relieved and go to the front. The popular colonel will likely visit Kingston before his return.

Lt.-Col. Brown, G.S.O., Lt.-Col. Thompson, and Major Burlitt, C.R.C.E., of the 3rd district, have started their work of laying out the camp grounds at Barriefield.

Captain William Peters of the 14th regiment, has been appointed casualty paymaster for the 3rd military district. The work of the casualty department has been increasing at such a rate that the department at Ottawa found it absolutely necessary to appoint a paymaster to look after the casualty work exclusively. There are at present in the 3rd military district about 150 casualties to be paid monthly, and there are matters connected with the taking over of these casualties from the pay department in England, which made it almost impossible for the district paymaster to handle without a district branch of the pay service, and an officer whose sole duty will be the care of casualties.

BELLEVILLE

A large audience greeted the Quinte Battalion Minstrels at Picton last evening. This evening they will appear at Madoc.

McGibbon. This makes a total of 93 on the roll.

Sergt. H. R. Burtt, of the 80th Battalion and Sergts. S. M. Ames and W. J. Longmuir of the 155th Battalion are in Kingston attending the School of Machine Gunnery.

A HIGHLY CREDITABLE PROSPERITY EDITION

The "Prosperity Edition" of the Kingston Whig issued on Saturday last, is one of the most creditable newspaper productions that has come to our desk. It contains fifty-six pages with a handsome colored front, and throughout is packed with matter of a most readable nature, including illustrations of the city proper and surroundings, photos of prominent local officials and private residents, and lifelike pictures and sketches of Mayors Montgomery of Smith Falls; Newman of Picton; Ruttan of Napanee; O'Connor of Gananoque, and Wright of Brockville.

A unique feature of the edition is that it was turned out in its entirety by the business office. The editorial department was not called upon to do any work in connection with the edition, the compilation of facts and figures, the writing of editorials, the selection of articles, the make-up, etc., being all done by the business department. In this respect it is without an exception unique in special editions.

The Intelligencer extends hearty congratulations to its Kingston contemporary upon this substantial evidence of its prosperity, combined with the general advancement of its home city.

System Was Full of Poison; Pains in Side and Back

Had Constipation For Many Years, but Was Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills

The most common ailment and the greatest cause of disease and suffering to-day is constipation. Artificial food and sedentary indoor life combine to induce torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result poisonous waste matter remains in the system and gives rise to pains and aches and affords a starting point for serious disease.

Infectious and contagious diseases are little known to persons whose liver, kidneys and bowels are kept in healthful activity, for there are no suitable conditions for disease germs to thrive in. Even common colds usually take their start when they find the system in a constipated, poisoned condition.

Mrs. Ed. Miller, West Flamboro, Ont., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have cured me of constipation. I suffered with constipation almost ever since I can remember, and for four years had pains at the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit and rest. That' I think, was terrible for a woman of twenty years. The condition of my blood was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much from pains and stiffness in the back. I am sure my system was full of poison. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have entirely cured me, and I feel better than I have felt for many years."

As a cure for constipation Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills stand alone, for by their action on the liver they awaken the activity of this organ, cause a good flow of bile, and hence remove the cause of indigestion, for bile is nature's cathartic. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

SPORTING NOTES

The Toronto Lacrosse League should be a real lively institution this summer, as they look after the boys who are too young to enlist, and with the big boost that Joe Lally gave the game a year ago, amongst the kids there should be plenty of teams around the city. The Toronto Lacrosse League is the oldest orgainizacrosse League is the oldest organization in the city, and such well-known enthusiasts as James Bailey, Fred Waghorne and "Woosley" Tagart have kept it going for many years.

"Newsy" Lalonde will manage and captain the Nationals again this summer. It is likely that the N.L.U. will play a triple schedule providing the Toronto club is not admitted.

Ottawa will organize their N. L. U. team to-night, and with "Billy" Foran and Dr. Chabot back at the head of affairs, they expect a big revival at the Capital.

Cornell defeated Swarthmore in the first college game across the border by 9 to 2 yesterday.

Maitlands will do pretty well at the O.A.L.A. convention this year if "Pete" Hocking is elected president and "Jimmie" Dundas secretary. They are both ex-Maitland stalwarts.

"Jimmie" Green, the Aura Lee hockey player, is slated for a place on the home field of the Young Torontos this season. He is just about as good a lacrosse player as he is a hockey expert.

Riversides have not yet decided whether they will have a senior team. With Young Torontos at Rosedale, and the professionals out of the way there should be plenty of room at the Island for another senior amateur team.

"Jimmie" Collins, the well-known Tecumseh lacrosse player, writes from "somewhere in France" to the effect that it is a harder game than going in on the National defence in Montreal. He has been in the thick of several big battles but came through without a scratch.

HEROIC WORK OF CANADIANS IN RESISTING THE HUN ATTACKS

Endeavor to Bring Order Out of Chaos, and While Protected by Rude Trenches Hold Their Positions Against a Severe Bombardment---The Casualties Were Heavy

Canadian Press Special.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Heroic and effective work by the Canadians in resisting determined attacks by the Germans at St. Eloi last week is detailed at length in "Eyewitness'" communique, received this morning. The struggle for the possession of the mine craters marking the original German line was intense and bitter. The frontage taken by the British from the Germans did not exceed six hundred yards.

The whole area of this former German salient was pitted by thousands upon thousands of shell holes, large and small. The explosion of six British mines had not only affected the German front line trench, but had yet further stirred up and churned the heavy soil, still sodden with winter rains.

All signs of vegetation had disappeared. Of the former landscape there remained nothing but ugly quagmire. Through this trackless morass of water-filled holes, mud and earth piles, in which a man at any moment might sink over his waist, the British troops had contrived to dig a narrow and shallow trench to the south of the craters, and the Canadian troops had succeeded in lining up the British right with the main line. On the night of April 2nd the 27th Winnipeg and 31st Alberta Battalions relieved the weary British troops in a new line.

No time was lost by the Canadians in endeavoring to bring order out of chaos in these rude trenches. The German bombardment was severe, almost constant, and our men suffered many casualties. In the early morning of April 6th, while some companies of the 29th Battalion were relieving the 27th in the trenches. The Germans started a terrific bombardment and in a few minutes a considerable section of the trench had disappeared, and all continuity in our line was lost.

RECONNAISSANCE OF FOE DISPERSED BY THE ALLIES

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, April 15.—Afternoon statement: To the north of Roye a reconnoissance on the part of the enemy, who were endeavoring to occupy our trenches in the region of Parvillers, was dispersed by our fire.

There was no infantry fighting last night anywhere in Verdun region.

To the west of the River Meuse there has been a fairly spirited bombardment of our positions between the Wood of Malancourt and Hill No. 304. Our batteries evidenced great activity along this part of the front, particularly to the west of Corbeaux wood and at various points along For-Ges brook.

To the east of the River Meuse and in Woevre district there has been intermittent bombardment.

In the Vosges there have been encounters between patrols. Reconaisance on the part of the enemy was checked by our fire at points south of Saint Emari-Ux mines.

JAILED GERMAN AGENT HAS SECRET FOR DYES

Ritter Claims to Have Knowledge of Manufacturing Process

COLUMBUS, O., April 14.—Dr. Emerich Ritter, former German confidential agent, serving a sentence in the Ohio State penitentiary here, was granted permission by Warden Thomas Wednesday to manufacture dyes by a secret German process. If his tests are successful the state board of administration will give him its support, it was said.

Ritter asserts he is a chemist and the discoverer of "liquid fire." He was arrested in Cleveland last fall, charged with complicity in a plot to dynamite the Welland Canal. He was sentenced to prison, however, for carrying concealed weapons.

Badly Injured By Boiling Tar

OTTAWA, April 15.—Thos. French, 245 Florence street, was badly burned about the face and head yesterday morning, when he slipped while mounting a ladder with a pail of hot tar at the city post office. He was working with a few other men patching the roof of the building and was climbing the ladder to the roof.

He was taken to the hospital in one of the police department's automobiles.

While his injuries are very painful it is stated at the hospital that they are not serious and it is not likely that grafting will be necessary. The accident occurred about 9.30 this morning.

Bilingual Bee Busily Buzzing

Heard in Corridors of Federal House—Mr. Lamarche Expected to Introduce It

OTTAWA, April 15.—The corridors in the Victoria Museum were buzzing with gossip over the bilingual situation. This question will come before the House in some form, within the next ten days, and it is expected that there will be a full dress debate, when it comes up. Just at present there is considerable uncertainty as to how the question will get before the House, and who will start the ball rolling.

The petitions for the disallowance of the legislation appointing the Separate School Commission, have been rolling in on the government and their Nationalist supporters are pressing for some action. It is understood that Hon. P. E. Blondin, and Hon. Mr. Patenaude, have joined in this demand.

It was reported yesterday morning that Paul Lamarche, the Nationalist member for Nicolet, would introduce a resolution calling for disallowance, but it is not believed that the government will go that far.

The attitude of the opposition is also still an unknown quantity, but it is believed that they will take the ground that the situation is one that should be dealt with in a spirit of conciliation.

The matter was fully discussed at an opposition caucus, but the result of the party's deliberations are being carefully guarded.

The discussion will have an added interest and will no doubt be considerably influenced by the fact that the Quebec elections are to take place next month.

The despatch adds that 50,000 boxes of California fruit were also taken from the vessel.

PLACE STEEL NETS IN PASSAGEWAY TO BALTIC

Danish Torpede Boats Watching Operations Closely—German Battleship has Captured Danish and Swedish Steamers in Cattegat

COPENHAGEN, April 15.—Special—The Norwegian Shipping Gazette says the German navy has stopped the international passageway south of The Sound (the strait between Denmark and Sweden), not merely by the usual mine obstructions, but also by steel nets, designed to trap British submarines seeking to enter the Baltic.

Danish torpedo boats, says The Shipping Gazette, are watching the operations to make sure that obstructions are not placed in Danish territorial waters.

London, April 15.—The Danish steamer Elizabeth M., bound for England, and an unknown Swedish steamer were captured in the Cattegat today by a German battleship, according to The Exchange Telegraph Copenhagen correspondent.

TWO C.N.R. BILLS PASS THE HOUSE

Widened Powers of Railway Board Satisfy Hydro Radial Advocates

OTTAWA, April 14.—The House of Commons tonight passed two bills renewing the charters of the Canadian Northern for lines between the City of Toronto and the Niagara and Detroit frontiers.

W. A. Buchanan (Medicine Hat) said he did not object to the Canadian Northern extending its system, but it should first build into districts where railway facilities were urgently demanded.

Hon. J. D. Reid reviewed the history of the Canadian Northern and drew a rather pessimistic picture of the general railway situation, for which he held the Laurier Government responsible.

Women Are Dress Censured on Munich Sts.

One Taken to Police Station and Made to Wipe off her Rouge

BERLIN, April 15.—(Special.) — What is characterized as a recrudescence of the spirit of the blue laws is observed in some German cities. In Munich the police have been authorized to act as censors of women's dress and have been ordered to arrest all women who are dressed too conspicuously. The first victim of these instructions was a young woman who was on her way to meet an officer. She was taken to a police station and compelled, according to the newspaper reports, to wipe the powder and rouge from her face before being permitted to leave the station. In Leipzig prescriptions regarding boys and girls under eighteen years of age are being enforced. They are forbidden to enter restaurants and saloons except when accompanied by adults, and they may attend moving picture exhibitions only when special programs for juveniles are given, and they must keep off the streets after 10 o'clock at night. night.

Editor Jailed For 12 Months

Two Others Sent to Prison in Connection with Recent Clyde Strike

EDINBURGH, April 14.—Sentences were imposed on three men today for the publication of seditious articles in connection with the recent strike of munitions workers on the Clyde. William Gallagher, chairman of the Clyde Workers' Committee, and John W. Muir, editor of The Worker, the organ of the committee, were sentenced to serve twelve months in prison. A term of three months was given to Walter Bell, business manager of The Worker.

Lord Justice General Strathclyde said in passing sentence, that had it not been for the apology made by the defendants and their promise to obey the laws in the future, he would have sentenced them to penal servitude.

John MacLean, formerly a Glasgow teacher, was sentenced yesterday to three years' penal servitude after his conviction on similar charges.

CHOQUETTE VIGOROUSLY ANSWERED BY MR. KEMP

Scathingly Criticizes His Speech and Scores Hazelton—Senator Taylor Inquires Whether Senator Choquette Should be Charged With Treason

OTTAWA, April 15.—(Special.) — The strictures of Senator Choquette in the upper Chamber on Tuesday last deprecating further recruiting in Canada, and casting aspersions on the character of recent recruits, especially in the city of Toronto, met with a vigorous reply in the Commons this afternoon from Hon. A. E. Kemp, Acting Minister of Militia. Mr. Kemp declared that the Senator's reflections on the 30,280 soldiers who had been enlisted in Toronto was a foul slander, and he quoted a memorandum from Brigadier-General Logie showing that rejections had averaged only nineteen per cent. of the total number examined, and not about fifty per cent. as the figures quoted by Senator Choquette would seem to indicate.

"The city of Toronto," declared Mr. Kemp, "has enlisted 30,280 soldiers. The men are as fine specimens of manhood as the country can produce. The blood of many of them has already drenched the plains of France to assist in crushing Prussian militarism which seeks to dominate the whole world, including Canada. Many of them are now fighting side by side with the soldiers of France who speak the same language as the honorable Senator. These men who have been so foully slandered are offering their lives with these soldiers of France to prevent the women and children of that nation from suffering the horrors, tortures and cruelties similar to those which a relentless foe perpetrated upon the women and children of poor, heart-broken Belgium. More than three hundred thousand men have offered their lives in Canada for the same purpose. Under these circumstances it is a fair conclusion for me to ask: Does Senator Choquette represent the opinion of anyone in Canada but himself?"

Senator Taylor drew the attention of the Government to an editorial in The Montreal Star of April 13 under the caption, "Choquette should be kicked out of the Senate," which, after quoting from the British North America act to show that "the place of a Senator shall become vacant if he be attainted of treason," went on to say:

"This seems to put the unsavory Choquette case up to the Senate. If they decide that Choquette's ravings amount to treason they can rid themselves of his presence. Failing that, we fancy that an address, passed by both Houses of Parliament with fair unanimity, would accomplish this timely act of house-cleaning."

Senator Taylor said that he desired to bring the editorial to the attention of the Government, and ask that an inquiry into the matter be held.

Senator Choquette said he had seen the editorial in question, but regarded it as so stupid and so dishonest that he despised it. "I despise that article," said Senator Choquette, "it is so much like The Star, which can be bought and sold. But I am surprised that my friend should bring this matter to the attention of this House without first calling it to my attention."

Senator Taylor—I thought you would be the first to repudiate it.

Senator Choquette—I despise it.

Senator Taylor—And you say you despise our soldiers who are going to the front.

Senator Choquette—I never said that. That is a lie from the start. But I do not object to an inquiry.

Senator Mason gave notice of a motion calling the attention of the Senate to the "unsatisfactory results attending the present methods of recruiting in Canada." He said that he would inquire "what, if any, steps the Government is taking or contemplating to overcome and remedy this existing evil by adopting some system of registration whereby all the men of the Dominion of military age will be classified according to their fitness and suitability for service."

GRITS VERY RELICENT ON BILINGUAL SUBJECT

OTTAWA, April 15.—(Special.) — The Liberals held a caucus this morning to consider the parliamentary situation. There was a general discussion as to the attitude of the party in the event of railway legislation being introduced. It was decided to leave a definite decision in regard to the matter over until after the Easter recess, when it is believed that legislation will be introduced.

The bilingual situation arising out of the demand for the disallowance of the legislation of the Ontario Government was also discussed. There appears to be a disposition among the Liberals to believe that if any resolution is introduced in regard to this matter it will be by a Nationalist member. It was decided to await developments.

SGT. WHITEFIELD'S HEROISM

LONDON, April 15—(Special.)—Sergeant-Major R. Whitefield, of the 1st Battalion, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for conspicuous gallantry. When the line was being severely shelled he made his way up under heavy fire and after evacuation of the post had been made, he returned to rescue two machine gunners who were buried and whose cries for help he had heard. He showed absolute disregard for personal safety.

U. S. Willing To Treat With Gen. Carranza

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Official announcement was made after the Cabinet meeting to-day that the United States Government will treat with Carranza for the withdrawal of American troops from Mexican soil.

At the same time it was announced that the troops will remain in Mexico. For the present at least the campaign will be pressed to capture Villa.

After full discussion at a two-hour session of the Cabinet President Wilson and his advisers reached the conclusion that the Carranza note did not contain a "demand" for the withdrawal of the American troops. What the note contained was construed as a "request to treat for the withdrawal of the troops."

The administration decided to accept this request. A note to the Carranza Government containing this acceptance was in course of preparation last night at State Department for immediate transmission to Carranza.

PASSOVER

Begins on April 17th—Served For Many Days

It is the first festival of emancipation in the history of civilization. Its commemoration is based on the Biblical narrative which tells how the people of Israel enslaved in Egypt were led from bondage to freedom by the great leader Moses.

The Passover festival speaks for the sanctity of the home as well as for self-respect and liberty. The Jews accordingly assemble in their homes on this festival, and signalize it by a solemn service in which the story of the ancient struggle for emancipation is recounted with pious fervor. This Seder, as it is called, is unique in spirit and form. It is earnest and yet happy, and its ritual, though archaic, symbolizes the facts of human experience in all conditions of life. The roasted bone reminiscent of the paschal lamb of the first Passover; the bitter herbs calling to mind the hard labor of the Israelitish slaves; the unleavened bread, known as the "bread of affliction, symbolizing the hasty departure from Egypt; the roasted egg, recalling the individual sacrifice which was offered in the Temple; the mixture of grated apple, nuts and wine, suggesting the clay from which bricks were made by the enslaved people, and the parsley and salt water, symbolic of growth and the fertilizing freshness of spring, invest the domestic ceremony with a real and forceful meaning. A beautiful and most suggestive part of the service is the Open Door, through which the messianic prophet Elijah enters every home that night, a splendid expression of the great ideal which the prophets of Israel announced will become real some day when men will cease to hate and begin to do justice.

It is customary to remove all leaven out of the household in preparation for the feast. Leaven is the symbol of the sordid, and refers to those who are unemancipated from the commonplace things. During the feast, only matzoth and not bread, are eaten. The distinctive spirit of the feast finds expression even in the specific food.

The Haggadah, the order of the domestic service, read on the night when the family gathers about the common table, comprises the narrative of the exodus from Egypt, the account of the oppression which the ancient Israelites endured, and is not without its covert allusions to the pathetic story of Israel in more recent times in the midst of the unkind nations. The Haggadah also includes a special group of psalms (CXIII-CXVII) and a number of mediaeval poems.

The Passover is the most ancient of the Jewish holidays and perhaps the most ancient of all holidays in the history of religion, and no holiday is so near to the truth of human life as it is.

The favorite book for reading during the Passover week is the "Song of Songs." If is the most classical song of love in canonized literature and is read on this festival because, according to the traditional view, it bespeaks the love between God and Israel.

The Market

Many of our country friends were today in attendance upon the market, and as a consequence much produce was offered for sale and disposed of at good prices. Not only was the interior of the market building filled, but many vehicles were upon the market square.

Fresh dairy butter was quite plentiful and sold at from 30c. to 32c. per pound. In a few cases basket lots were procured at a slightly lower figure.

Eggs, whilst in abundance, realized a good price, namely 20c. and 22c. per dozen.

Dressed poultry commanded good prices. Chickens sold from $1.25 to $1.80 per pair, according to size and quality. Ducks sold readily at $2.00 a pair, and a few geese brought $2 and $2.25 each.

Potatoes are still a high price, namely $1.80 and $1.90 per bag.

Maple syrup was offered for sale in considerable quantities. The price obtained was 35c. and 40c. a quart, and $1.50 per gallon.

Garden produce, such as lettuce, onions, etc., were readily disposed of.

The ruling price for hay was $17 and $18 per ton.

Live hogs sold at $11 per hundred and small pigs realized $10 and $11 per pair.

WESTERN HOCKEY STAR DIES IN CHICAGO

WINNIPEG, April 15.—(Special.)—Del Irvin, Winnipeg's premier professional hockey player, died in Chicago this morning from the effects of inhaling chlorine while playing on artificial rinks all winter in United States cities.

Irvin played with Portland, Oregon, the past season, and was returning home from the world's series play in the east by way of New York and Cleveland. He was taken suddenly ill at Cleveland a week ago Saturday night, and an effort was made to get him home to Winnipeg, but he was forced to go to a hospital in Chicago, where he died today. The doctors first said he was suffering from pneumonia.

Irvin's father, wife and girl baby were with him at the time of his death.

Deceased started playing hockey in Winnipeg, and played here all his life as an amateur with the Monarchs until the past winter, when, with Murray, the goalkeeper, he turned professional and went to Portland to play with the Rosebuds, who won the championship of the Pacific Coast League.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

FAIR PLAY TO LABOR

The internationally famous actor and popular Broadway star, Cyril Scott, appears at the Palace Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of next week, matinee and night, in an absorbing 5 part modern drama with a powerful appeal for the spirit of fair play to labor, entitled, "Lord's of High Decision," adapted for the screen from the famous novel by Meredith Nicholson. In addition to the above offering some amusing comedies will also be exhibited.

"A PAIR OF SIXES" WEDNESDAY

"A Pair of Sixes," the farce by Edward Peple, which ran an entire year at the Longacre Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at Griffin's Opera House, next Wednesday night for one night only.

The story concerns George B. Nettleton and T. Boggs John, manufacturers of a digestive pill, who are continually quarreling about their respective claims of being the brains of their prosperous business. With a burst of temper, each declares he wants to break the partnership. This is not easy to arrange, but when their lawyer comes they dispute as much about the details of the split as they had previously done about the details of the business. They finally accept their lawyers suggestion to decide the dissolution by drawing a hand at poker. They agree that the one who wins shall be the master of the business, and the other is to be his servant for a year. If either party breaks this contract, he is to forfeit $5,000 and his interest in the business. There are also numerous cash fines and penalties. Also absolute secrecy is demanded. This makes Boggs' position exceedingly painful to him when he is installed as butler in the Nettleton home, and his sweetheart comes to visit them as a guest. He dare not tell her his reason for his menial position, and his tribulations are made worse through the insistent interest of an eccentric English servant who determines to capture him as a husband. This amazing complication excites no end of amusing situations and the fun is fast and furious until his sweetheart takes a hand in the game and proves that a lone queen of hearts can beat a pair of sixes.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David Griffith's wonderful new art of pictorialized spectacle with music will play at Griffin's Opera House, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 27th, 28th, and 29th, with a matinee daily except Thursday, at 2.30. This is the great offering that opened a new era in the theatres of New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Toronto and Montreal, where it ran simultaneously in as many productions for many months. Despite great opposition the play has never been suppressed, but has met the approval of censor boards, judges, municipal authorities, publicists, editors and clergymen everywhere. It is pleasing to be able to note the fact that a metropolitan production of the finest quality and elaboration will be shown here.

On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted what was previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearance of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes.

For the first time in theatrical history, a spectacle is being presented as a regular attraction at regular prices in regular first class playhouses. The success speaks for itself. The Griffith drama comes here with a baggage equipment of two sixty foot cars, a complete staff including mechanical experts and stage crew, and a large symphony orchestra of 30 musicians regularly carried on four making a company of 50 people altogether.

BOY AND AGED MAN IN MURDER TRIALS

Former Tells Pitiful Story of Family Discord and Cruelty

DETROIT, April 14.—Marvel Sellick, 16 years old, who has confessed to shooting to death his step-father, Daniel Cramer, on Sunday morning, April 2, will be brought into court for examination today. A thin, dark boy in knee breeches, poorly clad and ill fed, will face the court.

A few moments before the shooting according to the boy's account he came into the house and tossed his hat on the table. For this Cramer struck him, he claims. Then the boy ran to a lumber yard in the rear of the home, where he had hidden a revolver some weeks before. Returning to the house, he pointed the gun at Cramer and fired the shots in rapid succession. Sellick then walked to police headquarters and gave himself up.

The boy told the police a story of beatings and abuse, in which his mother shared. He was her son by a former marriage. His brother had been forced by the step-father to leave home. He secured the revolver and cartridges with the intention of using them if Cramer did not cease his abuse.

"My husband was a bully," says Mrs. Cramer. "The boy's story is true. But I do not think that Marvel intended to kill Cramer. The boy never did anything to antagonize his step-father. He was a good worker and never a bad boy."

Alien Worknen Are Driven Out

Fire and Strike Mark Hot Reception in Bracebridge

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., April 14.—Ten Austrians from the New Ontario internment camp arrived here this morning to work for a tannery, but met with such a hostile reception that they left town on the first outgoing train.

About the time of the aliens' arrival, the fire alarm sounded, and the building in which the men were to be lodged was found to be in flames. It was burned to the ground. The cause of the fire is at present unknown. At 7 a.m. the employes of the tannery where the men were to work went on strike in protest against the employment of the aliens. The employes of another tannery joined them in sympathy, and the situation for a time looked serious. Finally it was decided to get the Austrians out of town, and they were escorted to the station under police protection, and left for Acton.

LOBB CASE UP IN HOUSE

Mr. Proudfoot and Mr. Lucas Exchange Words

TORONTO, April 14.—When the estimates were being taken up the figures in those for the Administration of Justice drew the attention of William Proudfoot.

"Is there any special provision made for the extraditing of noted criminals—Mr. Lobb for instance?" asked he.

"There doesn't need to be," replied the Attorney-General.

Mr. Proudfoot: "I have very strong views about bringing these criminals back."

Mr. Lucas however informed him that a special vote of money was not needed to extradite criminals. They would be covered all right. There was the usual amount for that purpose.

Mr. Proudfoot: "How about that special case I spoke of?"

Sam Carter: "I would like to know if you intend to get Mr. Lobb back?"

Mr. Lucas: "Make a case out, I'll get him back."

A VERY SUDDEN DEATH

TAMWORTH, April 14.—Thomas Powers, a farmer living here, fifty two years of age, died very suddenly last night of heart failure. He went out with his boy at 9 o'clock to attend to his stock, when, as he reached the barn, he fell to the ground dead.

MAN IS AS OLD AS HIS ARTERIES

THE failure of the arteries is one of the tragedies of modern life. Men in the very prime of life, and in the midst of business activities, are suddenly cut off. In many cases the blow comes before they realize their condition.

And what is the cause? Most usually overeating and drinking, combined with too little bodily exercise. The blood becomes overloaded with poisons. The kidneys break down in an effort to filter the blood, degeneration of the arteries takes place, an artery in the brain bursts, a clot is formed and paralysis results. Or it may be an artery in the heart that gives way and causes heart failure.

And how is this condition to be avoided? By moderation in eating and drinking, and by keeping the liver, kidneys and bowels regular and active. If you do not get sufficient exercise to accomplish this, it is necessary to use such treatment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is only by the action of these organs that the blood can be purified and the poisons removed from the system. In using you are not making any experiment, for they have no equal as a means of awakening the liver, kidneys and bowels to healthful activity. They prevent such serious troubles as hardening of the arteries, and thereby promote comfort and health and prolong life.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

THIS IS THE 621ST DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

THE QUEBEC ELECTION.

A despatch from Quebec announces that the Legislature has been dissolved, and that elections for the choice of a new Assembly will be held on Monday, May 22.

It was no surprise to the Opposition to learn that the Legislature was dissolved, and the limited time given the province to consider the questions at issue between Sir Lomer Gouin and Mr. Cousineau will not be felt more keenly by the Conservative candidates than by those on the Government side. The Opposition expected that, as the Prime Minister did not want to get mixed up in federal questions, he would dissolve in the early spring, although most of the ministerial supporters expected a contest in June instead of the latter part of May. Several of the Government supporters will not again face the electorate, and one or two members of the Opposition will retire from public life now that the Legislature has expired. Mr. J. M. Tellier, for many years the able leader of the Opposition, will not again be a candidate in his old county of Joliette, and this will be a distinct loss to the party in the House of Assembly as well as on the public platform. The organization, however, has announced that amongst their candidates will be found many new men, strong debaters and an acquisition to the Assembly.

It is announced officially from Conservative headquarters that every constituency in the province will be contested and that a strong fight will be put up in every county. The best of feeling prevails in the several districts, and especially among the local leaders in the parishes. When Mr. E. L. Patenaude was in the Assembly he did good work in the way of organization, and now that the moment of battle has arrived, the candidates on the Conservative side will owe much to the energy of the former organizer of the party, who is now Minister of Inland Revenue in the Borden cabinet. It can be said that the Montreal district, including the Three Rivers counties, is ready for the fray, and the party's friends in the Quebec district also look with confidence to the future. All that has to be done is to make the choice of standard bearers, and in many of the constituencies the men have been designated.

CIVILIZING THE GERMANS.

Mr. William Boon, in a letter to an Ottawa paper, asserts that "If the whole German race is so barbarous as painted, we must civilize or exterminate them. Exterminating them requires 'baby-killing' and other atrocious acts, which we charge against the Germans. Civilizing will require some kindliness in the process. There is evidence that the most barbarous Germans are susceptible to civilization; as witness the British Angles and Saxons of today, who, after only a few centuries of contact with the Irish and French races, have reached a plane of civilization quite equal to the Russians, Serbians, Montenegrins, Hindoos and other allies."

If the "British Angles and Saxons" in the earliest stage of their existence, were as vicious as the Germans have shown themselves during the present war the Irish and French must have experienced a weighty task in bringing about their civilization. The only method tending to a change of heart is with the cannon and rifle, which the Irish and French are using to good purpose in the present conflict, the "civilized British Angles and Saxons," which includes the heroic Canadians, doing their full share. Kindliness surely has its place; but nothing short of bullet, bayonet and shrapnel will ever tame the Hun.

DRUGGISTS OBJECT—PROPERLY SO.

Items constantly appear in the Press pointing out that druggists object to being made the sole vendors of liquor under the prohibition law when in force. This feeling seems to be the sentiment throughout the Dominion. On the 13th inst. a telegram from Vancouver, B.C., says, "British Columbia druggists have sent a statement to the legislature stating that trade is overwhelmingly opposed to taking over the sale of liquor under the proposed prohibition measure, some of the druggists declaring they will vote against the present prohibition bill if it provides dispensing by druggists."

Why all this protesting? There is no provision in the proposed prohibitory law compelling druggists to become vendors of spirituous liquors, even for medicinal purposes. All that those who do not wish to deal in the article have to do is to decline applying for, or accepting a license authorizing them to sell liquor.

The position taken by the druggists is, in our view, the correct one, as they will be constantly under suspicion, and frequently charged by the over-zealous with violating the law, in improperly disposing of the drug. Respectable druggists would prefer being relieved of the responsibility, while some would not hesitate to profit by violating the provisions of the law.

It would be well for the Government to take power to appoint vendors of alcohol for medicinal purposes in all places where it is possible to do so. Under such a system the Government would have full control over officials.

The Ontario Government are acting upon the principle of dealing with the sale of liquor as indicated. A telegram from Toronto of the 14th inst. says wholesale vendors employed by the Government will dispense liquor in Ontario after prohibition goes into effect. Announcement involving this important change in the arrangement was made in the Legislature last night by Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, during consideration of the temperance bill. The Government had been hoping that this trade would be handled by wholesale druggists, but it transpired that the wholesale druggists prefer to have nothing to do with the business.

The French in the Champagne battle are said to have fired 200,000 rounds of high explosive shells in a single day, while at the crossing of the San the Germans are credited with having expended 700,000 shells in four hours. After the high explosives have done their part, the infantry advances, or tries to advance, and is greeted with shrapnel, machine guns and rifles. If the attack is successful the victors have to dig themselves in, in the face of a galling fire, for the defenders have retreated to a line of trenches a little farther back, where they immediately begin preparations for an attempt to recover the lost ground later on. Such is warfare today.

An explanation of the fact that the battalions and addresses of soldiers who figure in the casualty lists have lately been deleted from the official list given to the newspapers was given in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon by Hon. A. E. Kemp. The acting Minister of Militia said that the new departure had been based on instructions from the Army Council of Great Britain, the object presumably being to prevent information reaching the enemy. However, the order has been modified so that hereafter there would be no difficulty in identification. It is understood the addresses of the next of kin will be given with this in view.

The Government has given notice of resolutions in the House of Commons providing for a bounty to zinc smelters, to be paid when the price of the metal in London falls below £36 19s 6d a long ton. Zinc has been on the list of war babies. The price in New York within two years has risen from under 6 cents a pound to 40 cents, and is now about 18 cents. The metal is a new one to figure with prominence in Canadian mineral returns.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

From The Intelligencer, April 15, 1868.

Viscount Cranbourne, secretary for State for India died yesterday.

Twenty-five persons killed and seventy wounded is the result of an accident on the Erie Railroad, 13 miles west of Port Jervis.

Three steamers were burnt to the water's edge at Detroit this morning.

Current Comment

It was announced the other day in London that the Government had conclusive evidence of widespread efforts of the German Government to suppress the Mohammedan religion, beginning with the African colonies. This seems to be in the nature of attempting the impossible. The Germans must be looking for a thousand-year task.—Montreal Gazette.

Who in Canada that attempts to appreciate the kind of task that the defenders of Verdun are wrestling with so nobly these days can help a feeling of the sincerest admiration for our French allies who, on the shell-torn banks of the Meuse, are fighting Canada's battle as well as their own against the Teuton spoilsmen.—Ottawa Free Press.

So long as one political party hogs all the power and its privileges, it must not complain if the weight of the resultant responsibility is almost greater than it can bear.—Liberal Exchange. That is how the late Laurier Government felt up to September 21, 1911. And now it accuses the Borden Government of being on the greedy side.

The Poets' Corner

THE ROAD TO BERLIN

Mr. H. L. Bradley, proprietor of the Queen's Hotel of Belleville, received the following lines, which were composed by his son-in-law, W.M. P. Payne, who is with an ambulance corps in France:

THE ROAD TO BERLIN.

On the road in stricken Flanders,
  There's a place that's vacant still.
There's a rifle lying silent,
  There's a uniform to fill.
Those at home will hate to lose you,
  But the march will soon begin—
On the roads through stricken Belgium,
  With the Allies to Berlin.

In your home securely resting,
  Are you content to stay?
While the others guard your honour,
  While the Germans toast "The Day"?
For your King and Country need you,
  And we want to count you in—
On the roads through stricken Belgium,
  With the Allies to Berlin.

When at length the foe is vanquished,
  When the boys come home at last,
Won't you wish that you had listened
  Ere old England's need had passed?
But the gate of manhood's open,
  For your part can still begin—
On the roads through stricken Belgium,
  With the Allies to Berlin.

In the lonely wayside graveyards
  Sleep the boys whose day is done;
Don't you hear their voices calling,
  To complete the work begun?
There are ghostly fingers beckoning,
  There are victories yet to win—
On the roads through stricken Belgium,
  With the Allies to Berlin.

When from Mons they fought each footstep,
  When their lips with pain were dumb,
'Twas their hope which held the trenches,
  Always thinking you would come;
Through the frozen hell of winter,
  Through the shrapnel's racking din,
They have waited, never doubting
  That you'd join them in Berlin.

Spring Reminders Of Rheumatism

RAW, DAMP WEATHER STARTS THE PAINS, BUT THE TROUBLE LIES IN THE BLOOD

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this kind of treatment and all the time the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid-tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statements. Mr. Michael Personage, Fenlon, Man., says:—"My mother suffered several years with rheumatism. We tried a number of remedies but they all failed to cure. Then we got Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and after using them for some time she was completely cured and has had no sign of the trouble since."

HEAVY FINE FOR SELLING TO SOLDIERS

Fine of Three Hundred Dollars and Costs, With Option Three Months in Jail

KINGSTON, April 14.—Charles Bryant, $300 and costs, or three months in jail.

James Palmer, $300 and costs, or three months in jail.

George Randall, $300 and costs, or three months in jail.

The charge against the men was that of selling liquor to soldiers.

William McCammon, license inspector, laid the charges, and the round-up was made by Police Constables Arniel, Graham and Armstrong, with the assistance of military detectives.

That a gang of men have been at work in Kingston, selling liquor to soldiers, is quite evident as a result of the session of the Police Court on Thursday morning, when four men pleaded guilty to such a charge, and were heavily fined by Magistrate Farrell, $300 and costs, with the option of three months in jail, being the penalty in each case. In default of the payment, the men were taken to jail.

For some time past complaints have been made that men were selling liquor to soldiers.

A couple of military men came here from Belleville; the men suspected of trafficking in liquor were pointed out to them, and they had no trouble in getting those who were violating the liquor laws to fall into their trap. Some of the men rounded up realized fifty cents on their transaction, and one 25 cents. Some of the men engaged in selling the liquor have been satisfied to have a few drinks as their pay.

At various places where the soldiers are quartered the authorities have had considerable trouble over men buying liquor for them. Just a few days ago some men were rounded up in Belleville and very heavily fined. Magistrate Farrell promises to deal very seriously with all such offenders.—Kingston Whig.

A Candid Opinion

The following amusing passage took place between counsel and witness in a disputed will case:

"Did your father give you no parting admonition?"

"He never gave much away at any time."

"I mean, what were his last words?"

"They don't concern you."

"They not only concern me, sir," remarked the barrister, severely, "but they concern the whole court."

"Oh, all right," was the reply. "Father said, 'Don't have no trouble when I'm gone, Jim, 'cos lawyers is the biggest thieves unhung.'"

Lost and Found

Story of a Bridegroom With Dramatic Tastes

By CLARISSA MACKIE

When Robert Dwight married Mildred Corson every one said that they would be happy if Dwight did not go on the stage, for which he had a strong leaning. Mildred was very much in love with him, and it was feared that if he was separated from her, to be surrounded by actresses, not only would she be jealous, but he might be tempted to leave her in the lurch.

They were married early in February, intending to go south to meet the summer coming north. A large number of friends saw them joined, pelted them with rice and old shoes, and they were driven to the dock from which they were to sail. On boarding the ship they found their stateroom a mass of flowers sent to them by their friends. In two or three days they found themselves in Jacksonville, Fla.

To Mildred Dwight, who had been a lonely little stenographer when Robert fell in love with and married her, this leisurely life of the well to do was a delightful experience.

Robert Dwight was far from poor, his business was a prosperous one, and there was no economizing during this wedding trip. And, best of all, there was waiting for them in New York a luxuriously furnished apartment which was to be home.

No wonder the Dwights were blissfully happy, and it is not surprising that on this winter morning Mildred looked from her hotel window into a summer land of tropical flowers and singing birds and decided that this was heaven indeed.

Robert had gone out to buy some cigars at a queer little tobacco shop at the end of a crooked street, and when he returned they were going for a long drive under the palms.

Mildren glanced at the clock. Robert had been gone over an hour, and the motorcar was waiting below.

Another hour ticked away and thirty minutes more.

After the manner of brides, Mildred became alarmed over the long absence of her loved one, and, twisting a white chiffon veil over her little hat, she went out to look for him. She know the way to the tobacco shop, and she soon reached the crooked street.

Her heart sank when she saw that down its length were an unusual number of people.

Had anything happened to Robert?

She moved through the crowd, not daring to ask for fear of the answer she might receive, and she had nearly reached the end of the street and the shop when something happened—something that shattered her beautiful bubble of happiness and ended that most blissful of honeymoons.

Mildred saw Robert coming out of the tobacco shop. He paused in the doorway to light a cigarette. How handsome he looked in his well fitting white flannels, with a white hat set back on his dark hair! He tossed the match away and glanced up the street.

His face brightened into radiance; his eyes glowed with excitement and lover's ardor.

Mildred thought he saw her, but he was looking at another woman, a woman who was running down the opposite pavement. Nay, she was only a slight young girl, exquisitely lovely and evidently in deep distress.

As she ran toward Robert he advanced to meet her with outstretched hands. The cigarette he had tossed aside performed a blazing parabola and fell at Mildred's feet. But she did not see it.

Her anguished eyes saw nothing save the glad look in Robert's face and the joy of the girl as she flew into his waiting arms.

"You!" cried Robert.

Mildred saw no more. She fled back along the crooked street with a wildly beating heart and an insane desire to laugh loud.

Did any woman ever have such an odd ending to a honeymoon?

An hour later she left the hotel with her trunks and handbag, and what excuse she made to the clerk I do not know, but there was no message for Robert Dwight when he came home at last to find her gone.

• • • • • • •

Six months later and it was summer time in New England. Mildred Dwight had resumed her maiden name of Mildred Corson and had obtained a responsible position in one of the large manufacturies of a Connecticut city.

As Miss Corson she acceptably filled her position and won her way into the hearts of her fellow clerks. Not one of them knew of the tragedy which had blighted her honeymoon, nor did one of them guess that Mildred had ever been a bride.

She found a pleasant boarding place and congenial friends. In the city were several good theaters and an occasional concert.

Still Mildred was very unhappy. She loved her husband, and, although the newspapers had told her that Robert was making a worldwide search for his vanished bride, she maintained silence toward those who had known her in the past.

There came a Saturday in August with its customary half holiday from work. Mildred had spent a quiet afternoon in her own room, and after the evening meal one of her new acquaintances, Cora Fields, came with an invitation to attend one of the open air moving picture theaters.

Mildred rather liked the silent drama, so, clad in dainty white gowns, the two girls entered the inclosure and found seats near the front.

Overhead the stars were shining, and outside the inclosure was the hum of city street traffic. The orchestra was unusually good, and Mildred found herself strangely stirred when the violins drifted into McDowell's beautiful "To a Wild Rose."

The orchestra had played the melody during their first meal in that Florida hotel, and it brought back painful memories of her brief spell of happiness.

Then the title of the play was flashed on the screen.

"Lost and Found."

With the first picture came a realizing sense of looking upon familiar scenes. Surely, surely this was the sunny south and the quaint streets those of Jacksonville.

And the girl!

Mildred almost arose from her seat and cried out with surprise as she recognized the lovely face of the heroine as that of the woman who had flown to Robert's arms. So Robert's sweetheart was an actress!

One scene after another flashed before her vision, melting into a whole, which brought her, trembling and incredulous, to the moment when she found herself gazing down the crooked little street of the tobacco shop.

Then she saw her own slender figure and white veiled face looking toward the shop from which her husband, Robert, was emerging, lighting a cigarette. The entire scene was repeated, incident for incident. He tossed away the match, glanced up the street, became eager, alert, tenderly smiling, flung away his cigarette and advanced with outstretched arms to meet the heroine's graceful flying form.

Robert in the moving picture! Why, how had it happened?

All the way home she was asking herself the question, and through the darkness of her perplexity and doubt came one ray of light. During his college days Robert had been one of the college players and was considered a talented amateur actor.

"I am glad he married the girl," sighed Cora as they reached Mildred's door.

"Yes," said Mildred absently, "but he was married before that."

"Who was married before?" asked Cora, puzzled.

"Why, Robert, of course."

"But there was no Robert. His name was Arthur."

"I am stupid tonight," was Mildred's only explanation as she parted from her friend.

The next day Mildred obtained leave of absence and in her straightforward way went directly to New York and called at her husband's office.

She was trembling like a leaf when she was shown into Robert's private office.

He stared at her as one looks at the newly risen dead. His face was thin and worn and his brown hair sprinkled with gray.

"Robert!" she said meekly and then promptly fainted away. When she opened her eyes she was lying on the leather couch, and Robert was on his knees bending over her. His eyes were tender and anxious.

"Can you ever forgive me?" was her first cry.

"Yes, dearest," he said generously. "But tell me what happened to send you away from me that day? I have searched land and sea for you, and I had given you up for dead when you appeared before me."

In a few broken sentences Mildred told her husband of her surprise and jealousy that day in Jacksonville and how when she was assured of his perfidy she had taken a train for the north and disappeared. Then the motion picture play on the screen had thrown a ray of light on the matter.

Robert's explanation made that ray a brilliant light of understanding which cleared up the mystery which had parted bride and groom for almost a year.

"You remember I told you I always acted in our college theatricals," he reminded her, "and many of my friends had urged me to enter the profession. But I did not seriously consider it and only now and then hankered to tread the stage.

"But that morning in Jacksonville I started down to the tobacco shop with only one thought in my mind—to get back to you. As I turned into the street I met my old friend of college days, Jack Budlong, president of our Players' club. He was glad to see me and tearing his hair insanely over the fact that his star performer had come down with the measles that very morning.

"Budlong fell upon me like a long lost brother and pleaded with me to take the part of the measled one. So I did, and when I reached the hotel, full of my experiences and with Miss Gray and Budlong accompanying me to meet the only woman in the world, why, my wife had vanished without a word. So you believed that I was false to you?"

Mildred's punishment had been great, indeed, and she humbly acknowledged her lack of faith. "But how was I to know?" she asked pitifully.

Robert smiled wisely.

"In great love there is no faltering of faith," he gently reminded her as he drew her face to his shoulder. "As the man in the play lost and found his sweetheart, so I lost my wife and have found her"—

"With a greater love for you and unwavering faith," finished Mildred.

Never Smoked Since

"What I admire most in a man," said Mr. Johnson, "is the power of self-denial. Now, take smoking," he continued, lazily filling his pipe, and gazing around at the rest of the party grouped in front of the log fire. "It's a useless habit, and yet not one of you men here could give it up. You haven't got the strength of mind."

This remark roused some indignation and members of the party were reminded of incidents that proved a contrary idea. Finally a southerner remarked:

"I know a feller down in Kentucky, who smoked tew ounces of terbaccer every day for twenty-seven years, and then guv it up at a minnit's notice and never tetched it again.

"Fact, gentlemen, I dew assure ye," he resumed, as a murmur of unbelief arose. "He was jest lightin' his pipe when somethin' cum to him, an' from that day to this he's never smoked another."

"Marvelous instance of will power," said a listener.

"Extraordinary strength of mind," said another.

"What determination!" exclaimed a third.

And then Uncle Sam spoke again, gazing meditatively into the fire the while.

"Yes, it were strange," he said, "Great friend o' mine, too; so I know it's true. He was sitting on the top of a barrel o' blasting powder at the time, and the head o' his match dropped through the bunghole."

NEGRO TOWN A SUCCESS

Hodson City is Without a White Resident

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 14.—After several years' struggle against heavy odds, including local unsympathetic sentiment and gloomy predictions of failure by white people of neighboring towns, Hobson City, the only municipality in the United States with one exception which is wholly populated and conducted by negroes, has won its battle by demonstrating that it is a pronounced success.

When the plan to found an exclusively negro town in the South was proposed, scarcely any white people in the Anniston district, where it is located, dreamed it would work out. But the negroes were not discouraged and went ahead. Now Hobson City is firmly established as a progressive town and governs itself successfully both in a financial way and in law enforcement and observance.

Back in 1900 this exclusively negro town was started by a band of negroes who obtained a charter and incorporated. The population shows a gain of 150 per cent. No man without employment is allowed to stay in the town. Either a job is found for him or he is required to move away.

The town has four churches, with a combined membership of 700, a good public school with 250 pupils, a dozen progressive stores, waterworks, electric lights, police and sanitary departments, a well built jail and a Governing Body elected every two years. It is the only town in the state that is out of debt and has money in the treasury. More than half the citizens own their own homes. Some of its residents produce within a stone's throw of the town limits from $800 to $1,500 worth of cotton and other farm products, besides large quantities of vegetables and fruits.

Hobson City's governing Board consists of seven Councilmen, a Mayor and four other municipal officers including a Chief of Police. Every resident of the town is a negro.

LETS MORE TREASURES GO

Morgan Obtains $4,000,000 For Three More Collections

NEW YORK, April 14.—Three more collections of art treasures gathered by the late J. P. Morgan have been sold by his son, J. P. Morgan, it was announced to-day, to a firm of Fifth avenue dealers for $4,000,000. The transaction included the renaissance bronzes, 200 pieces; the Limoges enamels, 150 pieces, and the Italian Majolicas, 150 pieces.

More than $15,000,000 already have been realized by sales from the Morgan collections, the bulk of which still is on view at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. It is reported in art circles that the purchasers were not acting as agents, but as speculators.

The collection of renaissance bronzes is said to be excelled only by the Spalding collection in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London. It took the late Mr. Morgan ten years to complete it. The collection of enamels and majolicas are regarded as the finest in the world.

WILL WE EVER WALK ON AIR?

Train Of Thought Inspired By a Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. D. McLEAN

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 28th, 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. I tried several medicines, but got no results and my Headaches became more severe. One day I saw your sign which read 'Fruit-a-tives' make you feel like walking on air. This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. Now I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I cannot say too much for 'Fruit-a-tives', and recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends". DAN McLEAN.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES' is daily proving its priceless value in relieving cases of Stomach, Liver and Kidney Trouble—General Weakness, and Skin Diseases.

The Relief Of Belgium

A striking indictment of Germany's continued inhumanity to Belgium and a powerful plea on behalf of the millions who, although destitute, remain loyal in that outraged country, are contained in the following important statement. It is signed by the Lord Mayor of London, as chairman of the National Committee for Relief in Belgium, by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Bourne, the Moderator of the Church of Scotland, the President of the Free Church Council, the Chief Rabbi, the Duke of Norfolk, Lords Lansdowne, Rosebery and Bryce, Mr. Arthur Henderson, John Redmond, Mr. Shirley Benn (Hon. Treasurer), and Mr. W. A. M. Goode (Hon. Secretary).

To the Editor,—

Sir,—Eleven months ago we formed the National Committee for Relief in Belgium and appealed to our fellow subjects throughout the British Empire on behalf of a million and a half Belgians, oppressed and threatened with starvation in their own outraged country. The number of destitute Belgians in Belgium today exceeds three millions. Most of these are women and children.

Since we made our previous appeal it has been conclusively proved that the Germans, contrary to every civilized precedent, will adhere to their "openly expressed intention not to support the Belgian population or supply them with food." The words quoted are those used by Lord Robert Cecil, on behalf of the Government, in the House of Commons on January 27th last. That Lord Robert Cecil does not over-estimate the calculated cruelty of the German intention is shown by the fact that in Poland, where there is no neutral channel for the distribution of relief, the civilian population have been allowed to die like flies, and over 300,000 able-bodied Polish men have been driven into Germany, there to work in the mines and industries, thus freeing 300,000 Germans to go to the fighting front. The same thing would undoubtedly happen in Belgium but for food which reaches the Belgians through the Allies.

It has also been definitely ascertained that the food sent into Belgium does not reach or benefit the Germans. Lord Robert Cecil, on February 21st last, stated in the House of Commons that the "Government are satisfied with the manner in which the Relief Commission has carried on its work and have exacted guarantees from the German authorities who might otherwise have taken advantage of the supplies." The confidential evidence of Belgians of repute, allowed out of Belgium, and of reliable neutrals permitted into Belgium, confirms this official declaration. The neutral Relief Commission, of which Mr. Herbert Hoover is chairman, and which is conducted under the supervision of the American and Spanish diplomatic representatives, has been accurately described by Earl Curzon as "an absolute miracle of scientific organization, synonymous with economy and efficiency combined." Receipts from the 2,700 Belgian Communes show that every ton of food imported into Belgium has been faithfully distributed by Belgians to Belgians under the close supervision of this Commission and its self-sacrificing American workers. The British National Committee, with the approval of the British and Belgian Governments, hands all its funds, without any deduction, to Mr. Hoover's Commission to be expended in food.

In the conviction that the methods of distributing relief in Belgium render it practically impossible for any appreciable quantity of the food to get into German hands, and with the evidence to justify this conviction, we do not hesitate again urgently to appeal to the British nation for further contributions. Our original appeal up to date, has brought in over £1,500,000, but this is almost £1,000,000 short of what is required from British benevolent sources, to enable the destitute in Belgium to maintain life with loyalty. Of the total so far received, more than £1,000,000 has come from Australia and New Zealand.

Over seven million defenceless civilians in Belgium, for more than a year and a half, have suffered a tyranny almost inconceivable to those in our own uninvaded land. Nevertheless, they have maintained a resistance none the less courageous because it must be passive, and, with almost negligible exceptions, they have refused to work for the Germans. Practically half of the whole of this population in Belgium, through no fault of their own, are now destitute and live on a pitiful ration.

Is there any debt of honor more pressing or any work of humanity with a stronger claim than that of helping to keep body and soul together in the men, women and children, who, in spite of misery and privation, endure all things and loyally await the coming of the Allies?

Donations and regular subscriptions, for which we most earnestly ask, should be sent to Dominion, Colonial or Local Committees, wherever they have been formed, or to A. Shirley Benn, Esq., M.P., Hon. Treasurer, National Committee for Relief in Belgium, Trafalgar Buildings, Trafalgar Square, London.

NO NEED TO KISS THE BIBLE

Ontario Decides to Reform Taking of Oath Legislation

TORONTO, April 14.— In future it will not be necessary for a witness in taking an oath in court to kiss the Bible. The legal committee of the Ontario Legislature this morning passed an amendment to the Evidence Act which provides that a witness shall be sworn by administering the oath while he has a copy of the Old or New Testament in his hand. The amendment was contained in a bill introduced by Mr. McCrea, of Sudbury, which also provides that the right of appeal to the Privy Council only applies to cases which originate in the Supreme Court.

MARQUIS OF CLANRICARDE DIES IN LONDON

LONDON, April 14.—Hubert G. de Burgh Canning, second Marquis of Clanricarde, died in London yesterday. Few of the owners of great estates in Ireland were regarded with such hostility as was Lord Clanricarde. When the Irish Evicted Tenants' Bill was before Parliament in 1907 he opposed the measure and was attacked by the Irish party on the ground that he kept tenants from their homes for many years. He owned about 57,000 acres. He was born in 1832.

"It 'pen's on how you look at it, jedge; de white ones is de easiest to see on de roosts, but de dark ones is de easiest to hide when you gits 'em."

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away."

"The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little, Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

DAILY CAR TOURS PROVINCE OF SASKATCHEWAN

The dairy authorities of Saskatchewan, working in conjunction with the Canadian Northern Railway, have recently completed a series of meetings in the interests of dairying through the medium of a special dairy car. Over 90 meetings were held, with a total attendance of 3,536, or an average attendance of over 38, which was considered very satisfactory in view of the extremely cold weather that prevailed. One of the features of the program was a series of over 100 views, showing some of the world's best dairy animals, sanitary stables, approved dairy utensils and also giving other information of interest.

It was thought that the enormous grain crops harvested last year would tend to lessen the interest taken in dairy matters, but the reverse seems to have occurred. The output of butter at 15 co-operative creameries, operated by the Dairy Branch, continues to show decided increases. The make for November, 1915, showed a gain of 34 per cent. over the same month for 1914. December showed a gain of 77 per cent. January, 81 per cent., and February, 111 per cent. Such satisfactory increases show that the farmers are taking a keen interest in dairying, notwithstanding the high prices of grain.

Many Military Matters

If weather conditions are favorable, the battalions going to Barriefield camp shortly after the first of May will go there by road, the route marches being made directly from their present stations. It would be a splendid training for both the officers and men of the battalions and taken with reasonable rests would not be tiring.

This would mean that there would be troops arriving who had marched from Peterboro, Lindsay, Perth, Port Hope, Cobourg, Cornwall, Belleville, and Brockville.

The suggestion is now being worked out and the hundreds of different details that would arise are being planned for. It would be a big move, but with the organization of Military District No. 3 could, in the opinion of qualified officers, be easily accomplished.

The soldiers who will be camped at Barriefield camp this year will be given a training that will if they are in camps a sufficient length of time, enable them to leave Canada and go directly into the trenches.

To answer the call for drafts, should they be asked for unexpectedly from any of the ten battalions at the camp, from the very first day the soldiers will start on foot-drill, squad drill, trench fighting etc. Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, General Staff Officer, hopes that every man in the camp will receive a much further advanced training than the elementary work. It is now being planned to make night-work a big part of the programme. Practically all the important moves that are taken by the soldiers in France and Flanders now when near the firing line, are taken at night. This is done to prevent the immense casualties that would result should any big movement be attempted in the day-light hours. The soldiers at the camp will receive instruction in the occupying and the relieving of other men in the trenches, outposts, advance guard rear guard and flank guard tactics and all such work that would be necessary to perform in the training of men for the battle front of trench warfare. During these night attacks and "workouts," flares, rockets, and other devices, likely to be used by an enemy, will be employed to give the men a thorough grounding in their use. Hand grenades will also form a great part of the work as this branch is proving very important.

Some part of the training time will be taken up with instruction in the building of dug-outs, trenches and shelters of all kinds.

There will be at least seven different schools running for the duration of Barriefield camp. The Infantry School of Instruction will be engaged in the training of probationary officers and N.C.O.'s. There will also be the School of Signalling which has been carrying on such splendid work here during the winter. The school of Musketry, School of Cookery, School of Machine Gunnery, Equitation School and School of Bayonet Fighting and Physical Drill will all be carried on.

Few people realize the task which the military authorities will have in feeding the ten thousand overseas volunteers who will be under canvas at Barriefield camp this summer. It will require daily 10,000 pounds of bread, 10,000 pounds of potatoes, about 4,000 pounds of mixed vegetables, and 1,250 pounds of butter, besides many other articles of food.

Up until a short time ago the Military Department did not issue any milk to the men. Those who had charge of the work saw the necessity of a ration of milk, and now each man is allowed one ounce. It would be impossible to supply fresh milk. Milk powder is just as good, if not better.

The men who will have charge of the cooking of the food for the troops will be given an opportunity to learn how the rations should be put up. A school of cookery will be situated on the camp grounds, and the men can learn the military way of cooking rations.

It is altogether likely that a regiment cook-house will be used by each battalion instead of company cook-houses. On former occasions each company had a separate cook-house, but the authorities think that if all the cooking for the battalion was done under one roof better results could be accomplished.

The cadets of the Royal Military College, who are in the army class, will leave the college about the first of June and will be attached to the different branches of the permanent force for instruction. They will be attached to the branch of the service, which they intend to join. After they have received instruction for about a month or six weeks, they will receive appointments in either the Canadian or British expeditionary forces and proceed overseas.

The term closes at the college about the end of June and many of the cadets will likely go to some of the military camps until college reopens.

Col. Perreau, Commandant, is endeavoring to arrange matters so that the recruits who are entering the college in the fall will report about the middle of August. Commandant expects that there will be about eighty recruits.

From the time the college closes the members of the staff will be kept busy. Col. Perreau will visit camps where R. M. C. cadets are training. Lieut.-Col. Thompson will be attached to the 3rd Divisional staff at Barriefield for instructional duties, and Major Plummor will go to Petawawa camp for instructional purposes.

FOUL PLAY CAUSED SOLDIER'S DEATH

Member of 77th Murdered?—Dead Before Body Thrown Into Canal.

Ottawa, April 13.—It is now evident that the soldier wearing the uniform of the 77th Battalion, whose body was found in the Rideau canal on Sunday afternoon, was the victim of foul play. Although his body was very much decomposed when found, a post-mortem examination brings out the fact that the man was dead before he went into the water. His right leg was broken, and other marks show that he met his death in some violent manner.

The officers of the 77th Battalion have been making strenuous efforts to identify the body, but their efforts have so far been fruitless. The body was buried yesterday. Dr. Campbell Laidlaw, who performed the post-mortem, is not yet ready to give out the results of his examination, but intimated that the man was not drowned.

The inquest will be continued at the police station on Friday, and the results of the post-mortem will be made known then.

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Mrs. Andrew G. Lund, Hughenden, Alta., writes:—"Two of my babies were very much troubled with constipation and I tried several remedies without success. A neighbor advised me to try Baby's Own Tablets and they were so satisfactory that now I would use nothing else." The Tablets never fail to cure constipation and They may be given to the youngest child with perfect safety. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

COULDN'T LOSE IT.

A certain dealer had a lot of cheese which was anything but good, and, tired of seeing it about, told the assistant when he closed the shop to leave one of the cheese at the door for someone to walk off with. Thomas occasionally crept to a window to see operations, and at length went to his master, grinning all over his face, saying the cheese was gone.

"Leave another out to-morrow night," was the master's order, which was obeyed by the shopman, who, after a few peeps next evening, walked to his master in the counting house, scratching his head and looking as though some great disappointment had befallen him.

"Is it gone?" asked the dealer.

"No, sir; that other 'un has walked back!"

Lt. A. C. Trousdale of the 80th Battalion, has been home on a few days' leave, visiting his mother, Mrs. L. Trousdale, at Sydenham.

Moving pictures will be shown at Griffin's Opera House to-morrow afternoon and evening under the auspices of the 155th.

Lt.-Col. Adams and a number of officers of the 155th Battalion, together with the band will attend a large recruiting meeting in the Trenton Opera House to-morrow night.

Lieut. Duffin of the 155th Battalion, was to-day receiving the congratulations of his fellow officers over the fact that a fine son had been born to him.

The 80th Battalion, accompanied by the brass and bugle bands paraded on Front street, about noon to-day. The men made a fine and manly appearance and drew forth much applause from the bystanders.

Ptes. C. McGinnis and T. McGinnis, of the 80th Battalion, Belleville, are in Lindsay visiting their home. They speak well of the 80th and also of the 155th Battalion, which are located at Belleville.

The 80th Battalion realized the sum of $29.20 from the sale of dripping and refuse for the months of February and March. At this rate the sale of dripping and refuse at Barriefield camp for ten battalions will reach from $150 to $200 a month.

KINGSTON

There will be an association football league organized among the battalions in camp this summer. A baseball league will also be formed, and it is expected that there will be some crack teams on the heights.

The Y.M.C.A. authorities are making preparation for their work at the camp during the summer. The work will be on a large scale, and with greater facilities for the accommodation and entertainment of the men.

Among the many Canadians who have been honored by the King with the D.S.O. are Lt.-Col. Simson of the A.S.C. and Lt.-Col. Lister of the intelligence corps. Col. Simson was formerly in command of the C.P.A.S.C. in Kingston, and Lt.-Col. Lister succeeded the late Major Bruce Carruthers as director of signalling.

The work of running down the parties responsible for selling liquor to soldiers on the street is due to the determination of Major Wilson, D.A.A and Q.M.G. For some time the surreptitious sale of liquor has been prevalent on the street, and this was conducted by just a few for purely commercial purposes. Even the liquor men deplored the traffic, but were unable to prevent it, as it was purchased originally in the most unsuspecting manner. At the request of Colonel Hemming, Major Wilson inaugurated a plan to put a stop to the street traffic in liquors, and the Major feels that the penalties imposed by the magistrate yesterday have settled the matter in Kingston.

A woman entered a store to buy a pair of shoes. The obliging clerk, after trying for some time to fit her, remarked:

"Madam, it seems to me that one of your feet is larger than the other!"

The woman rose quickly, glared at the clerk and left the store. She entered another store. Another obliging clerk, after trying on several pairs, remarked:

"Madam, one of your feet is smaller than the other."

"I'll take this pair," said she, smiling sweetly, and she has traded there ever since.

Don'ts For Poets.

Arthur Guiterman in a recent interview gave a list of negative commandments for would be poets. "Don't think of yourself as a poet and dress the part," he says. "Don't frequent exclusively the company of writers. Don't complain of lack of appreciation. (In the long run no really good published work can escape appreciation). Don't speak of poetic license or believe that there is any such thing. Don't use 'e'er' for 'ever,' 'o'er' for 'over,' 'when as' of 'what time' for 'when' or any of the 'poetical' commonplaces of the past. Don't say 'did go' for 'went,' even if you need an extra syllable. Don't—don't write hymns to the great god Pan. He is dead; let him rest in peace! Don't write what everybody else is writing."

What Held Her.

Dinah Snow was a colored cook in the home of Smith. One morning on going to the kitchen Mrs. Smith noticed that Dinah looked as if she had been tangled up with a road roller.

"Why, Dinah," exclaimed she, "what in the world has happened to you?"

"Was me husban'," explained Dinah. "He done went an' beat me ag'in, an' jes' fo' nothin' too."

"Again!" cried Mrs. Smith, with increasing wonder. "Is he in the habit of beating you? Why don't you have him arrested?"

"Been thinkin' of it seberal times, missy," was the startling rejoinder of Dinah, "but I hain't nebah had no money to pay his fine."—Exchange.

TOO ILL TO WORK DIED ON THE MOUNTAIN

MONTREAL, April 14.—Too ill to continue work, Eugene Bourdon, aged 60 years, of 675 Grand Trunk street, a foreman in the North End plant of the Canadian Steel Company, started home along a road over the Cote des Neiges slope of Mount Royal. He was overcome on his way, and his dead body was found at 4.10 by William Muir, of Montreal. The Westmount police were notified and two constables were sent to investigate. They found no marks of violence on the body, and after notifying Coroner McMahon they had the body removed to the morgue. An inquest will be held this morning.

It was learned that Bourdon was ill when he started for work yesterday morning. He became worse during the forenoon and decided to abandon work for the day, and started to walk across the mountain. The exertion is supposed to have overtaxed his heart and caused his death. He had been employed by the Canadian Steel Company for seventeen years. He is survived by a widow and several grown-up children.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Wall Street Had No $100,000,000 for Strangers Note

NEW YORK, April 14.—An optimist, who was not recognized as one of the country's big income tax payers, spent several hours in the financial district yesterday trying to raise $100,000,000 on his personal note. He was too well dressed to excite suspicion at first in the offices he visited, and he appeared to be laboring under no excitement. He failed to get the money.

The caller appeared first at the United States Sub-Treasury with a request to be shown into the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States. Mr. Vogel was out, but the visitor explained his errand to a guard. He needed $100,000,000 and would wait while the money was wrapped up.

The guard told him they couldn't spare that much without getting a special shipment from Washington. The caller explained that he could not wait, and would have to get the money from the National City Bank. He endeavored to see an officer of this institution, but on being told that the bank was pretty well loaded up, went on to J. P. Morgan & Co., where he insisted upon seeing H. P. Davison, a partner.

He finally returned to the Sub-Treasury to tell them that he had decided to wait a day to give the Washington authorities time to send more money here, and after rewarding a guard with a cigar departed for the day.

Men who thus give up income and home comforts, and risk life itself, certainly should not have to sacrifice such civilized habits as a clean, smooth shave whenever they want it. Experience has shown that the only way to be sure of this at the front is to have a Gillette Safety Razor.

The New Steel Bridge at Trenton Open for Traffic

A Brief Description of the Imposing Structure—How the Scheme Was Inspired

(From Trenton Advocate)

Now that the new steel bridge at Trenton is nearing completion, and now that the use of it for all traffic has been thrown open to the public a brief description of this imposing structure will not be out of place.

On September 14th, 1915, a bylaw was submitted to the people to vote on the question of assuming one third of the estimated cost of the structure, the Government paying the other two thirds. The bylaw was carried by about 295 for and 45 against or nearly 7 to 1.

Plans had been prepared by the Department of Railways and Canals at Ottawa complying in the main with "the general specifications for steel superstructure of bridges and viaducts class 1," as issued by that Department in 1908. Tenders were called for and the contract awarded to the Ontario Bridge Co. of Toronto. The superstructure was sublet to Messrs. Henry & Boulden, Builders and Contractors of Kingston and the superstructure to the Hamilton Bridge Works Co. of Hamilton, which embodies the work of fabricating and erecting the steel. Mr. Harvey of the Harvey & Boulden firm has personally superintended all the substructure work. Mr. F. W. Sage, general manager of the Ontario Bridge Co. has looked after its interests.

The array of engineering talent in the persons of Mr. C. I. Halliday on behalf of the town, Mr. E. P. Murphy, on behalf of the Government and Mr. C. E. Dougan as Government Inspector leaves no doubt that the work has been performed fully up to the standard of the specifications and requirements of the Department of Railways and Canals. Mr. James A. McGill has acted as Superintendent director for the Hamilton Bridge Works Co.

The thanks of the community are owing to the above gentlemen one and all, for their courteous treatment and the obliging manner in which they have lived up to the terms of their contract regarding the public travel, and for the prompt manner in which they have kept free and unimpaired communication between East and West Trenton.

The Substructure

The substructure consists of abutments, 3 piers for fixed spans and east end of swing span, 1 pivot pier and 1 guide pier. These piers are built of concrete, 2 parts of sand 4 of broken stone and one part Portland cement and rest on the solid rock, all stones or other foreign substance having been first removed before the forms to contain the concrete piers, were lowered to their place. It was found necessary to go 21 feet below ordinary water level to obtain the required solid foundation for one of the piers. The guide piers are similarly built of concrete walls as above, conforming to the swing bridge, the portion within these walls being filled with loose rubble stone, covered with a floor of cement about 8 inches thick, reinforced with steel rods.

The superstructure consists of 3 through Pratt truss spans, each 119 feet from centre to centre of end floor beams. The trusses are 25 feet 6 inches centre to centre, road way 24 feet clear between trusses and 2 walks on outside 5 feet clear between trusses and railings.

The floors on walks and roadway of fixed spans are concrete 7 inches in thickness on centre of roadways and tapering to 6 inches on outside. On walks the thickness is 4½ inches. Both floors are reinforced with suitable expanded metal.

The floor of the swing part is of 4 inch Norway pine covered with 2 x 8 inch spruce wearing laid diagonally. The outside of the walks are protected by a railing of steel lattice work about 5 feet high, and two rows of 1½ inch iron pipe from the rail between the drive part and to walks.

Up aloft in the centre of the swing span has been erected a lookout and operating house for the electrical apparatus and equipment for operating the swing; and to guard against accident, there is provided a hand operating equipment of such a type that two men can swing the bridge from closed position to full open position or vice versa, in five minutes.

All crib-work belonging to the old bridge is to be removed to a depth of 10 feet below the average water level, while under the swing part a channel is to be dredged clear on either side of the guide piers and 14½ ft. deep.

Before the contract will be accepted the steel work on the bridge is to receive two additional coats of black graphite paint.

The bridge will be lighted by electricity.

Record of The Work

Oct. 26th, 1915.—Started at cement piers.

Dec. 20th, 1915.—Started to tear down old bridge.

Jan. 14th, 1916.—Started steel erection.

Feb. 10th, 1916—Finished 3 East spans.

March 2nd, 1916—Steel reached west abutment at 10 a.m.

March 29th, 1916—Traffic of all kinds allowed.

April 5th, 1916—Started laying cement floor.

Many were the means that were groaned forth about the loss of the covered bridge as a protection in the winter time, but the most sceptical of the bunch cannot but be agreeably impressed with the solidity and handsome appearance of this up-to-date structure and the freshness of the air in summer time will more than counterbalance any inconvenience caused by lack of protection in the winter.

The Government, the town, the contractors and the workmen are one and all to be congratulated on the excellency of the job.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Sherry:—We, your neighbors and friends have learned with deep regret that you are about to sever your connection with us. Therefore we feel that we cannot allow the opportunity to pass without expressing in some small way at least our appreciation of the genial kindness you have always shown, and that too cheerfully whenever an opportunity presented itself to assist us as your neighbors; we will miss your assistance which you have freely given. We also desire to convey to you, that we are pleased to know that while this change will keep us from the agreeable association, we have found, that you are not going so far away, but we shall be able to meet you, we hope, frequently, and that you will not be forgotten. We also hope and believe our loss will be others gain, and that success will be meted out to you. We now ask you to accept this purse that will perhaps when you look upon it cause you to remember, that you once lived in the 8 concession of Thurlow.

Quackery and Corns

Hundreds of treatments have been offered for corns.

Some were sedatives to quiet pain. Some were acids, harsh and risky. Some mere quackery.

But one man—a famous chemist—studied corns for 25 years. And finally discovered Blue-jay.

That is now the standard treatment, gentle, certain, scientific. It is used on a million corns monthly.

It has stopped the corn pain instantly, 70 million times. It has ended the corns completely within 48 hours, in 91 per cent of the cases. The others take a little longer.

Stop paring corns. Stop treating them in wrong ways. Use Blue-jay, and that ends them in a gentle, easy way. Prove that tonight.

Returning a Favor

The mayoral chair of a northern town was occupied by a man of great generosity. Among the applicants who sought relief from him during his tenure of office was a well known local actor known as "Talking Tim" who asked the loan of a few pounds to buy a donkey and cart and set up in the rag and bone business.

"Well, Tim," said the mayor, "if I give you this money, how are you going to pay me?"

This was a poser for Tim, but a thought struck him, and he blurted out:

"Well, yer worship, if ye are kind enough to give me the money, I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll name the donkey after yer worship."

The New Steel Bridge at Trenton Open for Traffic

A Brief Description of the Imposing Structure—How the Scheme Was Inspired

(From Trenton Advocate)

Now that the new steel bridge at Trenton is nearing completion, and now that the use of it for all traffic has been thrown open to the public a brief description of this imposing structure will not be out of place.

On September 14th, 1915, a bylaw was submitted to the people to vote on the question of assuming one third of the estimated cost of the structure, the Government paying the other two thirds. The bylaw was carried by about 295 for and 45 against or nearly 7 to 1.

Plans had been prepared by the Department of Railways and Canals at Ottawa complying in the main with "the general specifications for steel superstructure of bridges and viaducts class 1," as issued by that Department in 1908. Tenders were called for and the contract awarded to the Ontario Bridge Co. of Toronto. The superstructure was sublet to Messrs. Henry & Boulden, Builders and Contractors of Kingston and the superstructure to the Hamilton Bridge Works Co. of Hamilton, which embodies the work of fabricating and erecting the steel. Mr. Harvey of the Harvey & Boulden firm has personally superintended all the substructure work. Mr. F. W. Sage, general manager of the Ontario Bridge Co. has looked after its interests.

The array of engineering talent in the persons of Mr. C. I. Halliday on behalf of the town, Mr. E. P. Murphy, on behalf of the Government and Mr. C. E. Dougan as Government Inspector leaves no doubt that the work has been performed fully up to the standard of the specifications and requirements of the Department of Railways and Canals. Mr. James A. McGill has acted as Superintendent director for the Hamilton Bridge Works Co.

The thanks of the community are owing to the above gentlemen one and all, for their courteous treatment and the obliging manner in which they have lived up to the terms of their contract regarding the public travel, and for the prompt manner in which they have kept free and unimpaired communication between East and West Trenton.

The Substructure

The substructure consists of abutments, 3 piers for fixed spans and east end of swing span, 1 pivot pier and 1 guide pier. These piers are built of concrete, 2 parts of sand 4 of broken stone and one part Portland cement and rest on the solid rock, all stones or other foreign substance having been first removed before the forms to contain the concrete piers, were lowered to their place. It was found necessary to go 21 feet below ordinary water level to obtain the required solid foundation for one of the piers. The guide piers are similarly built of concrete walls as above, conforming to the swing bridge, the portion within these walls being filled with loose rubble stone, covered with a floor of cement about 8 inches thick, reinforced with steel rods.

The superstructure consists of 3 through Pratt truss spans, each 119 feet from centre to centre of end floor beams. The trusses are 25 feet 6 inches centre to centre, road way 24 feet clear between trusses and 2 walks on outside 5 feet clear between trusses and railings.

The floors on walks and roadway of fixed spans are concrete 7 inches in thickness on centre of roadways and tapering to 6 inches on outside. On walks the thickness is 4½ inches. Both floors are reinforced with suitable expanded metal.

The floor of the swing part is of 4 inch Norway pine covered with 2 x 8 inch spruce wearing laid diagonally. The outside of the walks are protected by a railing of steel lattice work about 5 feet high, and two rows of 1½ inch iron pipe from the rail between the drive part and to walks.

Up aloft in the centre of the swing span has been erected a lookout and operating house for the electrical apparatus and equipment for operating the swing; and to guard against accident, there is provided a hand operating equipment of such a type that two men can swing the bridge from closed position to full open position or vice versa, in five minutes.

All crib-work belonging to the old bridge is to be removed to a depth of 10 feet below the average water level, while under the swing part a channel is to be dredged clear on either side of the guide piers and 14½ ft. deep.

Before the contract will be accepted the steel work on the bridge is to receive two additional coats of black graphite paint.

The bridge will be lighted by electricity.

Record of The Work

Oct. 26th, 1915.—Started at cement piers.

Dec. 20th, 1915.—Started to tear down old bridge.

Jan. 14th, 1916.—Started steel erection.

Feb. 10th, 1916—Finished 3 East spans.

March 2nd, 1916—Steel reached west abutment at 10 a.m.

March 29th, 1916—Traffic of all kinds allowed.

April 5th, 1916—Started laying cement floor.

Many were the moans that were groaned forth about the loss of the covered bridge as a protection in the winter time, but the most sceptical of the bunch cannot but be agreeably impressed with the solidity and handsome appearance of this up-to-date structure and the freshness of the air in summer time will more than counterbalance any inconvenience caused by lack of protection in the winter.

The Government, the town, the contractors and the workmen are one and all to be congratulated on the excellency of the job.

ROCKEFELLER'S MILLIONS Could Not Buy Eczema Remedy

Says Nurse Hahn After Cure With D. D. D.

"Ten years I suffered with eczema—three years of that time I could not appear in public. My entire body was covered with the disease. I could not eat. I could not sleep. I could not live. I have at last found the great Prescription D. D. D. My body is clean, smooth. If there were one bottle only of D. D. D. in the world and I had it. Mr. Rockefeller's millions could not buy the golden fluid."—Nurse Myrtle Hahn, address of hospital on application.

Come to us and we will tell you more about this remarkable remedy. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you. D. D. D. Soap keeps your skin healthy. Ask about it.—

Surprise Party and Presentation

The neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Sherry gathered at their home on the eve of their departure for their new home at Thomasburg. After a short time spent in social intercourse, Mr. Lott came forward and read the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Sherry:—We your neighbors and friends have learned with deep regret that you are about to sever your connection with us. Therefore we feel that we cannot allow the opportunity to pass without expressing in some small way at least our appreciation of the genial kindness you have always shown, and that too cheerfully whenever an opportunity presented itself to assist us as your neighbors; we will miss your assistance which you have freely given. We also desire to convey to you, that we are pleased to know that while this change will keep us from the agreeable association, we have found, that you are not going so far away, but we shall be able to meet you, we hope, frequently, and that you will not be forgotten. We also hope and believe our loss will be others gain, and that success will be meted out to you. We now ask you to accept this purse that will perhaps when you look upon it cause you to remember, that you once lived in the 8 concession of Thurlow.

Signed on behalf of neighbors,
J. S. Hamilton,
Wallace Sills.

Quackery and Corns

Hundreds of treatments have been offered for corns.

Some were sedatives to quiet pain. Some were acids, harsh and risky. Some mere quackery.

But one man—a famous chemist—studied corns for 25 years. And finally discovered Blue-jay.

That is now the standard treatment, gentle, certain, scientific. It is used on a million corns monthly.

It has stopped the corn pain instantly, 70 million times. It has ended the corns completely within 48 hours, in 91 per cent of the cases. The others take a little longer.

Stop paring corns. Stop treating them in wrong ways. Use Blue-jay, and that ends them in a gentle, easy way. Prove that tonight.

Members of British Crews Whose Ships Have Been Sent to Bottom

LONDON, April 14—The British steamship Lady Plymouth has arrived at Valencia, Spain, towing the Russian barkentine Imperator and having on board 21 members of the crew of the British steamer Angus, sunk by a German submarine. The Imperator was damaged by gunfire and fire.

The steamer Vallona has arrived at Barcelona with five officers and 21 members of the crew of the British steamer Angus, which was torpedoed. The fate of the remainder of the crew is not known.

The steamer Mallorca has arrived at Barcelona from Majorca. On the voyage she picked up the crew of the British steamer Orlock Head, which had been torpedoed.

The Orlock Head was last reported as having sailed from the Clyde March 19, for Genoa. She was a steamer of 1,915 tons and was built in 1913. Her home port was Belfast. The British bark Inverlyon has been sunk by a submarine, according to a report received by Lloyd's. Twelve members of the crew were picked up. The Inverlyon was a vessel of 1,827 tons and was built in 1901. The bark sailed from Portland, Oregon, December 7, for Havre or Bordeaux, and was last reported as leaving St. Michael's, Azores, March 31.

Returning a Favor

The mayoral chair of a northern town was occupied by a man of great generosity. Among the applicants who sought relief from him during his tenure of office was a well known local actor known as "Talking Tim" who asked the loan of a few pounds to buy a donkey and cart and set up in the rag and bone business.

"Well, Tim," said the mayor, "if I give you this money, how are you going to pay me?"

This was a poser for Tim, but a thought struck him, and he blurted out:

"Well, yer worship, if ye are kind enough to give me the money, I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll name the donkey after yer worship."

Keeping it Quiet.

A little girl was out walking the other day with her mother when she caught sight of a man with a wooden leg.

"Oh, mamma!" she cried. "See that man with a stick for a leg?"

"Don't talk so loudly," said mamma. "He'll hear you."

"Why?" the little one replied in surprise. "Doesn't he know it?"—London Mail.

How the Roughhouse Started.

They were talking about various things at the club, when a member not especially noted for his cleanliness remarked, "Would you call a bath a luxury or a necessity?"

"In your case," replied the man addressed, "it would be both—a necessity because you need it so badly and a luxury because you take it so rarely."

SPORTING NEWS

BASEBALL GOSSIP

"Rube" Marshall, a pitcher obtained by Detroit from the Chattanooga, Southern League club, has been released to the Montreal Internationals.

A new collegian who will join the Athletics is Otta Lawry, captain of the University of Maine team. He will join the A's in June, after school closes.

When the Pittsburg Pirates left Hot Springs, Outfielder Dan Costello was left behind, seriously ill. Al. Wagner remained with him until he is able to travel.

Manager Bill Donovan of the Yankees originally had 45 ball players under his wing. He returned to New York from the training camp with 28. The 28 do not include the manager, Herman Schaefer, Duke Farrell and Joe Kelley.

The New York Yankees, it is stated, will hang on to Paddy Baumann, in spite of the fact that they have a surplus of infield material. Cleveland wanted him to play third base. Maybe Donovan fears that Baker or Gedeon will fall flat.

Connie Mack has refused to enter into an agreement with George Stallings to play another exhibition series in Florida next spring. After being beaten five straight by the Braves. Mack has concluded that the spring exhibitions are not a good thing.

Pitcher Ernie Shore of the Red Sox is 15 pounds heavier than he was last season, and with this added weight has come more strength. Boston critics are now saying he has almost as much speed as Walter Johnson, but the modest Shore shakes his head. However, he has enough.

Charley Weeghman has something else to worry about. A woman in Chicago who says she was hurt in one of the Chicago magnate's movie picture shows has sued him for $10,000. She probably heard he had incorporated the Clubs for a million, and thought Weeghman had coin to spare.

In an exhibition game at Charleston, Connie Mack sprung a pitcher who hadn't been seen in a uniform before. He answered to the name of Sam Jones, and it was admitted he was a collegian under an alias. He looked fairly good, and if he sticks Connie doubtless will make his identity known.

The Detroit club has turned Pitcher Red Oldham over to San Francisco on an optional agreement. Oldham after being recalled from Buffalo last fall looked like a world beater, but somehow or other Hugh Jennings never seems to get results out of young pitchers, however good they may look. He admits it, too.

Bill Donovan has not yet decided whether or not he will retain three southpaws during the coming season. The work of Slim Love between now and May 15 will have much to do with settling Donovan's mind on the question. Mogridge and Cullop are certainties, and Love has shown enough promise to make his retention not improbable.

Listen to Johnny Evers. He says he feels more like playing ball now than he ever did in his life. John believes the Braves are a better team than ever, too. He says the infield is working well, and that Ed. Koney, despite reports to the contrary, is quick-witted enough to grasp any situation that comes up.

Pitcher Frank Hart, a rookie discarded by Connie Mack, pitched for the Charleston Sally League team against the Athletics the other day and looked so much better than anything Connie has retained that the manager of the once famous A's is wondering if he didn't make a mistake. Hart pitched five innings and allowed three scattered hits.

Though Tuck Turner is slated for third on the Cleveland Indians and Lee Fohl is looking for a second sacker, chances are Ivan Howard is going to be kept pretty busy this season. He is stated to be first utility man and he'll do relief duty in both the field and outfield. In practice Ivan divides his time between first base, second base, shortstop, third base and the three outfield positions.

Why Wet Land Is Cold.

C. G. Hopkins, soil expert, says that five times as much heat is required to evaporate water from the surface of a soil as would be needed to raise the temperature of the same amount of water from the freezing to the boiling point, says Farm and Fireside. This explains why wet and poorly drained soils are cold.

Tile drainage removes the excess of water. Then the heat of the sun is able to make some headway in warming the soil. But if the soil is continually saturated with water the constant evaporation keeps the temperature down in spite of the sun's warmth.

When Your Eyes "Snap."

When you read in books and things that So-and-so's eyes "snapped" with excitement or anger you are not to suppose that his (or her) orbs made a snapping sound as they glanced about the room. We have it on no less an authority than the Journal of the American Medical Association that the eyes of man "can move accurately, noiselessly, with the greatest precision to any object in any part of the field of vision."

"Now, ma," cautioned pa, "don't force too much on your guests at dinner."

"What then?" sniffed ma.

Those who wish to attend the concert after the regular church services, can secure their seats in advance, and avoid a long wait. These seats will be held until 8.25. The performance will commence at 8.30.

Children will not be admitted at evening performance. 13,3t

FIVE MINES EXPLODED IN FOE TRENCHES

Canadians Captured Craters While Germans Were Paralyzed

LONDON, April 14.—Details received here of the fighting for craters, in which the Canadians suffered severely, show that at one spot five mines in a direct line and close together were sprung against the Germans, whose defence consequently momentarily was completely shattered. The Canadians then rushed forward to occupy the ground thus rendered untenable. The advance was supported by artillery.

An observer declares that fire from guns so close together and working incessantly was like a terrace of houses on fire. The Canadians gained ground for the time being, after which the struggle was continued with varying success on each side, as is always the case in such engagements. If the Canadian losses were severe there is no doubt the enemy lost many more men.

Soaked Cat in Coal Oil Then Set Fire to it

MONTREAL, April 14.—A fifteen year old boy from Quincy, Mass., was arrested as a vagrant by a constable from the Juvenile Court, who found the youngster wandering the streets with no money or home to go to. When questioned he told how he came to Montreal from his Massachusetts home by stealing his way on freight cars and, slipping across the border while riding the trucks. His father is an American now fighting with the Allies and his mother is dead. He was detained at the court for a few hours and then committed to an institution on his admission of vagrancy.

Another boy, fourteen years of age, was arrested this afternoon on a charge of cruelty to animals. According to the information in the hands of the Juvenile Court officials the boy caught a cat and after soaking the animal in coal oil, set fire to the saturated animal. The last seen of the cat was when it jumped into a sewer all aflame.

CANADA CAN BUILD SHIPS IF CANADA CAN BUILD RAILWAYS

Says Mr. J. H. Paul Saucier at Chambre de Commerce Meeting—Would Import Labor—Country Has Wealth of Raw Material, and Industry Could be Established

MONTREAL, April 14.—The possibility of ship-building as a future new industry for Canada was discussed at the Chambre de Commerce yesterday, when J. H. Paul Saucier, while accepting the view already put forth to the Chambre by Colonel W. I. Grear that for the present it was impossible to compete with English shipbuilders, yet expressed the view that the future ought to be looked forward to. He said that Canadian enterprises had built three continental railroads and imported the labor to do it, and there was no reason why Canada with a wealth of raw material, could not import the labor and establish the industry.

J. N. Cabana agreed with this sentiment, stating that many of the districts of Canada, such as parts around the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the Maritime provinces contributed in skill and training to the English merchant marine, and Canada ought to utilize this field themselves. He advised that experts from the Armstrong Whitworth Company be asked to give their views to the Chambre.

At the outset of the meeting which was presided over by President Ludger Gravel, it was suggested by Mr. Arthur Gagne that the Chambre approach other public bodies with the object of obtaining opinions on the matter of abolishing level crossings.

Considering the financial condition of affairs it was felt by some of the members that no immediate remedy could be provided.

It was stated by Mr. Saucier that a competent engineer should be consulted and a plan of Montreal, allowing for developments for the next fifty years, be prepared, in which all transportations problems, subway, surface and elevated and terminals should be anticipated and worked out in a logical manner instead of the sporadic measures undertaken at different times.

SOMEONE BLUNDERED

Letters of Premier and Ministers Were Censored

OTTAWA, April 14.—A series of protests against the censoring of letters sent from one point in Canada to another was made by members of Parliament in the House this afternoon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Borden being among those who have suffered.

Hon. R. Lemieux set the ball rolling with a vehement protest against the opening of letters sent from Montreal to him at Ottawa. Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the same complaint, stating he had today received a letter from Montreal which had been censored. Hon. George P. Graham recorded a similar experience in connection with a letter from a Maritime Province point to Montreal, and Sir Robert Borden then stated that even one of his letters had been opened.

Hon. T. Chas. Casgrain, postmaster-general said that a stupid blunder must have been made by some employees in his department, and that he would have it recited at once.

PERILS AND DISCOMFORTS OF SUBMARINE WAR

"Luck is the most important factor in submarine warfare!"

This is the statement that Lieutenant Rudoff Singule, commander of the submarine which sank the Italian battleship Guiseppe Garibaldi, made to Geza Herczeg, a German correspondent on the Adriatic coast, who went there to interview him.

Lieutenant Singule is a typical Austrian marine officer—energetic, broad-shouldered, square-jawed and with strong lines in his face.

"Our submarines," added Lieutenant Singule, "like those of the Germans, have achieved wonderful success. You have asked me if the torpedo is a sure, unfailing instrument that always reaches the spot at which it has been aimed. It is because of that question that I reply that everything depends on luck—luck on every side and at every turn. However perfect the torpedo may be, the slighest mishap brings failure. A drop of oil in the mechanism may be the cause of delaying the launching of the projectile, and this loss of time may bring failure."

When asked regarding some of his own personal experiences and exploits Lieutenant Singule said:

"We were out recently for a whole month and never even got a glimpse of the enemy. Finally we met a cruiser of the type of the Liverpool, and with a great deal of enthusiasm we prepared to torpedo the ship. But our joy was soon dispelled when we discovered that the cruiser was being conveyed from the Drima Gulf to Brindisi by a flotilla of torpedo boat-destroyers. Our presence was discovered by them and they chased us until night came.

"However, our big day was when we sank the proud Guiseppe Garibaldi, it was the purpose of the Italians to bombard Gravosa, and the Italian fleet was nearing our coast. At that time one of our general staff said to me: 'If one of our U-boats should at this time chance to be in that vicinity I think we would see something big happen.'

"I immediately went to work to carry out his wish. I soon sighted the Guiseppe Garibaldi and at a distance of 600 meters fired two torpedoes. Both hit the mark and hundreds of her crew went to their death. The torpedo-boat-destroyers which accompanied the Garibaldi I was, of course, unable to follow, and they eluded me. When our submarine came to the surface and I looked through the periscope the water was dotted with wreckage.

"You ask me about the crew. Every man among them is efficient. The men make every sacrifice and they are deserving of all praise. It must not be forgotten that the work of a submarine crew is the most dangerous in the service, and the safety of the men lies entirely in the hands of their commander. They themselves see nothing and know nothing of what is going on. Their duty is to obey orders.

"They are four hours on duty, followed by an hour's rest, but often they have to do without the rest. And, of course, when we are out for some length of time it means much inconvenience and discomfort. There is no means of observing cleanliness or changing clothes, and we have to snatch a bite to eat whenever we can. We have no cook. One of the crew prepares the meals and we have to be content with what he serves us. Our work is dangerous, but if attended with success we forget all about the sacrifice and the hardships."

Canadian Horses Ideal For Field

Light Draft Animals Prove Well Fitted For Work Under Saddle—Disease Almost Nil

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 14.—That horses from this continent, and especially Canadian horses, are giving the acme of satisfaction on the western front was the statement made today by Lieut. H. Cowan, of Westmount, Montreal, and Lieut. Ellsworth, of Marysville, Ont., both members of the Canadian Army Veterinery Corps, who arrived here on the Allan liner Scandinavian. "It is really marvellous," said Lieut. Cowan, "how little contagious disease one finds among the horses on the western front. The Canadian horses seem to be very hardy. Why, they will sleep out in the mud week after week, and be perfectly healthy all the time. I had charge of 1,500 horses for ten months on the western front, and in that time I had only three cases of pneumonia."

"I've got you stopped," put in Lieut. Ellsworth. "I had charge of 1,500 horses for ten months on the western front, and had only one case of pneumonia." The French and English horses, Lieut. Cowan said, have a little more "blood," as the horse breeders call it, but they are not built on the right lines. "They do not seem to be able to breed the light draft horses on the Continent nor in England; that is, a light draft horse with sufficient action to make him well fitted for the saddle. Their saddle horses have too much ginger and too little stamina, whilst the horses from this continent just fill the bill. I am told," Lt. Cowan continued, "that the French Government has already purchased no less than 200,000 horses from the United States."

Lieut. Cowan said that at first stables were erected for the horses, but these were found unsatisfactory, and now the majority of horses are picketed in true western style. Regarding equine casualties, he said: "When a horse has a leg broken or is badly injured by a shrapnel shell, it is immediately destroyed. Our instructions are, if a horse cannot recover entirely in sixty days, to destroy the animal, for a sick horse for a longer period would become a burden on our hands. Horses are used with great care when ill or injured. We never treat serious cases on the firing line. If a horse is slightly wounded or ill, a big ambulance is sent up. The ambulance is low to the ground and has a padded floor and padded sides. The animal is placed in this, and away it is sent to the base hospital, where it is attended. The Blue Cross is doing a wonderful work at the base hospital, and in all the turmoil of war and fighting, the horses are never neglected. They seem as intelligent as the soldiers themselves after they have been in action and under fire two or three times. We actually have old veterans among the horses over there. We have animals that have gone through desperate shelling; animals that know what it is to be thrown upside down by a big shell explosion, and, under fire, it is a pleasure to see those animals work."

FAMOUS SPORTSMAN ENLISTS

Mac Rochon, Curler, Turfman and Hotelman Now Sergeant—Has Three Sons in Khaki

WINNIPEG, April 14.—Sergt. Mac Rochon, if you please.

Winnipeg's well-known sportsman, E. J. Rochon, has enlisted with the 183rd Battalion. He signed up last week, and is today a full-fledged member of Lieut.-Col. Edgecombe's battalion, and is wearing the khaki uniform, the coat sleeves of which carries the three stripes.

Not content with allowing three of his sons to put on the King's uniform, Mac Rochon follows their example and is anxiously awaiting the day when he can join them over in Europe. Ernie and Joe Rochon left here with the 44th Battalion and are now in England. Roger Rochon, the youngest member of the family, is with the Motor Transport and is now in German East Africa. George Rochon, the well-known hockey player, is the only one of the Rochon family left, and the injured knee which kept him from chasing the puck up the ice the past two winters is the only thing that keeps him at home.

Famous As a Curler.

E. J. Rochon, who is proprietor of the Leland Hotel has been a familiar figure in sports for many years. Before coming to Winnipeg he was a famous curler in Fort William. During his residence here he has held many offices in the leading curling clubs, and has also been one of the leading lights among the promoters of the turf game. Only recently he celebrated his 60th birthday and was the recipient of congratulations from all parts of Canada. He is well-known and much liked from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The enlistment of Mr. Rochon will be a great boost for the 183rd Battalion and it is quite likely that many curlers who have been associated with him for years will follow suit and don the khaki.

A NEW CEMENT ORDER FOR CANADA CEMENT

French Government Is Said To Have Placed An Order For A Million Barrels

MONTREAL, April 14.—A representative of the French Government has been in Canada for some little time, negotiating with the Canada Cement Company for one million barrels of cement, with the result that negotiations are said to have been practically completed. The cement is required for the building of gun emplacements, for trenches, roadways, canals, and many other purposes.

This order comes at a time when the Cement Company is about to commence the delivery of the 9.2 shells which it contracted for some time ago. The company is under contract to deliver some 3,000 of these shells per week for an entire year. This news is supposed to account for the strength of the stock during the past few days, and supports the supposition that another dividend of three per cent. may be paid on the stock on July 1.

When spoken to in regard to the rumor, Mr. F. P. Jones, General Manager of the company, gave a technical denial to the story.

Drink Undoing Of Soldier

He Is given Indetermined Sentence for Theft of Tie Pin and Money

STRATFORD, April 15. — Special— Perry King of London, a returned soldiers of the 1st Battalion, was to-day sentenced by Police Magistrate Coughlin to an indeterminate sentence of not less than one year and not more than three years in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph, having been found guilty of theft of a tie pin and $26 in cash from Wm. Heiden, St. Paul's.

The Magistrate took the prisoner's services in uniform into consideration, and made the sentence light, expressing the hope that he would be paroled.

THE PROBLEM OF FINDING ENOUGH WOOL FOR SOCKS

Woollen Mills Cannot Meet the Demand — Carpet Warp or Cotton for Legs of Socks

(By Margaret Warren)

The wool question so vital to the thousands of women with their clicking knitting needles, is the cause of much deep and troubled thought on the part of wholesale and retail firms of the country. The demand, which is steadily increasing, is so great and the wool so very difficult to procure that no one knows what the end will be.

The price is another thing which is advancing. This is due to the limited supply that a firm is able to procure at a time.

The cheaper grades of wool are practically all made by Canadian mills. These mills, which were of ample size before the war, are now worked night and day to fill their orders. Much of the machinery has been turned to the making of khaki cloth for uniforms and, in consequence, large orders are refused constantly. One instance is brought to mind of a large wholesale house of this city, whose wool was all gone. They wanted to place an order for nearly $25,000 worth of wool and there was not a mill which could take the order.

Many of the more expensive wools are brought from England. These, too, are now difficult to get, as the English mills are even busier than the Canadians.

Some few women, out of the thousands who are knitting constantly, have recently discovered that the leg of a sock can be done of carpet warp and wool used simply for the foot. It still remains to be proved whether the idea is practical or not. Again others are using cotton for the leg of the sock.

The hand knitting machines are used by a great many people now, and the socks which are their product, feel quite as soft and the work seems to be quite as perfect as that in the hand knit socks. Of course the machines are expensive, so there is no danger of them doing away with our friend the knitting needle. However, it must be conceded that a great deal of valuable time is saved when one considers that a knitting machine will turn out a pair of socks in twenty minutes.

Grey and white wools are even more popular than khaki, probably on account of containing no dye which might do harm in case of a wound on the foot or leg. The wools most in demand are called Scotch fingerings, yet oddly, these do not come from Scotland, as was the original wool of that name.

There is a grey wool Scotch fingering at $1.25 a pound, which is used a great deal; but the wools which are really used most are at $1.35 and $1.40 a pound. The first can be had in grey or white and the other in grey or khaki. These are both soft, four ply wools, of good quality. A better khaki wool may be had in $1.75, a very soft, light grey at $1.60 and camel's hair at $2.00 a pound. These prices, of course, are not permanent, as wool is increasing in price steadily.

Fine Hotel Is Destroyed By Fire

Hudson House at Combermere, Renfrew County—Carload of Charcoal Ignites

RENFREW, April 15.—(Special)— The Hudson House at Combermere, built three years ago at a cost of $20,000, well known among tourists, and ranking among the very best rural hotels in Ontario, has been destroyed by fire, together with its contents. The fire broke out during the night and had made much headway before the inmates were awakened. Although the hotel had a license it is not likely to be rebuilt, a slump in corundum mining in that locality having caused the business to greatly fall away. Outside of the towns of Pembroke and Renfrew it was the best public house in Renfrew county.

Power at the Lowest Cost

The provincial government has no intention of tying the hands of the Hydro commission. The Hon. W. H. Hearst yesterday told the deputation of two hundred representatives of Hydro municipalities that they had apparently come before the government harboring a misapprehension. The deputation had asked the government not to take away any of the rights of the commission, nor to pull the Hydro system into politics. Rather, it insisted, the commission should be given wider power and the enterprises it had undertaken should be authorized by legislation.

"The whole desire of the legislature is to see that the people of Ontario get power at the lowest possible cost," replied Premier Hearst. "We have been asked to widen the powers of the commission, and that is one of the main objects of the bill. It aims to clothe the Hydro-Electric commission with statutory power, and you have come here this afternoon to back up and endorse one of the main features of the bill which we have under consideration. What we desire, too, is that an independent and thorough audit of Hydro accounts be made."

Controllers Cooper, Morris, Robson and Ald. Peebles represented Hamilton on the deputation. Controller Morris made a plea for radial subsidies, and asked the government to refuse any further charter extensions to electric railway companies.

Hun Plan To Take Verdun

Paris Sees Through Object for Alternating Blows

PARIS, April 14.—The Germans are now bombarding the French lines at Verdun, apparently with a view to an early return to the policy of delivering a series of short, sharp blows at different points on the line. The object of this method of warfare is considered by military authorities to be to disorganize the system of reserves by diversity in the points attacked and by gradually wearing down the defenders to prepare for an opportune moment for a general assault.

The Germans first put this plan into practice after the great wing battle of March 6 to 9. Alternating attempts were made east and west of the Meuse throughout the month and the French lines, being considered sufficiently shaken to justify a general offensive with a good chance of success, positions on the west bank at Avocourt and Cumieres were assailed in force during the night.

These positions, by an enfilading fire across the river have made vain the attempts to carry the Pepper Hill and Vaux sector, which is the key to the position of the Verdun defences, and therefore it is expected that the Germans will attack the west bank positions again as soon as a favorable opportunity presents itself.

Berlin Clears Way For Pres. Wilson to Act

Washington Has No Intention of Entering Into Debate on Piracy with Germany

WASHINGTON, April 14. —Admission by Germany that her submarines recently attacked three merchant ships carrying American citizens and that one of them torpedoed a vessel in the vicinity of the point where the Channel steamer Sussex was damaged by an explosion, has simplified the task of the State Department in preparing for the next step of the United States in the issue over submarine warfare.

The unofficial text of the note from Germany was communicated to President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing last night. The official text was expected hourly. It will be considered by the Cabinet at its regular meeting Friday.

The contentions of the German Government do not agree with the evidence received by the State Department, it is said.

There is no disposition on the part of President Wilson and Secretary Lansing to enter into a debate of the submarine issue with Germany. It is declared that the principles contended for by the United States in a series of notes have been made very clear, and that Germany has been sufficiently warned that further attacks in violation of International Law would be considered deliberately unfriendly acts.

The possibility of a break in diplomatic relations with Germany, coupled with an exposition of the situation by the President to Congress, is constantly in the background, but the President was represented to-night as being earnestly desirous of avoiding such a step, if possible, and determined not to act hastily.

London, April 12.—The picture of the steamer Sussex in the English paper from which reproductions mentioned in the German note were made, and which may have an important bearing on the note, shows that the Sussex had one smokestack, a single mast forward, flushdeck and low-lying bridge, and in appearance was a typical cross-Channel boat.

WINS PROMOTION ON STAFF

TORONTO, April 15.—(Special.) — Captain Frank Ahearn of Ottawa has been seconded from the Canadian Army Service Corps to the personal staff of the Minister of Militia. He will act as Aide-de-camp to General Sir Sam Hughes. Captain Ahearn returned to Canada a few weeks ago. He was with the First Canadian Divisional Column in France. Captain Ahearn joined the Canadian Overseas forces in October, 1914, being attached to the Second Division Ammunition Park. He went to Shorncliffe Camp in March, 1915, with reinforcements for the First Division and was stationed there until he joined his unit in France last summer. Captain Ahearn's first military experience was gained as a subaltern in the Governor-General's Foot Guards, to which he was appointed in 1906.

THE PARCEL POST HAS HIT FORMER SERVICES

OTTAWA, April 14.—The annual blue books of express and telephone statistics were brought down by Hon. Dr. Reid in the House this afternoon.

No charge is shown in the capitalization of express companies, but the statement of cost is increased by $91,406. Gross earnings declined from $12,646,452 in 1914 to $11,311,797 in 1915, presumably through the competitive operations of the parcels post system. Operating expenses were reduced. Deducting the operating expenses and express privileges (payments to railways, etc.) from the gross earnings left a balance of $68,669 as compared with $383,456 in 1914, and $759,614 in 1913.

The telephone statistics show extensions in nearly all provinces, though it is stated in the report that "in all the provinces there is a growing tendency toward consolidation, which has the effect of reducing the number of reports without lessening the availability of the telephone service.

Telephone capitalization increased by $3,993,107, bringing the total up to $74,281,991. Gross earnings were $17,601,672, an increase of $301,403, while net earnings totalled $4,761,857, an increase of $350,091, there being a slight reduction in the cost of operation. The number of telephones increased from 521,144 to 533,090, giving an average of one telephone to every 15.1 persons.

Telephone employees numbered 15,672, as compared with 16,799, but the amount paid in salaries increased from $8,250,253 to $8,357,029.

The Eternal Lover

by Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman

Every indication pointed the recent passing of many men, and the troglodyte was positive that he could be but a few hours behind his quarry.

A few miles east of him the rescue party from the Greystoke ranch were pushing rapidly ahead upon a different trail, with a view to heading off the Arabs.

Ibn Aswad had taken a circuitous route in order that he might pass round the country of the Waziri, and with his slow moving slave caravan he had now reached a point but a few days' journey in a direct line from the ranch. The lightly equipped pursuers, having knowledge of the route taken by the Arabs from the messenger who had come to seek their assistance, had not been compelled to follow the spoor of their quarry, but instead had marched straight across country in a direct line for a point which they believed would bring them ahead of the caravan.

Thus it was that Nu and Terkoz and the party of whites and Waziri from the ranch were closing in upon Ibn Aswad from opposite directions simultaneously.

But Nu was not destined to follow the trail of the raiders to where they were still engaged in repelling the savage attack of the fierce Wamboli, for as he trotted along with the dog at his side his quick eyes detected that which the hound, with all his wondrous instinctive powers, would have passed by unnoticed—the well marked prints of the hoofs of two donkeys that had come back along the trail since the caravan had passed.

That they were donkeys belonging to the Arabs was evident to Nu through his familiarity with the distinctive hoof prints of each, which during the past three days had become as well known to him as his mother's face had been. But what were they doing retracing the way they had but just covered?

He halted and raised his head to sniff the air and listen intently for the faintest sound from the direction in which the beasts had gone when they left the old trail at the point that he had discovered their spoor.

The wind, however, was blowing from the opposite direction, so there was no chance that Nu could scent them. He was in doubt as to whether he should leave the trail of the main body and follow these two or continue on his way.

From the manner of their passing—side by side—he was convinced that each carried a rider, since otherwise they would have gone in single file after the manner of beasts moving along a none too wide trail, but there was nothing to indicate that either rider was Nat-ul.

For an instant he hesitated, and then his judgment told him to keep on after the main body, for if Nat-ul was a prisoner she would be with the larger force—not riding in the opposite direction with a single guard.

Even as he turned to take up the pursuit again there came faintly to his ears from the jungle at his left the sound of a human voice. It was a woman's, raised in frightened protest.

Like a deer Nu turned and leaped in the direction of that familiar voice. The fleet wolfhound was put to it to keep pace with the agile cave man, for Nu had left the earth and taken to the branches of the trees, where no underbrush retarded his flight.

From tree to tree he leaped or swung, sometimes hurling his body twenty feet through the air from one jungle giant to another.

Below him raced the panting Terkoz, red tongue lolling from foam flecked mouth, but with all their speed the two moved with the noiselessness of shadowy ghosts.

At the edge of the jungle Nu came upon a parklike forest, and well into this he saw a woman struggling with a white robed Arab. One sinewy brown hand clutched her throat, the other was raised to strike her in the face.

Nu saw that he could not reach the man in time to prevent the blow, but he might distract his attention for the moment that would be required for him to reach his side.

From his throat there rose the savage warcry of his long dead people, a cry that brought a hundred jungle creatures to their feet, trembling in fear or in rage, according to their kind.

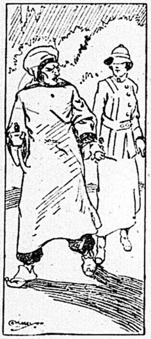
It brought Abul Mukarram upstanding, too, for in all his life he had never heard the like of that blood freezing challenge.

At the sight which met his eyes he dropped the girl and darted toward his donkey, where hung his long barreled rifle in its boot.

Victoria Custer looked, too, and what she saw brought unutterable relief and happiness to her. Then the Arab had turned with leveled gun just as the cave man leaped upon him.

There was the report of the firearm ere it was wrenched from Abul Mukarram's grasp and hurled to one side, but the bullet went wide of its mark, and the next instant the girl saw the two men locked in what she knew was a death struggle.

The Arab struck mighty blows at the head and face of his antagonist, while the cave man, the great muscles rolling beneath his smooth hide, sought for a hold upon the other's throat.



He Saw a Woman Struggling With a White Robed Arab.

About the two the vicious wolfhound slunk, growling and bristling, waiting for an opportunity to rush in upon the white robed antagonist of his master.

Victoria Custer, her clinched fists tight pressed against her bosom, watched the two men who battled for her. She saw the powerful hands of her savage man bend back the head of the doomed Abdul Mukarram.

She saw her ferocious mate shake the man as a terrier shakes a rat, and her heart swelled in fierce primitive pride at the prowess of her man.

No longer did Victoria Custer exist.

It was Nat-ul, the savage maiden of the Neocene who, as Nu threw the lifeless corpse of his kill to one side and opened his arms, flung herself into his embrace.

It was Nat-ul, daughter of Tha—Nat-ul of the tribe of Nu that dwelt beyond the barren cliffs beside the restless sea—who threw her arms about her lord and master's neck and drew his mouth down to her lips.

It was Nat-ul of the first born who watched Nu and the fierce wolfhound circle about the corpse of the dead Arab.

The cave man, moving in the savage steps of the death dance of his tribe, now bent half over, now leaping high in air, throwing his stone tipped spear aloft, chanted the weird victory song of a dead and buried age, while beside him his equally savage mate beat time with slim, white hands.

CHAPTER XI.

Happiness?

WHEN the dance was done Nu halted before Nat-ul. The girl rose, facing him, and for a long minute the two stood in silence looking at one another. It was the first opportunity that either had had to study the features of the other since the strange miracle that had separated them.

Nu found that some subtle change had taken place in his Nat-ul.

It was she—of that there could be no doubt, but yet there was that about her which cast a spell of reverential fear over him. She was infinitely more, and more wonderful than he ever had realized.

With the passing of the excitement of the battle and the dance the strange ecstasy which had held the girl in thrall passed slowly away. The rhythm of the dancing of the savage black haired giant had touched some cord within her which awoke the long dormant instincts of the primordial.

For the time she had been carried back a hundred thousand years to the childhood of the human race. She had not known for those brief instants Victoria Custer or the twentieth century or its civilization, for they were yet a thousand centuries in the future.

But now once more she saw through the eyes of generations of culture and refinement. Before her was a primitive man.

In his eyes was the fire of a great love that would not be denied. About her was the wild, fierce forest and the cruel jungle, and behind all this, and beyond, her vision wandered to the world she had always known—the world of cities and homes and gentlefolk.

She saw her father and her mother and her friends. What would they say?

Again she let her eyes rest upon the man. It was with difficulty that she restrained a desire to throw herself upon his broad breast and weep out her doubts and fears close to the beating of his great heart and in the safety of those protecting arms.

But with the wish there rose again the question, "What would they say?" to hold her trembling and frightened from him.

The man saw something of the girl's trouble in her eyes, but he partially misinterpreted it, for he read fear of himself where there was principally self fear, and, because of what he had heard Curtiss say, he thought that he saw contempt, too, for primitive people are infinitely more sensitive than their more sophisticated brothers.

"You do not love me, Nat-ul?" he asked. "Have the strangers turned you against me? What one of them could have fetched you the head of Oo, the man hunter?

"See!" He tapped the two great tusks that hung from his loin cloth. "Nu slew the mightiest of the beasts for Nat-ul—the head is buried in the cave of Oo—yet, now that I come to take you as my mate, I see fear in your eyes and something else which never was there before. What is it, Nat-ul? Have the strangers stolen your love from Nu?"

The man spoke in a tongue so ancient that in all the [illegible] there lived no man who spoke or knew a word of it, yet to Victoria Custer it was as intelligible as her own English, nor did it seem strange to her that she answered Nu in his own language.

"My heart tells me that I am yours, Nu," she said, "but my judgment and my training warn me against the step that my heart prompts. I love you, but I could not be happy to wander half naked through the jungle for the balance of my life, and if I go with you now, even for a day, I may never return to my people.

"Nor would you be happy in the life that I lead. It would stifle and kill you. I think I see now something of the miracle that has overwhelmed us. To you it has been but a few days since you left your Nat-ul to hunt down the ferocious Oo, but in reality countless ages have rolled by.

"By some strange freak of fate you have remained unchanged during all these ages; until now you step forth from your long sleep an unspoiled cave man of the stone age into the midst of the twentieth century, while I doubtless have been born and reborn a thousand times, merging from one incarnation to another until in this we are again united.

"Had you, too, died and been born again during all these weary years no gap of ages would intervene between us now, and we should meet again upon a common footing, as do other souls, and mate and die to be born again to a new mating and a new life, with its inevitable death.

"But you have defied the laws of life and death—you have refused to die—and now that we meet again at last a hundred thousand years lie between us—an unbridgeable gulf across which I may not return and over which you may not come other than by the same route which I have followed—through death and a new life thereafter."

Much that the girl said was beyond Nu's comprehension and the most of it without the scope of his primitive language, so that she had been forced to draw liberally upon her twentieth century English to fill in the gap.

Yet the man had caught the idea in a vague sort of way; at least that his Nat-ul was far removed from him because of a great lapse of time that had occurred while he slept in the cave of Oo, and that through his own death alone could he span the gulf between them and claim her as his mate.

He placed the butt of his spear upon the ground, resting the stone tip against his heart.

"I go, Nat-ul," he said simply, "that I may return again as you would have me."

The girl and the man were so occupied and engrossed with their own tragedy that they did not note the restless pacing of Terkoz, the wolfhound, or hear the ominous growls that rumbled from his savage throat as he looked toward the jungle behind them.

The searching party from the Greystoke ranch had come upon Ibn Aswad so unexpectedly that not a shot had been exchanged between the two parties.

The Arabs, pressed from behind by the savage Wamboli warriors, had literally run into the arms of the whites and the Waziri.

When Greystoke demanded that the white girl be turned over to him at once Ibn Aswad smote his breast and swore that there had been no white girl with them, but one of the slaves told a different story to a Waziri, and when the whites found that Victoria had been stolen from Ibn Aswad by one of the sheik's lieutenants only a few hours before they hastened to scour the jungle in search of her.

To facilitate their movements and insure covering as wide a territory as possible each of the whites took a few Waziri and, spreading out in a far flung skirmish line, beat the jungle in the direction toward which the slave had told them Abul Mukarram had ridden.

To comb the jungle finely each white spread his Waziri upon either side of him, and thus they advanced, seldom in sight of one another, but always within hailing distance. And so it happened that chance brought William Curtiss, unseen, to the edge of the jungle beside the parklike forest, beneath the giant trees of which he saw a tableau that brougut him to a sudden halt.

There was the girl he loved and sought, apparently unharmed, and two donkeys, and the dead body of an Arab, and the great wolfhound, looking toward his hiding place and growling menacingly, and before the girl the savage white man stood.

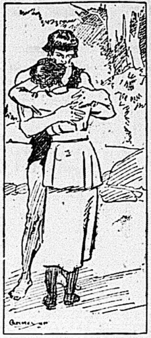
Curtiss was about to spring forward when he saw the man place the butt of his spear upon the ground and the point against his heart. The act and the expression upon the man's face proclaimed his intention, and so Curtiss drew back again, waiting for the perpetration of the deed that he knew was coming.

A smile of anticipation played about the American's lips.

Victoria Custer, too, guessed the thing that Nu contemplated. It was, in accordance with her own reasoning, the only logical thing for the man to do; but love is not logical, and when love saw and realized the imminence of its bereavement it cast logic to the winds, and with a little scream of terror the girl threw herself upon Nu of the Neocene, striking the spear from its goal.

"No! No!" she cried. "You must not do it! I cannot let you go! I love you, Nu—I love you!"

As the strong arms infolded her once more she gave a happy sigh of content and let her head drop again upon the breast of him who had come back out of the grave to claim her.



As the Strong Arms Infolded Her Once More She Gave a Happy Sigh of Content.

Nor did they see the swift spring of the wolfhound nor the thing that followed there beneath the brooding silence of the savage jungle.

Ten minutes later Barney Custer broke through the tangled wall of verdure upon a sight that took his breath away.

There stood the two patient donkeys, switching their tails and flapping their long ears. Beside them lay the corpse of Abul Mukarram and upon the edge of the jungle at his feet, was stretched the dead body of William Curtiss, his breast and throat torn by savage fangs.

Across the clearing a great, gaunt wolfhound halted in its retreat at the sound of Barney's approach.

The beast bared its bloody fangs in an ominous growl of warning and then turned and disappeared into the jungle.

Barney advanced and examined the soft ground about the donkeys and the body of the Arab.

He saw the imprint of a man's naked feet and the smaller impress of a woman's riding boots.

He looked toward the jungle where Terkoz had disappeared.

What had his sister gone to within the somber, savage depths beyond? What would he bring her back to were he to follow after?

He doubted that she would come without her dream man. Where would she be happier with him—in the pitiless jungle, which was the only world he knew, or in the still more pitiless haunts of civilized men?

A moment later he had reached his decision, and with resolution strong in the very swing of his stride he entered the jungle, but whether toward the east or the west I do not know, for I was not there.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in a glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

J. S. McKeown fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will gladly fill yours.

FROM HIRED MAN TO A COMFORTABLE FARM OWNER

An Inspiring Story of Perseverance and Success in Dundas County, Ont., "Via the Dairy Route"

Among the many prosperous and successful farmers in the great dairy county of Dundas, Ont., no one deserves more credit for his accomplishments as a dairyman than does Wm. Bailey, the second largest milk shipper of the Chesterville district. It is hard to believe when one is acquainted with the farm of which today Mr. Bailey is the proprietor that just 22 years ago he was working as hired man on that self-same farm. Yet such is the case. Mr. Bailey has travelled to farm ownership over a road known to many others of our best dairy farmers of today—through the successive stages of hired man, tenant farmer and finally, farm owner. This road is often rough and hard, and many there are who get discouraged on the way and leave the farm for some other avocation. It is a road, however, that many of us will have to travel if we are ever to enjoy the independence that goes with the ownership of a good farm. And it was as an encouragement to all who must start as he did that induced Mr. Bailey to tell me his story. It is for the same reason that the tale of this Dundas farmer is here related in Farm and Dairy—that other young men may see the possibilities and the reward of perseverance and energy applied to dairy farming.

I first became acquainted with Mr. Bailey on a pleasant day last June. I had spent the day before around Chesterville, and found that everyone spoke well of Wm. Bailey. I was advised to visit his farm. Just as I arrived at the gate, Mr. Bailey drove out with eleven 80 lb. cans of milk on his rig. He was on his way to catch the milk train for Montreal, and milk trains don't wait on dairy farmers, even though dairy farmers often have to wait on them. Mr. Bailey went on to the station, three and one-half miles away, and I took advantage of the opportunity to look over his farm and a couple of farms in the neighborhood as well. The Bailey farm is of the rich clay loam, characteristic of the district; soil ideal for the growth of clover, small grains and corn. The fields are level and easily worked. In short it is such a farm and such a soil as requires careful handling, but yields maximum returns when managed well. It is part of the old Carlyle homestead, at one time one of the biggest farms in the county, but now divided into three farms, of which Mr. Bailey owns the 125 acres on which are the central buildings of the original farm. That is, 125 acres more or less; a careful measurement would probably be nearer 150 acres.

Mr. Bailey treats his soil very much as he does his bank account—he is careful to put more into it than he takes out. A systematic rotation is followed of corn, oats seeded to clover, and hay one or two years. Very seldom is the sod allowed to remain down more than two years. In addition to feeding on the farm all that is grown on the farm, and to the fertility added to the soil through clover, quantities of concentrates are bought each year to feed to the dairy herd, and indirectly these purchased feeding stuffs feed the soil. Thus is Mr. Bailey preparing for permanent prosperity that comes by way of a fertile soil.

The buildings stand well back from the road. The big red barns and the brick house are surrounded by trees, making a very attractive homestead. The main barn, in which are housed 32 cows and a quantity of young stock, is 113 feet long and 56 feet wide. The horse barn nearby is 70 feet by 32 feet. Two silos stand out prominently by the dairy building. One of these, 14 x 24 feet, was on the farm when Mr. Bailey purchased it. The newer silo, 20 x 24 feet, was erected a year ago. Mr. Bailey is dairying more extensively than was Mr. Carlyle, and as he grows 25 acres of corn each year lots of silo capacity is needed. Silage is fed all winter, and to some extent through the summer as well. The foods purchased to go along with the corn silage, clover hay, and chopped oats grown on the farm are gluten feed, with small quantities of cotton seed and oil cake. Straight oats are preferred to mixed grain, barley being objected to on the ground that it seems to "heat up the cow."

MR. BAILEY'S STORY.

In the meantime, Mr. Bailey had gotten back from town and started me out on a personally conducted tour of the premises. As we leaned against the pasture fence inspecting the dairy herd, Mr. Bailey told me something of his upward climb on the dairy ladder. He is an unassuming man, and told his story in an unassuming way. Had it not been for the additional details learned in the neighborhood, I might not have realized just what a worth-while success Mr. Bailey had achieved.

We all know of men born and bred in the country, given a training which fits them to be successful only in the country, but are not given farms on which to apply that training. This was the class in which Mr. Bailey found himself when he must needs leave the parental roof. He had the desire to farm, but not the farm. Accordingly he hired out with Mr. Carlyle at a small sum per month, and worked for him for three years. During that three years he did a lot of the hard work incidental to making the Carlyle farm one of the best in the neighborhood. He did not spend his money on a fancy driving outfit, and to such good purpose did he work and save that at the end of his three year period he quit, got married, and rented a 50-acre farm. He started right into dairying. The nucleus of his herd was five Ayrshire grade cows, which he purchased for $20 each from his previous employer. "They were a little old," commented Mr. Bailey, "but they were all I could afford, and I thought they would do until I bred some." His wife brought him two cows and soon the number was increased to ten.

MILK AND PORK

Dairying and pork were the specialties on that 50-acre farm. The milk went to the cheese factory at a low price. Pork sold as low as four cents a pound. But if prices were low then, the cost of living was low in proportion, and at the end of two years a 150-acre farm was rented near Morewood in the same county. Here Mr. Bailey stayed nine years. He increased his herd to 30 cows, raised all his own feed, planned well and then began to think of extending his operations further. He moved back to Chesterville on to a 200-acre farm where he milked 40 cows.

When at Morewood Mr. Bailey had made a change which he regards as important in his financial progress. His Ayrshire cows gave too good milk to be sold on a market where quality was not considered. What he wanted was cows that would produce great quantities of milk. Accordingly Holstein blood was introduced into the grade herd, and pure-bred Holstein sires have been used constantly since then. The herd, as I saw it, contained two or three old Ayrshire cows that are heavy producers, but the great bulk of them have the markings and the scale of pure-bred Holsteins.

WINTER DAIRYING

It was toward the close of Mr. Bailey's career as a tenant farmer, that two more changes were made which practically doubled his income. He began to specialize strongly in winter dairying and to ship milk to the city of Montreal. "The majority of my cows now come in in October," he told me. "This is the month that the price goes up, and from then on till spring there are no flies to bother, and more time to milk. I cannot say that I made any money until I went into winter dairying and began to take advantage of milk at six cents a quart for the Montreal trade."

It is just four years this August since Mr. Bailey started to ship milk to Montreal. Then he began to realize on the breeding that he had been doing for high milk production. His forty cows averaged him $100 apiece. The last year that he spent on his rented 200 acres, he paid $500 rent, $120 wages to a man who boarded himself, $90 taxes, and saved practically $3,000 for himself. A good showing.

But already Mr. Bailey had become a land owner. It is commonly affirmed that there is not a farm in Ontario that will rent for six per cent. of its selling price. If this be true it is more profitable to rent farm land than to own it. Mr. Bailey is inclined to agree with this deduction. There is something within man, however, which makes him desire the ownership of the soil he works. And the promptings of nature made Mr. Bailey a farm owner, although renting might have been more profitable financially. From the days when he worked as a hired man on the Carlyle farm, it had been his ideal to own that farm or another like it; preferably the Carlyle farm itself. Four years previous to the time of my visit to Mr. Bailey, the farm was offered for sale. Mr. Bailey had just $1,100 in the bank. Mr. Carlyle knew the calibre of the man, however, and he agreed to accept the $1,100 as a first payment on the purchase price of $10,000. The details having been arranged, Mr. Bailey then went back to his rented farm for a year, and Mr. Carlyle remained on the farm without interest or rent changing hands. It was during this year that Mr. Bailey cleared $3,000, and this $3,000 he made his second payment on his own home, where he has been for almost four years now.

PROFITS OF DAIRYING.

Mr. Bailey is farming along the lines that had given his best success—as a winter dairyman and a city milk shipper. Practically his whole income comes from the dairy cows, of which 32 were being milked at the time of my visit. In the four months, December to March inclusive, careful account was kept of milk receipts and feed expenses, and it was found that the income over and above feed purchased was $1,500.

Mr. Bailey does not yet own in full the farm on which he lives, but from the figures which he gave me, and which I have given here, it is evident that the ownership of the farm which he desired when working as a hired man for a mere pittance, is well within his reach.

This article would not be complete without mention of the Bailey home; for success such as Mr. Bailey has achieved is well nigh impossible without the assistance of a good wife and an industrious family. Mr. Bailey has had the loyal assistance of both. The house is commodious, comfortable and fitted with such up-to-date conveniences as running water and a bath room. Surely the ownership of such a home and farm is a sufficient reward for industry and thrift.

Canadian Pacific at Lyons

An exhibition is taking place at Lyons, in France, and the pride of place in the Canadian section must be given to the Canadian Pacific Railway exhibit, comprising three stalls, and the painting covering the back wall of the stalls, showing in a pictorial form the principal agricultural, mineral and industrial products of every Canadian Province and of Newfoundland, has attracted much attention. The officials of the French Colonial Office have paid two special visits to study this picture, and the French Government will adopt a somewhat similar method to educate the public in France as to the resources of the French Colonial possessions. On the right of this design is a large painting of the steamship "Empress of Russia," and underneath a panel of lettering in French, pointing out that the Dominion Express Company places the French manufacturer and exporter in touch with the Canadian importer. On the left of the design is a large painting of a C. P. R. train, and underneath a panel of lettering in French giving statistics about the Canadian Pacific. Underneath the whole is a huge map of the C. P. R. system, showing its steamboat connections with Europe, Asia and Australia, and paintings of all Canadian Pacific hotels.

• • • • • • • • •

The right side of the stall is taken up with an exhibit from the Province of Ontario, comprising numerous specimens of metals, canned goods, oils, marble slabs, honey, woods, and what rather amused the French visitors—bottles of wine produced in Ontario. On the wall three British Columbia pictures showing big trees and salmon were prominent. The right section of the stall is devoted to a Quebec Government exhibit, and comprises two large cases of asbestos manufactures, a case of mica manufactures, mineral specimens, a display of wood samples mounted on a large stand, specimens of wood pulp and other interesting products. On the wall two large Nova Scotian pictures show the industrial development of that Province. At the bottom of both sides of the stall large photographic pictures depict scenes in every Province of Canada and the various activities of the C. P. R. Three special brochures have been prepared by the C. P. R. in French, one dealing with the industrial development of Canada; the second, entitled "La Nouvelle French" dealing with the French settlement of Canada and the cementing of friendly relations between Canada and France in the present war; and the third deals with interesting points along the C. P. R. The various Provinces also sent a plentiful supply of literature for which there was a great demand.

In the course of a conversation as to the practical result of the exhibition, Mr. Geo. McLaren Brown, European Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, showed confidence that there is a good opening for Canadian manufactured goods in France. The feeling of the French towards Canadians is most friendly. This has not only been produced by the bravery of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces fighting in France, but also by the fact that several thousands of French-Canadians are fighting actually in the ranks of the French army itself, and they have done much to tell their French comrades all about Canada.

TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS

JOHN A. THIRTYACRE.

TESTIMONIAL.

I swallowed a large tack in April, 1910, and it lodged in my lung. This developed into tuberculosis. Four doctors treated me but I gradually became worse. Then my sister learned of Nature's Creation and got the medicine for me. When I began taking Nature's Creation, I was having night sweats continually, pains in my chest and both lungs. Several physicians said I could not live over 30 days. After taking the first bottle of Nature's Creation, a wonderful improvement was noticeable and I continue to improve. Weighed 107 pounds; now 150, and never have had any return of the old trouble.

Ottawa Lacrosse Club Organizes

Elects Officers at Enthusiastic Meeting—Will Play on Lawnsdowne Park

OTTAWA, April 14.—That Ottawa will be represented in the lacrosse field this year was assured to-night when an enthusiastic meeting took place at the New Russell House. Nearly a hundred old-time lacrosse followers attended, and the meeting resulted in the formation of the Ottawa Lacrosse Club. An advisory committee or board of directors was appointed, with power to add to its number and the entire management of the club placed in its hands. Some of the biggest business men of the city co-operated and it was announced that arrangements had been made with the board of control for the use of Lansdowne Park. A triple schedule will be played, giving the Ottawas nine home games.

The board of directors will meet later and appoint officers. It consists of the following: D. J. L. Chabot, M. P.; Mr. Hal. B. McGivern, Mr. T. Ahearn, convenor Jos. Kent, Mr. G. Booth, Mr. L. N. Pate, Mr. Wm. Hasley, Alf Smith, Geo. Donaldson, T. Morgan, and W. Tackaberry.

The Ottawa dates for the local games in the National Union will be forwarded tomorrow to President St. Pere, who is getting together the schedule. It is understood that Bouse Hutton will act as manager and Ernie Butterworth will continue as secretary, with the coaching left to a committee, consisting of the older players.

The Ottawas will wear the historical red, white and black sweaters, and will turn out to practice at Lansdowne Park as soon as the snow is off the ground.

WHAT ABOUT LACROSSE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS?

Is the National Pastime Going to be Revived or Given Up?

Last season a crusade was started in the local public schools to form lacrosse teams and give the school children a chance to play the national pastime. Some good work was accomplished, but those behind the movement should not let the interest die out this summer, and thus have all their good work spoilt. So far, nothing has been heard as to the intentions for lacrosse among the school boys this summer. It has been rumored that there is no one interested enough to keep the ball rolling, and that, although some games may be played, no effort will be made to enlarge upon last year's efforts.

If such is the case, it is to be regretted. The school boys took kindly to lacrosse last summer. Not only those who played last season, but many others, are anxious to play this summer, but there will be no interest unless there is some organization and something at stake. If those who were interested in lacrosse in the public schools last year do not intend to further the movement, it would be better if they announced so.

As stated some days ago, an effort is now being made to revive the Toronto Lacrosse League. The intention is to boom the game among the youngsters. Those included in this class are mainly those who attend the public schools, although if the league is reorganized there will probably be teams other than those from the schools entered.

If the Public School's League does not intend to operate this summer, why not give the Toronto League a chance to assist the school teams? As it is the pupils will be attending school for only about a month during the season when lacrosse is played, while for the two months during the summer holidays they will be free to play when they choose. There seems little use of having the school teams play for a month only if the intention is not to keep the game going during the summer holidays. If a district had charge of the school teams they could start the games early in June and keep them going for three months or even more.

MONUMENT TO A TREE

Perhaps one of the most curious monuments in existence has recently been built in Ontario by Canadians, says The Popular Science Monthly. The farmers have just erected a marble pillar to mark the site on which grew a famous apple tree.

More than a century ago a settler in Canada named McIntosh, when clearing a space in which to make a home in the wilderness, discovered among a number of wild apple trees one which bore fruit so well that he cultivated it and named it McIntosh Red.

The apple became famous; seeds and cuttings were distributed to all parts of Canada, so that now the McIntosh Red flourishes wherever apples grow in the great Dominion. In 1896 the original tree from which the enormous family sprang was injured by fire, but it continued to bear fruit until five years ago. Then, after 15 years, it died, and the grateful farmers have raised a marble pillar in honor of the tree which did so much for the fruit growing industry of their land.

The story of this apple tree illustrates the African proverb that, though you can count the apples on one tree, you can never count the trees in one apple.

GARDENING

By Walt Mason.

I do not like to dig and till the garden—it's too hard a chore; I'd rather take a dollar bill and buy my onions at the store. When first the vernal breezes blow, men feel desire to hew the soil, and with their spades and rakes they go, and sing whistle as they toil. But vernal breezes soon expire; the sizzling wind of summer blows, and sets the toiler's beard afire, and tans his neck and bakes his nose. And as he sweats 'neath burning skies and gives the noxious weeds a whack, a million ants and bugs and flies crawl up his legs and bite his back. And then he hates his sawed-off farm, he growls enough for seven gents; his cauliflowers lose all their charm, his string beans look like twenty cents. Oh, I have gardened in the past, and know the fervor born of spring glows bright a while, but does not last; it is an exanescent thing. I do not like the rake and hoe, I will not ply them any more; when I want turnips I will go and buy the blamed things at the store.

Hair Grower and Beautifier
Recommended by Leading Druggists Throughout Canada

Your money will be refunded without any haggling or red tape of any kind if after using Parisian Sage you do not say it's the best all round tonic and hair dressing you ever used.

That's the statement we make to every reader of this paper, and there are thousands of people in Canada who know that Parisian Sage is just what it is stated to be.

If your hair is falling out or getting thin on top Parisian Sage will stop it. It kills and banishes all disgusting dandruff germs.

One or two applications of Parisian Sage will stop scalp itching and put new life and lustre into faded, lifeless hair, making it look bright and radiant.

Parisian Sage should be used by everyone who wishes to preserve their hair, because it is the most delightful and refreshing of all hair dressings and because it keeps the scalp free from dandruff germs.

Parisian Sage cannot be equalled as a tonic for falling hair and a destroyer of dandruff germs. All druggists, 50 cents a large bottle.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube

HOW ITALY AIDED FRANCE AT VERDUN

Not Only Kept Austria Blocked From Releasing Troops, But Made Notable Gains

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The manner in which the Italian army endeavored to prevent Austrian troops being sent to the French front for utilization in the German attack on the forts at Verdun is disclosed in a statement which the Italian Embassy at Washington has received from the chief of the General Staff as follows:

"When the operations against Verdun began, the Italian General Staff decided to bring energetic pressure to bear upon their own front in order to prevent the Austrians sending troops to the French front. This plan was successfully carried out by means of continued attacks, which were begun on March 8, and which resulted in gains to us in nearly all sectors. About 400 prisoners, also machine guns and other arms and ammunition were captured.

"The Austrians hastily brought up reinforcements and endeavored to direct an offensive against Pal Piccolo and also in front of Gorizia. Italian troops, however, promptly counter-attacked and succeeded in completely throwing the enemy back, capturing about 700 prisoners, including many officers and quantities of arms, ammunition and other war material.

"Soon after this Austrian aerial squadrons in several attacks endeavored to destroy Italian lines of communication and also to drop bombs on the unfortified and airmen were able in five days to beat down eleven enemy aeroplanes. However, an Italian dirigible in a raid upon Austrian territory threw about 800 kilograms of explosives upon the railroad junction of Opcina, while six Caproni aeroplanes threw forty bombs on the station of Adelsburg, all returning safely."

DARE'S MONTHLY THREE HUNDRED DOLLAR CHECK

(By W. Werner.)

Every time a check came it took Dare Henderson fully ten minutes to become acquainted with the fact that it was genuine, that it meant that she was the possessor of another $300 to spend as she pleased, and that it would in one month from that date be followed by another for the same amount. Mr. Crittenden was unfailingly punctual in his business methods and religiously honest, two things which her uncle had evidently taken into account when he made the old lawyer his executor and constituted him the monitor of his only living heir. Dare, however, had never known these things until she knew Mr. Crittenden, and that was after her uncle's death. She had never known her uncle, either. That was the most wonderful part of it. In truth, Dare's whole history read like a fairy tale. All her life she had lived poor, obscure, and at the mercy of stray kindnesses until that day when Mr. Crittenden found her standing behind a counter selling hosiery. She had sold hosiery so long that she had begun to believe that it was her duty to clothe the feet of the entire feminine world, and yet she was only twenty-three. It took her hours to realize that she could henceforth buy for herself even as she had sold. It took her nearly as long to realize the value of that first wonderful, glorious, inspiring check. Three hundred dollars in one month, and no body to share it with her!

Mr. Crittenden had suggested gently that she rent a house and keep a maid, since her first keen desire was for a real home. He found a house for her, a tiny, old-fashioned house with a yard on a roomy, quiet back street. But instead of a maid Dare took Miss Rogers, little old Miss Rogers, who sold underwear so well that there never had been the slightest excuse for turning her away. Miss Rogers had saved her money and lost it, and this had occasioned two sad facts—she had no youth to speak of, and the future was like the present, unspeakably dreary. Miss Rogers was tired to death of work, but she dared not stop until that unbelievable moment when Dare offered her a home and $25 a month for the sake of her companionship. "I don't want a servant, I want a friend," the girl said impulsively. "I want you. I know we can make each other happy." "God bless you, child, we'll try!" replied Miss Rogers solemnly. Then they both cried a little and pressed hands. So the pact began.

Miss Rogers had refinement and knowledge of things and people. She helped Dare arrange the little house. They bought a few simple things to begin with, intending to add attractions or necessities as they desired them. Then they settled down to being very happy and comfortable and idle. Miss Rogers indulged in a long-coveted pastime of reading novels and crocheting; Dare studied. But she was young and books were not enough. She wished to do good, to share the overflow of her wealth, so she began to seek for the people who were poor and forlorn and discouraged. She had not far to seek. There were dozens of them, whole families just around the block. The place was known as Laundry lane, because it always hung full of other people's washings. But until Dare entered it Laundry lane had never known any real inspiration or hope or uplift.

DARE'S DREAM.

One day she met him there. Mrs. Towie's baby was sick with convulsions and Dare sent for a doctor. She expected old Dr. Scott, but He came instead, hurrying up in his little runabout, tall, fresh colored, and efficient in every look and movement! He saved the baby! Dare had known he would. When he went away she felt as if she had had something beautiful and precious in her hands for an instant, which had vanished and could not again be found.

However, she did find him again. He lived in the great bulk of a brick house near her own with his mother, a severe lady, who had never called on the little new unknown. He had recently become a physician and Dr. Scott had taken him in as partner. But when he passed her on the street he did not know her, and she sighed.

Presently she met him again. Mrs. Towie would have no one but young Dr. Lindon. "He's an angel av mercy. Bliss your sweet face, just keep on heating the wather till he comes. And I'll hould the child in it. He told me to do so."

Again the baby was saved. After that he did know Dare when he met her on the street. "Not that it mattered." Dare told herself.

It was a very hot summer and there was much suffering among the poor. Sometimes Dare gave away so much of her monthly income that she and Miss Rogers had to be quite economical when it came to themselves. But she was happy in so doing.

Miss Rogers was slightly ailing. The long years of living in a 6 x 9 room on tea and baker's rolls had left her frail indeed. All day she stayed upon the porch or within doors, but when evening came she liked to walk up and down the street with Dare beside her.

One evening they found the Lindon house ablaze with light. There were guests there and music and dancing. The windows were open to let in the air, and as Dare gazed with a little puckering pain at her heart, a girl ran out upon the brilliant porch—such a girl, fair, laughing, exquisite, only seen in windows—a gown of rose satin and lace and streaming crystal fringes! Dare gazed once.

"Do you think it is wicked to be as lovely as that?" she breathed.

"No," replied Miss Rogers, promptly. "It is every woman's duty and privilege to be as lovely as that—if she can!"

If she can! That night Dare dreamed she was wearing one and that Mark Lindon was smiling upon her. She woke to wonder if he would smile upon her in case she wore such a gown? She wondered how she would look in such a gown, anyway, with her hair loosed up like that other girl's.

THE RIGHT DOCTOR.

That day the check came and she did a foolish, extravagant, futile thing, as she believed. She went to the store where she had sold hosiery for seven long years and bought herself just such a gown as that other girl had worn.

She was ashamed to tell Miss Rogers or even to show it to her. She got it home secretly and put it on. She had loosed her dark hair and curled it at the back of her head and thrust one of her own roses into it. And then she stood before the glass and looked at herself. No, she did not look like the fair girl, for she was dark, but the effect was not disappointing. She drew a deep breath. Then she flung out her arms to the little excited girl in the glass. "Girl, girl," she sobbed. "You've got the rose pink gown, but where is your happiness?"

At that instant she heard a sound—a cry for help. She ran almost fell—downstairs, and came upon Miss Rogers with such a look on her face—a look of death it seemed.

"I've phoned Dr. Scott," Miss Rogers said, and then she fell forward into Dare's arms.

It was Dr. Lindon who came within two minutes. Dare let him into the house. Together they brought Miss Rogers back to consciousness. By that time Dare had forgotten everything save the fact that her friend was going to live. She knelt beside the couch and cuddled Miss Rogers' head in her arms. Miss Rogers smiled. She acted as if Dare were in the habit of wearing pink party gowns every evening. "Don't crush your frock," she said only.

Dare glanced down at herself, remembering, and then up at Dr. Lindon. He was gazing at her and smiling as she had seen him in her dream. Just for a moment her head whirled. Then her color came and she laughed.

It was a little laugh of joy, for Dare was a woman. And every woman grown knows how to read love when she sees it in the right man's eyes.

HERE'S A WAY TO SAVE DOCTOR BILLS

Physicians Give Free Advice by Which Parents May Profit

It's a matter of general interest now how one's physical condition can be got into shape to best receive the benefits of the summer season. Especially is this true of the children. They have become run down by a winter of unnatural manner of living because of ill-considered food and much time spent indoors. Spring comes with its sunshine, its fresh vegetables and all else invigorating, but the children are in no condition to receive nature's remedies.

Many parents call in the family physician. Many other parents take advantage of what the physician told them when he was first called in consultation. All good family physicians say: "Give the children Castoria." Healthy parents know this remedy of old, for they took it themselves as children. It was more than thirty years ago that Castoria made a place for itself in the household. It bore the signature of Charles H. Fletcher then, as it does to-day. The signature is its guarantee, which is accepted in thousands of homes where there are children.

Much is printed nowadays about big families. Dr. William J. McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., is the father of one of these much-read-about families. Here is what he says:

"As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have, in my years of practice, found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Charles H. Fletcher has received hundreds of letters from prominent physicians who have the same esteem for Castoria that Dr. McCrann has. Not only do these physicians say they use Castoria in their own families, but they prescribe it for their patients. First of all it is a vegetable preparation which assimilates the food and regulates the stomach and bowels. After eating comes sleeping, and Castoria looks out for that too. It allays feverishness and prevents loss of sleep, and this absolutely without the use of opium, morphine or other baneful narcotic.

Medical journals are reluctant to discuss proprietary medicines. Hall's Journal of Health, however, says: "Our duty is to expose danger and record the means for advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health by regulating the system, not by stupefying it, and our readers are entitled to the information."

Diamond Ring Used in Theft

Finger Ornament Utilized to Cut Window Pane of Shop

MONTREAL, April 1.—A diamond ring was successfully used early yesterday morning in burglarizing the store of T. Zimmerman, at No. 3 St. Antoine street, three men getting away with four bottles of brandy and being prevented from making a greater haul by the appearance of John Curran a night watchman in the district. Curran was making his rounds when he saw three men standing in front of the window. They saw him approaching about a block away and moved off at a brisk pace. Coming to the store he found upon investigation that a corner of the window had been neatly cut out and four bottles of brandy stolen. Ascertaining this, he immediately started in the direction taken by the three men, who had by this time disappeared. They were nowhere to be found, however, they having gone up or down one of the dark side streets or lanes. The police at the Chaboillez street station were notified.

AUTOMOBILES & RAILWAYS

President Loree of the Delaware & Hudson Railway rather mournfully admits that the passenger traffic on his road, as on others, has suffered from the competition of the automobile. And to account for the size of the loss, he notes that if the 4,339 vehicles of this sort licensed in "Albany, Troy, and the intermediate towns," each carried three passengers 25 miles a day for a year their "passenger miles" would equal those of the Delaware & Hudson for the same time.

But of course those 4,339 automobiles did not give as much service as that. It is, indeed, unlikely that more than very few of them did it, for, though any automobile can carry three passengers more than twenty-five miles in a day, there cannot be many doing even that much every day.

And of the whole number of automobile rides taken, only a minute fraction are substitutes for railway journeys. One is almost tempted to believe that the motor car makes as much railway business as it takes away. Certainly it helps the freight end of the industry enormously.

Serum Proved Very Successful

In Curing Cases of Spinal Meningitis

KINGSTON, April 15.—Cerebro-spinal meningitis no longer holds the terror for medical men that it once held, because Kingston doctors have found that in the large majority of cases it is curable.

Since the first outbreak among the soldiers at Salisbury Plains, then at Toronto Exhibition Camp, and later at Belleville, and finally at Kingston, there has been a constant fight against the conditions that might lead to an outbreak. Owing to the fact that the cause of the disease is hard to find, the preventatives used against other outbreaks could not be employed.

Few people ever recovered from the effects once it got them, even with the best medical attention. The conditions became so bad that to prevent a panic among the people the news of any person being afflicted was kept as secret as possible.

Through the efforts and constant experimental work of local doctors, the death rate in Kingston cases of the last two months have been decreased to almost nil. One man who went for a long drive in a cold, wet rain contracted pneumonia complications, but this one death was the only one of a spinal meningitis patient since the new treatment was started.

To the layman the exact method is difficult to understand. Up to a short time ago the serum was injected into the spine, replacing a similar amount extracted. The serum was absorbed and carried through the body, counteracting the effects of the disease. The new method is to also inject the serum into the muscles. The effect is almost instantaneous, and the spread of the meningitis is stopped. It is one of the greatest discoveries that the medical profession have made in evolving this new method of treatment.

Lieut.-Col. W. T. Connell is writing a paper on the subject, and at the conference of officers of Military District No. 3, that will be held at the convenience of the Adjutant-General he will read his report. In the meantime, however, the treatment is being used throughout the country and satisfactory reports are being received.

Explosives Dropped on Railway Stations, Tracks, and German Ships on the North Sea—Every Projectile Finding Its Mark

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, April 17.—Afternoon statement: On the left bank of the Meuse there has been an intense bombardment of the French positions in Avocourt wood and on the front from Dead Man's Hill to Cumiers. On the right bank of the river the night passed in relative calm, except in the region to the south of Haudremont wood, where there was continued artillery activity. There were no infantry attacks during the day and night. Nothing to report from the remainder of the front except the customary cannonading. Sunday night, nine French aeroplanes dropped twelve shells on the railroad station at Conflans, sixteen on the factory at Rombach, eight on the railroad station at Harnaville, eleven on the railroad line at Pagny and Ars. Saturday night, French aeroplanes flying over the North Sea, threw sixteen shells at a vessel of the enemy from an altitude of three hundred feet. Eleven shells found their mark.

RETURNS TO CANADA TO TAKE COMMISSION

In 146th Battalion—Corporal J. Hannaford Was with 2nd Battalion, and Wounded

KINGSTON, April 15.—Corpl. 'Jack' Hannaford, of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, has returned to Canada to take a commission in the 146th Battalion. Corpl. Hannaford, who is a nephew of Mrs. E. J. B. Pense, West street, enlisted under the late Capt. George T. Richardson, and went to France in February, 1915. He was among the first of the members of his unit to be struck by a German bullet. The bullet hit him in the knee, forcing him to "quit" trench life and return to England, where he has been for almost a year.

Previous to the declaration of war he was employed as a clerk in the local branch of the Bank of British North America, but resigned that position and went to Valcartier with the second draft from the 14th Regiment. Corpl. Hannaford was a soldier for some years, having served in Montreal regiments. He was a corporal in the 14th Regiment, Kingston.

HENRY FORD IS SERIOUS

His Candidacy for Presidency of is No Joke

DETROIT, April 15.—The Republicans of Michigan have placed their party in the curious position of having instructed thirty unknown delegates, still unselected, to vote for the nomination of a man for the Presidency who says himself of his own candidacy that it is a joke.

But around Detroit one will find many who think Henry Ford's views on the subject not so jocular as his published utterances would indicate. They point out that he could very readily have had the name taken off the primary ticket.

But Mr. Ford left his name on. He has left it on in Nebraska also. It is safe to assure any enthusiastic pacifists in other States that if they desire to have Ford's name on the official ballot he will take no steps to have it struck off.

Also, if Villa "holds passes," some others may have to pay to get into the show.

"We will Defeat Them" Declares Verdun Hero

PARIS, April 17.—(Special)—General Petain, in command of the French troops defending Verdun, issued the following order of the day to his soldiers:—

"The 9th of April was a glorious day for our arms. The furious assaults of the Crown Prince's soldiers were broken everywhere. The infantrymen, artillerymen, sappers and aviators of our Eleventh Army vied with one another in deeds of heroism. Honor is due to all.

"The Germans will doubtless attack again. Let everyone watch and work to attain the same success as yesterday. Courage! We will defeat them."

INDIAN PEOPLE HELPING EMPIRE

LONDON, April 15.—A special despatch from Simla says that India's generosity for war purposes continues unabated. Donations from princes and nobles to the various war funds still pour in from all parts of India. The latest gifts include funds for motor ambulances, ambulance launches, armored aeroplanes, convalescent homes for officers invalided from Mesopotamia and a convalescent hospital for sick soldiers. The St. John's Ambulance Society also continues to receive valuable gifts of money, motor ambulances and other requisites for the care of the sick and wounded.

Thought Wife Was Faithless Fired Shots

KINGSTON, April 15.—Because he considered his wife unfaithful to him, Pte. John Doherty, of the 109th Battalion, of Lindsay, who was in Ottawa for the last few days, went to his home, 120 Booth Street, and fired a shot through the window into the room where his wife was sitting. The bullet embedded itself in the wall and fortunately did not hit either Mrs. Doherty or her little girl who was with her. He was arrested and allowed his liberty provided he returned to Lindsay.

MONETARY STRINGENCY TIGHTENING IN GERMANY

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, April 17. — —Telegrams from Rome correspondent says that great fear prevails in Germany that to complete the recent ten billion mark loan the concerns emplied will be the savings banks and kindred institutions. A hint to this extraordinary action is supposed to have been disclosed by Dr. Liebknecht in the Reichstag. Determined efforts were made to prevent him from speaking and newspapers were not allowed to publish anything, so what he said is partly guessed at. If the suspicion aroused is well grounded it is presumed it will be impossible for Germany to float any further loans.

COMMUNICATIONS TO GERMANY FORWARDED

Canadian Press Special

WASHINGTON, April 17.— Announcement was made at the White House today that President Wilson had practically compelled the consideration of the forthcoming communication to Germany, and it was indicated that it probably will go forward to Berlin late today or tomorrow.

"What is your idea of success?"

"It's everything somebody else has done that I wish I could have done myself."

HORACE YEOMANS IS KILLED

Popular Belleville Young Man Loses Life in Defense of King and Country

The following cable message was this morning received by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn of this city:

HOARCE YEOMANS KILLED. WRITING, EDDIE.

Three brief words, but bringing grief to local parents and scores of friends, referring as it does to Horace Yeomans, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Yeomans, of this city, who left with the First Canadian Contingent as a member of the Signalling Corps of the 34th Battery, and sent by Capt. Eddie O'Flynn, also of Belleville, who has been at the front for some time. There was a feeing of deep regret in this city when the sad news became generally known. The brave lad was well known by our citizens, and no young man possessed more personal friends. He was beloved by all who knew him, and his death will be sincerely regretted. He was at the time of his enlistment attending Belleville High School, and was recognized as an exceptionally bright scholar. Highly moral, an energetic worker in church circles and at the Y. M. C. A., his influence for good was far-reaching among the younger classes by whom his death will be deeply regretted.

To the bereaved parents the heartfelt sympathy of the community at large will be extended at this time.

FATAL RAILWAY WRECK NEAR TRENTON BRIDGE

One Man Killed, Another Seriously Injured—Seventeen Loaded Cars Leave the Track, Sweeping a Shanty into the River

At an early hour this morning a serious wreck occurred on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway, just a few yards east of the station and adjacent to the bridge which spans the Trent river, at Trenton. As a result of the accident one life was lost, and another employe was injured.

It appears that about four o'clock an eastbound freight train was proceeding on its way at a fair rate of speed, when from some cause a car left the track, causing sixteen others to follow in its trail.

At the place where the accident occurred a small shanty was situated, which was used by two men who have been for some time acting as guards over the bridge. The cars, on leaving the track and falling down the embankment, came in contact with the shanty, with such force as to sweep it into the river.

Mr. Charles Galipodia, of Montreal, was killed, and the other man, Robert Darrouch, was severely injured. A number of cars went over the embankment, which is of considerable height, and some of them slid into the river. All were loaded, some with munitions of war.

It was one of the worst wrecks which have occurred on the line in this vicinity for some years. The auxiliary from Belleville was called to the scene of the accident to clear the track. Traffic was delayed for some time, trains from both east and west being held up.

The mail train from the west, due here at 10.55 a.m., was delayed for an hour. A rumor became current on the streets of Belleville to the effect that the bridge had been dynamited, thus causing the wreck, but it transpired that there was no foundation for this rumor.

The loss sustained will amount to several thousand dollars.

BROWBEAT THE NEUTRALS BECAUSE OF BLOCKADE

PARIS, April 16.—Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's Reichstag address, combined with recent events, shows unmistakably that Germany has definitely adopted the policy of forcing the neutral nations to declare finally for or against her.

Germany must have wheat, rubber, copper, petrol and cotton. She must have ports as bases for her sea operations, and coast line and territories which her Staff consider indispensable.

If the neutrals do not allow her to obtain these things peacefully she will seize them just as she invaded Belgium. She is now putting a heavy strain on Swiss neutrality by deliverately dropping bombs in Swiss territory. In order to be able to violate Dutch neutrality she accuses Britain of planning to land troops in Holland.

Neutral newspapers are still flooded with German offers to buy leather, copper, cotton, rubber and petrol, and trade with Germany's continental neutral neighbors has reached abnormal proportions. Secret contraband traffic is also being carried on hrough the mails.

But Germany is no longer satisfied with the attempts to supply her needs by these occult ways. She intends to force the neutrals either openly to help her or to suffer invasion.

The fact is that she is bound to act in this way, and accordingly as the neutrals reply with strong measures or submit to indignities the war will end early or late.

We can confidently rely on these nations to protect themselves.

The Verdun battle has demonstrated that Germany is incapable of striking a smashing and decisive blow. The long and carefully concealed preparations and the 50 days of desperate fighting, with a loss of at least 200,000 men, has resulted in a gain of only a few kilometres.

The lesson is obvious. Whatever Verdun's fate may be, German's military strength is vastly lower than after the battle of the Marne. If Germany should capture the town she would again have to accumulate supplies and munitions to sustain fresh and bloody sacrifices in order to gain a few more kilometres, and this while the great allies' offensive is breaking out on all the other fronts.

From the military viewpoint the war can end only with victory for the allies, but whether this is obtained through great attacks or through jump one way or the other, because Germany intends trying to get more help from them.

Two Steamers Sunk at Sea

LONDON, April 17.—The sinking of a neutral ship and British steamer was reported by Lloyd's today. The Norwegian ship, Glendoon, was sunk by gun fire. The lost British steamer was the Harrovian, which was unarmed.

ALLIES WILL TRANSPORT THE NEW SERBIAN ARMY

Canadian Press Special

NEW YORK, April 17.—A cable from London to the Tribune states that the allies propose to transport the Serbian army of 150,000 men from the island of Corfu to Saloniki, making use of the Greek railway from Patras to Volo, as transportation is entirely by sea is considered dangerous. The Central powers have told Greece that the passage of Serbian army will be regarded an unfriendly act, but the Allies insist on carrying out this plan, and Greece is therefore confronted by a grave crisis.

PROGRESS IS MADE BY BRITISH

The Tigris Scene of General Advancement

LONDON, April 17.—(Special.)—Further progress in the efforts of the British army up the Tigris to the relief of the force besieged at Kut-el-Amara was reported to-day in the following official statement:

"Lieut.-Gen. Sir Percy Lake reports that on April 14 a heavy gale blew all day. On April 15 gradual and steady progress was made on the right bank, and the enemy's advanced lines were driven in and occupied. The enemy left many dead and a considerable number of prisoners in the captured trenches.

"A heavy rain fell on the night of April 14-15. On April 15 the weather was fine but hazy."

DEEDS OF DARING BY CANADA'S GALLANT SONS

Fighting around St. Eloi Indescribable—Western Men Hold Line—German Parties Wiped out of Existence in Attempts to Storm Trenches—Hand-to-Hand Fighting Waged for Several Days

OTTAWA, April 17.—Special—The Canadian eyewitness at the front, in his official report of the fighting at St. Eloi from April 4 to 11, gives the following details of gallant deeds performed by the Canadians.

In the confusion of the fighting for the craters many deeds of high courage and devotion were performed by our men. Some of them will never be fully recorded, for none are left to tell the tale. Others in due course may be garnered when the passage of time has thrown them into relief in the recollection of those men who witnessed them. Only bare details of a few of them can as yet be secured.

Lieut. J. F. Arbuckle, with Corporal Woods and Private Batson of our 31st Battalion, Calgary, undertook a reconnaissance and penetrated several hundred yards into the German territory. Separated from his men in the darkness and wounded in the face by the explosion of a shell Lieut. Arbuckle managed to regain our trenches, bringing in valuable information as to the German defences. Private Batson was hit in the ankle; Corporal Woods stayed with him and bandaged the wound, but a little later was killed by a shell. All through the following day Private Batson lay in concealment within the German area and after dark crawled back to our lines.

Ptes. A. B. Davis and L. R. Seymour, 31st Battalion, moved to and fro between the craters occupied by our men and the trenches held by their company. They carried in several wounded men. In one dugout two brothers were buried by the explosion of a shell. Davis and Seymour tried to dig them out, but another shell struck the same place, killing both brothers and wounding Seymour. Davis lifted Seymour on his back and working his way through mud which reached over the hips carried him to shelter one hundred and twenty yards away.

Lance-Corp. Everett, 29th Battalion, Vancouver, was out on patrol on the morning of April 6, when the attack started. He was badly wounded, but after lying out all day regained our trenches on the night of April 7, using two shovels as crutches. Sergt. James Harvey, 29th Battalion, made fifteen trips under heavy fire from our support lines to the craters; each time he took fresh men with him, and each time brought in a number of wounded.

Braved Deadly Fire

Captain Carr, Medical Officer, 27th Battalion, Winnipeg, established an advanced dressing station in the front trenches, and under a heavy cross fire went out in front of our lines to bring in wounded men.

Captain J. A. Cullum, Medical Officer, 28th Battalion (Winnipeg), took our parties of stretcher-bearers and brought in wounded men. Under heavy fire Captain Cullum, assisted by Sergt. Lock, carried in one man for whom no stretcher could be secured.

Stretcher-bearers J. MacGillivray, 28th Battalion, and J. Wilkinson, 31st Battalion, continued to tend the wounded long after they themselves were hit.

Sergt. John McRae, 27th Battalion, after being wounded, remained at his post under a severe fire. On several occasions he acted as guide in reconnaissance towards the craters and stayed with his command until incapacited by further wounds.

Machine Gun Sergt. F. W. Haines, 27th Battalion, had his gun buried three times by shell explosions, but each time succeeded in bringing it again into action with very little delay. Finally the gun was hit while being fired from the parapet and Sergt. Haines was wounded. In spite of this he went out to the assistance of Grenade Sergt. Fritz, who was lying wounded two hundred yards away. It was broad daylight and the enemy's fire was intense, but Sergt. Haines succeeded in carrying Sergt. Fritz back to safety.

ROUMANIANS PREPARE TO ENTER THE WAR

LONDON, April 17.—(Special.)—It is reported by the Copenhagen correspondent of The Exchange Telegraph Company that the Roumanian Parliament has empowered the Government to summon the recruits of the 1917 class.

A Bucharest despatch says the Roumanian Chamber has adopted a bill authorizing the Government to float an interior loan of 150,000,000 francs.

Germany thinks that the submarine commander might have thought that it was quite probable that the Sussex might be a transport. Funny how Germany deduces these things long before it hears from its submarine commanders.

Austrian Released From Prison

Was Arrested at Fort Henry and Taken to Kingston - Served Time for Theft

KINGSTON, April 15.—To be released from the penitentiary, only to be taken to Fort Henry, was the experience of an Austrian on Friday afternoon. The Austrian in question has been serving a term of two and a half years for theft at Hamilton. He was re-arrested and placed in Fort Henry, at the request of Col. Sherwood, of the Dominion Police, at Ottawa.

Constable Samuel Arnel paid a visit to the penitentiary, and as the Austrian was released took him in charge. The prisoner was first taken to the police station, and later on was removed to Fort Henry.

The Austrian is married, with a wife and three children. He was employed with a mattress factory, in Hamilton, and stole money. His wife and children returned to their home in Austria, but had been there only a short time, when war was declared. Leaving the children in the care of the prisoner's parents, the wife and her sister came over to Canada again, but stayed only a short time, afterwards going over to the United States. The prisoner says that he has not heard from his wife since he was sent to prison. He states that his downfall was due to playing cards and dropping large sums of money.

Although behind prison bars, the Austrian appears to be well posted on the events of the war. He is a big, husky looking chap, and his term in the "pen" does not appear to have injured his health.

THE BRITISH RAID HUN TRENCHES

Satisfactory Results Have been Gained in Region of La Basse Canal

LONDON, April 17.—(Special.)—The British official statement on the campaign in France and Belgium, issued to-night, reads:

"Last night after the explosion of two mines, our troops carried out a small raid against the enemy trenches south of the Bethune-La Bassee road with satisfactory results

"To-day there has been artillery activity about Arras, Neuville St. Vaast, Grenay and Loos."

Berlin, April 17.—To-day's official statement says:

"On both sides of La Bassee Canal the activity of the artillery has increased. Also there have been a number of lively mine engagements.

"In the Vermelles district a British position about sixty metres long was blown up by our mines."

Cocoa From New Colony.

In connection with the arrival in Britain of the first cargo of cocoa from the conquered colony of the Cameroons, a statement that the German Cameroons was the first colony in West Africa to produce cultivated cocoa, has received considerable publicity. The statement is, as a matter of fact, incorrect. Germany did not acquire the Cameroons till 1884, and five years previous to that date the cultivation of cocoa had begun in the British colony of the Gold Coast.

The cocoa industry of the Gold Coast was founded in 1879, by a native of Accra who brought some cocoa plants and pods from the Spanish African island, Fernando Po, made a small plantation, and four years later sold the cocoa pods in the neighboring villages. The first shipment of Gold Coast cocoa, consisting of 80 lbs., was made in 1891, to the United Kingdom. From the first Gold Coast Government gave practical encouragement to the development of the industry, and as early as 1894 the curator of the first botanical station in the colony was giving instruction to the native planters in the proper method of curing.

In 1905 the advice of the Imperial Institute with regard to the preparation and marketing of Gold Coast cocoa was obtained, and the scientific knowledge thus brought to bear, combined with the strong interest of the Gold Coast Government in the industry led immediately to an enormous and continuous increase in the cultivation and export which has had no parallel elsewhere. Last year (1915), indeed, the export of cocoa from the Gold Coast reached a total value of £3,651,341, an increase in value of £1,457,592, over the figures for the previous year.

The Gold Coast is now the most important cocoa producing country in the world.

FOODS THE TURKS EAT.

Pilaff Is the National Dish, and but Little Meat Is Used.

Vegetables, fruits and grains are the staples of the Turkish kitchen. Breakfast on the Bosporus consists of a small cup of Turkish coffee and a roll. At noon there is a bowl of sour milk (yaourt) and bread. Thick Turkish coffee is taken again in the afternoon to key up appetites for the principal meal, which comes at night. This meal includes, probably, pilaff (meat and rice), several kinds of vegetables, pastry and thick coffee. The workman's meal is still more simple—a chunk of bread and an onion or a bunch of grapes.

There are, however, some dishes upon the Turkish bill of fare which the returned westerner never ceases to regret. Pilaff is one. It is a food as national with the Turk as the potato with the Irish, as the cabbage with the German. It takes a multitude of forms, but its basic quality, its quality of being pilaff, is derived from rice being cooked in such a way as to preserve each grain firm and distinct. The rice is unpolished and in cooking takes on a gelatinous coat. Sometimes it is boiled in mutton fat, a rich, smooth, inviting dish. Sometimes bits of roast mutton are mingled with it, when it becomes a meat pudding of delicious flavor. It is cooked with small currants and pine nuts, fragrant and spicy. It is stuffed with dates and flavored with orange peel; but, whatever its form, it is one of the treasured memories of a visit to the near east.

Eggplant is the foundation of another favored Turkish dish. It is stuffed with chopped onions and rice and cooked in oil. It is also stuffed with meat marrows and rice and steamed until it becomes a culinary inspiration. The westerner, furthermore, learns to enjoy many of the milk foods prepared by the Turks. Yaourt, cultured milk as thick as sour cream, prepared from the rich milk of the buffalo cow, is a satisfaction to the most pampered diner. Chicken breast milk, made from grated chicken breasts; jelly-like rice milk, starchy pudding, eaten with sugar and rosewater, and yaourt, with chopped nutmeats, are other dishes.

The Turks are fond of sweets. They prepare a kind of bread which they soak in honey and eat with rich cream. They also prepare pastry in strings soaked in honey. Meats, with the exception of mutton, are poor in Turkey but then the Turk is a good deal of a vegetarian.

The Turkish porter, or hamal, dines on a chunk of bread costing a cent, together with a melon or a bunch of grapes or an onion or a piece of cheese to the cost of another cent, and considers his meal complete. Yet his daily toil consists in carrying packing cases, pianos and other knickknacks around on his back to the astonishment of every visitor acquainted only with the prowess of porters in the west. This rugged Turkish burden bearer eats a dinner at night which costs about 4 cents—a bowl of pilaff with bits of meat in it.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

Giving Their Groats.

In the course of Montreal's Patriotic Fund campaign, in which the committee went after $1,500,000 and got nearly $2,500,000, a collector approached a group of three men on the street, one of whom he recognized as a worthy but not affluent Scot of his acquaintance. The other two proved also to be from the Land o' the Heather and Harry Lauder. On the collector disclosing his mission, the three at once evinced a willingness to add their groats to a good cause, but a financial inventory showed that one had just a dollar, a second only a dime, and the third but a humble "jitney." These amounts were pooled, and then arose the question as to how the donation was to be acknowledged. After a couple of suggestions had been made, the contributor of the dollar delivered his ultimatum: "Pit it doon to 'The Scots Wha Hae and Wha Hae Not.'"

And pit doon accordingly it was in the official lists.

Labor [illegible] In British Columbia

The continued congestion of the labor market in British Columbia has caused the Government to again extend for six months the order-in-Council prohibiting the entry into British Columbia from any foreign country of immigrants who may be classed as artisans or skilled or unskilled laborers. The new order-in-Council will apply until the end of next September.

PATRIOTIC CHORUS CONCERT

Mr. Reginald Geen Scores Another Artistic Success—Chorus and Artists Make Deep Impression at Owen Sound

(Owen Sound Advertiser)

One of the best musical programmes ever attempted in Owen Sound was that rendered by the Owen Sound Patriotic Chorus under the direction of Mr. Reginald Geen in the Savoy Opera House last Wednesday evening. Without exception, every number on the programme was excellent, and although the final number was not rendered until near eleven o'clock the interest did not lag for an instant, but all were sorry to even then see the completion of such an interesting, and entertaining program. The chorus, which consisted of 70 voices, was trained to a nicety, and obtained some marvellous shading and beautiful tonal effects. The chorus was admirably balanced, with a strong bass section that got in a lot of effective work during the rendition of the heavy choruses. For several months the chorus has been in training—and showed it. There was not a detail lacking to make the choruses as perfect as possible, and every number was a treat. The trio by Masters Nash, Bertram and Gerald Van Riper, is worthy of special mention as is all the work of the boys' chorus, upon which much work has been put, with marvellous and beautiful results. Great admiration was expressed for the manner in which the boys acquitted themselves. The artists from Toronto were also well received and made profound impressions. The expressive singing of Mr. George and the sweet playing of Mr. Dineen will long be remembered by all who were privileged to hear them.

The programme was opened with Elgar's weirdly harmonised chorus, "My Love Dwelled In A Northern Land" which was so delightfully rendered that every one in the audience was transported to the scene of the song and could feel the atmosphere of the North, steel grey and penetrating. The long and conscientious training of the chorus was manifested in this, the very first number and the excellent harmonies of the chorus made an impression from the first. This was followed by a humorous part song by Bridge, "Bold Turpin". Dicken's story in the adventures of Turpin given in his Pickwick Papers are known to every one; the chorus by Bridge is also familiar, but the excellent rendition by the Patriotic Chorus brought out to Owen Sounders the full beauties of humor concealed in the piece as never before.

The next number was a baritone solo by Mr. Arthur George, the prominent Toronto baritone. It was the Prologue from Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci". It gave full scope for the soloists powers of expression and tone and was enthusiastically received. He responded to this number with a song written for and dedicated to the Daughters of the Empire, "Knitting", which was also greatly appreciated.

The next number was perhaps the most remarkable on the programme. It was a beautiful, warm little solo by Master Wesley Nash, being Bishop's "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark," with a flute accompaniment by Daniel Dineen. Master Nash showed a flexibility and power of expression nothing short of marvellous in a lad his age. He was enthusiastically encored. Gounod's well know chorus "By Babylon's Wave" followed, unaccompanied. The heavy chorus did ample justice to this heavy number. Mr. Daniel Dineen followed with a flute solo, Clifton's arrangement of the French air, "Robert toi que j'aime". For beauty of tone and variey of expression the flute is surpassed by the violin, alone; and Mr. Dineen captivated the audience with his numbers.

Followed then the trio from Rubinstein, "The Song of The Birds" by Master Nash and Bertram and Gerald Van Riper. This was so enthusiastically received that the trio were required to repeat the number. The remaining choruses, were all up to the high standard of excellence set at the first of the programme. They were Rubetz's "Volga Boat Song," a descriptive Russian chorus which was unique and well rendered; "Angell's Serenade", Braga, by the boys' chorus and altos with a violin obligato by Mr. Ross McKeen; Elgar's "Lullaby," an extremely pretty number; one of Percy Graigner's inimitable folk-songs, "I'm Seventeen Come Sunday", a chorus which has been pronounced to be the finest humorous chorus ever sung here.

The remaining number of the artists were also well received and enthusiastically encored, the performers generously responding.

On the whole the concert was one of the greatest merit. No pains were spared in its preparation and great credit is due the members of the chorus for their painstaking study, and to Mr. Geen for his careful selection of numbers, in the first instance, for the excellent choice of voices for his chorus, and finally for the perfect manner in which he trained them, to give every number a completely finished rendition.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

AT GRIFFIN'S LAST EVENING

A large audience attended the 155th Battalion concert at Griffin's last evening. A number of photo-plays were shown which were of a pleasing nature and gave general satisfaction to all present.

LORD'S OF HIGH DECISION

A thrilling 5-part modern drama of modern social conflict entitled, "Lord's of high decision," from the famous novel by Meredith Nicholson, and featuring the famous Broadway star, Cyril Scott, is announced as the featuring offering at the Palace Theatre, tonight and Tuesday, matinee and night, this story which makes a powerful appeal for the spirit of fair play to labor is being offered in addition to a program of amusing comedies.

"A PAIR OF SIXES," WEDNESDAY

No less than four offers were made to Manager H. H. Frazee for the English rights to "A Pair of Sixes," during the first week of its run at the Longacre Theatre, New York. He declined them all, as he wished to make the production in London himself. It was already arranged to produce it last year, when the war interfered. Arrangements for its production had already been made in Paris, Berlin, and the other European capitals, and Australia, but they necessarily, have been postponed for the present. There is no doubt, however, that in due course of time, the farce that has made the theatregoers of this country hold their sides with laughter, will make its laugh heard around the world. It will be seen at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday night, for one night only. The seat sale opened this morning at Doyle's.

"VENGEANCE IS MINE," TONIGHT.

Capital punishment is the theme of, "Vengeance is Mine" the 5-part Mutual Masterpicture which features the popular photoplay star, Crane Wilburg and which is announced as the feature offering at Griffin's Opera House, tonight and Tuesday evening, in addition to the above offering. Droppington's family tree, a highly amusing 2-part Keystone comedy and, "The Doctor's Strategy," a unique comedy drama featuring Irving Cummings is also announced for exhibition.

MORE STRENGTH FOR FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

If all the old people in Belleville realized what Vinol will do for them, we would not be able to get enough of it to supply the demand. We quote from a recent letter received from Mrs. A. E. Carson of Kingston, N.Y.

She says:—"I am 59 years of age, and had been ailing for a long time with indigestion. I got run-down, was weak, dizzy and could not sleep at night. I consulted two doctors who said I had hardening of the arteries and at my age could not expect to be strong again. My daughter would give me no peace until I tried Vinol, as it had done so much for her. I have taken five bottles and my health and strength have come back, so I am able to do all the housework for my family of four, and I am recommending Vinol to all my friends."

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it contains the very elements needed to replace declining strength with renewed vigor, viz: the medicinal elements of fresh cod livers without oil, peptonate of iron, beef peptone, and a mild tonic wine. CABINET IS AGAINST GENERAL COMPULSION

LONDON, April 15.—The best informed lobbyists concur in the belief that the government, although it has not taken its final decision, resolved at yesterday's cabinet meeting against the general compulsory service demanded by a section of the country.

Politicians, chiefly Unionists, stated that a considerable majority of the cabinet opposes compulsion.

According to the Daily News' Parliamentary correspondent, the government intends to raise recruits partly by arranging that all youths between 18 and 19 years become soldiers automatically. None are to be liable for service abroad until they have reached the age of 19, but their enrolment will free drafts of older men for foreign service.

SPROUTING WHEAT MADE INTO BREAD

ROME, April 15.—A new method of making bread recently adopted in Italy has proved a great success. It is found that 660 pounds of grain produce 880 pounds of what is termed "natural bread." In the process the grain is sifted and washed. It is then left for from forty-eight to sixty hours in a warm bath, where it germinates and begins to sprout. When the germinating process has gone far enough, the grain is crushed in a machine and made into dough, which is passed into the owen.

JIMMY'S OPPORTUNITY.

A Very Important Conversation That Settled Matters.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Jimmy Fitzgerald was downcast. Everybody was against him, he told himself, and in that sweeping generalization he included even Carroll. For if it had not been for Carroll's connivance, her tame submission to the maneuvers of interfering relatives, the words which had trembled on his lips for three dragging months would have been spoken long ago.

From the standpoint of a disinterested spectator Jimmy was ready to admire the cleverness which so far had circumvented him. "Good team work," he denominated it. The ingenious air with which Grandmother Reynolds would appear to claim Carroll's assistance in regard to a dropped stitch in her knitting just when Jimmy was bringing matters to a climax and Carroll was turning a most becoming pink was only equaled by the childlike innocence with which Carroll's small brother would rush bawling into the library with a bloody handkerchief held to his nose, interrupting an eloquent outbreak beginning "Since the first hour I saw you"—

In Jimmy's estimation this was all the harder to bear because he was so perfectly eligible. Character and prospects alike were beyond question. The most serious accusation that could be brought against the match was that both of them were young. Carroll's sister, Marie, was of the opinion that an engagement would be absurd, and Jimmy thought he knew why. If George Freeman, Marie's latest admirer, had been as eager to propose as Jimmy was, the latter young man felt positive that no obstacles would be put in his way.

With a duplicity foreign to his usually frank nature, Jimmy lost no opportunity of expressing to Freeman the admiration with which Marie inspired him. If the older sister were once engaged or, better still, married, Jimmy believed there would be hope for him.

Meanwhile the family opposition showed itself in a system of espionage which kept Jimmy's great avowal unspoken. If he suggested a walk, either Mrs. Reynolds declared that Carroll's cold would not permit her to venture out or Marie invited herself to accompany them; if the theater, a chaperon was necessary. Whole souled co-operation on Carroll's part would have relieved the situation, but the girl knew so well what Jimmy wanted that her modesty shrank from giving him anything but the most negative assistance. Accordingly Jimmy decided that she, too, was against him and gave himself up to thoughts of unutterable gloom.

He called one afternoon wearing an expression of grim determination which, if he had known it, put the conspirators on their guard. He was ushered into the family living room, and Mrs. Reynolds entertained him till Carroll came down. Jimmy made a few inane comments on the weather, his eyes devouring the pretty girlish figure seated demurely in the opposite corner.

"It's too fine a day for the house," said Jimmy. "Suppose we take a little walk."

"Really, Carroll, dear," said Mrs Reynolds before Carroll could reply, "it won't do for you to leave the house. Mrs. Baker is likely to want you any moment. We have a dressmaker here, Mr. Fitzgerald," she continued, turning to Jimmy with her most charming smile.

"Can't we sit on the piazza?" suggested Jimmy. Carroll agreed to the suggestion. But, as it proved, her small brother, Bob, was in possession of the hammock, and he remained for two hours, enlivening the occasion by describing the exploits of the ball team.

An ear splitting whistle in the rear of the house relieved them at length of Bob's company. Without delay Jimmy plunged into the subject uppermost in his mind.

"Carroll, there's something I want to say to you"—

"Carroll, Mrs. Baker is ready for you," said Marie's voice behind the parlor shutters. That she had been waiting there, biding her time, Jimmy could not doubt. Then the gate clicked, and Mr. Reynolds came up the walk. He settled himself in the chair Carroll had vacated, and he and Jimmy talked politics till dinner time.

The young man refused an invitation to remain to dinner. He went away with a lowering brow and a heavy heart. But at half past 9 that evening the telephone bell rang, interrupting a game of bridge going on in the den. Carroll, who was nearest to the insistent instrument, pushed back her chair and went to answer the summons.

"Hello—hello! Oh, yes, this is Carroll." She turned a pretty, flushed face toward the three at the card table. "Please don't talk for a minute. I can't hear."

The next minute she heard very distinctly, for the room had become absolutely still, and the voice at the other end of the wire was clear and penetrating.

"This is Jimmy, Carroll. There's something I've been trying to say to you for three months. And I'm going to say it now."

"Why, I don't see"—

"Well, it doesn't matter whether you see or not. Just listen. Ever since I met you on Phil Reynolds' yacht a year ago I've loved you—from the very first hour."

"Oh, hush!"

"I'm not going to hush. I think about you every minute while I'm awake and dream about you when I'm asleep I'm not any good any more, and I shan't be till I find out whether you care for me or not. And if you don't I'm going to the Philippines or somewhere."

"Don't talk so loud."

"I don't care who hears me. I've kept it to myself just as long as I can. Carroll, darling, can't you care for me a little?"

"Sh! Come tomorrow."

"I'll come tomorrow fast enough if you tell me what I want to hear. Haven't I been coming day after day for months without getting a chance to tell you that I love the very ground you walk on? And now I've got it I'm going to wait till you say yes or no. If you can't love me I might as well"—

Abruptly the voice ceased. Carroll waited expectantly. Then a terrible suspicion flashed through her mind which in a moment had become a certainty. Tremulously she accused the operator, "You've cut me off."

"What number do you want?" replied that young woman.

"Oh, I don't know. I haven't any idea. Oh, why did you cut me off just then?"

The trio at the card table were staring at her strangely. "How absurdly you are acting, Carroll," exclaimed Marie sharply. "Come and finish the game."

"Yes, come and finish the game, Carroll," said her father. "The other matter can be settled another time, I hope."

"We've got 'em on the run, Miss Carroll," chuckled George Freeman, who happened to be Carroll's partner.

Slowly the girl moved toward her place. What would Jimmy think? Perhaps he would believe that she had deliberately hung up the receiver, preferring this way of giving him his answer. And he had spoken of the Philippines. She grew a little dizzy and groped for her chair.

Just at that moment the telephone rang again, and Carroll bounded toward it, her agility in surprising contrast to her late uncertainty and feebleness.

"Hello! Hello!"

"Hello, Jimmy. I will. I mean I do."

A long pause. "I suppose it's too late for me to come up this evening," suggested Jimmy tentatively.

"Of course not. Only hurry." She hung up the receiver and turned a radiant face. Again Marie looked suspicious.

"That must have been a very important conversation," she said scathingly. "I hope it's settled now."

Carroll answered her with a dignity in which there was no suggestion of the downtrodden younger sister.

"It is," she replied. "Jimmy and I are engaged."

His Rivals.

In Turkey it often happens that marriages are arranged affairs—arranged by the parents of the man and the woman. Such was the case, says Demetra Vaka in Haremlik, with Halil Bey and his bride. They had never seen each other, and at first it did not look as if the match would be a good one, since the lady was buried deep in German philosophies, in which the gentleman had little interest.

By the time I had parted from Halil Bey's fiancee I was so filled up with high ideals that I kept thinking, "Poor Halil Bey!"

The next morning I found Halil Bey in the garden, very impatient to hear all about his fiancee.

"Tell me," he cried out as soon as we had shaken hands, "is she beautiful?"

"Very," I answered, "but, my poor boy, she is crazy over Kant and Schopenhauer."

"Who are they?" he bellowed, thunder in his voice and fire in his eyes. "Tell me quick, and I will draw every drop of blood from their veins!"

"I have no doubt," I said, "that in a fist to fist encounter you would have the best of them, but they are both dead and gone, and only their miserable books are left to fight against."

"Oh," he laughed, "is that all? I think I can take care of that."

As events turned out, he did.

The Restful Life.

"We must live rhythmically if we would live healthfully," writes Grace Dawson in "How to Rest and Be Rested." "To live rhythmically we must not always strain tense nerves and muscles. We must learn to relax, that we may know how to economize our nervous and muscular power, so that some part of us will always be resting while another is at work. This is living by the law of rhythm. It is the secret of working tirelessly, resting restfully, resisting disease, throwing off morbid feelings, of living healthfully and feeling zest and enjoyment in our lives."

We are living unrhythmically "when we lie awake in the night with harassed, with anxious, worrying thoughts; when we rush to the station in great anxiety and reach it in such good time that we catch the train before the one we went for; whenever we get a feeling of being 'rushed' or 'driven' or 'tied to time.'"

THIS IS THE 623RD DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

INDEPENDENCE THE SOURCE OF PARTY STRENGTH.

There could be no stronger evidence of the slavish partisanship that permeates and dominates Sir Wilfrid's parliamentary following than their abject astonishment and inability to understand independence within a political party. That government members would differ from their party leaders on a question of policy, publicly express that difference, and yet remain honored and trusted members of their party, cannot be understood by men educated in the school of Laurier, where party replaces principle and the leader's command is his follower's policy.

The strength of the Conservative party is the strong, independent individuality of its members. They were elected in spite of the resources of the Laurier Government, because of the recognition by the voters of their sincerity, honesty and independence. Independence within a party is much more effective in forming good policies and honest administration than independence without a political party. The moral tone given to public life by Sir Robert Borden and the late Sir James Whitney is shown in the strength of character and rugged independence of their followers.

Sir Robert Borden's great strength is his own unimpeachable honesty and his recognition of the right of his supporters to think, decide and act as individuals, not as members of a partisan party. The members in return have more than once shown their trust and regard for the Premier. On every occasion when great problems had to be solved and diverse opinions prevailed, the trust of the party in Sir Robert was always demonstrated. "We trust Sir Robert; we know he will do what is right," was the sentiment of the strongest and most independent of his followers and that trust was never given in vain.

There has never been in a Canadian Parliament a party with such independent members as that of the present government. It is that spirit that makes the government strong, bold, courageous and honest. There are no professional politicians in the Conservative federal parliamentary party, and therefore the country's welfare is always the first consideration—party comes afterwards.

NO INVESTIGATION UNDER GRIT RULE.

The following is not the only instance under Grit rule that investigation into wrongdoing by Liberals has been refused, when charges levied against the party have been made. It frequently occurred under the Laurier Administration, and also under the Liberal Governments of Ontario.

"A telegram from Edmonton of the 14th inst. says: "The legislature this afternoon by a vote of 32 to 14 declined to ask the Lieutenant-Governor to grant a Royal Commission to investigate the thrice-preferred charges of Dr. Stanley, Conservative member of High River, against Attorney General Cross and the liquor branch of his department."

Contrast this Liberal policy with that of the Borden Conservative Government. No sooner were charges made against grafters in connection with the purchase of war supplies, than independent investigations were ordered, resulting in the punishment of offenders when found guilty.

Liberals howl when in Opposition for investigations into every charge made against their opponents, whether of a trivial or serious character, but when bona fide charges are preferred against themselves, no matter how well founded, the telegram quoted above indicates how they are treated.

* * *

Montreal Gazette: Two leaders of the trades union movement in Scotland have been sentenced to serve terms in jail for promoting a strike among war supply workers. The event will come to them as a tremendous surprise. For a long time one class of politicians has won popularity and profit by preaching to the organized workers that whatever they wanted they could get by sticking together. Acting on the theory the interested classes got much. The prophets had only considered fair weather signs, however. In a storm, when cheap politicians found their right level, it has been shown that the whole community is stronger than any section of its membership.

An unpleasant incident occurred in the Ontario Legislature on Friday afternoon, when Mr. Gustave Evanturel, the member for Prescott, replied to a recent statement by Mr. R. R. Gamey, the member for Manitoulin, to the effect that French-Canadians had not recruited as well as the English-speaking citizens of Canada. Mr. Evanturel said he had figures which showed that 60 per cent. of the 33,000 men in the first contingent were British born, and that the response of the French-Canadians was almost as good as the response of the native born English-speaking Canadians.

The British Government, after consultation with its Allies, has issued a decree modifying Marine International Law as laid down in the Declaration of London of 1909. The modification will be effective during the present war. Henceforth merchandise, whether absolutely or conditional, will be subject to capture by the mere fact of its enemy destination, whether it is sent by direct or indirect manifest or is concealed. Further, no ship or cargo will be exempt from capture for violation of the blockade simply because that at the time it was examined it was apparently on its way to an unblockaded port.

The largest single dock inclosed by artificial walls in Great Britain is at Newport, Monmouthshire. Its total water area is 110 acres and its dimensions 1,000 feet long by about 1,000 feet wide.

Germany, charged with the Sussex crime, pleads not guilty. Therefore it is announced at Berlin that the incident is closed. How convenient if every person charged with a crime could close the incident with a plea of not guilty.—Hamilton Herald.

Canada was saved in 1812, says Lavergne, whilst the English were hiding in the woods. Similarly, some one will get up in the year 2012 or thereabouts and point out that the Germans were defeated in 1916 by Colonel Lavergne whilst Kitchener was hiding in the London Underground Railway. And the real trouble is that we haven't a doubt that history on this plan is taught in the kind of school Lavergne is so anxious to wish onto Ontario.—Tattler.

Here is another sample of the kind of history they are taught: Bourassa says: "The English of all parties and schools have allowed Prussia to slay or despoil all her victims, Poland, Denmark, Austria and France. In most of these attacks upon the liberties of peoples, England was the actual accomplice of Prussia; in all of them, her moral accomplice." The average educated man knows that Poland was divided between Prussia, Russia and Austria, and that England had nothing to do with it. As to the Prussian wars of the 60's and 1870, England was in no way involved in any of them. It is hardly fair to suppose that Bourassa is wantonly stating what he knows to be falsehoods. He has merely been ill-taught. Just the same, this mass of misinformation is the most damning indictment that can be raised against the adoption outside this unhappy province of the system of teaching which makes it possible.—Weekly Tattler.

Sam Nearer Every Minute

The Minister of Militia hurried back on a swift ship to the biggest fight of his career. We feel like giving three cheers when we think of it. Here is the true blue Canadian if there ever was one. He spoke right up for his friend, believing him to be an honest man—perhaps Colonel Allison IS honest for anything we know. We are entirely convinced that Sir Sam Hughes is, and if he has made a mistake in backing Allison, none the less we admire his pluck in sticking to his guns despite the yelpings of the little yellow mongrels. We know, as surely as we know that the year is at the Spring, that Sam is straight, and when the Kytes and the Carvells and the Pugsleys and the rest of the sweepings of envy and convicted incompetence are thrown into the discard they belong to, the name of Sir Sam Hughes will fill a fine page of his country's history.

Sam's Real Crimes

Since when has it been a crime for a man to be impulsive and even imprudent? Since when has it been a crime for a man to believe that other men were honest and to act on that belief? Yet these, above all, are the crimes that Sam Hughes is charged with. The jackals are trying to pull the lion down, and the fight that will proceed shortly in Ottawa will be one of the most heartening things Canadians have seen for a decade. And that the man who raised the name of Canada high in the eyes of the Empire, shall go down to defeat at the hands of a bunch of blatherskites is utterly unthinkable.—The Weekly Tattler.

MEXICO CITY POLICE.

Always Ready at Night to Answer a Clap of the Hands.

In Mexico City each of the 5,000 police who won for it the reputation of the most thoroughly patrolled city in the world carries a lantern underneath his cape. After a certain hour, when traffic has virtually ceased, the policemen put their lanterns in the middle of the roadways at the intersections of the streets.

Then they go into the nearest doorway, sit down and prepare to spend the rest of the night at their ease. If you want a policeman you simply step out on the sidewalk and clap your hands. Immediately with the suddenness of genii one appears from either side. Handclapping, by the way, is the universal method of attracting attention in Mexico. To insure wakefulness on the part of the police any one who brings a lantern or a policeman's cap to the nearest police station gets $5, which is deducted from the negligent patrolman's monthly pay.

In some cities the system of "keeping tab" on policemen is different. Every hour the sergeant at the station goes to the door and blows his whistle. The man on the nearest beat immediately responds. Number two follows, and so the whistle passes through the entire force and comes back to the station. If one whistle is missing the man who has the preceding beat investigates and reports at headquarters. The speed with which the hour can be blown and the watchfulness of the force determined is astonishing.

A Cabin From a Redwood Log.

There is a cabin in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, which is constructed of a single log of redwood. It is about twelve feet long and rests upon a heavy platform of timbers which support the weight of the hollowed log. A doorway about five feet high and eighteen inches wide admits visitors to the interior, which forms a fair sized room. The appearance of the cabin is striking because the front presents a cross section of a large redwood tree with the bark intact.—Popular Science Monthly.

Learning Spanish.

Spanish is the simplest language to learn in the world and commercially it is one of the most valuable. Six months' tuition should enable the average person to acquire a sufficient knowledge of Spanish for business purposes. It is quite simple, too, to compose an ordinary business letter in this language at the end of that period. One fact that makes the language so easy to English speaking people is that Spanish is pronounced exactly as it is spelt, there are no accents to trouble about, and the letter "h" is always silent. It is far easier to learn than French, and a knowledge of Latin helps one considerably.—London Globe.

Paying Calls In Russia.

Town life in Russia is as different as can be from life in the country districts. One curious custom is the after dinner call. People call on their friends after dinner at night or even after the theater, paying calls at midnight being quite the thing to do. The Russian dinner always begins with a sideboard course of cold meats, hors d'oeuvres, etc.—that is to say, the dishes are laid out on the sideboard and the guests help themselves before sitting down to partake of the regular meal. It is from this custom that we derive the term "service a la Russe" as applied to dinners at which the carving is done from the sideboard.—London Answers.

Conservation.

"And," continued the lecturer, "I warrant you that there is not a man in this entire audience who has ever lifted his finger or in any way attended to stop this awful waste of our forests and our lumber supply. If there is I want that man to stand up."

There was a slight commotion in the rear of the room, and a nervous little man rose to the occasion—and his feet.

"And now, my friend, will you explain in just what way you have conserved the forests of our nation?"

And with the utmost gravity and sincerity the little man said, "I have used the same toothpick twice."

HAULED THE STONES.

Veteran Ottawa Man Recalls Building of Parliament House.

The destruction of the Canadian House of Parliament has awakened recollections of its building, in the mind of Peter Redmond, a retired locomotive engineer, who saw King Edward lay its foundation stone in 1860.

When construction work was first started Mr. Redmond was employed as a fireman on the Ottawa and St. Lawrence railroad, and he was promoted to engineer a few days before the first material for the structure was hauled to Ottawa. One train crew was employed for three summers, hauling sandstone and quarry rock from Prescott, where it was landed from the steamers on the St. Lawrence river.

The train made a round trip each day. The first stone used in the building came from quarries located where the main part of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, now stands. It was shipped by water to Prescott, where it was loaded from the boats onto the railway cars by large cranes.

Mr. Redmond's train did nothing else during three summers but haul the stone. "It required two cars and sometimes three for each piece of stone that was moved to Ottawa," Mr. Redmond said yesterday. "The smallest stone that was hauled by the railroad weighed three tons, and the average weight was about five tons. We moved two stones which weighed nine tons each. I believe they were the largest that were put into the building.

"Owing to the excessive weight on the cars, which were much lighter than the steel cars now in use on the railroads, it was necessary to run our engines slowly. We seldom went over eighteen miles an hour, and as a rule the fastest time we made was fifteen miles."

No iron or steel was used in those days for the springs on the cars. Solid rubber was used, for the most part, and the cars were loaded so heavy that at the end of each trip new springs had to be put in most of the cars.

"Our train was given the right-of-way over all other trains. This was principally because of the heavy train we hauled. We were permitted to stop only in case of necessity. The necessity came frequently and was caused mostly by the excessive weight on the trucks, which resulted in many hot boxes.

"My train brought out the first shipment of rock and stone and stone cutters' tools. The first part of the building erected was a massive wall, over 500 feet long. It was on the end of this wall that the Prince of Wales laid the cornerstone. Thousands of people witnessed the laying of the stone, and I had an opportunity to shake hands with the Prince, as did many of the workmen.

"The wall, when first built, was a crude affair, but after the workmen finished polishing it, and fixing it up, it was one of the finest pieces of work of that kind that I have ever seen. It was five feet high and several inches in thickness."

"The Prince of Wales at that time was about twenty years old. He was a fine looking fellow; much better looking than his brother, the Duke of Edinborough, who visited Canada a year later.

"There were no big functions for the duke. He visited about the country for a few months and he went away without any great fuss being made about him. He was not a very good looking man. Many of the farmer boys were much better.

"A few years ago I saw Barney Riley, the Irish ski rider from Boyey, Minn., who was born and raised here, and I thought that I was back in Ottawa at the time the duke was there. Barney and the duke were as much alike as any two men could be, in appearance, form, and looks."

Unhealthy to Oppose Canadians.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, Special Correspondent, writing from the British Field Headquarters, says:

"For a variety of reasons I fancy it must be nerve-racking to be on the opposite side of the way to the Canadians in Flanders. They are most quiet, they are most dangerous. They are not only inspired by a restless audacity, but they are cunning and so methodical that they will undertake what seems like a wildcat adventure with certain death at the end of it and get back with hardly a scratch. They have brought the spirit of the trapper to the trenches, and they are very patient in marking down their prey.

"So it was in a recent 'cutting-out' raid, when a party of them, all volunteers, went out one night with the astounding intention of getting through the barbed wire outside one of the strongest German positions. For a small party to get back again from a trench full of Germans and machine-guns is not so easy as escaping from a jungle of man-eating tigers, and was not considered part of the program of war before the Canadians gave their exhibition. It was so successful that General Joffre has circulated an account of the Canadians' exploits as a model to the French army. After taking some prisoners and killing about 30 men, they came home again with only two casualties, one caused by accident. To men who know the conditions of trench warfare this exploit still seems fantastic and incredible. It was possible only because these Canadians had made cunning of more importance than courage itself, and had adapted old lessons of Red Indian warfare to these new conditions of modern fighting."

Deluged With Applications.

While recruiting is going on briskly throughout the country and the various units are being filled up in the regular way by applying to commanding officers of each battalion, the Department of Militia and Defence is deluged with direct applications for positions of paymaster, chaplain, or quartermaster in the Canadian expeditionary force. The number of applications is already far in excess of vacancies.

THE REAL MYSTERY OF THE CASE.

By GEORGE A. PARKER.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

We detectives have opportunities to see further into human nature than any class of men, except physicians, and I am not sure but that our opportunities are superior to theirs. One of the strangest insights that were ever accorded me came through the Gilbert case. I was called one day to the house of Joseph Gilbert, whose son Edgar had been taken suddenly ill after smoking a cigar. It was one of a small package received anonymously. An analysis showed that the cigars had been steeped in a deadly poison.

The young man was unconscious of having an enemy. I questioned him closely, asking him to mention any one who might have the slightest motive to injure him. I inquired as to his relations with the softer sex, and he told me that he had had several mild affairs of the heart, but none of them, at least on his part or so far as he could judge of the girls' either, had ever amounted to anything serious.

I left the remaining cigars on a table in the smoking room, establishing a watch upon them, thinking that if the enemy was a member of the household he or she would attempt to remove them. But after they had been there a week I took them away. I compared the handwriting on the package with that of every correspondent Edgar Gilbert furnished me, and those he did not have be procured on some pretext. I could see no resemblance in any of them to that of the address. None of the expedients I tried afforded me the slightest clew. At last I gave up the case, acknowledging myself beaten.

A year later I received a note from Mr. Gilbert, Sr., informing me that his son was about to be married; that the young man's mother had all sorts of vague apprehensions that some woman had tried to poison him through jealousy and she desired I would keep watch over him until the ceremony had been performed and his safety seemed to be assured.

I called at the house and was accorded an interview with Edgar Gilbert and his fiancee, Miss Withers, both happening to be there together. The moment the girl looked me in the eye a suspicion came over me that I had found the person who had tried to poison Edgar Gilbert. How or why I divined this I cannot explain, even to myself. She knew what I was there for and seemed interested in my protecting her lover. There was no betrayal of emotion, no shrinking toward me, no disposition to avoid my gaze.

But what a position I was in—my client about to marry a girl who I felt sure had tried to poison him and I not having a shadow of proof by which to prevent him! The wedding was to take place in three days. I must make haste.

Learning that a sewing woman was employed in the house of Miss Withers, I paid her well to secure me a specimen of the handwriting of every woman in the house and those who were the bride's bosom friends. There were three of the former and two of the latter. In the handwriting of the bride expectant's most intimate friend I found a chirography identical with the address on the package. Making the lady's acquaintance, I satisfied myself that she had only addressed the package as a favor and had no remembrance of having done so. From her I learned that young Gilbert's fiancee had at the time the cigars were sent received his attention, and he had jilted her, causing her great unhappiness. At that period, too, she was ill.

I learned all this without giving up any knowledge whatever. I was puzzled whether to stop the marriage or let it go on. After reflection I decided to shift the responsibility. Learning the name of Miss Withers' physician, I told him the story. He was greatly astonished, but soon recalled the fact that during the period of the attempted murder he had attended Miss Withers and had observed certain indications of a temporary aberration of mind. Indeed, for a brief season he had kept her under a strict watch. When the physical cause of the trouble passed away the tendency to insanity passed with it.

The doctor transmitted my report to the father of the groom, and so late as the day before the wedding was to come off a consultation was held between the parent and the physician, at which it was decided to call in the young man and impart to him the situation.

He suffered a terrible shock. He was about to rush away to confront the girl he was to marry the next morning with the accusation when his father stopped him, and the doctor explained that she might possibly be unconscious of ever having committed the crime. An accusation, especially at such a time, might be attended with serious effects. Before the conference was ended the young man decided, with his father's consent, that the marriage should take place without any postponement.

The doctor was to discover whether the bride was conscious of her act and promised to inform me of the result of his investigation. His report was that she had no consciousness of it whatever.

What was it that conveyed the information of it to me? That is a mystery I have never solved.

A Gambling Episode.

[Original.]

Half a century ago what is now the middle west was the far west. Parts of Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky were inhabited by a very rough people. I went out there to sell goods when I was a very young man, being about the first salesman to visit the region. Of course I traveled armed and kept my money in a money belt strapped around my waist. I was rather a lively boy and not averse at times to a small game while traveling. Indeed, I carried a pack of cards and dice.

One evening I was on a stagecoach that pulled up at a tavern in a small town in Kentucky on the Ohio river. I had gone there to take the first steamboat that would pass up to Cincinnati, where I could take a railroad train for the east. No one could tell just when a boat would stop there, and I had the prospect of a dreary time ahead of me. In those days in that region gambling was open on the boats and in the taverns. During the evening of my arrival I watched a party of men shaking dice in the bar, which was in the same room with the office. The next day I spent my time watching for a steamboat. A number of boats passed, but none of them had freight or passengers for that landing, for they did not stop. In the evening I went in and watched the dice throwers.

Now, I defy any young man of ordinary spirit spending his time in such a place watching a game without longing to be in it. I resisted for some time, for the men were a bad looking lot, then pulled out some coins and called for the dice box in my turn. I played far into the night and when I got up from the table had parted with every cent of money I had for my expenses, some $300. I was not quite so much of a fool as this confession indicates, for I had noticed that my opponents knew exactly how to roll the dice so that the figures they wished should come up. Besides, I was not especially timid. When cleaned out I reached for the dice and put them in my pocket. The men who had won my money looked threatening, but said nothing. To object would have been to confess that they were loaded. I had no idea of recovering my money by an exposure. I wished to satisfy myself as to whether I had been swindled.

Taking my candle, I went upstairs and to bed. Undressing, I threw my trousers on the back of a chair, not thinking, since I had lost all my money, to take any precautions for their safety, but I didn't care to lose the dice till after I had a chance to break them, so I took them from the pocket and replaced them with my own set; then I went to bed and to sleep.

I was awakened during the night by some one tampering with my door. I lay still and presently heard the door open and a stealthy step in my room. A figure passed the window, and I could hear it searching among my clothes; then it went out. I got up, felt in my trousers' pocket for my dice, and they were gone.

The next morning I was not especially surprised to see some of the men who had my money still about the place. Had they not, as they supposed, secured the dice they would have got out of the way. After breakfast I told the landlord that I suspected that I had been swindled with loaded dice. He professed to be very indignant and swore that if such were the case he would make the men who had won my money disgorge. I told him to call them in and I would prove my charge. They came, and I could see by their assumed indignation that they were confident that they had their dice and I could prove nothing.

After they had expended sufficient verbal ammunition they called upon me to give a reason for assuming that the dice they had played with were loaded. I asked the landlord for a hammer, and when he had produced it I put my hand in my pocket and pulled out the dice I had kept under my pillow.

"Hold on," said one of them. "Those are not the dice."

"Why so?" I asked.

"Because"— He stopped short. He couldn't own that I had been robbed of a set of dice.

"Crack 'em," I said to the landlord.

Reluctantly he put one of them down on the hearthstone and cracked it. There was the lead plain enough.

The men and the landlord stared at one another, surprised. Meanwhile I had backed to a safe position and had my hand on my pistol. Hearing the stroke of a steamboat bell—a signal to bank fires—I knew that a boat was about to land.

"You men produce my money," I said, "or I'll see what I can do when that boat lands."

The landlord was in no mood for the reputation such a charge would give his place, and after a few words with the others he returned me my losings.

I don't think I should have had the courage to demand my money had I not heard that stroke of a steamboat bell. It came in the nick of time. I stuffed the funds into my pocket, ran upstairs for my belongings and down again, keeping a sharp lookout and my hand on my pistol. Then before going to the landing I said: "You've done the right thing. Never fear that I'll peach on you." The men who had disgorged looked very ugly, but as I could be seen by those on the boat going from the tavern to the landing I felt safe to walk there with my back to those who I knew under other circumstances would shoot me.

GEORGE DISNEY MILLS.

THE MISSING NOTE.

By LESTER DILLON.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

There was a period in England when the crime of stealing or forging a banknote was punishable with death. At this time there lived in Devonshire Sir Bryan Trevelyn. His estate was large, and on it were many tenants. He had but one child, a daughter Gladys, who would inherit his property, and between her and Edgar Cornish, the son of a clergyman, had sprung up an ardent love. Sir Bryan opposed the match, having higher intentions for his daughter, but she was a girl of firm disposition and gave him reason to suppose that if he did not give his consent to the match she would make a trip with her lover to Gretna Green. Fearing this, he consented, and that his future son-in-law might learn to manage the estate Gladys would inherit he made him his secretary and accountant.

One rent day Sir Bryan and his secretary were receiving the rents. When the last tenant had gone the former, leaving a fifty pound banknote on his desk, left the room for a paper he needed. On his return the note was gone. He looked for it everywhere, assisted by his secretary, but it was not to be found.

Sir Bryan went to bed that night convinced that the man who was to be his son-in-law had stolen the note. Opposed to him before, he now became determined that a thief should not marry his daughter and inherit his property. However, the next morning he had a thorough search made of the room in which the note had disappeared. It was not found, and Sir Bryan, despite the pleadings of his wife and daughter, gave young Cornish over to the authorities, preferring against him a charge of theft.

The courts in those days were not the complicated affairs they are now. The accuser stood high in the county, and his word was a power. He told the magistrate his story. He and Cornish were in the room alone together. Sir Bryan went out for a few minutes, leaving the note on his desk. No one entered during his absence. On his return the note was missing. Since inanimate articles cannot remove themselves it must have been appropriated by the only living person present. It was not found on Cornish's person, but he was not searched till he was arrested. He had had ample time to dispose of it. There was no defense made, for there was nothing on which to base a defense. The crime was committed in midsummer, and since the courts were not given in those days to spending much time over the cases that came before them the trial was concluded and sentence passed before September. Cornish was sentenced to be hanged on the first Friday in October.

Naturally every one connected with the condemned was wrapped in gloom. The lovers who had anticipations of a happy union now had before them a separation by death. Lady Trevelyn shut herself up with her daughter and would have no communication with her husband, blaming him for the horror he had brought upon his family.

It was now too late to recall what he had done. The law must take its course. Preparations were being made for the execution, and the people, as was the custom in those days, were flocking in for the spectacle.

A few days before the expected tragedy a cold rain and fog, the first of autumn, swept over England. The baron, who sought to distract his thoughts by occupying himself with his accounts, sent for a sweep to take the soot out of the chimney of his office preparatory to building a fire on the hearth. While the sweep was at work Sir Bryan entered the room, sat down at his desk and busied himself with his papers. So preoccupied was he, rather with his somber thoughts than his work, that he did not hear any sound within or without.

Suddenly he was recalled to his surroundings by a cough directly in front of him. Looking up, there stood a figure black as Erebus. It was the chimney sweep, whose extended hand held a small piece of paper so smudged with soot that its character could not be readily recognized. The baron mechanically took it and examined it. A sudden light came into his eye, a color into his cheek. It was the missing note. The sweep had found it in the chimney, where, carried by a draft of air when Sir Bryan had opened the door, it had remained ever since.

Like a cyclone of joy the baron swept through the house and stood beating on the door of the room where his wife and daughter had shut themselves in, crying: "The note! It is found! The boy is saved!" The door was flung open, and the old man rushed in brandishing the smudged note above his head. Then, when the situation was understood, Gladys fell into her father's arms in a faint.

Leaving her with her mother, the baron rushed to the house of the magistrate and before leaving had secured an order for the release of Edgar Cornish. The news spread, and when the released prisoner left the jail he was attended by a crowd of citizens. He had not proceeded far when he was met by Gladys Trevelyn, and their meeting was greeted by the shouts of the people.

Sir Bryan Trevelyn spent the rest of his life trying to atone for his fault. Had it not been for the sweeping of a chimney he would have caused the execution of an innocent man and blighted his daughter's life. As to the sweep, he swept no more. He was given the note he had found and lived for the rest of his life on the estate, enjoying a pension.

Production and Thrift

> "To win the war with the decisiveness which will ensure lasting peace, the Empire will require to put forth its full collective power in men and in money. From this viewpoint it is our true policy to augment our financial strength by multiplying our productive exertions and by exercising rigid economy, which reduces to the minimum all expenditures upon luxuries and non-essentials. Only in this way shall we be able to make good the loss caused by the withdrawal of so many of our workers from industrial activities, repair the wastage of the war, and find the funds for its continuance. It cannot be too frequently or too earnestly impressed upon our people that the heaviest burdens of the conflict still lie before us, and that industry and thrift are, for those who remain at home, supreme patriotic duties upon whose faithful fulfilment our success, and consequently our national safety, may ultimately depend."— > SIR THOMAS WHITE, Minister of Finance.

PRODUCE MORE, SAVE MORE.

MAKE LABOUR EFFICIENT.

SAVE MATERIALS FROM WASTE.

SPEND MONEY WISELY.

LET US PRODUCE AND SAVE—

The war is now turning on a contest of all forces and resources—men, munitions, food, money. The call to all is to produce more and more. It may be necessary to work harder. The place of those who enlist must be taken by those at home, men and women, old and young. The more we produce the more we can save. Produce more on the farms and in the gardens. Save more and help to win the war.

LET US NOT WASTE OUR LABOUR—

In this war-time all labour should be directly productive or should be assisting in production. Make it as efficient as possible. If your labour is on something that can be postponed, put it off till after the war and make your labour tell now. Making war is the first business of all Canadians. Efficiency in labour is as important as efficiency in fighting.

LET US NOT WASTE MATERIALS—

Begin at home. The larger portion of salaries and wages is spent on the home—food, fuel, light, clothing. Are any of these things being wasted? $20.00 a year saved from waste in every home in Canada will more than pay the interest on a war debt of $500,000,000.

LET US SPEND OUR MONEY WISELY—

Are you spending your money to the best advantage? What do you think of extravagance in war time? Tens of thousands of Canadians are daily risking their lives for us at home. Is it not our duty to be careful and economical? Canadian dollars are an important part of the war equipment. Make them tell. Have a War Savings Account. Buy a War Bond.

LUCK IN A MISTAKE.

When the Famous Singer Albani First Went to London.

The curious story of Mme. Albani's first London engagement is as follows. Colonel Mapleson heard of her singing at a theater at Malta, and, thinking that she would be successful, he made her an offer through an agent of a contract to sing in Her Majesty's theater. She agreed to it and went to London, but on arriving there she told the cabman to drive her to the Italian opera house.

He, instead of going to Her Majesty's, took her to Covent Garden, which was also devoted to Italian opera. She was shown up to the manager's office and stated that she had come to sign the contract which Mr. Mapleson had offered her.

Mr. Gye, thinking to play a joke on his rival, Mapleson, made out a contract, and Albani signed it. Mr. Gye then told her that he was not Colonel Mapleson, but that he could do much better by her. He offered to tear up the contract if she liked, but told her that Nilsson was singing at Her Majesty's and would brook no rival.

Albani decided to let the contract stand and thus became one of the stars of Covent Garden, eventually marrying the son of Mr. Gye.—Westminster Gazette.

To Change Departments.

Legislation involving the partial rearrangement of one or two departments of the Government is to be brought down at Ottawa this session. The bill has not yet been drafted, but its principal provision, it is understood, will be to effect the transfer of the patent and copyrights branches from the Department of Agriculture to one of the other departments, probably that of Customs.

This rearrangement would leave the Department of Agriculture free to devote all its energies to the development of the industry of agriculture. There are now a considerable number of branches of the department which are specializing on various features of agricultural development and the work of these branches has increased materially during the last few years. The administration of the patent law and the laws respecting copyright and trade marks has been part of the work of the Department of Agriculture for many years, but the arrangement has been regarded for a long time as an anomalous one.

It is understood that Mr. G. F. O'Halloran, the present Deputy Minister of Agriculture, will preside over the branches in the new department to which they are to be transferred.

"Mount St. Robert" N[illegible]

The Geographic Board of Canada has perpetuated the name and fame of Sir Robert Borden for as long as the topography of the Dominion lasts. In the official records of new decisions by the board the name "Sir Robert" is given to a mountain in the British Columbia coast range, nine miles southeast from Doreen station. At the foot of the mountain there is a glacier, and this glacier has been called "Borden."

The official record also describes the new mountain "Cavell," named after the martyred heroine of Brussels, as "a prominent, isolated, snow-clad peak, 11,033 feet above sea level, distinctly visible from Jasper, in the Jasper Park of the Rocky Mountains, along the Grand Trunk Pacific."

Lt. Birkett, who commands a Russian platoon in the 80th Battalion, has left the hospital and is now at the home of his parents. He will hardly be able to go overseas with the 80th when the battalion goes, but he will join his unit later. The Russians of Mr. Birkett's platoon are devoted to him, and he to them, and the 80th Battalion are anxious to retain the services of so good and efficient an officer.

The 80th Battalion held a route march throughout the city this morning in heavy marching order. Both bands accompanied the battalion.

Capt. Wilson, A.D.D.S., has returned to this city after spending several days in Kingston.

Two men signed up with the 155th Battalion on Saturday night. Recruiting has somewhat slackened up during the last week.

A large and successful recruiting meeting was held in Trenton Opera House last evening. The speakers of the evening were Mr. Allen of Toronto, and Col. Ryden, O. C., of the 169th. Among those who attended the meeting from this city were Col. Adams, Major Allen, Major Cook and Lieut. Sandford of the 155th Battalion.

Col. Adams and Capt. Geen of the 155th Battalion left to-day for Kingston.

Lieut. Hamly of the 155th Battalion, Tweed was in the city over Sunday. This morning he reported for duty at Madoc.

The 155th Battalion will hold recruiting meetings at Frankford tonight, Stirling, to-morrow night and Wellman's Corners on Wednesday night. The 155th Band will be in attendance.

It is published for the information of all concerned that before any Italian citizen is enlisted into a unit of the Canadian Expeditionary Force he must be required to present to the recruiting officer a certificate from an Italian Consular Agency to the effect that he is exempt from military service in Italy or that he belongs to a class of reservists which has not been recalled. This certificate is of importance because it appears that the fact that an Italian reservist is serving in any of the armies of the Allied forces does not exempt him from penalty for desertion from the Italian army, and all Italian reservists belonging to any class, which has been called up must answer to the re-call, or they will be declared deserters and liable to penalty on their return to Italy.

CATHOLIC POPULATION IN UNITED STATES

Estimated There are 25,000,000 Under the American Flag

There are 16,564,109 Catholics in continental United States, according to advance sheets of the 1916 edition of the Official Catholic Directory. The increase in the number of Catholics during the year 1915 is shown to be 254,799.

To the figures 16,564,109 should be added, according to Joseph H. Meier, the compiler, at least 1,656,410, representing the floating Catholic population of the United States.

Including the Catholics of the island possessions of the United States it is said there are 24,922,062 Catholics under the United States flag.

Twenty-six states have a Catholic population of more than 100,000, as follows:

New York, 2,893,223; Pennsylvania, 1,802,077; Illinios, 1, 479,291: Massachusetts, 1,400,834; Ohio, 903,102; Michigan, 597,000; New Jersey, 593,000; Louisiana, 586,400; Wisconsin, 577,823; California, 518,168; Missouri, 490,000; Minnesota, 470,361; Connecticut, 469,701; Texas, 412,190; Rhode Island, 275,000; Maryland, 261,000; Iowa, 257,400; Indiana, 249,426; Kentucky, 171,781; New Mexico, 140573; New Hampshire, 134,000; Maine, 131,638; Kansas, 126,980; Nebraska, 120,761; Colorado, 110,384; North Dakota, 103,471.

FORESAW HIS DOWNFALL.

Napoleon Had Planned to Secure a Home In This Country.

When Joseph Bonaparte left me, the impression on my mind was that had he not been Napoleon's brother he would have passed for a very remarkable man.

I had almost forgot to mention that the conversation having incidentally turned toward his chateau at Bordentown he mentioned as the principal reason for choosing that situation a conversation with Napoleon, I think immediately or not long after Napeleon's return from Russia. They were alone together, and his brother, laying a large map of the United States on a table, said:

"'Joseph, it is very probable that the time is not distant when you and I will be forced to seek an asylum in the United States. Come, let us look out the best spot.'

"After a careful examination they decided that the most desirable place was somewhere between the Delaware and Hudson in the state of New Jersey. Napoleon was destined to a slow and painful sacrifice, but Joseph found refuge in the United States and was governed in his selection of a home by the recollection of the prophetic interview with his brother."—From an Unpublished Manuscript of James K. BANANAS AS FOOD.

The Best Way to Serve Them Is Baked When Full Ripe.

Children under three years of age do not chew their food thoroughly; they bolt it. For this reason they should not have bananas to eat uncooked. Bananas are nutritious, but they are an indigestible food unless they are well masticated. They are more easily digested when cooked than when eaten raw.

The most digestible form of cooked banana is the baked one. This is prepared first by washing the fruit, then cutting a small piece from each end of the bananas (as when preparing a sweet potato for baking). Place the bananas to be baked on a tin pie plate or similar dish in a hot oven. When they feel tender after pricking with a fork they are well baked. Dark brown or brown stained bananas (not the bright yellow ones) are best for eating, either raw or baked.

After the fruit is baked it is placed on a platter and served as a meat. It is not, however, turned out of the skin. When ready to eat it split the skin and banana lengthwise of the fruit; season it with salt, pepper and a little butter.

In warm weather baked bananas may be used to take the place of meat at a meal.

Girl A Nervous Wreck At Eleven Years Of Age

Was Tired Ont, Pale and Sallow—Would Tremble Till the Bed Would Shake—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured Her

In the schools of to-day there is found an alarming proportion of weak, nervous children who have little chance of developing into healthy, useful men and women. Nature requires the assistance of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help them over a trying period and set them on their feet.

There would be fewer wearing glasses if the nerves were invigorated, less irritation in the school and home, more robust health and a greater pleasure in the school tasks.

This letter bears a cheering message to parents whose children are weak, puny and nervous. It shows you what may be expected from the use of this great restorative.

Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes:

"My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy, and her complexion grew pale and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and have somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes improvement was noticeable, and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether and they cured her. She got fat and rosy, and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

Must Continue Building Ships

To Offset Loss Through Undersea—Cabinet to Repair Wastage

LONDON, April 15.—The weekly returns of vessels sunk by mines or torpedoes show an increasing number. During the week ended Thursday, according to the well-known shipping journal Fairplay, thirty-three vessels with a gross tonnage of 85,045 were reported sunk by submarines and mines. This is in addition to the 2,201,823 tons of shipping previously reported in that journal as having been sunk.

In discussing this loss the parliamentary correspondent of the Chronicle says: "The question of general compulsion is entirely overshadowed by the much more vital problem of merchant tonnage. There is no disguising the fact that German submarines have levied a heavy toll on our merchant shipping in the last three weeks, though the main cause for the shortage in tonnage is still ascribable to the heavy demands made by our numerous overseas expeditions.

"It has been demonstrated that the navy and army are wasteful in the use of requisitioned tonnage, while the cabinet is insisting on economy in this direction. While economy in the use of ships will do something to ease the situation, we need to repair the wastage and meet the ever-increasing demand for a larger shipbuilding programme. Considerably more than a hundred merchant vessels in our yards have been held up for months because labor was not available. The cabinet is determined to have these vessels completed, and the necessary labor must be found for this purpose."

Heiress Passes Away in Havana, Where Eloper Took Her

NEW YORK, April 15.—Grace McLaughlin lies dead in some Havana hotel. By her death she cheated the man who had cheated her.

The girl possessed $250,000 inherited from her father, George Stevens, who lured the tubercular girl away, knew this. He was the garage man with whom the twenty-six-year-old invalid had kept with the car she bought in the hope that it would restore her health. She knew little of men. Stevens taught her all she knew.

Four months ago they eloped. The girl knew that Stevens had been baptized a Catholic a few days before they fled together. She did not know that the man had another wife living, in Massachusetts. He had been divorced from her, but under a "decree nisi," which provided that he could not marry again for six months. He cheated her by pretending to be free and ready to marry her when they eloped. She cheated him by dying six days before he could become her legal husband and heir to the $250,000.

HIGH SCHOOL'S DECISION

Bans High Heels, Face Powder and Low-neck Peekaboos

PATERSON, N.J., April 15.—Announcement was made today by Miss Caroline Hemmingway, assistant principal of the Paterson High School, that high heels, face powder and low-necked peekaboo waists were banished for ever from the school. While she denied the rumor that several feminine members of the student body had been sent home because of their having failed to attire themselves in a sufficiently modest manner, Miss Hemmingway was firm in her statement that she had openly disapproved of some of the "fashions" displayed at the school. Face powder, she said, was both unbecoming to the girls and injurious to their complexions. She said that in confidential talks with the girls she had tried to point this out and in many cases met with success.

"PADDLE" WAS USED ON UNRULY CONVICT

Arthur Bonnar, a Celebrated Prisoner, Punished for Bad Conduct

KINGSTON, April 15.—Arthur Bonnar, the notorious convict, who was recently brought back to the Portsmouth Penitentiary from Guelph, and who put up the bluff that he was insane, when it was merely a "frame-up" on his part, has been kicking up "high jinks" at the big prison, and as a result on Wednesday he was given a dose of punishment with the use of the "paddle," which caused so much comment at the time the investigation was held at the penitentiary.

Bonnar has been very unruly, and he got just what he deserved. Since receiving his punishment he has remained in bed and refuses to get up, but it is expected that he will be over his little tilt in a day or so.

TONSORIAL COLLEGE WAS SMALL BREWERY

MONTREAL, April 15.—That the "Barber's School," 321 Craig street west, which was gutted by fire on the night of March 16, was a small-sized brewery in disguise, was the decision reached by Judge Lanctot after hearing evidence in the police court yesterday. J. K. Boyer, who was the head master of the "Barber School," was found guilty of having on his premises more than one thousand gallons of liquid in a state of fermentation. He was condemned to a term of three months in jail or $100.

Boyer claimed that he had sold out his "Barber School" to a man named Joseph Dubois, who disappeared immediately after the firemen had made the discovery.

Newfoundland Prospers.

There is more money in circulation in Newfoundland and more being deposited in the banks than in any previous year in its history. So much, indeed, is this the case that the Canadian banks are opening several branches in important "outports" or principal fishing stations in the various bays. It is a noteworthy fact that in the twenty years that have elapsed since the famous bank disasters of 1895, which almost brought the Colony to the verge of ruin, the Canadian banks have paid out over their counters some three million dollars in gold, which has never come back, and is distributed all over the island to-day in every sort of receptacle and hiding place. Some of it, indeed, has been lost through the owners of the gold dying under circumstances which make it impossible for them to reveal to their heirs the secret hiding places in which it is deposited. The latest instance of this form of loss is that of a man on a fishing vessel returning from Labrador last month, which was beset by storms and foundered, the crew barely escaping with their lives. One of those on board stated that among the other property he lost was a bag containing $700 in gold, which he had in his seachest, and had been using in Labrador in connection with his fishing business. Only a few months previously another man lost $1,200 in gold through the burning of his house.

A Young Gilbertian.

Harry's little cousin had every toy known to the arts of toydom and to his doting parents. So, when his Indian suit showed signs of wear, it was replaced by a new one, and the discarded splendor was divided between Harry and another boy cousin. Harry drew the fringed and beaded trousers. At first he was radiant, but a glance at himself in the mirror quenched his joy.

"Oh, mother!" cried he in sorrow. "I'm nothing but a half breed."—New York Post.

YOUR BRONCHIAL TUBES

When a cold settles in the bronchial tubes, with that weakening, tickling cough, immediate treatment is very important. The breath seems shorter because of mucous obstructions; usually fever is present, your head jars with every cough and your chest may ache. This is no time for experimenting or delay—you must get Scott's Emulsion at once to drive out the cold which started the trouble, and it will check the cough by aiding the healing process of the enfeebled membranes.

If you have any symptoms of bronchitis, or even a stubborn cold, always remember that Scott's Emulsion has been relieving this trouble for forty years. It is free from harmful drugs. Refuse substitutes.

U. E. LOYALIST HOUSES.

Homes of Ontario Pioneers Were of the Most Primitive Sort.

The roof of the house, of the United Empire Loyalist pioneer in Ontario was composed of thick slabs, hollowed out in the form of shallow troughs, and these were laid alternately with the hollow sides up, the convex form of one over-lapping the edges of the concave forms of those on either side. There was an opening for a door, but no lumber was to be had at any price, unless it was sawed out by the tedious process of the whip-saw, so doors there were none; but a quilt hung over the opening served the purpose. Two small windows, one on either side of the door, admitted light to the dwelling. These windows would hold four or six seven-inch by nine-inch panes of glass, but many a settler had to content himself with well-oiled paper instead. The sash he whittled out with his pocket-knife. Sometimes there was no attempt at transparency; and the window was opened and closed by sliding a small piece of board, set in grooves, backwards and forwards across the aperture. The interstices between the logs were filled with sticks and moss, plastered over with clay. Thus the pioneer's house was complete, and not a nail or screw was used in its construction.

When lumber became available, a plank or thick board door took the place of the quilt in the doorway. This was fastened by a strong wooden latch on the inside. The latch was lifted from without by means of a leather string attached to it and passed through a hole a few inches above, and when the inmates of the house retired for the night, or did not wish to be molested, the string was pulled inside. The old saying, "the latch-string is out," was a figurative method of expressing a welcome, or saying "the door is not barred against you." The pioneers had big hearts, and to their credit it can be said the latch-string was rarely pulled in when a stranger sought a meal or a night's lodging.

If the family were large the attic was converted into a second room by carrying the walls up a log or two higher. Poles, flattened on both sides, were laid from side to side to serve as a ceiling to the room below and as a floor for the one above. A hole left in one corner gave admittance by means of a ladder, and one small window in the gable completed the upper room.

For the same reason that there was no door, there was precious little furniture. Some of the Loyalists brought with them from their former homes a few pieces—a grandfather's chair, a chest of drawers, or a favorite bedstead; but, as a rule, there was no furniture but such as was hewed out with a pocket-knive. A pocket-knife and a pen-knife were not the same. The former was a strong knife made to serve many useful purposes, while the latter was a small knife carried mainly for the purpose of shaping quill pens.

BREWSTER OF B. C.

Liberal Leader in Pacific Province Is Forging to the Front.

After years of discouraging toil and reverses, enough to dry up the enthusiasm and hope of most men, the Knight Solitaire of British Columbia public life, Harlan Carey Brewster, is passing out of the solitude and the shades, and is becoming an important figure in the politics of the Province. His victory in Victoria on March 4 over Hon. Alfred C. Flummerfelt, the recently-appointed Minister of Finance in the Bowser Administration, lifted him from nearly the bottom of the political ladder almost to the top.

Why "Knight Solitaire"? Because never did a mediaeval baron have to endure such lonesome fighting and ordeals without colleagues as did Mr. Brewster in the Legislature from 1910 to 1912. When he first entered the House in 1907 things weren't so bad. The Liberal Opposition at that time consisted of fourteen members, but by the end of 1910 it had shrunk to one man, himself. For three sessions, single-handed, he had to fight the battles of the party he represented against the overwhelming forces of Sir Richard McBride. Then, in 1912, Brewster himself succumbed temporarily, and the Liberals were left without a single man in the House. In 1913 he was chosen leader of the Liberal party of the Province, but from that time until this week he has had to do the leading from outside the House. Now, not only has he a seat himself, but he has a virile and able assistant in Malcolm M. Macdonald, who a week previously defeated the Conservative candidate in Vancouver.

Mr. Brewster is a fisherman. Not the kind who go out in a small punt and catch a few ciscoes for breakfast, but a fisherman nevertheless. And his face is ruddy with the wind, like all fishermen's faces. It happens that Mr. Brewster fishes in the Pacific Ocean, on the stormy west coast of Vancouver Island, but his complexion is the same as that of fishermen on the north shore of our own Lake Erie.

Salmon is what Brewster catches—or rather, the company of which Brewster is the head, one of the largest canning concerns on the coast. In his business Mr. Brewster has at least two achievements to his credit which augur well for the initiative and originality he needs must show when he becomes Prime Minister of British Columbia. He is said to be the first man to have eliminated Oriental labor from a fishing and canning business on the coast, and besides that, he was the first to introduce sanitary methods of sealing the salmon tins. It was he who began to have them soldered by machinery.

Mr. Brewster did not always fish. At one time he was a newspaper man.

Mrs. H. W. Dillnutt, of 16 Turnbull Street, Belleville, received yesterday the following telegram informing her of the wounding of her son in action:

Mr. H. W. Dillnutt, Mrs. Phillips second husband, is also in the same battery, connected with the Ammunition Column. John Phillips, a younger son is now a member of the 155th, the three soldiers indicating a patriotic trend in the family.

JOHN STREET JOTS

There are greater and lesser joys of life, and one of the former is found in assembling with one's family in the House of God. How delightful these Sunny spring Sabbaths are! If life has lost its cheer and perennial interest and is not what it ought to be, here is one line of improvement.

One organization of the church which does much to keep awake our missionary interest is the W. M. S. Special mention should be made of the fact that at the last regular meeting of this organization $96 was the amount of their contributions. A number of the ladies will represent the society at the convention in Stirling on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The musical interest of the church services has been increased by the recent appointment of Mr. Donald M. Clark, of the Collegiate, as choir instructor and Mrs. H. A. Singer as soloist.

Mrs. Currie has been absent for two weeks through the serious illness of her father at Sacaburg.

Pins and Needles.

After being for a long time in a constrained attitude a peculiar numbness, and pricking are often felt in the arm, leg or foot. This is caused by some interruption to the circulation and can usually be removed by rubbing or exercise. The reason of the sensation, which is decidedly uncomfortable while it lasts, is that pressure for a certain length of time deadens the sensibility of a nerve. When this pressure is suddenly removed, as straightening out the leg after sitting with it doubled underneath the body, sensibility gradually returns to the nerve, and as each nerve fiber composing the trunk regains its normal condition of sensibility a pricking sensation is felt, and these successive prickings from the successive awakenings of the numerous fibers have not inaptly been called "pins and needles."

MALAMUTES FOR THE ALLIES

Big Shipment of Alaskan Dogs Taken to France From Quebec.

"Although I won't be there this spring, and although I have taken some of the best racing dogs in Alaska to the fighting front in France, the dog races in Alaska will go on just the same, for there are more dogs where those that I took across the Atlantic came from."

So spoke Scotty Allan, probably the most famous racing driver in the world and one of its best known sportsmen, on account of the many wonderful victories he has scored with his teams of Alaskan Malamutes in the more than four hundred mile races over the frozen trails of the north which each year have startled the sporting world.

He has just returned to Montreal and is on his way back to Alaska from France.

"I sold only twenty-seven of my own dogs to the French Government," he said, "and bought the remainder, making a hundred and eight dogs in all, from the Eskimos."

These were loaded on special cars and guarded by soldiers all the way till we came to Quebec. Here our pack was increased to four hundred and forty by a consignment of other Eskimo dogs from the Lake St. John region and from Clark City, Labrador, till we sailed on the steamer Pomeranian with four hundred and forty of them.

On the way from Nome to Quebec I fed the Alaskan dogs on salmon, their natural food, but afterwards we cooked food for all of them and had four and a half tons of dog-biscuits made up specially for them to keep them from getting hungry on their way across.

I had five men with me in addition to Kenneth Mart to take care of them, and although the weather was bad at times, when the waves rolled over the deck and broke some of the kennels we did not lose a single one.

The French were delighted with the dogs, and I was entertained by all the big people in Paris, while the Comte Leon Tinseau, one of the greatest literateurs in France and a member of the Legion of Honor, wrote a long article about them for the paper The Flambeau.

Sleighs and harness for the dogs were brought from Alaska for the 108 Alaskan dogs, but the equipment for the other 300 were all made in Quebec before the expedition started.

Kenneth Mart, Mr. Allan's companion, stayed in France to join an ambulance corps.

Asked how many races he won with his wonderful dogs, Mr. Allan said that he won three firsts, three seconds, and two thirds of the big races, but that in the others his teams were always "in the money."

Asked how much money was bet and won and lost in these races, he declined to go into any estimates, but stated that in 1909, when the race was over, he had won $10,000 and two silver cups. His friends upon that occasion gave him a gold watch, suitably inscribed, which he still wears.

The approximate value of the pack of dogs that went to France may be estimated from the fact that $100 each was offered for those that came from Alaska.

WINNING WAYS.

The people who win their way into the inmost recesses of the hearts of others are not usually the most brilliant and gifted, but those who have tender sympathy, gentle patience, self-forgetfulness and that indefinable faculty of eliciting the better nature of others.

SUNDAY NIGHT BLAZE

At 10 o'clock last night the fire brigade was called out to extinguish a blaze at Mr. H. S. Burrell's place on Bleecker Avenue. It appears that a blaze originated in a lean-to of a brick barn, and the former was destroyed and some damaged resulted to the barn. The loss was probably about $200. How the fire originated is not known. Under the supervision of Chief Brown, the firemen did good work in preventing the spreading of the flames.

BATTALIONS AT CHURCH

On Saturday morning the 80th Battalion attended divine service at Christ Church. There was a good turnout and the sacred edifice was filled to the doors. The rector, Rev. Dr. Blagrave, officiated, and preached a most appropriate discourse from St. Matthew, 2nd Chapter and 13th verse. During the service the band under the leadership of bandsman Cummins, rendered a sacred selection, which was much appreciated.

The 155th Battalion attended service at St. Andrew's church, and the muster was a most creditable one. A large congregation was present, and the fine band under the capable leadership of Bandmaster Hinchey, rendered selections of a high order. The pastor of the church, Rev. A. S. Kerr officiated, and preached, his subject being "The Substance of Faith."

The Message of the Cross Today

The Redeemer—a gift of divine love, in the exercise of sovereignty, was the central thought of the sixth sermon in the Lenten series preached by Mr. Hubly yesterday morning. The series will close with a sermon on Good Friday morning.

"To a world, far from knowing God, destitute of holiness, sunk in the wretchedness, active in rebellion, from which no self-moved confession of crime, or short coming could ever be expected, Christ was given; 'not to condemn': this would be equity! 'He came to save!' This is sovereignty! 'Having made peace through the blood of His Cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself.' What language could more obviously imply the guilt of the object of the divine compassion, and at the same time express the sovereignty of the author and exerciser of such reconciliation?

"As we study the doctrine of the Cross, and catch the meaning of its message to the passing generations, how impressive the thought, that every blessing bestowed on man is at once an expression of divine goodness, and of the recipient's unworthiness; but when the value of every other blessing is lost sight of in the glory of the gift of salvation, as revealed by the message of the Cross, it is not surprising that our hearts are penetrated with the liveliest emotion of wonder at the gracious resources of Infinite wisdom, love and power! The message of the Cross today, as ever, makes known that stupendous plan of salvation, whose issues have already made heaven vocal with the songs of the redeemed of earth, and which are designed, in the fullness of time, to fill the universe with praise of Christ in sweetest harmony."

How To Tell Whether Tea and Coffee are Causing your Troubles

It seems easy to leave off drinking tea or coffee and note the results.

But you say, "I can't do without my morning cup," so the dreary days follow one another, the same old pains and aches slowly growing a little worse. Do you dare think of the road ahead, if that downward tendency keeps on, and why shouldn't it unless you change the daily habit?

Suppose to-day you assert your right to crush habit and start a new and healthful life.

Fire Eats Up $1,000,000 Wall

Flames Started in Coal Mine 60 years ago Threaten Big Vein

The famous burning mine fire, which has been raging for more than 60 years, and which started at Summit Hill, Pa., near the spot where Phillip Ginter discovered anthracite in 1791, has burned through the immense wall which the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company placed in front of it deep down into the earth several years ago at a cost of more than a million dollars, and is threatening the mammoth vein in the Panther Creek valley, the largest and richest vein of anthracite in the world.

The wall, 100 feet deep and 15 feet thick, is of solid concrete, and experts believed the fire would never eat through it, and would prevent it from spreading further, eventually extinguishing it. The fact that the flames have eaten their way through this huge barrier has caused consternation among the officials of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, and they are putting forth every effort to prevent it from getting into the vast beds of anthracite.

A large force of men is at work drilling holes deep into the earth, and into these openings water and slush is being poured directly on the fire. Already the fire has destroyed coal valued at millions of dollars, and the damage which will result to the company in case it cannot be extinguished cannot be estimated.

Sounded Like a Reproof.

A lady in passing up a church aisle caught her dress on a corner of a pew and tore it. As the process of tearing was very audible to the congregation the feelings of the lady may be imagined when at that moment the clergyman began the service by reading the sentence:

"Rend your hearts and not your garments."

The Climber.

"Are you making much social progress?" asked the intimate friend of a newly rich man.

"Oh, yes," answered the millionaire. "I've been playing the game for a year, and I estimate that I am about six feet nearer the inner pale of society and about six miles nearer the poorhouse than I was when I started."—Baltimore Sun.

Stunted.

A friend one day discovered Thorwaldsen in tears, and on asking why the distinguished sculptor was giving way to depression he received this reply: "Look at that statue. I have realized my ideal and fear therefore that I have reached the high water mark of my profession. When a man is satisfied he ceases to grow."—Christian Herald.

It Wasn't the Tooth.

She went to a dentist's office to have a tooth filled. While the dentist was at work she squealed.

"Does it hurt?" he asked.

"I should say so," she replied. "Guess I'll have to take it off."

And then, much to the dentist's surprise, she proceeded to remove a new shoe.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He had just been accepted.

"Does your father know I write poetry?" he asked, anxiously.

"Not yet, dear," she replied. I've told him about your drinking, and your gambling debts, but I couldn't tell him everything at once."

HISTORIAN OF NOVA SCOTIA.

The Late Rev. E. M. Saunders Was a Talented Writer.

Rev. Edward Manning Saunders, D.D., whose death recently at the home of his son, John C., in Ottawa, after a two years' residence in Toronto, was chronicled in all the papers, was a prominent theologian well known in the Maritime Provinces and especially in Halifax, N.S., where he officiated as a Baptist Church pastor for fourteen years, and where his remains were buried. In addition to being a deep student of theology all his life the late Rev. Mr. Saunders was exceedingly well versed in subjects relating to philosophy, history, and literature, and his retentive memory, which was with him until he was well in his eighties, was one reason why he was so much sought after and beloved by students of such matters. His broad understanding of the so-called new theology did not lose him friends, for he was intensely loyal to the evangelical creed and believed sincerely the Scriptures relating to the life of Christ. Sometimes he was not too tolerant with those who held views opposite to his own, but underlying all his arguments and in his writing, for at one time he was joint proprietor and editor of the Christian Visitor and a prolific author, there was always a reverence for things Christ-like which made him stand prominently among his brethren.

As a student of Canadian history the late Mr. Saunders was noted, but his knowledge of the religious history of the Maritime Province placed him on a high plane by himself, and it was little matter for wonder that with such learning that he should prove the foremost Baptist leader in these provinces.

The late Dr. Saunders was recognized as one of the most brilliant and industrious biographers the Maritime Provinces have produced. He was particularly well versed in the history of those fair valleys by the sea in the midst of which he was brought up. His busy pen loved to trace for his own and future generations the story of the invasion of the wilderness by the stout-hearted loyalists of the last quarter of the eighteenth century and their descendants —his well-informed brain was ever gleaning and chronicling new records of the struggle with man and nature whereby one of the fairest regions in all creation was won by toil and suffering for British ideals and for Canada and Empire.

Among the best-known works of Dr. Saunders are: "The Life of the Rev. John Wiswell, a Loyalist Church of England Clergyman;" a "History of the Baptist Churches of the Maritime Provinces;" "Three Premiers of Nova Scotia," in which he wrote of the Hon. James William Johnstone, Joseph Howe, and Charles Tupper. This book is one of the standard histories of the struggle for responsible Government in Nova Scotia. His last ambitious literary effort was the "Life of Sir Charles Tupper, Bart," which was ready for the press when that grand historic figure, the last of the Fathers of Confederation, passed to the Valhalla of Canadian greatness.

A son of the deceased pastor and literateur, is Mr. Edmund M. Saunders, treasurer of the Canada Life Assurance Company, Toronto.

Willie the Troublemaker.

An elderly night watchman at the Montreal docks, who holds strong temperance views and believes in tracing effects to their primary causes, was approached one night by a police reporter who was endeavoring to ascertain the facts about a disturbance among the dock workers in which two or three men had received painful injuries.

"What started the trouble?"

"Willie Dow started the trouble," declared the guardian of the docks, in a high-pitched, quavering voice. "Willie Dow has started a lot of trouble around these sheds."

"How did Dow start the trouble?" pursued the reporter, meanwhile wondering inwardly that his long experience in police circles had not made him acquainted sooner with so redoubtable a troublemaker as Willie Dow appeared to be from the statement of the old man.

"He started all the trouble when he began making beer in Montreal in 1809," was the watchman's unexpected answer.

To Teach Toy-Making.

The Military Hospitals Commission is encouraging a movement started by a number of Quebec ladies for teaching soldiers in the Savard Park Convalescent Home in Quebec the art of toy-making. This is one of the industries which the defeat of Germany will bring into prominence in Canada, and it is particularly adapted for lamed soldiers who still have the use of their hands. The Quebec ladies have secured from the Lord Roberts Memorial workshops in London a large collection of models of toys. There are at present about 1,300 inmates and out-patients of the canvalescent homes and hospitals now under control of the Commission. The majority of these men were wounded in the battles of last spring.

Another "General."

They are telling a "good one" on Colonel Frederic Nicholls, of the Canadian General Electric Co. of Peterborough. One of the Colonel's friends passed him one day and said in the most natural way in the world, "Good day, General," and passed on. Colonel Nicholls stopped him and said: "Look here, I'm not a General, I'm only a Colonel." "Oh, I beg your pardon, Colonel. I was thinking of General Electric."

Long Trip to See Sons.

Bishop Lucas of Mackenzie River Diocese came all the way to Kingston from the far north to see his two sons, who are members of the 53rd (Queen's) Battery, which is leaving for overseas service. Part of his long trip was made in dog sledge, and he slept in the open with the thermometer 63 degrees below zero.

Even where marriage is not a failure, the old man is more popular at home on pay day than any other time.

The man who is willing that the searchlight should be focussed on his past has never had much fun.

Compulsory.

A certain amateur aviator talked recently about a flying trip with a professional, when he fell 1,200 feet into the water without knowing it.

"I wasn't frightened," he said with a smile. "I thought that our swift descent was a piece of fancy flying. I am, in fact, as ignorant of aviation as the little boy was ignorant of English history.

"'Describe the Order of the Bath,' his teacher asked this little boy.

"'It's very ancient,' he answered. 'It goes back to the time when they didn't take no baths except by order.'"

Locusts.

Indians call locusts "little horses," and the German term for these pests is "hay horses."

Skeletons.

The bones of an average man's skeleton weigh twenty pounds, those of an average woman's six pounds less.

Wall Paper.

Paper for the beautifying of walls in residences was first introduced into Europe from the east in 1625.

The Shamrock.

The original shamrock of Ireland has long been extinct. The plant called shamrock is the white clover.

Vesuvius.

After every eruption of Vesuvius the crater is covered with a gleaming white layer of common salt.

EDUCATION.

Bend all your energies to acquire an education. Nobody ever drifted into an education. Conscious effort to direct one's reading and thinking into the best channels is an absolute requisite. Choice must be made of books, of friends and of pleasures. One cannot read trash and think literature.— Amos R. Wells.

Tax for a Baby.

There was once a tax on babies in England, but it was only in force for a short time. The tax was put on in 1695 and abolished in 1706. The higher up in society a man was the more he had to pay for the privilege of being a happy father; a duke, for instance, had to pay £30, a marquess £25, and so on. Nowadays the reverse principle is in force, and the State allows so much rebate on income-tax to those who have children, and of course thirty shillings to mothers who are insured.

Redmond is Wealthy.

Mr. John Redmond, the leader of the Irish party, is among the wealthiest representatives of the Emerald Isle in Parliament. Formerly he was employed as a Committee Clerk in the House of Commons.

Balm of Gilead.

Balm of Gilead is costly, for the balm bush yields only a few drops a day in the tapping season.

Big Improvement.

"Do you believe the world is getting better or worse?"

"Better."

"What reason have you for thinking so?"

"Our baby has cut all his teeth, and it's nearly three weeks now since we've been kept up all night with him."— Judge.

"Never Too Late to Mend."

Most of us associate the phrase "It's never too late to mend" with Charles Reade's famous novel, and very likely some of us think he invented it. But it is really one of the most ancient gems of popular philosophy. A correspondent of London Notes and Queries has discovered it in a petition from the commonalty to the mayor and aldermen of the city in 1483. It must have been of a respectable age even then, seeing that it is quoted as one of the proverbs of the period.

GERMANS CAPTURE SOME TRENCHES AND 1646 PRISONERS

BRITISH CABINET FACING CRISIS IN COMPULSORY SERVICE

VILLA DEAD SAYS REPORT

Carranza's Nephew Believed to Have Body on Special Train Making for Chihuahua City—Bandit Died of Gangrene

EL PASCO, Texas, April 17.—Villa is dead and his body, disinterred some days after his burial, is in possession of the Carranza troops, according to a series of telegraphic messages received in Juarez today by the Mexican officials.

For more than a week reports that Villa had died from wounds have been current both here and in Juarez. To-day's accounts were the most circumstantial, and apparently reliable yet received. They were accepted with reserve by American officials, including General Geo. Bell, but the Mexican officials expressed confidence in their reliability. The messages in the order in which they were received, were as follows:

The despatcher of the Mexican Northwestern Railroad at Juarez reported to General Cavira, Carranza commander at Juarez, that he had heard a conversation over the telegraph wires to the effect that Villa's body was in the hands of the Carranza troops.

General Gavira notified Consul Andres Garcia here, who rushed messages to the telegraph operators at Madera and Cusihuriachic asking for confirmation.

The Madera and Cusihuriachic operators answered confirming the report and stating the body was being taken to Chihuahun.

The telegraph operator at San Antonio, fifty miles west of Chihuahua, telegraphed Consul Garcia that Villa's body was in possession of Colonel Carlos Carranza, nephew of General Carranza, who was taking it in a special train to Chihuahua.

Apart from the telegrams sent here, there are some known facts which have been pointed out by Mexican officials as lending strong support to the truth of the report that the bandit chief's career has been closed by death.

It is known that Villa has been suffering for more than a year from a virulent form of blood poisoning. He was treated for this disease while in Juarez by Dr. W. L. Brown, one of the best-known physicians in El Paso, who states that the condition of the bandit was such that even a minor wound would be fatal in ten days unless treated promptly and with the best medical skill and care.

It is pointed out also that nothing positive has been known of Villa since the battle of Guerrero, at which time reports of his being wounded were accepted by General Pershing and other American officers.

GERMANS TAKE 1646 PRISONERS

Seven Hundred Yards of French Trenches Captured in Attack

Canadian Press Special.

BERLIN, April 18.—French positions in Steinbruch, seven hundred yards south of Haudemont farm in the region of Verdun, were captured by the Germans in their attack of yesterday, the war office announced to-day. Germans took prisoner 1,646 unwounded men.

ATTACK ON TURKISH CAPITAL

LONDON, April 18.—In the British air attack on Constantinople Friday evening, two bombs dropped by the raiders burst in the War Ministry, according to a report from Saloniki, forwarded by the Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The despatch adds that another bomb burst in the powder factory at Makrekui, which blew up. There were numerous casualties.

VERDUN AGAIN SCENE OF GERMAN ATTACK

Assault French Positions East of the Meuse—Succeed in Obtaining Footing in Small Portion of Chauffour Woods—Enemy Troops Caught by Withering Fire West of Pepper Hill

LONDON, April 18.—(Special)—Again the Germans have launched a powerful infantry attack against the French positions extending from the River Meuse to Douaumont, and again they have been swept back, except where they obtained a footing in a small portion of the Chauffour Wood by the guns of the French. Heavy casualties were inflicted on the attacking parties along the two and a half mile battle front.

The Germans have kept up their heavy shelling of Hill 301, northwest of Verdun, and the second lines of the French in this region, probably with the intention of again throwing their infantry forward in an endeavor to capture these important points—keys to the Verdun position on the west.

SMASH ENEMY TRENCHES.

The official communication issued by the French War Office tonight reads:

"Between the Avre and the Oise our batteries shattered enemy trenches and shelters in the regions of Beuvraignes and Lassigny.

"In the Argonne destructive fires were directed on the German works north of La Harazee. At Vauquois one of our mines blew up a small enemy post with its occupants.

"On the left bank of the Meuse the enemy artillery displayed great activity against Hill 301 and our second lines.

FOE USES TWO DIVISIONS.

"On the right bank, after a bombardment of increasing violence, begun in the morning against our positions from the Meuse to Douaumont, the Germans, at about 2 o'clock, launched a powerful attack with effectives of at least two divisions. The waves of the assault, against a front of about four kilometres (two and a half miles), were met by our curtain of fire and the fire of our machine guns, and swept back; save at one point, where the Germans gained a footing in a small salient of our line south of Chauffour Wood.

Bigamy Case Looked Suspicious

Had Appearance of Demand for Money—Prisoner Given Thirty Days

PERTH, April 17.—Tony Aprea, an Italian, was sent to Perth gaol lately by the Police Magistrate of Smith's Falls to be tried for bigamy. Aprea was married in Italy fifteen years ago and shortly afterwards came across the ocean to the United States, leaving his wife in Italy. He sent her money for two years, and then stopped sending it, claiming she was not faithful to him. For thirteen years she had not heard from him. Over a year ago he married a Miss Heathcote in Smith's Falls, and everything went well until recently, when the first wife traced the lost husband to Smith's Falls and by correspondence secured his arrest and commital, sending along her marriage certificate, etc. The charge came off before Judge Scott, when Aprea pleaded guilty, had his story told by his counsel, C. J. Foy, who stated that it was money the first wife was after as shown by her correspondence. Under all the circumstances the judge gave the bigamist thirty days in the county jail.

He put up a fist fight with four members of the Department of Justice and before submitting to arrest, reached the vault door, banged it to and turned the combination.

Fought Waist Deep in Mud

Shelled from three Sides Bombers Drove Germans from Trenches—Wizbangs Flew Thick

LONDON, April 17.—The German attack upon the craters held by the Canadians on April 6th was preceded by a heavy bombardment, in which the Canadians suffered greatly on account of their exposed position. The enemy's rush upon the craters was met by a strong bombing party. The bombers drove the Germans back into their positions. "We gave it to Fritz pretty hot and strong, and their losses must have been worse than ours," said one of the wounded men.

Besides being exposed to heavy shelling on three sides, the Canadians were standing waist-deep in mud, while the whizzbangs were flying overhead as thick as machine-gun bullets. A youthful French-Canadian was extracted with difficulty from a dugout where he was buried by the explosion of four shells, which wrecked the place. He was engaged, in an officers' mess, located in a dugout only sixty yards from the German trenches.

Allison May Make Statement

Royal Commission will Meet Wednesday for Organization

OTTAWA, April 17—The Royal Commission, consisting of Sir William Meredith and Judge Lyman P. Duff, appointed to investigate the Kyte charges, will meet on Wednesday of this week for organization purposes. The Commission will lose no time in calling witnesses and opening a thorough inquiry. It is expected that the New York witnesses required will come to Ottawa voluntarily to be heard. Whether Colonel Allison will come to Ottawa is not known. It is reported that he is ill at a resort at South Carolina. It is possible his evidence will be taken under oath at his hotel.

A distinguished array of counsel will be present. Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., has been appointed by the Government. The Opposition has named E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., and R. H. Smith, K.C., while General Hughes has three eminent counsel. In addition, it is expected that some of the contractors interested will be represented.

ASQUITH IS FACING PROBLEM

Disagreement of Cabinet Results in Postponment of Speech

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 18.—The postponement of Premier Asquith's statement on the recruiting question, which he had promised to make in the Commons this afternoon was taken as an indication that the Cabinet Ministers were unable to reach an agreement on the subject, which has brought about the most serious crisis which the Prime Minister has had to meet in his eight years as head of the Government.

The decision came as a complete surprise to those not within the inner circles, but it later transpired that negotiations had been in progress in the course of the night and early this morning, with that end in view.

Besides the Cabinet meeting there was a conference of the special committee appointed to make a final effort to bring about a solution of the problem, but like that of the Cabinet, it was unable to reach an agreement, and a postponement of the Premier's statement became imperative unless a break-up of the Coalition Government was to be faced. The special committee consisted of: Lloyd George, Lord Kitchener, Sir Wm. Robertson, W. H. Long and Arthur Henderson.

Killed Family Then Himself

SASKATOON, Sask., April 17.—That John Mycheluk, the brother of Mrs. Manchure and hired man of Prokop Manchure, slew that family and then killed himself, was the verdict brought in by the coroner's jury in Wakaw, after hearing the evidence. Syrioshka, the son-in-law of the family, who has been held on suspicion ever since the crime was committed, was able to produce an alibi and has been released. Evidence was brought forward by Detective-Sergeant Prime that Mycheluk had bought a rifle unknown to anyone and had kept it secretly hidden in an outhouse; that he had a quarrel with his brother-in-law and had threatened revenge. It was also shown that a number of shells were found in his coat.

WILSON DEMANDS CHANGE IN SUBMARINE WAR

Radical Modifications of German Policy Only Can Make Possible Continuance of Amity Between Two Nations—Sussex Atrocity Best Proof of Faithlessness

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Special—The communication which he has drafted as the last word of the United States to Germany on the submarine issue was completed today by President Wilson. It probably will be despatched to Berlin tomorrow.

The document reviews Germany's submarine activities since the Lusitania was sunk almost a year ago, and makes plain that only an immediate change in the German policy can make possible the continuance of friendly relations between the two nations.

As the President was putting the finishing touches to the note, on which he and Secretary Lansing had been working for nearly a week, official word was received by the State Department that the lives of two Americans had been endangered by an attack on the Russian bark Imperator by an Austrian submarine. Carl Bailey Hurst, Consul-General at Barcelona, Spain, said the attack was without warning. One of the American citizens on board was wounded by shrapnel shells fired by the submarine.

A full investigation of the incident was ordered at once by the State Department.

As soon as the President had finished the communication to Germany he directed that Senator Stone, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, be invited to the White House in order that he might be informed of the intentions of the Administration. Senator Stone will probably see the President tomorrow morning before the Cabinet meeting.

Mr. Wilson was the only official familiar with all the details of the document tonight, but it was learned authoritatively that it is the most emphatic and vigorous diplomatic paper the President ever has approved.

The attack on the Channel steamer Sussex, carrying more than a score of Americans, has been included in the evidence of the United States as one of the strongest proofs of Germany's failure to adhere to her promises.

CASUALTIES AMONG CANADIANS

OTTAWA, April 18.—That the battle of St. Eloi ranks well with St. Julien and Festubert, not only in the effective work of the Canadians, but also in the severe losses sustained by our troops, is indicated clearly in the casualty lists which have been received by the Militia Department following the recent battle.

MAY BAG BIG TURK FORCE

PETROGRAD, April 18.—(Special.)—Having occupied the strongly fortified Turkish position on the left bank of the Kara Dere, on the Turkish Black Sea coast, the Russian forces have passed the last of a series of natural obstacles along the coast; the defensive advantages of which had been made the most of by the Turks. Thus they have entered the immediate area of the Trebizond fortifications.

Yesterday's official statement dealing with the Canadian operations says:

"In the coast region our troops, after occupying Surmench, pursued the retreating enemy and reached the village of Arsene Kelessi, eighteen versts (about 11¼ miles) east of Trebizond.

"The fighting continues to our advantage in the upper Tchoruk basin."

The Russians are now separated from the city of Trebizond by only eleven miles of roadway, no part of which is considered capable of sustained defence, although since the fall of Erzerum the Turks have undertaken everything possible to perfect the defensive power of the Trebizond fortifications, and greatly increased the garrison, which is now said to contain three complete divisions.

SIR SAM MAY BE RELIEVED

Rumour Current that His Whole Time is Needed for Work of Royal Commission

Canadian Press Special.

OTTAWA, April 18.—Major-General Sir Sam Hughes will make his promised statement in the Commons this afternoon, in reply to the fuse charges of G. W. Kyte. The appearance of Sir Sam in the House is eagerly awaited, and a large crowd, much larger than the temporary Parliament Building will hold, will be on hand to greet and listen to him. This is evidenced by the demand for passes to the House. The suggestion that Sir Sam may ask to be temporarily relieved from actual charge of the Department, the better to devote himself to the work of the Royal Commission, which will investigate the charges, was still being discussed in the lobbies this morning, despite the denials, and it was hinted that announcement along these lines may be made by the Prime Minister.

REQUEST $40,000 FOR PATRIOTIC FUND GRANT

Association Needs that Amount to Cover Demands—Matter Referred to Executive Committee—New Central Fire Hall Probable—Busy Session of City Council

The session of the City Council held last night was by far the most prolonged thus far this year, the motion to adjourn carrying just before the clock struck eleven. During the session many matters of importance were considered. A request was made by a deputation of the Belleville Patriotic Association for a grant of $40,000, which was supported by several speakers. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee. The special committee appointed by the Council to consider and devise, if possible, a change in the fire department, presented a report which recommends that the two present fire halls be disposed of and a central station built; also that two motor trucks be secured. If the proposed change takes place, it will, it is alleged, mean a saving of some $1,600 per annum over present expenditure. The matter will be considered more fully by the Fire Committee. A grant of $400 was made to the 80th Battalion, and it was decided to have a roll of honor prepared of all Belleville citizens who have or will leave for overseas. A motion to rescind a motion re paying for sprinkling of Front street out of general tax, was defeated. Some other matters were attended to at the busy session.

The members present were: Mayor Ketcheson, Aldermen Woodley, Smith, Platt, Deacon, St. Charles, Parks, Duckworth and Whalen.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of the last meeting the Council went into Committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc.; Ald. Deacon in the chair.

The accounts recommended to be paid by the committees were passed and the following recommendations were disposed of:

That the tender of A. S. Large for the lease of the market for one year from April 20th, 1916, for $2,150 be accepted.—Carried.

That a lease be negotiated with Mr. McDonald of Thurlow for the privilege of a burying ground for dead animals, etc., at $125 per year.—Carried.

That a committee be appointed to consider the advisability of installing another pump at the pumping station; that the committee be composed of Ald. Parks, Woodley, Smith, the chairman of Waterworks and the City Engineer.

Ald. Whalen—Is the pump needed?

Ald. Deacon—The committee will find out.

The recommendation prevailed.

That all places of business using water constantly be placed on a meter basis.

That all necessary meters be installed before July 1st, 1916.

Ald. Woodley moved that this recommendation with other recommendations be laid over for further consideration. This matter he thought had been passed over rather speedily.

Ald. Smith thought the present Bylaw could be amended by adding the recommendations proposed.

Ald. Woodley—It meant if the recommendations prevailed that all parties would be charged $15 for a meter in the places designated. In the present water works Bylaw these places were specified.

The amendment of Ald. Woodley prevailed and the recommendation and some others from the same committee were referred back for further consideration.

That a contract be renewed with R. Stapley for $4,500 a year for the collection of garbage.—Carried.

Communications

From Mr. D. J. Hay, complaining of surface water being a nuisance to his and other property on Myers street, and asking it to be drained.—Referred to Public Works Committee.

From the headquarters of the Khaki Club in Quebec, asking for a grant to help look after returning wounded soldiers.—Referred to Executive Committee.

Collection of Taxes

Mr. W. D. Ketcheson, bailiff, addressed the Council, stating that if two or three weeks longer were given the tax roll for 1913, it would be returned with all available taxes collected.

On motion the time for the return of the roll was extended until May 15th.

Hackmen's Petition

A petition was presented from the hackmen of the city asking to be allowed 50 cents for each passenger taken about the city from 8 P.M. to 8 A.M.

Referred to Police Commissioners.

A petition was presented for a granolithic walk on Earle street.—Referred to assessor and city engineer to ascertain if properly signed.

The report was referred to the Fire Committee for consideration.

The Committee rose and reported Report received and adopted.

Patriotic Association

At this stage of the proceeding a deputation from the Belleville Patriotic Association waited upon the Council requesting a grant.

Col. Lazier addressed the Council and outlined the object of the deputation's visit to the Council. At a meeting just held by the Association a resolution had been unanimously adopted asking the Council to give a grant of $40,000, and this would be added to by a special appeal to citizens, so as to make about $60,000. This sum would be needed in the year for patriotic purposes.

Mr. H. Sneyd read the following resolution adopted at the Association meeting: Moved by Mr. A. McGinnis, seconded by Mr. J. Elliott, that a contribution of $40,000 be asked from the City Council to the Canadian Patriotic Association, and the balance needed to be raised by volunteer subscriptions.

Mr. R. Tannahill, treasurer of the Belleville Association, presented the financial side of the matter. He said of the amount subscribed a year ago during the campaign $35,000 had been collected, and of this amount $31,000 had been paid out, leaving a balance for the month of May of $4,000. Some $5,000 was still unpaid of the amount promised, and this was made up of small sums. The city still owed $2,500 of the grant made last year. The number of names were increasing rapidly, and it was necessary to take care of the future, and the amount asked for and more would be required.

Ex-Mayor Wills said he could only endorse what had been said by previous speakers. Mr. Tannahill, the treasurer, had given much of his time to this matter, and his books were open for inspection to any person. The accounts are regularly audited and sent to the Central Committee of the Canadian Patriotic Association. The amount asked for seemed a large sum, but is needed in the tremendous fight we are engaged in. See the news we have received to-day of a bright young citizen fallen. We must look after those who are left behind. There would be voluntary subscriptions, as there were before. We will require between $60,000 and $70,000 during the coming year to meet the demands. We will soon be at the $4,000 mark per month, and it will increase. You will see that this is the best course possible to pursue.

Mr. J. Elliott said this appealed to him as the right means of raising the money necessary. $40,000 seems a large sum, but $4,000 a month is now spent, and it is increasing. If the city provides $40,000, the remaining necessary sum will be subscribed. We will be proud of our record if we give to this worthy cause, and the amount asked from the city would be supplemented by $20,000 additional. Hasting's Council was doing its duty in this matter as well as the city. He trusted the request would be granted.

Ald. Woodley—It is a matter that the Council would have to consider and the Council would have to give.

Mr. A. McGinnis—Not a cent of the money has gone to a member of the Committee, all of whom have worked hard. It has been to them a labor of love.

Ald. Deacon—We are all of one mind in this matter. There was a deficit of $12,000 from last year's Council, which would have to be provided for, and in addition to this patriotic scheme there were other matters to look after, namely the Red Cross, Canning factory rental, grants to the two battalions. It would mean about $10,000 for patriotic purposes in addition to the $40,000 asked for. Could the city stand $50,000 for patriotic purposes?

Col. Lazier—Certainly, if necessary.

Ald. Deacon—Would $30,000 do this year, and let the Council next year look after what was then needed? This would mean 1 mill on the dollar, and take care of 1915. It would also realize $4,500 for some months, and $5,000 for the remaining months.

Mr. R. Tannahill—The proposition is a reasonable and satisfactory one.

Mayor Ketcheson—To my mind we must contribute to prosecute this war. Whatever the sacrifice is to bring this war to a close we must be prepared to make it. The best lives of our city are being given up for the principles we hold dear. We must see to it that those left behind are taken care of, and it is up to the Council to give, and he was assured that 90 per cent. of the people would back up the Council. He considered the proposition of Ald. Deacon a proper one. The Council were delighted to have the deputation present, and the Council would, no doubt, grant what was necessary.

Col. Lazier—Justice will be done by the Council and we leave the matter in your hands.

The Council was thanked by the deputation for the hearing given them.

The matter was then referred to the Executive Committee for consideration.

Enquiries

Ald. St. Charles—Who is responsible for the hole in the walk on Front street, opposite Elvin's store?

Ald. Whalen—The Gas Department. It will be attended to.

Ald. St. Charles—When will the City Hall be ready for renting?

Ald. Duckworth—We are waiting for some iron posts. The members of the Council should inspect the building.

Ald. St. Charles—Will any granolithic crossings be built this year, and especially one on Church street between Bridge and Dundas street?

Ald. Whalen—Some will be built where they are necessary.

Ald. Platt—Should not the flag on the city building be placed at half-mast out of respect to one of our boys who has fallen.

Ald. Woodley—Yes, for at least three days.

Ald. Deacon—We have no record of those who have gone and are going to the front. We should have a roll of honor placed in the Council Chamber containing all the names of Bellevillians who enlisted. The Mayor has two boys at the front and another going.

Ald. Woodley and Mayor Ketcheson considered this was a move in the right direction, and should be attended to. It was decided to make a motion in reference to it.

Ald. Deacon—A monument should be erected, and will no doubt be erected in this city.

Mayor Ketcheson—No other place of its size in Canada has sent to the front as many boys as Belleville has, and their names should be perpetuated.

Mayor Ketcheson—There is a complaint that baby carriages cannot be taken across the railway crossing at Frank street owing to a large post being used as a barricade.

Ald. Whalen—I will look into the matter.

Unfinished Business

Under this head Mayor Ketcheson said the contract for the erection of a new Children's Aid Society building had been let and the contract signed.

Motions

Moved by Ald. Woodley, seconded by Ald. Smith, that as a Bylaw relative to the investing of the city sinking fund is not required, that the recommendation passed on April 3rd, 1916, be rescinded and that the Mayor, the Chairman of Executive, and City Treasurer be a committee appointed to invest $80,000 of the said sinking fund in Government 10 year bonds.

WEDDING BELLS

CASKEY—FROST.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place at Trinity Church, Frankford, on the evening of February 16th, 1916, at six o'clock, when Leah Mabel, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Frost, Sidney Township, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Albert Ernest, son of Mr. Samuel Caskey, Murray Township. The service was read by the Rev. B. F. Byers, Rector, in the presence of a very large congregation, which included many friends and relatives of both bride and groom, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Perry (the latter the groom's sister), who were married the same day at 11 a.m. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her brother, Gordon, and looked very beautiful in an extremely handsome gown of pale pink chiffon with silk and pearl trimmings, wearing the traditional bridal veil with orange blossoms, her only ornament being a beautiful sunburst of pearls, the gift of the groom. The dainty little flower girl, Miss Viola Kennedy, of Havelock, cousin of the bride, looked very sweet and winsome in white silk and overlace and carried a basket of pink and white carnations with ferns. Dr. H. V. Malone and Mr. W. R. Milne made ideal ushers. Mrs. Malone in her usual efficient manner played Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered the church and Mendelssohn's as the bride and groom walked down the aisle after signing the register in the vestry. After the ceremony about 125 guests assembled at the bride's home, where congratulations were extended. A substantial supper was served, after which the two happy young couples motored to Belleville and took their departure on the 12.30 train for Montreal and other eastern points. On their return they will reside in Murray Township. Miss Leah has always been a great favorite with her many friends, and the high esteem in which she has been held was shown by the large number of useful and costly gifts which she received. The groom's gift to the flower girl was a gold ring, to the organist a fern pot.

A few evenings previous to the marriage about seventy young people met at the bride's home, taking her completely by surprise, and presented her with a beautiful leather rocker. The gift was appreciated and Leah expressed her gratitude in a few well-chosen words, after which refreshments were served and a pleasant evening spent. —Com.

A wedding of local interest took place in Hamilton on Wednesday, April 12th, 1916, when Kathleen Florence, daughter of the late Daniel and Mrs. Cunningham (formerly of the School for the Deaf, Belleville) was united in marriage to Herbert Walter Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ward, of Hamilton, by the Rev. H. F. Veals. Very fair and sweet did the young bride look wearing her travelling suit of dark blue with hat of orchid shade and corsage bouquet of valley lillies and rosebuds and was given away by her mother. The home was prettily decorated for the occasion in white and buttercup shades; the dining-room and tables being extremely dainty and pretty with streamers and daffodils in abundance. After a dainty luncheon had been served the young couple left for Toronto and Belleville for a short honeymoon, amid the congratulations and best wishes of their friends and also showered with confetti.

The many beautiful and lovely gifts which they received testify to the love and esteem in which they are held by their host of friends. The gift of the G. W. Robinson Company, Limited, where the bride was employed, was a library set of fumed oak.

On their return to the city the young couple will reside at 248 Mountain Park Avenue.

FARROW—McCORMICK

After a wedding luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Farrow left for a brief tour.

Prohibition at Three Rivers

A good example of how local prohibition works at Three Rivers was furnished by the military authorities last week. A good sized party of invalided soldiers from the front, was being brought in from Quebec, most of them nervous cases. The men were in charge of an officer, and were marched in good shape to the train. Not a man was drunk, not having a chance to get a drink, and there were no pocket pistols in the party. All went well until Three Rivers, about half way to Montreal, was reached. Shortly after the train started the men seemed to cheer up wonderfully. Then they became really jolly, and some of them started to sing. Jollity gave way to uproarious noise, and it was with difficulty the officer kept the men in hand, although some of them soon went to sleep.

Investigation showed that at Three Rivers several whisky peddlers had come to the train and sold bottles of very bad, but very strong, whisky blanc to the invalided soldiers, at exorbitant prices. The men were thirsty and reckless, and bought the whole stock, which was speedily absorbed. And it is only a month or so ago that the temperance people of the province were rejoicing that Three Rivers had voted dry by an overwhelming majority.

The result of this experience in temperate Three Rivers was that this was the drunkennest party of returned soldiers yet brought to the city, some of the men being so laid out that they had to be loaded into rigs and driven to the Khaki Convalescent Home to sleep it off.—Montreal Weekly Tattler.

WILL BE WATCHED IN FUTURE

In future a strict watch will be kept over the temperance workers of Three Rivers when any trains of invalided soldiers go through. It is suspected that if any whisky peddlers attempt to ply their trade they will not appear in court, nor will they be fit to appear anywhere else for some time. There are certain experienced soldiers who know exactly how to deal with these low down scoundrels, and who would welcome the chance of such exercise.

V. C. DIAMOND JUBILEE.

The "For Valor" Medal is Still the Most-Coveted Decoration.

It has been said that up to 1856 no English Sovereign ever decorated an Englishman for being brave. Even at that time France had her Legion of Honor, and Queen Victoria noted the anomaly of the two nations fighting side by side in the Crimea, the one possessing a highly-coveted decoration and the other nothing.

On January 29th, 1856, she instituted by Royal Warrant the Order of the Victoria Cross "for soldiers and sailors of any rank for a supreme act of bravery in the presence of the enemy."

Thus it will be seen that the Diamond Jubilee of the V.C. has arrived, finding this great distinction as young in spirit as ever, as greatly coveted, as highly honored.

It is sometimes said that the V. C. is bestowed too liberally, even though only one is given for every 500 iron crosses, but it might be recalled that one of the most interesting public appearances Queen Victoria ever made was when, in Hyde Park, eighteen months after its institution, and before a vast crowd, the great Queen fastened with her own hands the decoration on the breasts of sixty-one Crimean heroes of all ranks and ages.

Someone has truly said: "The Victoria Cross stands as a symbol of the highest that a man as a man can attain; it places the hearts and the generous impulses of all men on a common level, and the words, 'For Valor,' are as dear to the noble duke as to the humblest unlettered private."

In an Australian Sleeping Car.

The sleeping cars of Australia are in many ways better than those of the United States. Instead of being of continuous length they are broken up into compartments, each one of which contains two berths running crosswise the track, a separate lavatory and divers shelves, racks, hooks and cubby holes for disposing of a traveler's belongings. The privacy of the arrangement is much to my mind. The porter, who is also the conductor, takes charge of all heavy bags, satchels and packages and puts them in an apartment specially reserved for that purpose.

A Varnishing Tip.

When varnishing wood the work must be done in a warm room at a temperature of at least 75 degrees F. At a lower temperature the moisture in the air will give a milky and cloudy appearance to the varnish. On the other hand, at the higher temperature the moisture is not precipitated until the alcohol of the varnish has sufficiently evaporated to leave a thin smooth film of shellac. The durability and gloss are dependent on this.

REQUEST $40,000 FOR PATRIOTIC FUND GRANT

the same to draw interest at not less than 5 per cent. per annum.—Carried.

Ald. Duckworth moved, seconded by Ald. Parks, that all coke sold in quantities of ½ ton or more, be weighed on the market square same as coal, and that a Bylaw be prepared to that effect.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Smith, seconded by Ald. Platt, that the City Treasurer be authorized to pay over to the Patriotic Association $2,500, being the balance of the city's subscription to their fund for 1915, to be paid after June 1st.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Deacon, seconded by Ald. Platt, that this Council take steps to secure a roll of honor of the citizens of Belleville, who are now or who may hereafter be serving their King and country in this great war.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Duckworth, seconded by Ald. Parks, that the previous motion re carters' stand, be rescinded; and that the Walker Foundry premises be procured at a rental of $72 per annum.—Carried.

Ald. St. Charles moved, seconded by Ald. Whalen, that the sum of $400 be given the 80th Battalion before leaving for overseas.

The motion carried after remarks by the Mayor as to the money being used to provide some necessaries which the Government does not provide.

Ald. Platt moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that a grant of $65 be made to the Belleville Khaki Club, to assist in providing refreshments to the 80th Battalion when leaving the city.—Carried.

Front Street Flushing

Ald. Platt moved, seconded by Ald. Duckworth, that the motion re flushing of Front street and expense of same, to be borne by the taxpayers as a whole, be rescinded, and that the expense be borne by the property owners of that thoroughfare.

Ald. Platt stated that in several cities where there are pavements the property owners on the thoroughfare pay for flushing and the expense of cleaning is borne by the taxpayers as a whole. This, he thought, should apply to Belleville.

Ald. St. Charles said he was opposed to Ald. Platt's motion. It cost $250 a year to flush it; not a great expense.

Ald. Woodley—He voted to have the street flushed and the expenses paid by the city as a whole, and he would still support such a proposition.

Ald. Duckworth—Front street merchants only pay 25 per cent. of the total assessment of the city. The city as a whole built 11 feet of the street, which he did not think was altogether right. He felt the property owners should pay the greater portion of the costs of keeping Front street clean.

Mayor Ketcheson—The cleaning of the streets in other places is paid by the city as a whole, and the flushing should be so paid for.

Ald. Smith—This is too insignificant to discuss at length. Citizens use the thoroughfare more than merchants. The cost of flushing is not a large sum.

Ald. Deacon—The water department is getting $7,000 for flushing sewers, fire purposes, etc. We have a fine Front street. We might not have to flush street so often if back yards and alleyways were kept clean. The people doing business on Front street pay 40 per cent. of the taxes.

Upon a vote being taken three voted for the motion, namely, Aldermen Platt, Duckworth and Parks, and five against, namely Aldermen Woodley, Smith, Deacon, St. Charles and Whalen.

Ald. Whalen—The street foreman is not able to keep up to his work, and has asked for a motor attachment for his bicycle, costing $70. A cheap car would be profitable. It would save the city.

The matter was referred to the Public Work's Committee.

Footbridge

Ald. Whalen stated that it was intended to place a new top railing on the footbridge, and also to lay a new flooring.

Re Fire Department

At this juncture the Council adjourned for a time and the meeting of the Fire Committee was held.

Upon the Council resuming, a recommendation was presented that the city purchase the land they had an option on for the purpose of building a new central fire hall, and after the new hall is completed the present fire halls be disposed of.

The Council went into committee of the whole on reports; Ald. Parks in the chair.

The recommendation was unanimously adopted.

The Committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

Council adjourned.

$4,000,000 MUNICIPAL SALARIES IN MONTREAL FOR 1916.

Nothing is so seductive to the mind as democratic institutions. Under them every man is as good as his fellow, and sometimes a little better, particularly if he has nothing at stake, placing as they do, the literate and illiterate upon an equal footing, so far as the franchise is concerned, thus enabling the democracy to tax, grumble, pay and boast of the glories of free institutions.

A practical example is found in the fact, says a Montreal journal, that the "revenue of 1914 of the city of Montreal would not pay the taxes levied a few years ago. Figures which are being compiled and forwarded to the Controllers, says the report, exceed the total revenue of the city ten years ago and are actually less than the sum needed in 1916 to pay salaries.

"The salary budget for the current year calls for four million dollars. The salary list represents about seven dollars for every man, woman and child in the city. In five years time the list has just doubled. Next year it will consume a shade over a third of the entire revenue."

The following table of salaries shows how increases in pay, and the engaging of unnecessary hands are sapping the revenues and making the administration unworkable:

1913	3,071,081
1914	3,607,986
1915	3,973,962
1916	4,000,000

It must not be forgotten that there are a certain class of voters who have to be looked after by the municipal politicians, and do it out of the public chest. What do the non-taxpaying portion of the voters care where it comes from, so long as they get it? There is nothing like freedom in franchise extension!

"LAWS WE ALL BREAK."

Such is the heading of an article clipped from an English journal of April 1st, 1916, published in London, under the title of "Answered," and handed to us by, not an ardent prohibitionist, with the question, "Are the laws enacted during the reign of Edward VI., which have never been repealed, in force in Canada? We would suggest that he lodge a complaint against the first man who asks him to "take the pledge," and let Police Magistrate Masson decide the question for him. Here is the clipping:

"Why don't you take the pledge?" This piece of advice is offered every day by magistrates to what the police call "confirmed drunks," when they appear in the courts—and excellent advice it is. But all the same, in offering it, the magistrate is breaking a law himself!

According to an Act of Edward VI.'s reign, which has never been repealed, people who conspire with or induce others to abstain from certain drinks and foods are liable to imprisonment as rogues and vagabonds. You may take the pledge yourself, but you may not advise other people to.

Do you go to the theatre? Of course you do. And do you stay to see the last act? Again, of course you do. But by witnessing the last act you are breaking the law!

An Act which has been on the Statute-book for more than two hundred years declares that persons assembling, or causing other persons to assemble, in any "booth, theatre, or place of public entertainment," after ten o'clock in the evening, are violating the written law.

There are many written laws which the unwritten law permits us to break. One of the most surprising of these is playing football. Strictly speaking, football is illegal!

"Whereas there has been heretofore great disorder caused by a company of lewd and disordered persons using that unlawful exercise of fote ball at their pleasures," are the opening words of an Act of Parliament passed in 1602, and any one who "uses that unlawful exercise" is still liable to a fine of twelve pence.

GERMANS AS FARMERS IN CANADA.

A high official in the Canadian Department of Agriculture is quoted as saying that when Spring comes as many of the Germans interned in Canada as choose to engage in farm labor will be set to work in the fields of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. He also said that a considerable number of these Germans are so weary of the monotony and idleness of the concentration camps that they have expressed their willingness to accept the wages offered—the prevailing rate for such services—and that he expects not a few of them will take up land after the war and become permanent residents.

The plan is evidently a good one, from the Canadian point of view, for Canada will need settlers more than ever after peace is restored, and the fact that the proposal has been made and accepted, is particularly encouraging as proving the absence of a personal hostility between those whose Governments are now at war. There are several other questions to be considered, however.

One of them arises from the fact that Germans on farms can be subjected to very little supervision and control, and our own experiences teach that some of them have a tendency to undertake activities decidedly remote from agriculture when they are not carefully watched. But perhaps that tendency will not be particularly dangerous in provinces as remote from the Atlantic seaboard as are the provinces mentioned, and it is noticeable that the German prisoners are not to be employed in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, or even in Ontario.

And what are the Germans at home going to say about sometime brothers of theirs who consent in time of war to work for the enemy? To be sure, raising wheat is not quite like making ammunition for use by the Allies against the Kaiser's troops, but none the less it is of material and important assistance to the allied armies, while the diminution of the Canadian surplus that a shortage of farm labor would cause would be a proportionate help to Germany.

So the problem is a complex one, not without its delicate and embarrassing features for both parties to its solution.—New York Times.

* * *

The Independent (New York): Their (the British) drink bill for last year was $909,790,000, and probably they are now spending a billion dollars a year on something which many people in the United States and England manage to get along without. The war has cost Great Britain about $7,500,000,000. If we subtract from this the loans to other countries, which will presumably be repaid, and the money spent on feeding and clothing soldiers, who would have to be fed and clothed anyhow, though not so well in time of peace, we should have left, using the estimate of Sir George Paish, a net loss to the country of about $2,500,000,000. If then, Great Britain should go dry, as Russia has, its total war losses could be paid up within the next three years, not allowing anything for the gain in industrial efficiency and the saving from the crime and impaired health which incidentally results from the consumption of a billion dollars' worth of liquor a year.

Montreal Star: If President Wilson permits himself to be dragged into a costly, cruel guerilla warfare in Mexico at this time—caught in a trap baited, we imagine, by German bought bandits, and sprung very probably by German-inspired "statesmen"—he will stand in history as another melancholy example of the helpless "pacifist" who exhausts every device to avoid war only to find himself in the end tripped into a useless war under the worst conditions, culminating possibly in another Gordon martyrdom in a Mexican Khartoum.

Mail and Empire: Republicans have forgiven Colonel Roosevelt for his bolt from the party which elected Wilson. They believe that the man who defeated Taft can defeat anyone else, and with Judge Hughes undecided, and Senator Root declining to accept a nomination, there is no other Republican in sight who has a good chance of election. The slogan, as sounded by the New York Tribune, will be "Roosevelt and Americanism."

The Outlook (New York): On May 7, which is a Sunday this year, will occur the anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania. That day ought not to go by without a nation-wide observance, to serve, first, as a memorial to those whose lives were sacrificed; and, second, as a reminder of our national duty. And, it should have added, our national humiliation.

Current Comment

By reason of somewhat extensive practice, Frank Carvell, M.P., by this time should be an expert in the matter of making charges that afterwards turn out to be baseless.—Peterborough Review.

Not so many years ago it was the custom among other peoples to criticize the Russian Government for censoring newspapers and the mails whenever there was war abroad or unrest at home, and for having secret police shadow politicians and other active persons. Now it isn't.—Montreal Gazette.

Turkey admits that one of her submarines recently sank the Russian hospital ship Portugal in the Black Sea. The acknowledgment says the hospital ship was towing boats and that the submarine officers were justified in believing the ship was a transport.

The trade agreement recently made between Germany and Rumania provides for the establishment of a selling bureau in Bucharest and a buying bureau in Berlin. These bureaus will exchange statistics of exportation and importation of goods. Special trains named "Carmen" will run between Germany and Rumania.

Hon. Dr. Roche, M.P., while passing through Fort William to Winnipeg, Monday, expressed his belief in Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, and said that the Minister would be able to clear himself of the Kyte charges. He was confident that the Minister of Militia would not be guilty of a dishonest act.

Over in Peterborough they are having the same trouble in filling up the ranks of their battalion, the 93rd, as is being experienced here. There seems to be plenty of eligible men in the city, but they are slow in getting into uniform. Sunday night recruiting meetings are being held and every imaginable means have been resorted to in order to induce young men to enlist. And yet there is room.

Shamrocks From Mother.

Shamrocks from mother! Man, the heart in my breast
Gave a leap when I saw the wee packet addressed
In her steady writing, so neat and so small,
That had come all the way from my own Donegal;
From away over there where the mountain shapes rise,
With their purple shot slopes raking up to the skies,
And the valleys wind down, gladsome green, to the sea,
And the cottage where mother is waiting for me.

Shamrocks from mother! Yes, I bent down and kissed
The green sprays she had plucked, and my eyes blurred with mist;
I kissed them for her, for I felt—oh, I knew—
They were pressed by her lips in the glen where they grew.
For a moment old thoughts framed a vision for me
Of a little gray house with its face to the sea—
Of a woman with clear smiling eyes at its door—
And I heard my own voice whisper: "Mother, asthore!"

Shamrocks from mother! Sure, from Ireland they came—
Faith, I felt an odd thrill at the thought of the name!
And there came to my memory what mother had said:
"For God, and for Ireland, for—and the dead."
Oh, the splendid strong mother! Her words were a vow
When the order to charge came with desperate "Now!"
And my strength seemed to come, as I fought with the rest,
From her shamrocks that lay with my beads at my breast.

Now, I don't know just why they are honoring me;
Yet for some deed of mine I'm "O'Donnell, V.C."
Brings it glory and honor? My soul! Then it's all
For a mother who waits in my own Donegal;
For the Ireland of dreams that shall ever be mine;
For the love that can lead us so near the divine.
Shamrocks from mother! Oh, a man of my race,
For these two could meet death with a smile on his face.

In the workshop or factory, when an accident occurs, an immediate application of Zam-Buk will save much suffering and consequent loss of time. There is nothing like Zam-Buk for stopping pain, and being a strong antiseptic it destroys all germs and prevents wounds from festering.

Mr. J. Benson, an iron-worker, of Sheridan St., Brantford, Ont., says: "I am always getting bits of metal in my hands, which invariably begin to fester unless I apply Zam-Buk. Needless to say, I am never without a box of Zam-Buk."

Mr. Austin Finlayson, of Esk, Sask., writes: "While at work I cut my hand with a saw. Not thinking it serious, I neglected the cut until it became very sore and festered. I then applied Zam-Buk, which soon drew out the inflammation and healed the cut. Had I only applied Zam-Buk in the first place, I would have been saved much pain and inconvenience."

ON HIS HONEYMOON WITH ANOTHER MAN'S WIFE

A Scene from "Very Good Eddie," now Running in New York That is Said to be the Funniest Thing in the Whole Farce—Eddie Didn't Mean to Steal Her, But he is Continually Being Misjudged

Eddie Kettle and his wife, Georgina, and Percy Darling and his wife Elsie, are embarking on their honeymoon. They are on the Day Line boat, soon to leave the dock. Eddie discovers he has left a suitcase on the dock, so his wife goes to get it. Percy leaves the boat to send a telegram. Before they get back the boat starts leaving them behind, and also leaving the bashful Eddie in the company of the bashful, blushing bride Elsie. Each involuntarily displays marked symptoms of being recently married, and everyone on the boat assumes they are married to each other, all of which is very disconcerting.

They leave the boat at the first landing that it makes, with the intention of getting back to New York immediately and joining their respective spouses. They make their way to a small country hotel to get something to eat and to find out about trains.

The scene printed here, from the New York American, is in the office of the little hotel. A Frenchman, guest of the hotel, is talking with the clerk, just before the arrival of Eddie and Elsie. Dick Rivers is another guest.

Frenchman—Good evening. Ze purser on ze boat told me if I mentioned his name you would take very good care of me. I say—ze purser on ze boat said if I mentioned his name you would take very good care of me.

Clerk (turning around)—What do you want me to do? Kiss you?

Frenchman—I would like a room.

Clerk—Dollar and a half do?

Frenchman—Have you anything else?

Clerk—Yes, two, two and a half and three. With, without or family style?

Frenchman—How do you mean—with—without or family style?

Clerk—With bath, without bath, or Saturday night privilege.

Frenchman—I thought you advertised from one dollar up?

Clerk—Yes, but I'm afraid tha' dollar room has gone.

Frenchman—But I should like a dollar room.

Clerk—All right; I'll give you it.

Frenchman—Is that a nice room?

Clerk—Is it a nice room? You wait here and I'll bring it down and show it to you. (Clerk looks at bag). Say, is that all the baggage you've got?

French—Ye.

Clerk—You'll have to pay in advance.

Frenchman—I beg your pardon, but do you know who I am?

Clerk—No; don't you know anyone who can tell me? Listen—the last guy that trimmed me out of a total bill signed himself Billy Sunday.

Frenchman—Show me that room.

Clerk—Show me that dollar. (Frenchman gives him dollar). You can pull that stuff in big cities, but it don't go in this burg. Register. (He writes.) What are you doing writing home for money? What does that say?

Frenchman—George Francois Sammarer de Rougemont.

Clerk—Recite that poem again slowly and with gestures.

Frenchman—George Francois Sammarer de Rougemont.

Clerk—Yes; some do and some don't.

Frenchman—I have never been insulted in all my life.

Clerk—Then I guess you haven't travelled much. Now listen—take that door there and go down the hall till you hear a female voice say "Sir"—and it's the next room. Here's your key. Wait! Here's your little vanity case.

(Exit Frenchman. Enter Eddie Kettle and Mrs. Darling.)

Kettle—Well, here we are at last. Are you tired, Sweetie?

Mrs. Darling—You musn't call me "Sweetie."

Kettle—A slip of the tongue. I forget sometimes.

Mrs. Darling—But you mustn't forget. I don't ever mistake you for my husband.

Kettle—No?

Mrs. Darling—No. My husband wouldn't have let the other people take the hack and make me walk! I never spent such a miserable day in all my life. Hurry in and see about our getting back to Poughkeepsie.

Kettle—Yes, I will. (Goes to desk.) When does the next boat leave for Poughkeepsie, Clerk? There was a green man down at the dock and he didn't seem to know anything.

Clerk—A green man—and I told them to have a light blue one. What did he tell you?

Kettle—He said there wasn't any.

Clerk—I'd write to the president if you thought he did.

Mrs. Darling—You mean there is not another boat?

Clerk—Not to-day.

Mrs. Darling—What'll we do now?

Kettle—Why, there must be another boat back to Poughkeepsie.

Clerk—I'd write to the president of the line about it if I was you.

Kettle—Oh, I have it.

Mrs. Darling—What is it?

Kettle—We'll take a train.

Mrs. Darling—Yes.

Kettle—When does the next train leave for Ploughkeepsie?

Clerk—To-morrow morning at 10.30.

Kettle—To-morrow morning? Can't we get to Poughkeepsie any other way?

Clerk—Yes; you can take a train down to Weehawken, take the ferry across the river, take a trolley to the Grand Central Station, and then take the New York Central up to Poughkeepsie.

Kettle—Of course. When does the next train for Weehawken leave?

Clerk—Ten-fifteen.

Kettle—Splendid!

Clerk—In the morning.

Kettle—What train leaves here tonight?

Clerk There ain't no more.

Kettle (greatly alarmed)—No more trains out of here tonight?

Clerk—No! No! No!

Kettle—How do people who live here ever get out of this town?

Clerk—Most of them have got out, and the rest have been here so long they don't care.

Mrs. Darling (aghast)—Well, then we will have to stay here for the night.

Clerk—So you will.

(Kettle and Mrs. Darling walk away so clerk can't hear them.)

Mrs. Darling—What will we do now?

Kettle—I don't know.

Mrs. Darling—We have got to get out of here somehow to-night.

Kettle—We can't. Not till morning.

Clerk—I can give you a nice room.

Kettle (quickly)—Two rooms.

Mrs. Darling—Two rooms.

Clerk—All right—I'll give you two nice rooms on the balcony. (Kettle shakes out handkerchief, drops rice all over the floor. Ah—ha! (Clerk comes out from desk. As he sees the rice he starts to sing the Wedding March, and marches around them holding up coat as though it were a train, continues walk—behind desk, humming Wedding March). Register! Register!

Kettle—Oh yes; we must register, mustn't we? (He writes.)

Clerk—You bet you must—even at your size! (Reading register.) If the rice hadn't told me you were on your honeymoon, this would.

Kettle—What is it?

Clerk—You forgot to register for your wife. Only guys what is just married forgets their wives. Afterwards they try to forget them and can't.

Kettle—Must I write Mrs. Kettle underneath?

Clerk—Just put "and wife." (Kettle writes.)

Mrs. Darling (takes his arm)—Did you register?

Kettle—Yes, of course. You always have to register.

Mrs. Darling—What did you put down?

Kettle—Edwin Kettle and wife.

Mrs. Darling—What did you do that for?

Kettle—Because you have to.

Mrs. Darling—Well, maybe you do. But, that can be used against us.

Kettle—No—how?

Mrs. Darling (proud of her superior knowledge)—There was a perfectly awful woman lived in our block and she got a divorce on account of a hotel register.

Kettle—So Percy could get a divorce from you?

Mrs. Darling—Yes, but the other man's wife got a divorce from him on account of the same hotel register.

Kettle—I see. So Georgina could get a divorce from me, too?

Mrs. Darling—You've got to destroy it—steal it or something.

Kettle—Yes, but how?

Frenchman (entering)—Tell me—eex zere any good honting around here?

Clerk—What are you hunting—little dears?

Frenchman—I would like a stag, but I would just love a bear.

Clerk—And how that bear would love you. I should like to be the means of bringing you two together.

Frenchman—I tell you what I like best of all.

Clerk—Yes, do tell me what you like best of all.

Frenchman—A moos!

Clerk—A moos! If you want a moos you'd better speak to the cat about it.

French—No, no, no, not a mouse—a moos. See—dees thing! (Holds up fingers to make horns.)

Clerk—Is that your idea of a moose?

Frenchman—Tell me, do you nevair do any shooting yourself?

Clerk—No, but if we didn't have such a fussy little sheriff, I'd begin right now!

Frenchman—Don't please tell me zere ees no moos around here.

Clerk—Oh, there was a moose around here—but the guests all got to shooting at him, so he left the neighborhood.

Frenchman—Zen zere is nossing left for me to chase?

Clerk—Yes, go chase yourself. You will get a funny looking specimen, to hang on your wall.

(Frenchman exits).

Kettle—I've thought of something about the register. I'll spill ink over it, and then they can't read our names.

Mrs. Darling—Oh! That will be wonderful. Be careful that no one sees you do it.

Kettle—Talk to him so he can't watch me.

Mrs. Darling (talking to clerk)—Beautiful weather, isn't it?

Clerk—I thought you said you were going straight to bed.

Mrs. Darling—I changed my mind. (Kettle spills ink on register and goes upstairs quickly as Rivers comes in. Clerk goes back to desk, sees ink spilled).

Clerk—Say, which of youse guys done this?

Rivers—I beg your pardon, are you addressing me?

Clerk—Someone spilled ink all over this register, and I bet you're the guy that done it.

Rivers—What object would I have in spilling ink all over your little book?

Clerk—So the rest of 'em wouldn't get on that you only had a dollar room.

A GEAMAN SPY'S ESCAPE

The New York American has been badly stung by a story it has recently printed of the escape of a German prisoner from a prison camp near Montreal. The name of this camp is given as being "located at Greensburg, near Montreal,'" a place that Montrealers will be unable to recognize, largely for the reason that, like the famous Mrs. Harris in Dickens' novel, there ain't no sich a place. However, the details of the escape do not suffer on that account.

The spy, who in his lighter moments was also an artist, planned his escape with two companions. "They had resolved to escape from their internment though it cost them their lives. In the final attempt one was killed outright, and the second has not been heard from since." The survivor tells how they got possession of a file and began slowly and with infinite pains to loosen the concrete foundations of a barred window. With this eventually effected, the actual escape was managed late one night of last September, singly, by a ladder made of blanket-strips. The flight and wanderings then begun lasted nearly two months, before the third refugee reached comparative safety.

* * * *

"The night was fairly dark. I ran to the appointed spot and waited in breathless suspense. A half-hour passed. Then down the narrow road I saw one of my chums.

"He wore a big cap pulled down over his face. I could not tell which of my comrades he was until he rushed up to the tree behind which I was hiding. Then I saw that he was a friend educated at Leipzig University.

"I thought I heard a series of shots a few minutes before. However, I said to myself: 'Steady, old man; it's your imagination.'

"But one look at my companion's agonized face, and I knew that something had happened to the third man. I shook him impatiently, and finally he blurted out:

" 'Karl is shot—dead! I got away ahead of him. He followed. I looked over my shoulder. The guards fired. He dropped. I know he is dead.' "

Not the least comic part of this story, which bears everywhere the imprint of fake, is the way the refugees describe their sufferings as they struck for Buffalo. Why even a German should wish to prolong his troubles in this country when the border, from Montreal is but forty miles away, only a natural taste for frightfulness might explain.

However, in the end they strike Welland on the fiftieth day of their travels, and spend the next three days wandering around, looking for a loophole through the Canadian parol, and finally decide to attempt crossing a railroad bridge over the Niagara River. There was "a territorial" on the bridge with a rifle over his shoulder, but the water below was only fifteen feet deep, and the chance of dashing through successfully seemed worth taking. As the German says:

* * * *

"We figured that we could wade in a little way and climb up the steelwork and avoid the guard. We went into the icy water up to our shoulders and laboriously climbed up on the steel structure.

"We lay flat on our stomachs, and my comrade said: 'I'll dash across first. You follow.' As fast as possible we began running. Half-way across a voice shouted, 'Halt, or I'll fire!'

"The soldier levelled his rifle. I hope never to feel so near death again. I shouted to my companion to leap into the river. Helter-skelter we leapt. I was caught in a whirlpool.

"I put my arms around my knees (a trick taught me in the German navy), and the force of the whirlpool hurled me clear.

"Together we swam to the American side. Wet, bedraggled and thoroughly miserable, we crawled up the bank. We had walked a few steps only when two American officers with caps and badges took us into custody.

"We were marched to the police station in Lockport. It was eleven o'clock at night, we were freezing. We had sixty cents between us. We swore we were from Chicago. They locked us up over night and gave us nothing to eat."

* * * *

Apparently they teach German artists a lot of useful things in the German navy. One would have thought that the nation which rejoices in the Wolffe Agency could have taught him how to write a lie that hangs better together than this very lame account. Finally our artist arrives in New York His story ends on a characteristically German exaggeration:

"Since, I have been waiting for my comrade. I do not know whether he was ordered deported (from Lockport). If so, I know he has been shot."

"We might inform our friend the enemy that the penalty of recapture for German escaped prisoners of war is not to be shot in Canada, whatever it may be in the Fatherland. But what's the use?

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

HOLLAND APPREHENSIVE, MAY EXPERIENCE BELGIUM'S FATE

Dutch Struggle Against the Current—Boundary of Five Hundred Miles Guarded by Holland's Army —Germans Want Port

The European war seems to be a great maelstrom against the suction of which no nation on its edges can successfully contend. One after another, nations, apparently without reasonable excuse, have been drawn into the conflict, says the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press. Holland is now struggling against the swirling current, and she may be about to experience the fate of little Belgium, whose only offence was being in the way of a war power anxious to grasp a neighbor quickly by the throat.

Holland is evidently apprehensive. Her forces have been massed on the German border, and she has closed her German frontier. The boundary extends a distance of over 500 miles or about that from Burlington to Washington, offering abundant opportunities for attack by the Germans.

When Belgium Stood in the Path

As Belgium stood in the path of Germany into France at the very outset of the war so Holland to-day finds herself in danger of being crushed between Germany and Great Britain. Great Britain is suspected by the Germans of planning to land a great force on the Dutch coast, with or without the connivance of the government of Holland. The Germans using this suspicion as an excuse are held to be considering the occupation of the Netherland to anticipate any such move on the part of the British.

Germany Sees Excuse.

The mysterious activity of Holland in rushing military preparations is explained in part by former Minister of War Colyn, who says he does not for a moment suggest the possibility that Britain intends to land her new armies on the Dutch coast, for Holland has assurance that Britain will respect her neutrality. The question, however, is what Germany thinks of this.

The Holland government evidently fears Germany will take advantage of the situation, facing such a contingency as British occupation of the Netherlands, to insist upon greater security for herself. If Germany judges Holland's capacity for resistance against a British invasion inadequate, it would be natural for the Kaiser to guard against possible British irruption through Dutch territory. Under these circumstances Germany might make impossible demands upon Holland, and in the event of non-compliance send her own forces into Holland.

How it Might Happen.

It must be admitted that the course of the allies in landin ga large force at Saloniki, as well as at other points on Greek territory, has afforded a precedent, which might naturally lead the Germans to fear the adoption of somewhat similar plans with reference to Dutch territory. It is not conceivable that England would force a landing against Dutch resistance, but such a step might be taken with Holland imitating Greece by making a nominal protest.

In any event, the excuse made by the Germans for sowing mines in the North Sea, especially in the region of the Dutch coast, outside the three-mile limit, is the convention that the allies are about to land troops in Holland with the consent of the Dutch government. The Germans know that the people and government of Holland have been angered, as have Americans and other neutrals, by repeated outrages to which they have been forced by circumstances to submit. The Germans realize fully what it would mean for Holland to join the allies, either willingly or through constraint.

On Germany's Flank.

Holland lies on the flank of the German forces operating against the British and Belgians in Belgium. If the British should land a large force in the Netherlands, the German rear would be threatened, and the Kaiser would be forced to choose between the massing of an enormous force along this new front of 500 miles and the evacuation of Belgium.

When once the Germans had begun to uncover their right flank, there would be no stopping place. Withdrawal of the Germans would open new exposures as well as opportunity for the landing of British troops near Holland. The ultimate logical result of German withdrawal from Belgium would be German withdrawal further south in France, and in the end the lines extending westward from Verdun would be between two forces of allies, that at present faced, and another marching south.

The Coveted Outlet

A glance at the map will show that portion of Holland south of the Meuse River and east of the junction of that stream with the Rhine to be a veritable wedge, jutting into Germany's "natural territory" a hundred miles and separating Germany from the territory now occupied by German troops in Belgium. In the case of invasion, Germany's first manifest move would be to occupy this territory and thus secure a long coveted outlet directly to the North Sea.

The Holland wedge in question is a serious handicap to Germany at this particular time, since supplies from Essen and Dusseldorf for the German forces in Belgium must go south and then north again to round this Dutch land promontory, thus wasting hundreds of miles of travel as compared with the route directly west across this part of Holland into Belgium.

German Forces Massed.

The Germans are plainly disposing their forces on the western battle front with reference to the possibility of just such a move as the attempted landing of a British expedition in Holland. According to the military expert of The London Times, who does not discuss the Holland situation, the Germans have concentrated their forces in the western zone in two great masses—one in front of the British forces, and the other in the region of Verdun.

This great force of Germans confronting the British lines would be ready in case of a movement in Holland to deliver a smashing blow as a counter-irritant or swing a body of troops northward to meet the new danger menacing the Fatherland from the direction. Manifestly the Germans are preparing to attack the British or to meet an expected attack.

BLOOD GUILT OF A NATION

Entire German People Seem Affected with Some Kind of Moral Distemper

Professor Morgan was sent to France last year by the British Home Secretary to investigate the alleged outrages by German soldiers in the French towns and villages which they occupied before the battle of the port. Professor Morgan has the cour- jurist. He has almost an academic regard for the value of direct evidence. He has rejected everything that was only backed by hearsay, however widespread that hearsay might have been.

He has now published the result of his inquiries, including in the same volume a detailed examination of the German official apology for the outrages in Belgium. The result is a document as terrible as the Bryce report. Professor Morga hans the courage to deduce the obvious moral from the fearsome story he has to tell. He is not content to saddle responsibility for a series of unspeakable crimes on the shoulders of the Prussian militarists.

ORGY OF BLOOD.

He boldly indicts a nation. He says: It is the fondest of delusions to imagine that all this blood-guiltiness is confined to the German Government and the General Staff. The whole people are stained with it. The innumerable diaries of common soldiers in the ranks which I have read betray a common sentiment of hate, rapine and ferocious credulity.

The progress of French, British and Russian prisoners, civil as well as military, through Germany has been a veritable Calvary. The helplessness which in others would excite forbearance, if not pity, has in the German populace provoked derision and insult. The old gentleman with the grey beard and gold spectacles who broke his umbrella over the back of a Russian lady, the loafers who boarded a train and under the eyes of the indulgent sentries poked their fingers in the blind eyes of a wounded Irishman who had half of his face shot away, the men and women who spat upon helpless prisoners and threatened them with death, the guards who prodded them with bayonets, worried them with dogs, and despatched those who could not keep up—these were not a Prussian caste, but the German people.

PEOPLE TO BLAME.

I have been told that there are still some individuals in England who cherish the idea that this vast orgy of blood, lust, rapine, hate, and pride is in some peculiar way merely the Bacchanalia of troops unused to the heavy bouquet of the wines of Champagne, or, stranger still, that it is the mental aberration of a people seduced by idle tales into these courses by its rulers.

If the reader is astonished, as well he may be, at the disgusting repetition of stories of rape and .... let him study the statistics of crime in Germany during the first decade of this century, issued by the Imperial Government; he will find in them much to confirm the impression that the whole people is infected with some kind of moral distemper.

Many Military Matters

Supernumerary and attached officers of C. E. F. units who have not qualified for their rank by the 31st May next, or who have not by that date volunteered for active service, are to be struck off the strength of the units to which they are now attached and revert to their militia units.

The Militia Department is certainly now doing everything possible to eliminate the number of officers that are floating around "loose" in Canada. There are thousands in all branches of the service. The reasons for this abnormal condition of affairs could have been prevented with better foresight; but hundreds of precedents had to be made to meet the war condition and now the re-organization of the training and appointing of officers is one of them. The system that for years had been thought by all military experts to be entirely satisfactory has been proven a failure and will probably never be gone back to. It shows the good sense of the Militia Department to take the step that will stop further trouble in this way.

The drainage proposition of Barriefield camp will be much simplified this year by the installation of "grease traps" at every kitchen at the camp. The grease trap is a barrel sunk in the ground fitted with a drain-pipe about a foot from the bottom. The top of the barrel is fitted with a tub and holds in the bottom.

The cooks will in future dump their waste water into these tubs and the grease instead of going into the pipes and stopping the proper draining away of the water, will be caught in the barrel and periodically cleaned out.

The surface drains through the camp will be improved. This is necessary as last year a little trouble for the 59th Battalion arose over the lack of drainage from the unit's grounds.

Lindsay Post: Col. Gillespie has been trying to obtain permission to raise a battalion to go to the front, but as experienced militia officers are very scarce just now, and no one knows Col. Gillespie's work, he has had to curb his desires and stay at home where his country needed him most for the time being. Col. Gillespie's duties include the inspection of all kinds of military units and their equipment as well as executive work at Kingston.

It is published for the information of all concerned that it is His Majesty's wish that on the occasion of His Majesty's birthday, as last year, no dinners, reviews, salutes or other celebrations should take place.

"Why, I had no wife and children—no one but myself to think of; and, besides, I likes war. But how come you to join the army?"

"Well, you see, I had a wife, and I joined the army because I likes peace."

Splendid Scrappers.

According to Alfred Littleton, a Detroit boy who went to Europe with the first Canadian contingent and saw service along the battle lines, the Canadian troops are idolized by the public in England and at the front are liked by all save some of the regular officers, to whom the Canadians' lack of respect for gold braid is a source of much annoyance and who feel themselves aggrieved because some of the enlisted men refuse to click their heels together and salute every time a superior officer passes their way.

"The Canadian boys went over there to fight," is the way Littleton sums up the situation. "They judge a fellow by what he accomplishes, and some of them haven't any more regard for a general, aside from his ability as a fighter, than they have for the humblest civilian. It isn't a matter of disrespect, as the regular officers seem to feel, but a disinclination to spend half their time saluting.

"When it comes to fighting they all agree that the Canadians have it over anybody else on that side of the world, not barring the Germans. The trouble at first was in keeping the Canadians in the trenches. They were always bouncing out of them like rubber balls, and invariably in the direction of the enemy. They'd take a German trench just for the fun of the thing, even if they couldn't hold it—and they didn't care how many lives it cost.

"They're a little more temperate in their actions now, but they haven't lost any of the fighting spirit, and wherever they are put they can be depended upon to give a good account of themselves."

A Preserver.

"How shall we preserve the forests?" said the worried woodsman.

"Leave it to my wife," replied the town idler. "A woman who can preserve green tomatoes and watermelon rinds oughtn't to be balled by a few trees."

It is difficult for the mother to be kind to her boy and not make a fool of him.

HISTORIC NIGHT IN BELGIUM

How Belgian's Entrance Into the War was Decided is Related for the first Time

M. de Basompierre in a poignant recital published in the "Revue des Deux Mondes" gives the first complete version of the hours of August 2, 1914, after which the ultimatum passed at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Belgium:

Ten minutes rolled by, which seemed as hours to us. Then at 7.30 the haughty silhouette of M. Below-Saleske came out in relief from the other side of the court which gives access to the ante-chamber of the Minister, and the representative of Germany, unconscious of the surveillance, reached the street, where his automobile awaited him. With a bound we were in the cabinet of M. Davignon.

The Minister, who had gone to the next office to call Count Leo D'Ursel, his chief counsel, returned, holding in his hand a paper, and followed by the Count.

"This is bad, very bad," said the Minister, who was extremely pale. "Here is the German note. They demand that we give passage for the German army."

"And what have you replied, M. the Minister?"

"I took the paper. I said that I would examine it with the King and my colleagues. We have twelve hours to reply. I said to M. de Below that we might expect anything except this. Germany, who said she was our devoted friend, proposing to dishonor us.

I took a pen and installed myself in the office of the Ministry, while Count Leo D'Ursel and Baron de Gaiffier took the German note and commenced immediately to translate it. The translation was not easy, certain German phrases being susceptible to divers interpretations.

INFAMOUS ULTIMATUM.

M. de Broqueville crossed his arms and remained absorbed in his thoughts. When the work was terminated M. de Broqueville desired me to reread the note in French, which I did. A long tragic silence of several moments succeeded the reading. We were hearing for the first time the infamous ultimatum and we were in a dream. That which dominated our thoughts was certainly the feeling of all—the firm will to be worthy of the ancestors in great periods of trial.

It was the Secretary-General who broke the silence. Addressing the Minister of War, Baron Van der Elst asked him: "At length, Monsieur the Minister, are we ready?" Then M. de Broqueville, very calm, very much master of himself, spoke: "Yes, we are ready. Mobilization is accomplished under marvellous conditions. Commenced yesterday morning, it is almost finished. To-morrow evening the army will be ready to march, tomorrow morning, if absolutely necessary. But we do not yet possess our heavy artillery."

Then suddenly M. de Broqueville took out his watch. "It is 8 o'clock," said he. "It is necessary to go before the King immediately and ask of his Majesty authority to convoke the Council at the palace at 9 o'clock, the Ministers of State at 10 o'clock."

I found in the office of Count D'Ursel quite a gathering. M. de Gaiffier and myself informed them of what was going on. It is with a real sentiment of pride that I state it: No one was in doubt for a second that the reply to the German note could be other than a resolve not to receive indignity.

ONLY ONE REPLY.

Baron de Gaiffier was put to work in the office of the Ministry. I rejoined him there. He had already commenced to prepare a projected reply to the German note. "See you," said he to me, "the Minister is going to return soon and they will demand that we make known our reply. As there is no doubt possible of the tenor of this reply, I have already commenced to gain time."

During the first part of the long session the general ideas of the reply to give to Germany were fixed. Toward midnight a committee of editorship was selected to compose a projected note. M. de Broqueville, Minister of War; Davignon, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Carton de Wiart, Minister of Justice; Van den Heuvel and Hymans, Ministers of State, and Baron Van der Elst then returned to the Street de la Roi. There they found Baron de Gaiffier, who had finished his last draft of the reply. The director-general of policy, without knowing what was decided at the palace, had written exactly what was suitable to reply to Germany. Hardly any phrases were changed by the editing committee.

While this work was being done at 1.30 in the morning the German Minister arrived and demanded to see Baron Van der Elst. The Secretary-General went to receive in his office M. de Below-Saleske. The Minister of Germany should have remarked the coldness of the reception accorded him.

Half an hour later the draft of the reply to Germany was brought to the palace and definitely approved by the Council under the presidency of the King."

George Bernard Shaw says that if the war doesn't end soon he will go to the American continent to live. Let our prayers for peace became more fervent.

Captain Hunter Ill in France

Well Known in Belleville—A Member of 29th Battalion of Vancouver, B. C.

A cable has been received that Capt. W. B. Hunter, of the 29th Overseas' battalion, which went from Vancouver B.C., is seriously ill with typhoid fever in France. He has been in the trenches for seven months.

Capt. Hunter was well known to many in Belleville. He paid an extended visit to our city last summer, being a guest at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. F. Agnew, "Rendenhall," and he made many friends at the golf links, of which game he is an enthusiastic devotee.

Mrs. Hunter sails from New York on Saturday to join her husband.

Patriotic Send Off at Cannifton

Should anyone have any question as to the sympathy of the Cannifton community with the cause of the Allies in the present war, such an one should have been at the Town Hall in Cannifton on Saturday evening last. He would have had his notions blown higher than "Gilroy's kite" ever soared. It became whispered about that seven of the village's young men were about to leave in the service of the Empire, and the community at once set about to give significance to the event and honor to the boys who were stepping into the call of the nation's heroes. Mrs. Fred Mason and Miss Flossie Watts were the popular young ladies to whom the task of canvassing was committed. The response was ready and generous; and the matronly mothers of the canvassers were commissioned to provide some tangible expression of the people's interest in their boys, who had donned the khaki. A meeting was appointed, and the soldiers summoned to the Town Hall. The meeting was called to order and Rev. Mr. Wilson was asked to preside. Mr. Wilson, who long before this had shown his sympathy with the soldiers and recruiting, in his opening remarks called attention to the fact that sixteen of the Cannifton youths were now in active service in the King's army, while from the immediate vicinity in the Township of Thurlow more than thirty of her sons were in the ranks. Some of them had already given life and blood in battle and acquitted themselves in a creditable manner for their King and nation.

Further remarks were made by ex-Reeve Willet Farley and others. Mrs. T. Mills very effectively rendered a solo, while the Lloyd orchestra, from Sidney, always popular in Cannifton, rendered a number of selections appropriate for the occasion. The climax of the hour was reached when the names of Wilfrid Badgley, Ross Callery, Blake Waterhouse, Fred Lawrence, Harold and Wilfred Horn, Jas. Farm and Walter Barlow were responded to upon the call of the chairman. Mrs. Fred Mason and Miss Flossie Watts also were called to the platform, and Mrs. Mason presented to each of the young soldiers a signet ring of gold, the gift of the community, in recognition of their heroism in entering the ranks in defence of liberty. A few words were spoken by Rev. Mr. Wilson to the boys whom, he believed, would heroically defend the nation's honor and preserve their own. They would be followed by the prayerful memories of himself and the Church of God in the serious business they had undertaken. Upon their return they might be assured of a cordial and joyous welcome. The interesting event was brought to a close, by all joining in the National Anthem.

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver

Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed

If every sufferer from indigestion would study his case as did the writer of this letter the great majority would find sluggish action of the liver and bowels to be the cause of trouble.

It is then an easy step to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. With these organs performing their natural functions the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, Hill Spring, Alta., writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's medicines, especially Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered terribly from indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so improved that I began to study the malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion, the nervous spells vanished and the "blues" flew away. I am never sick now, but should the old trouble return, I know how to cure it quickly."

There is a whole host of derangements which disappear when the liver is set right. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, irritability, constipation are a few of the more common results of torpid liver action. By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can control all such disorders. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

An Old-Fashioned Breakfast Dish.

In the old days, before the modern milling process was invented, there were no highly refined cereal foods. The health of the people was better, too, because the coarse, dark cereals then in use contained more nourishment and gave the digestive system more work to do. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is an old-fashioned food, made from the whole berries of wheat, rye, and deodorized and tasteless flax seed. It is a coarse, nut-brown, exceedingly nourishing food, and a natural aid to digestion. It gives the bowels the work they need in order to keep them vigorous and healthy.

An Address of Appreciation

Bayside, Ont., April 5, 1916.

To Bro. David Parks:

We, your brethren of L.O.L. No. 2349, and Council No. 533, R. T. of Templars, are assembled to show our appreciation of you in your decision to be one more "to do his bit," for the grandest Empire the world has ever known; to uphold the freedom of our religion and laws; to fight for our national existence and the right of the small nations, which, under God's appointment, have the right to work out their characteristic genius and welfare; to uphold the cause of our friends, the chivalrous and heroic French; of the martyred and persecuted Belgians and Serbs; the faithful and unconquerable Russians, whose duty is to avenge the thousands of massacred Armenians, in a word: the freedom and civilization of the world, which, were our barbarous enemies to succeed, in their purpose of universal domination through wide world conquest, would be a thing of the past, and would mean the reversal of all things Christian a return to barbarism, a military and autocratic tyrancy almost incomprehensible.

Do we realize that our own political existence depends upon the sacrifice of every physically fit and available man?

You have done what only a true follower of the Cross, a lover of national righteousness should do upon sincere conviction, decide to be "a defender of the faith once delivered to the saints;" a crusader in the true sense of the word; to defeat that autocrat and his associates, whose only conception of living principle is, "That Might is Right" and it is the prerogative of but one, the Kaiser, by 'divine right' to rule universally.

Believing as we do, and no doubt you do, that it is the bounden duty of "the strong to bear the burdens of the weak," and inspired by this religious conviction and the patriotic fire that glows in the heart of every heroic and intensely loyal Briton, you are going forth to die, if need be, so we, your twofold brethren, cannot permit you to leave from us without some token of our esteem of you as a brother, friend and neighbor, and of your willingness to give yourself an offering for your country, your earthly King and God, our Heavenly King, therefore, we ask you to accept this wrist watch as a memento of our love toward you and your esteemed partner in life.

As it beats the passing moments of life may you ever be upheld by the power of God to go forth to battle, trusting in Him, who rewards His faithful servants and soldiers. May you "fight the good fight of faith," and be spared to return to your native land, your home and wife, is our fervent wish and prayer.

We bid you a fond farewell, wish you godspeed and success, and trust in your trying ordeal, you may be strengthened by the prayers of your many Christian friends and brethren of your two fraternal orders.

Signed on behalf of the Joint Committee:

H. R. Hunt, W. H. Finkle, Geo. B. Heagle, Lewis Wilson, Rev. F. G. Joblin.

After the reading of the above address by H. M. Brown, Principal of the Public School, and addresses of many of the brethren all partook of a sumptuous repast prepared by ladies of the neighborhood, and several patriotic songs being sung and suitable readings being given, the happy gathering wended their way home after a few words of reply by the recipient of the gift and the singing of the National Anthem.

"A PAIR OF SIXES," TOMORROW NIGHT

Seats are selling rapidly for, "A Pair of Sixes," to be presented at Griffin's Opera House tomorrow night

The familiar significance of the title, "A Pair of Sixes" to American theatregoers, as well as its quaintness, has made it well known the country over, apart from the fact that the farce enjoyed a run of nearly a year at the Longacre Theatre, New York, and is now being played North, East, South and West.

The play was received by the metropolitan critics with an expression of praise that almost exhausted the superlatives and the hilarious farce has made good everywhere despite this avalanche of praise. It has made theatregoers expect much and they have not been disappointed. For ingenuity of plot, bright dialogue, hilarious complications and most amusing situations, it has been declared the best play of its kind ever seen on the English-speaking stage. It is by Edward Peple, the author of "The Little Rebel" and "The Prince Chap," and is in three acts.

The plot deals with the affairs of George B. Nettleton and T. Briggs John, partners in a pill manufacturing business, who are constantly at loggerheads, each longing to be rid of the other, but neither willing to sell out. They summon their lawyer but decline his various propositions for dissolution until, in despair, he suggests a contract with numerous conditions by which a hand of poker is to be played, with the penalty that the loser shall quit the business for a year and in the interval serve as a servant in the household of the winner. The lawyer is interested personally because he hopes to see T. Boggs John lose and with his lips sealed by the contract he will be humiliated before the girl with whom he is in love, and in whom the lawyer is also interested. The breaking of the contract means a forfeiture of $5,000 and sacrifice of his share of the business. John loses and Nettleton and the lawyer both feel he will break the contract rather than stick it out for a year. But he grits his teeth and bravely enters upon his duties as butler in the Nettleton household. He is found here performing his menial duties by his sweetheart, who arrives as the guest of the Nettletons.

VENGEANCE IS MINE AT GRIFFIN'S LAST NIGHT

An especially interesting program was given at Griffin's Opera House last night, featuring Irving Cummings in "The Doctor's Strategy," an interesting 2-part comedy, with a decidedly unique trend in that an objecting father was "looked after" before he would consent to the marriage of his daughter. The play was well presented, and drew forth much amusement. But the feature of the evening was a 5-part Masterpiece entitled "Vengeance is Mine," with the popular film star Crane Wilbur as the leading actor. The initial part depicted an attempted act of treachery by a social wolf upon an attractive young lady, which was followed up after her marriage with the newly elected governor, bringing out some fine acting on the part of the principal characters, including the governor's brother, who assailed the miscreant, his death resulting from a revolver shot at the hand of a third party. The brother was arrested and sentenced to death. From this out many intricate features ensued, the governor coming in for criticism, as to whether he would pardon his near relative; the grafters working their cards, state officials seeking the liberation of the condemned one, yet the governor holding to the theory that justice must be recognized, until it transpired that his wife fired the fatal shot, when a pardon was granted, followed by the governor's resignation to prevent a scandal, though the wife was justified in ridding the world of the villian. The play was superbly worked out, and thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience present. A highly amusing comedy entitled "Droppington's Family Tree" resulted in many a laugh. The entire programme will be repeated tonight.

AMERICAN TOURISTS WELCOME TO CANADA

Many disturbing and unfounded rumours are current in the United States regarding the difficulties met with by American visitors entering Canada, and this has led Superintendent W. D. Scott, of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, to issue a vigorous statement of the views of the Dominion Government on this subject.

"The Canadian Government," says Mr. Scott, "views sympathetically the tourist traffic, and out of the thousands who visited various parts of Canada last year I think very few had any reason to complain of their treatment. We shall continue to welcome bona fide tourists and visitors as in other years, but I may say frankly that there are people of certain nationalities that we cannot encourage to visit Canada while the war is in progress.

NO PASSPORTS NECESSARY

"Passports are entirely unnecessary; they have never been called for in the past, are not now, and are not likely to be so far as travel between the United States and Canada is concerned.

"All United States citizens whether by birth or naturalization are accorded the same treatment. Persons born in Germany, Austro-Hungary, Bulgaria or Turkey and who still remain citizens of one or other of these countries, should not visit Canada at this time. Persons born in one or other of the countries named but who have been naturalized in the United States may visit Canada if they so desire, but they should carry their United States naturalization papers as a means of identification. Persons who are citizens of friendly or neutral countries may visit Canada with the same freedom accorded to United States citizens.

CONSCRIPTION NOT CONTEMPLATED

"Conscription does not exist in Canada and is not contemplated although it has been much talked of in the United States, especially by certain interests unfavorable to Canada. No one need, therefore, miss visiting Canada through fear of conscription.

"This letter may be accepted as final on the subject with which it deals, and I trust that American tourists who this year desire to visit Canada will not be deterred by false rumours spread by thoughtless or mischievous persons."

AN IDEAL SUMMER OUTING.

The Provincial Government of Ontario earned the gratitude of all lovers of out-of-doors when it set apart, in 1893, over two million acres of heavily timbered land starred with beautiful lakes and winding streams, as a preserve for the wild things and a recreation ground for the people. They called it Algonquin Park. Away up in the "Highlands of Ontario," 200 miles north of Toronto and two thousand feet above the level of the sea, this lovely region remains to-day unspoiled, a perfect refuge for the creatures of the forest and an ideal camping ground for the sportsman and business man. The Grand Trunk have erected hotels and log cabin camps which offer first class accommodation in this wild and rugged playground. Illustrated descriptive literature may be had for the asking. Soldier In A Matrimonial Tangle

Ottawa Girl Claims She Went through Form of Marriage With Married Man

A matrimonial tangle, in which a man who attended Barriefield Camp last summer is involved, is reported, and the authorities are now busy looking up the records.

Bertha Allan, a domestic living in Ottawa, believed that she was the legal wife of Corpl. Stephen Standing, of the 8th C.M.R., as the result of a marriage which she claims took place in Toronto on June 6th last. On April 10th, she received word that her husband had died from pneumonia in England. The message was supposed to have been sent by her husband's mother.

Now it turns out that there is another Mrs. Standing with prior rights, also living in Ottawa, and the indications are that Corpl. Standing is not dead at all. At least the casualty branch has no record of either his illness or death.

Military records show that Lance-Corpl. Standing enlisted with the 8th C.M.R. on January 30th, 1915, giving as his next of kin, Mrs. Standing, of Hilson avenue, Ottawa. This was some months before, according to Bertha Allan's claim, a man of the same name was married to her. All the records at the Patriotic Fund office show Mrs. Standing, of Hilson avenue, to be his wife She has two children and is receiving the allowances. Bertha Allan says she met Standing about a year ago that he courted her six months, and then they were married.

There is no record in Toronto of the marriage of any Stephen Standing and Bertha Allan either on June 9th 1915, or any other date. Mrs. Standing, No. 1, expresses the opinion that the girl has been duped by another soldier, who used her husband's name. She is confident that no duplicity was practised by her husband.

CALLED BY DEATH

MRS. ELIZABETH MORTON

There passed away at her home in Thomasburg, on April 10th, 1916, Mrs. Elizabeth Morton, relict of the late Thomas Morton, who preceded her to the tomb over 8 years ago. Mrs. Morton was born in Belleville on October 8th, 1833, being the oldest child of the late William Morton. Her mother's maiden name was Mary Beckett. A few years after the rebellion in 1837, in which her father took an active part, she moved with her parents to the Township of Huntingdon, near the Village of Moira, where she lived until her marriage in 1851, then coming to live near Thomasburg. She was possessed of a strong constitution and enjoyed the best of health until the last few weeks of her life. She had a wonderful memory and loved to talk of Belleville in those early days when it was little more than a village; the school she attended taught by Miss Tapson, also St. Thomas' Church, the rector being the Rev. John Grier. The pulpit and prayer desk were of the old "three decker" order, and placed in the centre of the church. She was a constant reader of The Intelligencer from her childhood and could well remember when "Mack Bowell" (now the Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell) used to deliver the paper, which only consisted of one or two sheets in those days. She was quiet and unassuming in her manner, with a very kindly disposition, never wilfully hurting the feelings of any one. The funeral, which was largely attended, was held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday afternoon, by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Richards, who preached a splendid sermon from 2 Tim., 4th Chap., 7th verse: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." She is survived by a family of four sons and three daughters. James, of Moosomin; G. Allen, of Belleville; Wesley and Robinson of Thomasburg; Mrs. J. G. Elliott, of Tweed; Mrs. J. E. Brown, and Miss Phoebe of Thomasburg; also two brothers, Thompson and Mack, and one sister, Mrs. Phoebe Holbert of Moira.—Com.

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

EX-ALD. WM. LOTT

Although ex-Ald. William Lott, who resided on Mill street, Belleville, had been for some time in failing health, his demise which occurred at midnight last night was by no means expected, and was a surprise to his many friends in the city. He had for some time been suffering from anemia, which caused his death. On the 19th of December, 1849, deceased was born in the Township of Sidney, near Frankford village, being a son of the late Mr. Charles Lott, who was a U. E. Loyalist descendant. In early life, Mr. Lott was apprenticed to the woollen trade, being for some time in the woollen mills at Campbellford. In 1866 he came to Belleville where he has since resided. For many years he had successfully conducted a woollen and grist mill in this city. He was a citizen who was well known and much respected. In the year 1886 he was elected an Alderman for Bleecker Ward, and represented that Ward in the City Council for a number of years. He was also elected an Alderman after the Ward system had been dispensed with. He was faithful in the discharge of his duties whilst occupying this position. Mr. Lott in religion was an Anglican. Deceased was prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of Moira Lodge No. 123, Moira Chapter No. 7, King Baldwin Preceptory No. 106, and was also a Shriner. He was also a Member of Belleville Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 81, a member of the A.O.U.W. and Chosen Friends Societies. He left to mourn his demise three sons and two daughters. Y. M. C. A. Notes

The Union Services were again well attended yesterday afternoon and the Scripture reading given by Rev. A. S. Kerr was very helpful.

Today's speaker will be the Rev. C. Currie, and on Thursday the Rev. C. G. Smith. To these meetings you are heartily invited.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

The High Court of Justice opened in Belleville yesterday afternoon before the Hon. Justice Middleton. There are only three cases to be disposed of.

The case of Wellman et al vs Grand Trunk Railway has been settled by the defendants paying $4,000 and $300 towards the costs. Charles Wellman was killed at the Canifton road crossing, of the G.T.R., and his wife was severely injured. The accident occurred on Saturday, January 8th. Under the terms of settlement $2,400 goes to Mrs. Wellman and $1,600 to the five children. Mr. D. W. M. Shorey for plaintiff, and Mr. W. H. Biggar, K.C., for defendants.

Livingstone vs Kemp—This case was settled between the parties involved. T. A. O'Rourke for plaintiff, and W. C. Mikel, K.C., for defendant.

Gage vs. Reid—This case was in progress today. The plaintiff is claiming unstated damages from the defendant on the grounds of false arrest. Gage was some time ago convicted for having and selling liquor at Point Anne without a license. Two charges were proven, and he was fined $300 and costs in both cases, or in default six months in jail. The accused did not appear for trial evidently having left this part of the country. He was located at Orillia and was apprehended by Chief of Police Reid of that place on receipt of a telegram. Gage is now claiming damages against Reid, alleging that it was a malicious prosecution. J. B. Mackenzie for plaintiff, Messrs. Porter and Carnew for defendant.

Calling Out the Reserves—Happy is the man or woman who can call upon reserves of health and strength in every crisis. Building up reserves is a question of eating the right kind of food. Shredded Wheat Biscuit supplies all the material needed for nourishing the tissues and its daily use keeps the bowels healthy and active. Eat it for breakfast with hot milk or cream.

Made in Canada.

THIS IS THE 625TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

TWENTIETH CENTURY GRAFTING RAMPANT.

In the latter period of the 19th century, when things were booming and flourishing, it will be remembered that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in one of his flowery orations when boasting of good times under Liberal rule, declared that the 19th century was an epoch in the history and prosperity of the United States, but that the 20th century was to be Canada's era of rejoicing. This prophecy has proved correct to a great extent, so far as trade and commerce is concerned. But there is a dark and lamentable side to the picture! The 20th century will be noted in Canadian history as one of graft and pilfering of public funds, whether of a municipal, school or government character. Scarcely a newspaper comes under the notice of its readers that there are not columns to be found full of charges of wrong doing on the part of too many of those who have dealings with the public bodies, leading the thoughtful to the conclusion that there is too much truth in the statement of a venerable clergyman when discussing this phase of public life, "that the taking from municipalities and governments by those having connection with them all they could get, right or wrong, had actually entered into the morals of the people."

As evidence of the truth of the statement that too many do not think it morally wrong to pilfer from public bodies, all one has to do is to call to mind the findings of the different commissions appointed to investigate and inquire into the wrong doings of those who have had dealing with public affairs. They could be numbered by scores, of a petty and gigantic character. It is often asked, how is it that some men in public life become suddenly wealthy? That is a problem which people solve in various ways to their own satisfaction, and that, too, in many cases, of a not very favorable character.

Today we are regaled with the Victoria Harbor scandal, serious charges of bribery by members of the Alberta Cabinet and members of the Assembly; the Saskatchewan buying of members of the Legislature; the Manitoba iniquities; the offer to sell his influence in the Ontario Legislature by one of its members, which offence, by the by, must must have been looked upon as a virtuous act, for his constituents re-elected him, and he now sits in the Ontario Legislature, fortunately repudiated by both parties. Quebec has not been behind in this particular. The Monseau episode is an example, when members of both branches of the legislature had to resign their seats on account of receiving money for their influence in carrying questionable measures through parliament, and no one was punished. Political influence was too potent, the Government condoned the offence, and the bribed were allowed to pass into private life untainted as jail-birds.

Nova Scotia had its turn of squandering public money in the dock yards on the Intercolonial Railway by employing men at election times who, it was sworn by officials, were not wanted. In New Brunswick, at the present moment, the Deputy Minister of Public Works has been, or is to be, dismissed for having accepted a bribe of $10,000 in stock from a Concrete Co. This is not all. It was "also "revealed upon investigation that "$5,000 worth of stock found its "way from the same concern to the "son of the Minister of Public "Works."

These are but a few of the cases that might receive attention, which would justify Sir Wilfrid in changing his laudation of the twentieth century as being Canada's, into a lament of public graft during the fifteen years of his rule, and its continuance of a bad example set during those fifteen years.

BIGAMY.

This crime is becoming too frequent in Canada and the punishment imposed upon the offenders too lenient, leading to the opinion that Judges do not look upon the offence as being of a very heinous character.

Here are a couple of cases:—

One was at the Whitby Assizes on the 16th inst., where the criminal pleaded guilty, and his punishment was only four months in the Ontario Reformatory. This light sentence was imposed owing to the first wife pleading for leniency, the Judge apparently coming to the conclusion that, as the first wife was of a forgiving disposition, he should not be too severe.

In London, Ontario, on the 16th inst. another case of bigamy was brought before the Judge. The offender also pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to two years in the Kingston Penitentiary. This man was passing as an honorable citizen where he lived, having been Secretary-Treasurer of the C.N.W. Shoe Co. until a short time before the discovery, and had only recently arranged with the town of Owen Sound for a loan to establish a shoe factory there.

The light sentence was, says the report, explained by Judge Macbeth as being due to numerous pleas for leniency that had been made to him, and to the good character Wilson had borne while in London.

Poor reasons for such a light sentence, though more commensurate for the crime than the four months in the Ontario Reformatory given by the Whitby Judge to the other offender. It were well if Judges would be more severe with such criminals in order to put a stop to Mormonism in Canada.

London Free Press: Mr. N. W. Rowell says he did not discuss bilingual schools with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with whom he had luncheon at the Rideau Club, Ottawa, a few days ago. Why did the two Liberal leaders avoid an issue that must have had a place in their respective minds? An appeal has gone up from this province to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to call off the bilingual agitators of Quebec. Why did not Mr. Rowell press home this appeal? No one should know quite so well as Sir Wilfrid Laurier that there is no foundation in fact for Quebec opposition to Ontario school. If he does not know it, it is the first duty of Mr. Rowell to enlighten him. It is discouraging to learn from Mr. Rowell that in his meeting with Sir Wilfrid the topic of bilingual schools in Ontario was studiously avoided.

Hamilton Spectator: Sir Wilfrid Laurier is at his old trick again. His game in 1896 was to arouse the Protestants of Ontario against the granting of separate schools to the minority of Manitoba, and at the same time very artfully to produce upon the minds of the French habitants of Quebec the impression that if he were in power he would be able to get more out of the Greenway Government toward such schools than Sir Charles Tupper would be able to do. Ontario went against Tupper on that issue, and Quebec went for Laurier. Gaining both ways, the wily French leader was swept into office. His main reliance has been on Quebec ever since.

Against the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt as the Republican candidate for the Presidency, there are strong influences. To him the New York State Republican machine is decidedly hostile. William Barnes now wields the power of that machine, following a long line of distinguished predecessors, including Thurlow, Weed, Roscoe Conkling and Thomas C. Platt. When Roosevelt began his political career by entering the New York Legislature, it was for the very purpose of breaking up the machine, which was suspected of making corrupt deals with Tammany. From that day to this, Roosevelt has been anathema to Barnes.

Telegraphing from Cologne, the correspondent of the Tijd says: "Catholic ecclesiastical authorities in Germany have received from an authoritative source in the Catholic mission trustworthy information that more than one million Armenians have been murdered by Turks through starvation or ill-treatment. About 100,000 Catholics were among them and included four bishops." The message concludes: "Popular feeling among the Armenians was roused against the Turks by the British."

Montreal Gazette: The decision of the legal committee of the Ontario Legislature that henceforth a witness in court may be sworn while holding a Testament in his hand, instead of kissing it, is in the nature of a concession to the sticklers for cleanliness. Interested and dishonest witnesses will continue, as hitherto, to lie cheerfully, after swearing to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Current Comment

The value of the German mark rose sensationally on the Amsterdam Exchange market on Monday on various peace rumors. Both French and British money also showed slightly higher quotations.

For treating his wife to a glass of wine in a public house, the husband and also the wife were fined $5 in England recently. If he had treated her to a thrashing instead, he would likely have been told to go home and behave himself.

The Borden Government evidently regards the Kyte charges as serious, or it would not invite two eminent judges to investigate them.—Toronto Star. The Borden Government is simply honest and wishes to keep nothing covered.

In the coming British Columbia elections there is to be a referendum on the woman suffrage question. The women of the province, if they desire the vote, should now get busy in the matter of convincing their brothers of the fairness of their cause. Activity is what counts.

The Liberal party of Canada would be false to its highest ideals if it failed to make the cause of the people its own, even at the cost of political success.—Montreal Herald. In the name of all that is decent, ease up. This thread-worn yarn of loving the people has become so porous that the country can see through it.

The Toronto Globe, viewing the situation from the outside, ventures respectfully to suggest that no troopship should hereafter be permitted to carry 5,785 Canadian soldiers across the Atlantic. A single well-aimed torpedo might well cost Canada more sorrow than the losses in a great battle.

The Grain Growers' Guide declares that the "city people are the strongest supporters of the protectionist system." This is the common notion of Free Trade journals. It is not greatly supported by the facts on this Continent. The rural communities of Ontario have sustained Protection for a generation. In 1911 they voted as strongly against Reciprocity as the centres of population.—Toronto News.

New York Times: The Imperial German Government is solemnly playing with the idea that the American Government can be induced to go on discussing irrelevancies and abstractions for ever. There is no other possible explanation of its note on the Sussex case. To rest a disclaimer upon the fact that a drawing made by the German submarine commander of the boat he did sink, at the very same time and place, fails to resemble a picture of the Sussex published in an English illustrated weekly, is a reflection upon our intelligence, which hurts us most of all.

PASSOVER IN TYPE AND IN ANTITYPE

First-born of Israel Type of the Church.

Only First-Borns in Danger of the Destroying Angel—Passing Over of Antitypical First-Borns Full of Meaning for the World—First-Borns the Blessers of Their Brethren—Eating the Lamb With Bitter Herbs—Jesus Our Passover Lamb—He Instituted a New Feature Not Shown in the Type—Partaking of Jesus' Blood—Church to Be Broken, to Shed Their Blood, With Christ.

PASTOR RUSSELL

New York City April 16.—Pastor Russell lectured here today, at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway, on the subject of the Passover. His text was, "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." (1 Corinthians 5: 7, 8.) We give a condensed report of his discourse:

The Passover ceremonies, the first institution of Divine favor with the nation of Israel, prefigured the first institution of Divine favor inaugurated by our Lord Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, or Holy Communion. As the Apostle indicated in our text, the Jewish Passover was a foreshadowing, or typifying, of the better things, the real Passover, with which we Christians have to do. We are not wholly dependent upon the Jewish type of our information, however; for we have clear, Divine statements by our Lord and His Apostles respecting the relationship between Christ and His Church and respecting the special salvation of the Elect. Nevertheless, we find in the Passover type many details which assist us greatly in the understanding of the Antitype.

First of all we should notice that the Passover directly affected only the first-borns of Israel, although it indirectly affected all the remainder of Israel. That is to say, the last plague upon Egypt was the death of all their first-borns; and the Passover celebrates the fact that the first-borns of Israel were spared, or passed over, by the destroying angel in that night. As the younger children of the Egyptians were not endangered, neither were the younger children of the Israelites. Hence the latter were not passed over. Yet they were certainly interested in the passing over, or sparing, of the first-borns, not merely because of their relationship, but because in the Lord's providence those first-borns became leaders and deliverers of the people on the next day, as they went forth from Egypt.—Numbers 8:17,18.

Furthermore, those first-borns of Israel, exchanged by Divine direction for the entire tribe of Levi, were thereafter represented in them; and they, as the sacrificing priests and the teaching Levites, became the ministers of the Law Covenant for that nation. The antitype of this was distinctly pointed out by the Apostle Paul; namely, that the elect Church of this Gospel Age is "the Church of the First-borns, which are written in Heaven." These are to be the "able ministers of the New [Law] Covenant."—Hebrews 12:23; 2 Corinthians 3:6.

These first-borns alone are being dealt with during this Gospel Age, or "night." These alone are in danger of a death penalty. As the Apostle declares, if we sin wilfully after we have received the knowledge of the Truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for our sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour us as the adversaries of God and of righteousness. (Hebrews 10: 26, 27.) Nevertheless, the whole world of mankind is certainly interested in this Church of the First-borns, in its successful passing over, its attainment of everlasting life; for these are the Royal Priesthood and the instructors of the New Covenant, which is shortly to be sealed, and by the terms of which all the families of the earth are to be blessed. All mankind will receive the blessing of reconciliation to God through the knowledge of the Truth and through the blessings of the Millennial Kingdom, associated with the New Covenant.—Jeremiah 31: 31-34.

Jesus the Passover Lamb.

Having noted the first-born class, we should discern clearly also the Passover Lamb, through the merit of whose blood the passing over of the first-borns was effected. The lamb is a peculiarly innocent animal, wholly unprepared for defense or resistance, and thus a suitable picture, or type, of our Lord, who was nonresistant and who fully and freely surrendered His rights and His earthly interests on our behalf—on behalf of the First-borns. True, others than the First-borns will ultimately profit by His sacrifice, but these especially and peculiarly so. Thus far God's only dealings during this Gospel Age are with this class. These alone have an Advocate with the Father—Jesus Christ the Righteous. (1 John 2: 1, 2.) These alone thus far are reconciled to God.

All of God's blessings to the unbelievers must come in the future, under the New Covenant; for only believers can be justified by faith and receive the blessings of the Faith Covenant—the Abrahamic Covenant. "The Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," first saves, or passes over, the Church of the First-borns, and later in the Millennium will bless all who become Abraham's seed.

There are pictures of the Church which represent her as participating with the Lord in His sacrifice; but this Passover type is not one of these. The Passover lamb represented our Lord Jesus Christ as "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1:29.) But the sin of the world has not yet been taken away. Our Lord has not yet applied His merit for the world, but only and expressly for the Household of Faith. In another sacrifice, which represents our Lord and the Church conjointly sacrificing, as Head and members, the body of the animal was cut into various pieces and laid with the head upon the altar, thus typifying Christ Jesus as the Head and the Church as His members. (Exodus 29: 15-17.) But provision was made that the Passover sacrifice was not to be divided. It was to be eaten whole—not a bone was to be broken. It represented, not Christ and the Church, but Christ alone in His sacrifice. — Exodus 12:46; John 19:36.

"In That Night."

Be it remembered that the passing over took place in the night, not in the daylight. When the morning arrived, the Israelites went forth out of the land of Egypt to liberty, to freedom from bondage. But during the night they were still in bondage, waiting for the deliverance which could come only after the passing over of the first-borns. That night of the type represented this Gospel Age.

This same thought is given by our Lord when He says, "Let your light so shine before men;" again, "Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house." (Matthew 5: 15, 16.) The Apostle Peter expresses the same thought, saying, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the Day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts." (2 Peter 1:19.) Again, the Prophet, speaking of the Church, says: "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."—Psalm 119:105.

Numerous other Scriptures refer to the new Millennial Dispensation as the Morning in which the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams, and in which the shadows of superstition and works of darkness shall all be driven away. The appropriateness of this figure must be evident to every reasonable mind. God's people are children of the Day in the sense that their hopes and sentiments belong, not to the darkness of sin, not to the nighttime, but to the Day, to the Reign of Righteousness, for which they are praying, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven."

Eighteen centuries ago our Lord said that He had come as a Light into the world, but that men loved darkness rather than light. (John 8:12; 3:19-21.) Only a few yet recognize Him as "the true Light." But eventually He will "light every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9.) Indeed, His Church are invited to become associated with Him as lamp-bearers; and if faithful in permitting their light to shine now, they will by and by be parts of that great Sun of Righteousness which shall heal the world with its beams. Our Lord pointed this out in the parable of the Wheat and the Tares. He declared that in the end of this Age He would gather the wheat into the barn; and that then should "the righteous shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father." (Matthew 13:43.) Alas, that so few have "an ear to hear" and accept the wonderful teachings of the Divine Plan!

Blood on the Doorposts All Night.

The Israelites were instructed that the blood of the lamb must be sprinkled on the doorposts and the lintels of their houses that night. This indicated that all who would belong to the Household of Faith must believe in the precious blood of Christ, and thus be "justified by faith" irrespective of denomination. To believe thus would make us members of the Household of Faith; but it would not determine whether or not we would be of the First-borns. The Very Elect, the Saints, the Royal Priesthood, have this place of seniority in the Household of Faith—not by reason of natural years, but by reason of spiritual development. They are priests, elders, in the sense of their primacy of development in the character-likeness of their Redeemer, which also indicates their faith and obedience.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the fact that this is the Scriptural teaching. We are not merely to believe that Jesus lived, that Jesus died. We are especially to believe that He died SACRIFICIALLY, "the Just for the unjust," and are to accept our share of the redemption which He secured by His precious blood. The sprinkling of the blood upon the doorposts in the type implied public confession of the precious blood of the Lamb of God, in His death and in its efficacy for us, which is thus signified.

It will be remembered that the Israelites were enjoined against going out of the house during the night; for when the Lord would pass through to smite the Egyptians, He would see the blood upon lintels and doorposts, and would not suffer the destroying angel to come into their houses. (Exodus 12:1-13.) The injunction that those under the door sprinkled with blood should not go out from under it during that night has special application and force with respect to the first-borns. Antitypically it signifies that if any of us who are of the First-borns should go out from under the blood, in the sense of denying the merit, the efficacy, of the blood of Jesus, the penalty of such a course would be death—the Second Death—hopeless extinction.—Hebrews 6:4-6; 10:26-31.

Eating the Lamb.

As the blood of the lamb marked the household of faith, not merely the first-borns of that household, so the eating of the lamb was not merely for the first-borns, but for all the household. So our Lord said, "My flesh is meat indeed;" and again, "This is the Bread which came down from Heaven; he that eateth of this Bread shall live forever." (John 6: 55, 58.) In other words, not only was it necessary that Jesus should die, a meritorious Sacrifice, but it is also necessary that all who would have profit through His Sacrifice must feed upon Him—must appropriate the merit of His sacrifice.

The eating of the lamb pictured, or typified, the appropriation, by the Household of Faith, of those earthly rights and interests which were forfeited by Adam's disobedience and redeemed by Jesus' death. In other words, it signifies our appropriating justification from sin. We eat by faith, and therefore are said to be "justified by faith." By faith we are permitted to count ourselves as fully reinstated in God's favor through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, even as we were debarred from Divine favor through the demerit of Adam's sin. The eating of the lamb signifies the appreciation of these things and the appropriation of them to ourselves. The more we eat, the greater is our feeling of satisfaction in respect to our freedom from condemnation and our reinstatement in Divine favor through the merit of our Passover Lamb.

The Blood of the New Covenant.

Year by year for more than sixteen centuries the Jews kept the Passover by Divine decree—not merely the sacrifice of the lamb and the eating of it on the same night, after the doorposts had been sprinkled with blood, but additionally a feast of seven days following. That Passover feast represented the joys and rejoicings, the blessings and favors of relationship to God, based upon the merit of the Passover lamb—its sacrifice and the eating thereof. Yet the Jews understood not the meaning of what they did. It was not necessary that they should understand. When God's due time came, the explanation would be granted.

That due time came on the night in which our Lord was betrayed—the night of the fourteenth day of the first month, the very night of the typical killing of the Passover lamb. The Master gathered about Him His twelve Apostles. They had their usual Passover supper of roast lamb; and afterwards our Lord introduced what we familiarly term "The Lord's Supper"—a new symbolization of the antitypical Passover.

What our Lord introduced was to take the place of the Jewish ceremony with His followers, to carry out the same thought, but on a higher plane, as representing a clearer, better understanding of the matter. Instead of the lamb would be the unleavened bread, representing our Lord's flesh. This He distributed to His Apostles, saying, "This is My body, which is given for you; this do in remembrance of Me." (Luke 22: 19.) The eating of that unleavened bread represented their appropriating to themselves of the merit of Christ's sacrifice—their justification by faith.

Then our Lord added a new feature—"the cup." For while all believers might partake of the bread, might realize justification through the merit of His sacrifice, yet only a certain class of believers were invited to partake of the blood. The cup represented death. Ordinarily, under the Jewish Law, the partaking of blood would represent blood guiltiness, or responsibility for the death. (Leviticus 17:10-14.) But our Lord gave His disciples fruit of the vine as symbolic of His blood; and He urged upon them its appropriation, saying, "This cup is the New Testament in My blood, which is shed for you," and "for many." "Drink ye all of it."—Luke 22:20; Matthew 26:27, 28.

This invitation to drink of His blood signifies a participation with Christ as His members in a sacrifice of earthly life, earthly interests, hopes, aims, ambitions—everything. All who accept this invitation to drink of His blood thereby pledge their lives in the same service for which He gave His life. This thought is entirely additional to any[illegible] the Jewish [illegible]. There is no intimation that any of the household were to partake of the blood of the slain lamb. Nevertheless we who now accept our Lord's proposition to share in His blood and lay down our lives with Him in defense of the Truth, thereby mark ourselves as elder brothers in the Household of Faith, members of the First-borns with our Lord, our Redeemer, and as prospectively the Royal Priesthood.

"As Ye Are Unleavened."

The Apostle Paul points out these items to which we have called attention. He says that the Lord's consecrated followers are counted as members of the Body of Christ, the Church, under Jesus the Head. He indicates that the broken loaf represents primarily our Lord Jesus, who was broken for us; and that secondarily it represents the Church of Christ, those who willingly and joyfully yield themselves for the sake of the Lord's Cause. He also points out that the cup of Christ's blood, of which we are invited to partake, signifies to us a common union in the sufferings and afflictions of Christ.

Therefore, whoever intelligently partakes of the Memorial Supper thereby indicates two things: (1) his faith in Jesus as the Passover Lamb, and his appreciation and participation in the merit of Jesus—his justification by faith; and (2) his membership in the Body of Christ, all the members of which agree to be broken—membership in that "little flock" whose faithfulness is manifested by drinking of the Master's cup—sharing with Him in His sacrifice, suffering with Him in order to reign with Him.—1 Corinthians 10: 16,17; 2 Timothy 2: 11, 12.

"HAD ALMOST GIVEN UP."

Sarnia, Ont.—"About 27 years ago I was taken very bad, my blood, too, was in bad shape. I got so I had to go to bed and I was there for over three months I could not eat and suffered untold agony I had three of the best doctors I could get but it just seemed nothing was going to help me. I had almost given up. I thought I would never be any better and was willing to give up and die rather than suffer as I was. A neighbor of mine told me of Dr. Pierce's wonderful remedies and I decided to use them. My husband bought me six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I had not taken it long until I felt better. In less than six weeks I was out of bed, and in less than six months I was cured and have been well ever since. Do all my own work. I have raised three daughters, two are married and have children. They have used it and they are healthy, so are their children. I am sure it was all on account of my having them use the medicine.

"I keep all of Dr. Pierce's medicines in the house. Have 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Smart-Weed'—anything prepared by Dr. Pierce is good. I also have a copy of the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which I have had 26 years; it has been very valuable to me."—MRS. J. WAY, 232 Ontario St., Sarnia, Ont.

FARM AND GARDEN

PRODUCTION AND THRIFT CAMPAIGN.

Plant a Vegetable Garden This Spring.

A garden 60 x 100 feet should produce sufficient vegetables for a family of ten persons, and leave some surplus for storage for winter. Cultivated by hand, it will occupy most of the spare time of a city dweller. A man cannot be a motor car or baseball enthusiast and at the same time make a success of a garden of this size. However, even smaller plots, if intelligently handled, may be made to yield an astonishing quantity of good crisp vegetables, which have not lost their health-preserving value in the store window. Where the space available is small, crops should be selected that take but little space and give quick returns. Potatoes, cabbage, corn, egg-plant, peppers, had better be dispensed with, and the space devoted to such things as peas, beans, spinach, lettuce, carrots, beets, tomatoes and onions. Tomatoes should be stake-trained.

The cultivation of vegetables is easy and agreeable, and in the days when meat, eggs, milk and other staple articles are tending steadily to increase in price, a wider use of vegetable foods will reduce living expenses and promote health.

The best time to do garden work is early in the morning and in the evening; so that it is well to encourage the healthful habit of early retiring and early rising. If the work is done for the love of it, rather than from necessity, these hours will be the most agreeable of the day.

Garden Notes.

Vegetables are gross feeders and require a large amount of plant food to give maximum results. Well rotted manure is the ideal garden fertilizer.

In small gardens, particularly where the soil is light, if manured and dug over in the autumn, a second digging in the spring will be advisable only of such portions as are to be devoted to such crops as cabbage, tomatoes, egg-plant, lettuce. A stirring of the surface will be sufficient where beets, carrots, etc., are to be grown, and this should not take place until the time for planting and sowing arrives, as freshly worked soil is best for both operations. It is important that soil should not be worked in too wet a condition, otherwise it will dry in lumps, and much time and labour will be necessary to repair the damage.

The secret of success with early planting of such crops as peas, beets, beans, is to sow the seed at only half the depth of later sowings. This is particularly the case on heavy soils. Seeding on light soil should always be at a slightly greater depth than on heavy soil.

Remember that in dry weather cultivation should be continuous. When watering is necessary, it should be applied to the roots and not sprayed or sprinkled over the surface. A trench may be opened up with a hand or wheel hoe along each row, water poured in from a pail, and the earth thrown back. In this way two hundred feet of row may be thoroughly watered by two persons in half an hour, and cultivating and watering are performed in one operation.

Good wood-ashes form an excellent general fertilizer for the garden. They should be applied in the spring when the land is not too wet. Sifted coal ashes will be of great benefit on heavy soil. They improve the texture of the soil and help set free food for the plants.

Soils that have been under cultivation for some time need lime. Crops will not grow well if the soil is acid, and lime corrects acidity and liberates plant food. It should be applied broadcast early in the spring, at the rate of, say, one pound to ten square feet.

Have a garden, if possible not only for the fresh wholesome food that can be produced but also for the pleasure of it. Plant a few flower seeds and watch them grow.

PRESENTATION WITH ADDRESS AND RING

At a recent meeting of the Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 8, Foxboro, the following address accompanied by a signet ring was presented to Bro. Hubert Carl, who is a Corporal connected with the 80th Battalion. The address was as follows:

Foxboro, April 15, 1916.
Mr. Hubert Carl.

Dear Friend and Bro:—We, the members of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 3, Foxboro, in bidding adieu to many of the boys who feel it their duty to serve their King and country in this hour of need, cannot but feel that we are losing for an unknown period of time, one of our most loyal members.

We will miss your presence among us perhaps more than you miss us for being a member for so short a time you have shown to us that you retain the same principles as your father and fathers of old in regard to your Brotherhood.

We fee' one and all that it is our duty to serve our nation, but many of us are bound down by home ties which prevent us from taking up the Empire's call. We feel proud of you that you are answering the call and are giving yourself to put down such unjust ruling and holding up both hands for liberty.

In bidding you farewell, we ask you to accept this ring as a token of the esteem in which we, one and all, hold you. As you wear it, bear in mind that your brothers in L.O.L. No. 3 will stand everyday to lend you a helping hand.

Signed on behalf of L.O.L. No. 3.

GRAFT IN FOODSTUFFS IS WHAT KEEPS PRICES HIGH

Would you believe that Grafting foodstuff concerns have actually taken shiploads of grain and dumped them far out into the ocean just to keep the prices of foodstuffs up? What do you know about the intricate manner in which these high handed concerns operate? In the 4th episode of the great serial series, Graft, which is announced for exhibition at the Palace Theatre to-night and Thursday, matinee and night, you can see how the Grafters down the public, how the heavy hand of crime is laid on the backs of the poor and distressed. The title of this episode is "Breaking the Grain Trust." The Graft serial is in 18 two-part episodes and each episode constitutes a complete story, as each episode is specially written by a different famous author. In addition to the above offering, "Stronger Than Death," an absorbing two part drama featuring Louise Lovely and Lon Chaney will be exhibited, in addition to a programme of amusing comedies.

"A PAIR OF SIXES" TO-NIGHT

Griffin's Opera House will have an extraordinary attraction for to-night only, in "A Pair of Sixes," which has been anticipated with much interest, for it is now acknowledged the world over as one of the funniest farces ever seen on the English-speaking stage.

The curtain rises on the office of the Eureka Digestive Pill Company. It appears to be a nice orderly office with the attractive gum-chewing typist until the two partners enter and begin to quarrel. The one, T. Boggs John, who runs too fat in figure, claims he is the blood and brains of the pill business, and the other, Geo. B. Nettleton iterates and reiterates that he is by no means the "bone and fat" of the organization. They become all "het up" and decide to dissolve. They call in their lawyer and quarrel again over the terms of dissolution which he proposes, until he finally suggests that they play a hand of show-down poker, the loser to become the winner's valet for a year with a thousand and one penalties in fine, for misbehaviour or breach of contract. After a lot of bluffing and hooting over the game, T. Boggs John loses, and we next see him installed as the butler in Mr. Nettleton's household. His true position there is a secret to all but Nettleton, and it becomes particularly embarassing when his sweetheart arrives and he dare not tell her of the reason for his menial position for fear of the heavy penalties imposed by his contract. To make matters worse, he becomes the victim of an eccentric English housemaid, who sets her cap for him. This amusing complication of affairs is continued with unflagging interest, and with a rapid-fire action of hilarious fun that does not cease until the final curtain.

Try This Free Prescription.

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes? Do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the nearest wideawake drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one tablet in ¼ glass of water and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

J. S. McKeown fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will gladly fill yours.

CECILY'S DREAMS

(By W. E. Werner.)

Cecily Malden wrapped two kettle covers in brown paper, dropped the pay into the till of the cash register, and so finished her work for the day. Mr. Huff looked across the store at her and smiled. Mr. Huff was little like his own hardware, cold and unimpressionable, but he liked Cecily, and sometimes he showed it by an unexpected kindness.

"Tired, Cecily?" he asked.

"Some." Cecily's voice was gay. "But I don't mind. I'm young and, then—it's spring."

"Two wonderful things—youth and spring," Mr. Huff sighed. "Ah, well!" He bent his bald grey head over the paper upon which he was figuring something and Cecily went her way.

It was raw, rainy weather, but after the long day in the dark store with its strange odors Cecily breathed the clean air delightedly. She walked along with her light, certain step until she came to a millinery shop, and there she paused. The window was full of new hats. There was one which made Cecily's heart beat fast. "That's very nearly what I want," she thought. "Oh, I'm so glad I can have a new hat this spring! And I've earned all the money myself. I guess if any girl ever had reason to be thankful it's I."

As she turned reluctantly from the window she came face to face with a man and girl under the same umbrella. The man raised his hat; the girl bowed coldly. Cecily's happy color fled. She had heard that Hugh Gresham was going with Leah Candler, and she would not believe it.

Her mother met her at the door.

"Oh, Cecily!" she said. "I've had such a time all the afternoon. I want you to come and look."

She the way to the kitchen and Cecily followed, suspecting disaster. She found it in an unmistakable form. The low roof over the kitchen had sprung a dozen leaks. "I never dreamed of such a thing," Mrs. Malden said, worriedly. "You see I went to the Ladies' Aid meeting and when I came home everything was soaked. I telephoned for a carpenter. Mr. Jenks came and he says the whole roof will have to be reshingled at once. And I haven't got the money, Cecily." She began to cry nervously.

Cecily drew the forlorn little woman close and kissed the wet cheek tenderly. "There, there!" she said. "We'll have it fixed just as soon as it stops raining. I'll see to that, mother."

"Cecily you're such a comfort," Mrs. Malden said. "You're just like your father. He always took everything off my hands. If I've thought of that once to-day I have a thousand times. I guess I was too dependent upon him. And now I'm just as dependent upon you. I try not to be. There, you've made me feel better. I have started supper over the oil stove in the dining-room. I got some chops, dear. I thought you'd be real hungry tonight."

"That's lovely mother," Cecily replied. But after her mother had placed a chop upon her plate she sat looking at it without eating. She could think only of the leaky roof and of Leah's and Hugh's faces so close under that umbrella.

"Do you know, dear," Mrs. Malden said, "that Em Candler acts very cold toward me lately? She has never returned my last call, and she would hardly speak to me this afternoon at the Ladies' Aid.——

"It's because I work in the hardware store, mother," Cecily replied. "Leah is just as cold toward me."

"I'm so sorry!" Mrs. Malden exclaimed. "I wish you didn't have to work, dear. But there's nothing disgraceful in it," Mrs. Malden murmured.

Far into the night Cecily lay thinking. The roof must go on, the kitchen must be replastered and papered, and the workmen must not wait for their pay. They were even poorer than she was and more dependent upon what they earned. "It will take nearly all the money I've saved for my clothes," Cecily decided. "I cannot have a new hat now or a new dress or—or anything." She turned her face into her pillow. A vision of Leah gay and pretty in the daintiest of late styles passed before her. And she wondered piteously why one girl should have everything while another girl had nothing at all.

"Mother," she said next morning, "it's a nice day and you had better let Mr. Jenks begin on that roof. I've got the money to pay for it when it is done."

"But isn't that the money you're saving for new clothes?" her mother asked anxiously.

"I think the roof is more necessary than the clothes?" Cecily answered.

Two hours later as Cecily stood behind the counter Haldee Ford came in to get a package of machine needles.

"Broke the last one sewing up my new organdie. And I'm just wild to get it finished before Leah's party. What are you going to wear, Cecily?"

"I'm not going," Cecily answered. She was pale.

"Why not?" Haven't you been asked?"

"No." Cecily tried to smile into Haldee's astonished stare.

"I think Leah's getting too proud since they moved into that new house and she's begun to go with Hugh," Haldee declared angrily. "I don't believe he'll like her not asking you. Hugh's got the biggest sense of honor of anyone I ever saw. And when it come's to friendship he's true blue. Father says that Hugh has more reason to be proud that anybody else in this town, and just see how nice he is to everybody! He hates snobbishness—I'll take the package, Cecily. And here's the pay. Really, I've got to hurry."

As the door closed Cecily stood very still. For a moment she ceased to be brave and strong and independent; she was just a girl who loved hopelessly, who suffered cruelly and whose dreams of happiness were whirling about her as helpless as straws before a wind.

In time the roof lay yellow in the sun, the plaster held and the new paper brightened the dingy old kitchen. The work was paid for, and now that her money was gone Cecily retrimmed her old hat, cleaned her old gloves with some of Mr. Huff's best gasoline and resigned herself to wearing her last summer's gown and coat. From the other girls she heard news of Leah's party and the dress she was to wear and how there were to be favors and flowers from the city. Somehow through it all she managed to keep her trouble from her mother and to go regularly to her work in the hardware store.

The night of the party came. It was a perfect night, warm and still. From the porch where she sat with her mother Cecily could see the Candler home pierced with lights.

"I never felt so bad about anything in my life as I do about this," Mrs. Malden mourned. Em's actions don't disturb me. But I do think Leah might act different."

"I don't mind Leah, mother. Only I'm sure if I had money I should not look down upon those who had none."

But when a burst of violins came from the Candler house she could bear it no longer, and, murmuring some faint excuse, she went into the house. She got as far as the sitting room door, but there she paused, leaning against the casing, with her breath going from her in a great sob. Hugh! Hugh! The beginning and ending of all her trouble was Hugh. For him she had wanted the new hat, the dainty gown, because of him she had longed to go to the party. He was there now. He had been away, she had heard, but he was coming back for that—

"Go right in. She' there. You'll find her. Cecily dear!"" It was Mrs. Malden's voice from the porch. Cecily lifted her head with a start. Then the whole earth seemed to rock, for there in the doorway stood Hugh Gresham with such a look on his face!

"I returned just in time for the party," he explained a while after. Mrs. Malden had gone in and he and Cecily sat alone on the porch. "I went, but when I found you were not there and learned why—. You see, I was counting on seeing you there, Cecily. Uncle Dick, who's in congress you know, has got me a fine position in Washington. But whether I take it depends on you, Cecily, dear——"

And then all Cecily's dreams began to come true.

OVERSTRAINED
NERVES

"This typewriting gets on my nerves." "Now I'm well and enjoy my work."

Neurasthenia or Exhaustion of the Nervous System.

It is quite possible for the nervous system to be considerably exhausted before you realize the seriousness of your condition. You do not feel up to the mark, are easily tired out, worry over little things, and get cross and irritable, but do not consider yourself sick.

For this reason we shall give an outline of the symptoms so that you may be warned in time and use preventive treatment at a time when it will do the most good.

1. General discomfort—excitement and depression alternating.
2. Headache and sometimes dizziness, and deafness.
3. Disturbed, restless, unrefreshing sleep, interrupted by dreams.
4. Weakness of memory, particularly of recent events.
5. Blurring sight, noises and ringing in the ears.
6. Disturbance of sensibility or feeling, as in hands, or, with women, in the breasts.
7. Coldness of parts of body or flushing and sweats.
8. Lack of tone, easily fatigued, dyspepsia.
9. Fear to be alone, or in a crowd, fear of things falling, fear of travelling, etc.

These symptoms indicate that the nerves are being starved for lack of rich, red blood. Certain elements are lacking which can best be supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This cure is easily available and awaits alone your action in applying it. There is no question of the merits of this food cure. Enquiry among your friends will prove to you that many thousands of women, and men, too, are being restored to health and vigor by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

BELLEVILLE

A successful recruiting meeting was held in Stirling last evening. Geo. H. Allen of Toronto, was chairman. Addresses were made by Col. Adams and Col. Putman of the 155th Battalion. The 155th Band was present and rendered several selections. A large number of people from Trenton and Belleville attended the meeting.

Lieut. Sherman Young, who was wounded at Langemarck and is now in the 155th Battalion, will address a meeting at Wellman's Corners this evening.

Capt. McFee and Capt. Wills of the 155th Battalion, left to-day for Marmora and Coe Hill.

C and D Companies of the 80th Battalion, arrived in the city to-day from Picton and Napanee. They were met at the C.N.R. depot by the 80th Battalion brass and bugle bands and escorted to the barracks. This means that 449 additional troops will be in the city up to the time the 80th leave for overseas.

To accommodate "C" and "D" companies from Napanee and Picton respectively the Y.M.C.A. has thrown open its shower baths and swimming pool to the use of the soldiers absolutely free any time during the day or evening until the 80th leaves. The men have enjoyed free use of these privileges in the mornings when swimming parades were held. This arrangement would, however, not accommodate the whole battalion and the above has been substituted.

KINGSTON

There have been many rumors to the effect that the 80th Battalion would go to Bermuda to relieve the 38th, but this can now be directly contradicted. It is known beyond all question that when the 80th Battalion leave Belleville, they will go direct to England.

Retreat is being sounded this week at 7.05.

Lt.-Col. Brown, G.S.O., is in Ottawa on inspectional duties.

William Foran, secretary of the Civil Service Association, Ottawa, has notified Lieut. O'Leary that he will send baseball and lacrosse outfits costing $300 to Kingston for use of Ottawa soldiers there. No doubt the gift will be much appreciated.

The men who have joined the A. S. C. for camp service were placed on the pay list yesterday. All men joining are placed on the pay list at once from this on to the opening of camp.

Major Hamilton is only taking men in the A.S.C. for camp who have been declared medically unfit for overseas, but who are fit for home service. Any-one wanting to join must go to some local unit and secure a certificate that they are unable to pass the physical examination for overseas service. The A.S.C. will not be made a "home comforts" corps in camp this year.

At camp this year the transport service of the A.S.C. will only be coming to the city on duty, or returning from the city to camp after being on duty, will be allowed to use the transport service. Others will be compelled to use other means, or walk.

When the entire staff is transferred to Barriefield camp from the headquarters of the 3rd District, it will mean that all the lady stenographers will have to go into camp. Last year there was only one lady stenographer on duty at camp headquarters.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are to-day taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

A Full Battalion

With the arrival of C. and D. companies of the 80th Battalion in this city today from Napanee and Picton, the battalion is now up to its full strength namely, 1100 officers and men. The battalion paraded today, and presented a most creditable appearance.

Mascots for Troops

Lieut.-Colonel MacDonald of Cornwall has received for the 154th Battalion, C.E.F., two splendid pure-bred Russian wolf hounds, a gift from O. A. Zeuricher, late manager of the mechanical plant of the Caledonia Springs Bottling Works, who has enlisted in the battalion and presented his valuable dogs as mascots. The dogs were imported from Russia, and are from the kennels of the [illegible] Nichol[illegible]

FOUND DEAD IN HIS ROOM

Charles Mutton, a Bell Telephone Employee, Dies Suddenly—Boarded in a Local Hotel—Inquest as to Cause of Death

At a few minutes before three o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Mr. Chas. Mutton, who has been for some months boarding at the Albion Hotel, in this city, was found dead in bed in his room. On Monday night he retired about 11 o'clock, and was not only apparently in the best of health, but cheerful. Suspicion was aroused in Mr. Smith, the proprietor of the house, that something was wrong when Mutton did not appear for breakfast or dinner, and upon going to his room could get no answer, and the door was locked. Mr. Smith procured a step-ladder and on looking over the transom saw that there was something wrong. Dr. Platt was called, but his services were not required. Death had taken place some hours before, as the body was quite rigid.

Deceased was about 26 years of age and was unmarried. He was foreman of a construction and repair gang in connection with the Bell Telephone Company, and had made his headquarters in Belleville the past three months. His home was in Cobourg, where he was born, and his territory extended from Kingston to Toronto. He was a young man of fine physique, and except suffering from a slight cold had made no complaint. His demise is thought to have been caused by heart disease.

Dr. Boyce, coroner, was summoned, and under the circumstances deemed an inquest necessary. The remains were conveyed to Tickell & Sons' undertaking establishment, where an inquest was opened at 9 o'clock this morning before the coroner, Dr. Boyce. Mr. Wm. Carnew, County Attorney, represented the Crown.

The following gentlemen composed the jury: H. W. Day, foreman; E. T. Cherry, C. M. Hall, Don G. Bleecker, Geo. Daw, John Archibald, C. L. Walters, H. Geary, M. J. Lynch. After the jury had been sworn in and viewed the body, some evidence was submitted.

Sergt. Naphin testified that he received a warrant from the coroner to take care of the body of Charles Mutton, who was found dead in a room at the Albion Hotel. It was given in charge of Mr. J. L. Tickell and taken to Tickell & Sons' undertaking establishment. Deceased died some time between the hours of 11 o'clock Monday night and 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when he was found dead in bed. In his pocket was $11.25. When witness saw the body the right leg was over the side of the bed. There were no marks of violence on the body. If the man had made an outcry of any kind he could easily have been heard.

Mr. E. J. Mooney said he was an employee of the Bell Telephone Co., and had known the deceased about four years. He was foreman of the construction and repair gang. His territory was between Toronto and Kingston. Mutton was a well built man. He had a bad cold all winter. His home was in Cobourg. Deceased left the office on Monday afternoon to go to the Albion Hotel to make out some forms. He was then hale and hearty and made no complaint about being ill. Mutton was a single man. He was not a despondent man, but on the contrary was of a cheerful disposition. His age was about 25 or 26 years. From the appearance of the body it was evident that the deceased had made an effort to get out of bed, as the right leg was partially out of bed. His hands were across his chest, and head slightly thrown back. Witness could not tell what caused death. Dr. Platt, who was called in, stated that death had apparently been caused by strangulation.

This was all the evidence submitted and an adjournment was made until Tuesday evening next. In the meantime the body has been prepared for burial and will be taken to Cobourg for interment.

ILLUSTRATED WAR-LECTURE

Under the auspices of the Cardinal Knitting Circle's Red Cross Fund, an appreciative and interesting illustrated war lecture was given Tuesday evening, in the High School Assembly Room by Capt. Ketterson, Chaplain of the 80th Battalion.

Mr. B. Mallory presided. Before the commencement of Capt. Ketterson's lecture, a short programme was given, in which solos were rendered by Miss Stork and Miss McDonnell, and readings by Miss Wallace.

When introducing the speaker of the evening, the chairman stated that in all probability this would be the last public appearance of Capt. Ketterson before a Belleville audience, as the 80th Battalion expected to leave shortly for overseas. Preceding his subject Capt. Ketterson expressed his appreciation of lecturing to so large an audience and hoped that he would satisfy those who were present.

A number of war scenes were thrown upon a screen, which were thoroughly and lucidly explained by Capt. Ketterson. The scenes consisted of British and Canadian soldiers attacking enemy trenches; bodies of Colonial troops; the landing of the Australians at Gallipoli, and scenes of Valcartier and Salisbury Camps.

At the close of the address the British marching song "Tipperary" was sung by the audience. A vote of thanks was then tendered to Capt. Ketterson by Rev. A. M. Hubly. The singing of the National Anthem brought the evening to a close.

Ontario Teachers Among Soldiers

Over Two Hundred Have Answered the Call in this Province

TORONTO, April 18—A splendid record of enlistments from the teachers of the province, marked improvement in the salaries paid to teachers in rural schools and in the professional status of teachers in the elementary schools, and a decided increase in the attendance at technical schools in the province are features of the annual report of the Department of Education tabled in the House yesterday. Up to the time the information was gathered for the report 210 male teachers had left positions in the schools to enlist for overseas service, 46 from the High schools, 177 from the elementary schools, and 37 from the Normal schools. Two Public School inspectors and seven principals have enlisted. One teacher has been killed in action, three have been wounded, and one has been awarded the Legion of Honor.

The increase in the average salary paid to teachers in the rural schools is particularly gratifying, since the Minister of Education has directed special efforts in that direction as a means of meeting the shortage of teachers in the country schools. Where in 1904 the average salary to male teachers was $385 and to female teachers $294 a year, the average salary to male teachers in 1914 had jumped to $614, and to female teachers $543.

In the same period the average salary to teachers in the urban schools has increased from $756 to $1,276 for males, and from $406 to $686 for female teachers. In the ten years there has been an increase of 309 first-class teachers, and a decrease of 1,625 third-class teachers.

The report upon technical education makes special reference to the work of the Toronto Technical School, and reviews the extension of technical training in the schools of the province. New evening schools were opened at Dundas, Niagara Falls, Sault Ste. Marie and Whitby, and the total enrolled attendance increased by 16 per cent. In Toronto and London the day technical schools showed an increased attendance of over 50 per cent. for the year.

The report shows that progress is being made in turning out teachers to supply the bilingual schools of the province. In 1913-1914 there were only 42 teachers in training at the Vanleek Hill, Ottawa, Sandwich and Sturgeon Falls Model Schools. In 1914-1915 the number had increased to 54, and for the 1915-1916 terms the department has succeeded in getting 105 young French-Canadians in training to take places in the schools later on.

HAZELTON DISAPPEARS

Author of Letter Slandering Soldiers Departs With His Family

TODMORDEN, April 18.—Robert Hazelton, the author of the famous letter to Senator Choquette, of Quebec, which was used by the latter to base his slanderous attacks on the Toronto soldiers of the Expeditionary Forces, and which resulted in the writer experiencing the resentment of his neighbors Saturday night, has left his home. Early to-night he departed with some of his family and nothing is known at present of his whereabouts.

This evening his house is guarded by a posse of country constables, who feared a recurrence of the disorders of Saturday night. In the morning the military picket which had been placed there by the orders of Brig-Gen. Logie was removed, and the county authorities, determined to prevent further rioting, took such steps as would keep the popular feeling within bounds.

In the evening a mass meeting of the citizens was held in the old schoolhouse to express the popular indignation of the municipality of the letter written by Hazelton. A resolution was presented and unanimously passed, suggesting that Hazelton should leave Todmorden, but this was anticipated by his sudden departure for an unknown destination. Several addresses strongly condemning the letter and the author were delivered, which were heartily applauded, and at the conclusion of the gathering dispersed in an orderly manner and went to their homes.

The action of Hazelton was brought before the Attorney-General yesterday by Rev. Dr. Hincks, who was alluded to in libellous language, and others, and after hearing the complaints Hon. Mr. Lucas stated that the affair would be investigated by the Law Department.

Willard Will Tour World

Champion Boxer Plans "Round the World" Trip Next Fall

Though his time is contracted for up to next November, Jess Willard, world's champion boxer, is figuring on a trip around the world, according to advices from Chicago.

He has figured out carefully the possible profits of such a tour and he lieves he can make it one of great profit financially, while he is enjoying his long layoff.

"From the looks of things now it isn't going to be a very strenuous winter for me when I get through with the circus," he said. "There are not enough opponents in sight to make it look that I could remain in America and do much but loaf.

"I expect during the spring and summer that certain big fellows will be worked up to a match with me. Take "Fred" Fulton, for instance. He hits well and is liable to beat any of them. If he wins a few matches it is certain that he will be regarded as a world beater.

"If he fails it is quite likely to be somebody else. But that guarantees me only one match, and if there is a field elsewhere for my purpose it wouldn't pay me to stick around.

"Of course, if the European war is not over by that time my trip would necessarily be trimmed. But I can make Australia and that section of the globe, and if Europe is still closed I probably will take part of the trip anyway."

HOW TO REGAIN STRENGTH

The great factor that retards recovery after sickness is that weakened devitalized condition, and it will interest our readers to know that our local druggist, J. S. McKeown, has a reliable, non-secret strength creator called Vinol, which contains iron for the blood, the curative medicinal extractives of fresh cod livers and the nourishing properties of beef peptone, all combined in a delicious native wine. For weak, run-down conditions and to regain strength after sickness, there is nothing better.

Successful Raids Executed in Northern France—Germans Fail at St. Eloi

LONDON, April 19.—Special—The British official statement on the campaign in France and Belgium reads:

"Twice in the last thirty hours our troops have penetrated at different points into the German trenches—once in daylight yesterday and once during the night. On each occasion the enterprise met with complete success. A machine gun emplacement was destroyed and several dugouts were bombarded. Our casualties were one wounded and one missing. Two German officers and at least twenty men are reported killed.

"During the night two small German efforts against our positions at St. Eloi, preceded in the evening by a heavy bombardment, were successfully repulsed.

"To-day there were isolated artillery duels at various points. There has been further mining activity eastward of Vermelles without altering the general situation there."

INEBRIATES TO BE TREATED IN ONT. HOSPITALS

Bill Introduced After Suggestion by Mr. Thos. Hook, M. P.

TORONTO, April 19.—(Special.) — The care and treatment of inebriates is provided for in a bill introduced in the Legislature yesterday by the Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary.

In an interview with The Globe later Mr. Hanna said the details of the scheme had not been worked out, but the Government was planning to treat inebriates in the Provincial hospitals.

The matter was briefly dealt with in the speech of Premier Hearst on prohibition. The Premier mentioned that the question had been raised by Mr. Thomas Hook, one of the Toronto members.

Mr. Hook told The Globe that inebriates without means would be cared for at the expense of the State, while those whose relatives were able to pay would be required to contribute in the cost of treatment.

Saskatchewan politics has got to be very bad when a political candidate has to carry around a tin of insect powder s a protection against those pests known as "bed bugs."

Kitchener's Threat.

An amusing story which does not seem to have got into print yet is being told abot Lord Kitchener. It concerns a famous poster, issued some time ago, with an appeal in his handwriting for more men and yet more men.

He had, of course, to write the original appeal from which the facsimile on the poster was made, and he did so, and it went to the Department concerned with such things. His writing was found to be too small for poster-size reproduction, so the sheet was sent back to him with a cautious explanation in this sense, and the request would he rewrite it.

He did, but again it was too small, and he wrote it a third time, and with that third draft sent that grimly humorous message:

"Don't ask me to write this again, for rather than do it we'll have conscription!"

RAILROAD GAS TANK EXPLOSION CAUSES $1,000,000 LOSS

LIBERALS OPPOSE THE PURCHASE

Declare Bill on Seymour Co. is Not Specific and is Being Rushed

TORONTO, April 26.—Mr. Rowell and his party raised strenuous objection at the second reading of Hon G. Howard Ferguson's bill to provide $8,350,000 for the purchase of the Seymour electrical monopoly in the Trent valley.

They objected on these grounds:

That the bill did not state specifically that either the power development plant nor the distributing plant was eventually to be turned over to the municipalities.

That the bill did not state specifically that the development was to be carried on by the Hydro-Electric Commission.

That the government could not produce documentary evidence that the price was a proper one.

That this, the largest undertaking the government had entered upon at one time, should be brought down on the last day or next to the last day of the session, when neither the house nor the municipalities had due time to consider the measure.

That Sir Adam Beck should be present during the discussion, and that his absence seemed to indicate that there was lack of harmony between the hydro and the government.

Eighty Millions In War Orders

OTTAWA, April 20.—Special—Since the placing some weeks ago of the $75,000,000 credit by Canada at the disposal of the British Minister of Munitions orders have been placed by the Imperial Munitions Board for $80,000,000 worth of munitions. The orders now placed will keep most of the munitions factories busy until well into the summer. Further large orders are expected from Great Britain early in June.

COPENHAGEN, April 20.—Special—The Tagliche Rundschau of Berlin learns that the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, and Baron von Burian, the Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, have reached important decisions relating to the economic wat against the Entente. No intimation is given of what these decisions are.

THE ISSUE MUST BE CONFRONTED BY GERMANY

"Country is on the Brink of War" Says New York Herald—Slight Hope of Peace—Display of Determination, Backed by Force, is Only Choice

NEW YORK, April 20.—Commenting on the president's note to Germany on the submarine issue, The Herald this morning says:

"This is no time for division anywhere in the United States. The country is on the brink of war. The president is right. He speaks for the nation. Party spirit should be laid aside. Personal prejudices should be summerged. It is the country that speaks through Mr Wilson. The interests of the whole land are involved."

The Times remarks: "Sharing the president's hope, it is better that we should face the worst now, that we should picture forth and have clearly in mind the possible sequels of a breach of diplomatic relations. It might bring on war, and to impress upon the German mind what that would mean for Germany is the surest resource now left to us against war."

Germany Knows Terms.

The World says: "It is for the German Government to say whether it wants the United States for a friend or an enemy; it knows the terms."

The Tribune says: "Our issue with Germany can be settled now—only by a display of determination, backed by force."

Editorial opinion expressed by leading newspapers throughout the country strongly supports the president's action. Exceptions are noted in the comments by the German language newspapers and a few others in certain sections of the west where large German-American populations are the rule. For the most part, however, the comment shows the entire country is overwhelmingly behind President Wilson.

U. S. SENATE PASSES ARMY BILL FOR 1,000,000 MEN

WASHINGTON, April 19.—An army reorganization bill that would produce regular army and reserve military forces in the United States aggregating 1,000,000 men was passed by the Senate last night. It is a substitute for the Hay bill passed by the House, and the differences will be worked out in conference.

On the eve of a joint session of the Houses of Congress, to hear a message from the President on grave international issues, the Senate hastened completion of the bill amid scenes of excitement, repeatedly rejecting all amendments to reduce the proposed strengthening of the army.

BERNSTORFF TELLS KAISER WILSON MEANS FIGHT

In Cable He Says Something Must Be Done or Break With U. S is Certain—Still Hopes to Patch up Relations

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Count Von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, sent to Berlin tonight a long despatch interpreting the situation in Washington and making certain recommendations. He is understood to have advised his government that he believed the United States meant just what it said in its submarine note and that something would have to be done quickly if friendly relations were to continue.

The ambassador himself, having read the address of the President and note, said:

"I can make no comment either upon the address or upon the communication which has been sent to my government."

However, he was authoritatively described as having advised the Berlin foreign office in the message sent tonight that he believed some such declaration as that made regarding the conduct of submarine warfare in the Mediterranean Sea should be issued immediately to cover all submarine operations.

The Mediterranean declaration was handed to Secretary of State Lansing by the ambassador on Jan. 7 of this year, and was to the effect that only a cruiser warfare would be conducted against enemy merchant shipping and that non-combatant ships of every character, freight as well as passenger, would be accorded proper warning and safety for their passengers and crews.

While the ambassador tonight appeared to be more perturbed than any time since the beginning of the submarine controversy, he was said to feel that his government would go to any possible length to prevent the severance of diplomatic relations.

Persons in close touch with affairs at the embassy quoted him as saying: "I believe that some way will be found satisfactorily to meet the position of the United States.

Death of Hon. J. R. Stratton

Former Provincial Secretary Had Gone South For His Health

PETERBORO', April 19.—Hon. Jas. R. Stratton died at Hot Springs, Ark., this morning, after a period of ill-health. Mr. Stratton, who for some time owned and published the Peterboro' Examiner, was M.P.P. for West Peterboro', 1886-1901, and sat in the Commons 1908-11. While Ontario's Provincial Secretary under the Ross regime he was the target of R. R. Gamey's charges (1903), which were investigated by Royal Commission.

The late Mr. Stratton was born at Millbrook, Ont., on May 3, 1857, the son of the late Jas. S. Stratton, a north of Ireland man. He was educated at Peterboro'. He was well known in the financial word, and a director in numerous companies.

BIBLE TRADE DISTURBED

Advance in Price of Paper Doubles Cost of Testaments

NEW YORK, April 19.—Alarm obtains among publishers of religious books and periodicals over the advances in prices of paper, ink, leather, and glue. Purchasing Agent Jennings of the Methodist Book Concern says its bills for white paper alone will advance this year by $130,000, and that ink, leather, and glue will increase the sum to $150,000. An immediate effect is the decrease in the grants of pensions to aged ministers, who receive profits from the concern's business.

The American Bible Society has just issued a statement explaining to handlers of Bibles its inability to fill orders promptly owing to advances in prices and hindrance in railroad shipments. It is stated that the 2-cent Testaments will cost twice as much as formerly.

The Easter Bible, prayer book and hymnal trade, always large, is seriously affected. Orders for it were given long ago. More than in any previous Easter year, music will be American, both in composition and in manufacture. The German supply of Easter carols is wholly cut off, and the English in great measure so. English composers have gone to the war, or are in no mood to write music. A result is that American composers are having everything their own way.

TEMPERANCE ACT LAW OF PROVINCE

Allows Two and a Half Per Cent. Liquor in Non-Intoxicating Drinks

TORONTO, April 29.—(Special.)—The Ontario Temperance Act has become part of the law of this province. It passed the House last night at 10 o'clock. The one important clause remaining blank, that with regard to the percentage of alcohol in "non-intoxicating liquor," was filled with figures "2½." This is the percentage allowed under the old act. The passage of the bill was the signal for an abortive attempt on the part of some of the opposition to sing the Doxology.

Shipping of Liquor

Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, in reviewing the anomaly of the bill which allows the shipping of liquor from an Ontario brewer or distiller to Montreal and back again to a consumer in Ontario, offered a solution. It had been suggested to him that this business might be handled through officials of the license board. Orders for the supply of liquor in Ontario, from Ontario, distilleries, would go to such an officer, who would "O.K." it and record the transference of the commodity. This system, said Hon. Mr. Hanna, would give greater protection and assurance that the law would not be infringed. This system might be adopted later, said he. Had it been suggested earlier, it would have been incorporated in the bill.

Rowell's Suggestion.

N. W. Rowell, leader of the opposition, suggested that the distribution of alcohol for medicinal and mechanical purposes should be undertaken by a commission.

Licenses for wholesale vendors, breweries, and the extension of tavern licenses to September 5, were fixed at $5, and the fine infringement of hotel license regulation was placed at $10.

APOLOGIZES FOR HIS DEMEANOR

LONDON, April 19.—Lieut. Arthur Turnbull publishes in to-day's Times a letter expressing regret for his extreme course in jumping the Stranger's gallery to the floor of the House of Commons on March 29.

He asserts that the French are supplying their army with 30,000 steel helmets daily while it has taken England nineteen months to provide 200,000.

Lieut. Turnbull was uninjured in his leap from the gallery to the floor of the House of Commons. His object apparently was to call attention to the need of helmets for the army, for he called out as he dropped to the floor, "I ask you to protect the heads of British soldiers against shrapnel fire."

LONDON BELIEVES UNITED STATES CLOSE TO WAR

Chronicle Says German Compliance With Demand is Not Likely — Elated Over Success — Huns Will Probably Choose to Continue in Piratical Career

LONDON, April 20.—(Special.)—Although the text of President Wilson's message to congress did not reach London in time for the morning papers to comment fully, all devote considerable space to the American situation. The Daily Chronicle says editorially:

"It is difficult to suppose that the German government elated by the submarine successes of the past six weeks, will accept President Wilson's terms. Diplomatic relations between Berlin and Washington will be broken off. The resulting situation will not be a state of war, but may easily develop into war.

"This is obvious to both parties. Mr. Wilson has counted the cost. Presumably the Kaiser has also counted it. If Germany decides that the continuance of submaripng is worth a diplomatic breach with America, it will probably also decide that it is worth war, too.

"If the Kaiser desires to avoid war with America, he would naturally make concessions at a stage when they would also avert the breaking of relations."

RUSSIANS WILL FIGHT WITH ALLIES

Gen. Joffre Welcomes Troops in Name of Great Cause for Right

PARIS, April 20.—A strong force of Russian troops disembarked at Marseilles at noon today. Russians are to fight besides allied soldiers in France.

General Joffre welcomed the Russians in an order of the day, saying their arrival was another striking proof of devotion of the Russian to the common cause.

President Wilson Sends His Note

"I have deemed it my duty to say to the Imperial German Government that if it is still its purpose to prosecute relentless and indiscriminate warfare . . . The Government of the United States is at last forced to the conclusion that there is but one course it can pursue, and that unless the Imperial German Government should now immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of warfare against passenger and freight-carrying vessels this Government can have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations altogether."—President Wilson in his address to Congress.

DESIRE IS TO REACH THE FACTS

Royal Commission on Kyte Charges Held One Session and Adjourned For One Week

OTTAWA, Ont., April 19.—The Royal Commission to investigate the Kyte charges opened this afternoon in the Board room of the Railway Commission. Mr. George W. Kyte and Mr. C. B. Carvell, the Liberal members who laid the charges, were present, along with a distinguished array of counsel. General Sam Hughes was on hand with his counsel, Messrs. J. S. Ewart, K.C., Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Eugene Lafleur, K.C., and Mr. George F. Foster, K.C.

Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., represented the Government and Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., the Opposition. Mr. George F. Henderson, K.C., represented Col. Wesley Allison. The Militia Department was represented by Capt. Daly, Assistant Judge Advocate-General.

Mr. M. K. Laflamme, K.C., represented the Shell Committee.

Mr. T. P. Owen has been appointed Secretary and at the opening read the Order-in-Council appointing the Commission.

Sir William Meredith declared the inquiry opened. Mr. Hellmuth said that he and Mr. Johnston had been appointed to assist the Commission in the inquiry. His only interest was to reach the actual facts, no matter who it might implicate. He had no instructions from the Government except those contained in the order.

Mr. Johnston said he received a note from the Premier two days ago and the question came up as to his instructions. He saw the Solicitor-General and had received a letter as to his instructions which he had not had time to consider. Any arrangements made to-day need not interfere with his instructions.

Mr. Ewart announced that he appeared, with Mr. Lafleur, for General Hughes. Mr. Nesbitt announced he was appearing, with Mr. Laflamme, for the Shell Committee. Mr. Henderson told the Commission he represented Colonel Allison.

Mr. Carvell announced that he appeared as counsel for Mr. Kyte. He hoped Mr. Johnston could find his position such that he could act fully without his appearing. If he could not, he would ask the right to have assistant counsel and to call witnesses, examine them and ask for papers.

Mr. Hellmuth suggested an adjournment until next Wednesday. Sir William asked if they could not start earlier. Mr. Carvell said if they started earlier he and Mr. Kyte would have to forego their holidays. Sir William then agreed for an adjournment for a week.

Mr. Carvell asked if it would be possible to have some arrangement as to the production of the paper. He also asked when papers were secured if he would have the right to see them through the commission or through the grace of Mr. Hellmuth. Would he have to consult Mr. Hellmuth?

CONDITIONS IN THE WEST TEND TO ALLIED PROGRESS

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, April 20.—Afternoon statement.—In the Argonne at Haute Chevauchee, there has been some mine work which resulted to our advantage. We caused the explosion of a small mine which destroyed some Subterranean works of the enemy.

On the left bank of the River Meuse the bombardment of our second line continued last night. On the right bank of the river our troops yesterday evening delivered a spirited attack against the German positions to the northwest of the Pond of Vaux. This operation made it possible for us to occupy certain sections of the German trenches as well as a fortified redoubt.

In the course of this action which caused heavy loss to the enemy we took prisoner ten officers sixteen under officers and 214 men. In addition to this we captured several machine guns and a certain quantity of war material.

In Woevre district our artillery has directed a concentrated fire upon the communicating roadways of the enemy. There has been no event of importance on the remainder of the front.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months

DISPLAY OF AUTOMOBILES

The largest display of automobiles ever seen in this city took place this morning, and was witnessed by many interested spectators. There were 50 cars in the parade, and were consigned to Mr. P. J. Lee, the local manager of the McLaughlin Company. The cars in question, have all been sold in this district, and are of 45 and 60 horse power. They are of the latest model, and up-to-date in every respect, being all 1916 models. The parade was headed by the 15th regimental band, playing tuneful selections. After the cars had been paraded through some of the principal streets of the city, they were lined up on Bridge street east, and photographed. Mr. Lee is naturally proud of the success which has crowned his effort to dispose of this number of cars in the district under his able supervision.

PICKED WRONG ANTAGONIST

Big Chauffeur Didn't Know Other Man was "Knockout Brown"

NEW YORK, April 19.—"Knockout Brown," formerly a lightweight champion pugilist, and now Valentine Braun, a farmer of Arlington, N.J., came into his own again on Monday, when he thrashed the giant chauffeur of a jitney bus in Harrison, N.J.

The jitney was returning from Newark with an overflow load of residents of Harrison and Kearney, when the chauffeur, who is more than six feet in height and weighs 200 pounds, became abusive and used objectionable language. Braun remonstrated with him and the big man dared him to get out of the bus. "If you don't get out I'll throw you out," he added.

The former pugilist met him more than half way. They both stepped into the road at the same time, and then the big man rushed. The passengers, who feared that the big man would kill their champion, called out to Braun to run. But Braun did not. Instead, a number of things happened to the big man in rapid succession, and when it was over he was lying on the road begging for mercy.

After being assured that Braun would not hit him again, he crawled back to his seat and drove his passengers to their homes without another word. He even blew the horn as softly as possible.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"A PAIR OF SIXES" WAS ONE CONTINUOUS LAUGH.

You never would have believed it—that is, the number of laughs you were to enjoy at Griffin's Opera House last evening, until the two principal actors, Ralph Belmont as George B. Nettleton, and David J. Sullivan as T. Boggs Johns, took the centre of the stage and held its interest throughout. They never could agree on principles of business, so decided to dissolve, but a crafty legal light in the person of Thomas J. Vanderholt, represented to a fine finish by Mr. Stirling Cheseldine, not wishing to forego his too frequent fees, proposed a game of poker, with certain stipulations, and "T. Boggs" lost, resulting in his becoming the butler of Nettleton for a year. It was hard for T. Boggs to familiarize himself with menial conditions, for his high spirit rebelled; but a series of consultations with his fiance, Florence Cole, creditably acted by Miss Gertrude Fowler, brought him valuable information, and he worked his cards to advantage. To be sure, Mrs. Nettleton, in the person of Miss Rebecca Ryeford, was interested in "T. Boggs," her endeavors in his behalf, which were furthered by Florence, creating a jealous spirit in the husband, and deep, dark plots were developing when evidence of hubby's treachery was incidentally laid before Mrs. Nettleton, and the house went wild, the wife going into hysterics; Nettleton attacked T. Boggs, and murder might have followed, had not the prospective Mrs. Johns brought about peace by illustrating the inferior work of Lawyer Vanderholt as a legal light, and the contract was off.

Miss Jane Moore as Sally Parker, the office stenographer, John McDaniels as Krome, the bookkeeper, Leon Glaney as Mr. Applegate, Chas. Hibbs, as the Shipping Clerk, were good, and Marie Clifford, the servant in Nettleton's home, who gave "T. Boggs" no peace "because she just loved him," was too funny for expression. The cast as a whole was creditable to the play, the principal stars, Messrs. Nettleton and Johns, and Misses Ryeford and Fowler, coming in for especial praise. The scenery was pleasing and appropriate to the subject, while the attire of the leading ladies was particularly brilliant. The attendance was unusually large.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION, Coming

The new theatric art invented by David W. Griffith in producing "The Birth of a Nation" which comes to Griffin's Opera House, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 27th, 28th and 29th, with a matinee daily except Thursday, has enabled him to surpass by far any stage spectacle. "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird" were supposed to be the high-water mark of such productions. They sink into insignificance beside this epic of American history with its 5,000 scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 riders and 200,000 details, the result of eight months of tireless labor and the expenditure of half a million dollars.

The war plays of the stage such as "Shenandoah," "Held by the Enemy", and "Barbara Frietchie" seem tame after seeing the splendors of "The Birth of A Nation." In the Griffith spectacle the scenes of sheer beauty and strength are of Homeric grandeur. The night riding of the Ku Klux Klan looks like a company of avenging spectres sweeping along the moonlit roads. There is a pictorial punch in every scene.

This realistic picture of history in the making is of untold value to both old and young. Besides the historical worth of this great spectacle the constant emotional throb of the romantic story thrills the hearts of all. It is the supreme achievement of modern histrionism in its new guise untrammelled by the limitations of the theatre. The massive photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be exhibited at Griffin's Opera House, on Thursday Friday and Saturday, April 27th, 28th and 29th, with a matinee daily except Thursday. The picture will be accompanied with the famous symphony orchestra of 30 musicians.

BAND CONCERT A SUCCESS ALREADY

Judging by the number of sellers who have applied for more tickets to sell for the promenade band concert to-night, even the roomy Armouries will be filled. Bandmaster Stares has arranged a programme on which there is not a single number but the National Anthem that has appeared on any of the other concert programmes.

As the evening's entertainment takes the form of a promenade, a few seats have been arranged in the gallery, for which tickets may be secured at the Armouries after entering.

All Belleville will be there and a delightfully informal evening will be spent.

HEAVY SHELLING ON THE CANADIAN FRONT

LONDON, April 20. Special—The British official statement made public this evening says:

"Last night the enemy exploded a small mine east of Neuville St. Vaast. Our trenches were not damaged. During the night the enemy attempted to bomb our posts in craters in the quarry sector, but were driven off.

"During the day there was heavy shelling northeast of Caroy and about Careney, St. Eloi and Voormezeele. The enemy also was more active in the quarry sector. We shelled the enemy's trenches at Haisnes."

PLOT TO INCITE MUTINY

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, April 20.—As a result of the seizure of German and Austrian subjects aboard the mail liner China, last February, while bound from Shanghai for the United States, the intelligence department of the British Government claims to have uncovered a plot of immense ramifactions conducted with the purpose of causing a revolution in India.

THIS IS THE 626TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

ALLISON AND THE LIBERAL PARTY.

In its crude partisan fashion the Liberal press is laboring hard to associate Col. J. Wesley Allison with the Borden Cabinet.

The fact of the matter is that Col. J. Wesley Allison is practically unknown to every member of the Cabinet with the exception of General Hughes. Liberal newspapers refer to Col. Allison as the "agent" of the Dominion Government. This is a palpable and deliberate untruth. Col. Allison is not the agent of the Borden Government and never has been its agent. He has never been paid one cent by the Borden Government in the capacity of agent or in any other capacity.

But there are other persons in Ottawa who are more familiar with Col. Allison and his past. In days gone by he was the close associate and confidential adviser of certain members of the Laurier Cabinet. Before 1904 John Wesley Allison was the representative in New York of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Minister of Railways and Canals; and above his office door on a famous Gotham street was the following inscription:

> "John Wesley Allison. Agent and Representative of Dominion Government Railways."

In addition Allison was the business associate of another Laurier Cabinet Minister, and was well within the secret counsels of the party until its defeat in 1911.

The charges against Col. Allison today need not be discussed here. They are the subject of investigation by a Royal Commission and British justice decrees that he be heard before being judged. But it is only right that his connection with the Borden Government be made clear.

He is not and never was the agent of the Borden Government.

He was for years the agent of the Laurier Government.

◆

LAURIER AND THE INVESTIGATION.

When the appointment of the Royal Commission was declared by the Prime Minister, the Opposition leader, disappointed and angry, declared that the action of the Government was not acceptable. Under the terms of Sir Robert Borden's announcement, the Opposition was to be permitted to name one counsel to act before the commission. Sir Wilfrid ignored this privilege and insisted that only by a Parliamentary Committee could there be a thorough investigation.

That left him in a quandary. He had moved for and fought for an inquiry. The Government had announced an investigation, not a pleasure expedition by a committee of politicians, but a judicial investigation by two of the most eminent judges in the land, clothed with the widest powers, and dealing with certain specified charges. By declining to select counsel Sir Wilfrid Laurier would have convicted himself of insincerity. In his first refusal to accept the Royal Commission he impliedly refused to select counsel.

He found himself placed in a most embarrassing position. It was necessary for him to act one of two ways. He took a week to think it over and then surrendered. It was hard to do because the morsel was a bitter one. He waited until Sir Robert Borden challenged him in the House, when he said shortly that he intended to name counsel. He was incensed, but the thing was accomplished without accident except to the dignity of the Opposition leader.

◆

As a matter of history the Liberal party in Canada has been the uncompromising opponent of parliamentary inquiries both in Dominion and Provincial politics. The Norris party in Manitoba fought in the Legislature for more than two weeks last summer to have the Roblin charges tried by Royal Commission instead of by a parliamentary committee. New Brunswick Liberals fought for and were granted a Royal Commission to try the charges against Hon. J. K. Fleming. When Mr. Pugsley himself was on trial in connection with the famous Central Railway charges he demanded a Royal Commission. Sir Oliver Mowatt, foremost Ontario Liberal and statesman, gave a Royal Commission in 1884 to investigate an alleged attempt to corrupt members of the Legislature. Sir George Ross, when Premier of Ontario, decided upon a Royal Commission to probe the notorious Gamey charges.

The news item reporting the death in Milwaukee of George Wilbur Peck, at the age of 75, is of more than passing interest to many grown-ups. Mr. Peck was quite prominent in his day. He was one of a numerous band of Americans who graduated from the printer's case to the business of publishing newspapers. The Civil War saw him in the ranks as a private and later as a commissioned officer. Politics had its lure for him, and he was elected Mayor of Milwaukee. Better still, he became Governor of Wisconsin, which post he filled for two terms. He conducted several newspapers in his time, and branched into the field of writing books. His "Peck's Bad Boy" series had a tremendous sale, and the books were read by boys all over America, from the Hudson Bay district down to the Rio Grande.

A telegram from Washington of the 17th inst. says: Thomas Kelly, a contractor, wanted in Winnipeg in connection with alleged frauds in the construction of the Parliament Buildings there, today lost his fight against extradition in Supreme Court. The High Court affirmed the Federal Court in Chicago which refused to release Kelly on habeas corpus. Canada asked for Kelly's extradition that he might be tried on a charge of obtaining $1,250,000 by false pretences on the Parliament Buildings contract. His case was argued only a few days ago, and the court at special request gave speedy consideration. Apparently no legal process is now available to prevent his extradition to Manitoba.

The Conservative party has nothing to fear from the light. The Government's hands are clean. But why is it that the Liberal party fears an investigation by a Royal Commission? Is it because it has been balked in its desire to make the misfortunes of the nation a stepping stone to political power? We believe that the people of this country are determined that no party shall be allowed to play politics with this cataclysm of blood and tears. The Liberal party has endeavored to play politics since the beginning of this war. But the people are becoming aroused. And Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not be permitted to open the portals of office with that "bloody key."

Mr. W. M. German, M.P. for Welland, has issued a writ against the city of Ottawa for $10,000. The writ was issued on Saturday, and the claim is for injuries he received from a fall on February 3rd last on Besserer street. He had his arm broken, and is claiming damages for the suffering, loss of time and medical expenses, making a total of $10,000. The writ claims that the sidewalk was in a very icy condition, due to the negligence of the city. This case will test the liabilities of municipalities.

The Finance Committee of Stratford, Ont., has been empowered to bring in a report on the matter of increasing the poll tax from $1 to $5, as is now legally possible under a recent act of the Legislature. That city has been to the front in seeking this power. This is a precedent for other municipalities. Let them follow it—particularly at the present time.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

(From The Daily Intelligencer, April 20, 1868.)

The following rewards have been offered for the arrest of the assassin of Mr. McGee: Dominion Government, $5,000; Ontario, $2,500; Quebec, $2,500; City of Ottawa, $1,000; City of Montreal, $5,000. Total $16,000.

About three o'clock this morning a dwelling on Murney's hill was destroyed by fire.

Indian troubles continue. A battle has been fought with the Appaches in Montesuma and 130 of them were killed.

Current Comment

At least the high price will make the owners of autos see that their garage is locked up and gasoline does not run wild by night on the streets of Belleville this summer.

The citizens of Halifax are to be ordered to advance their clocks an hour, so that work may be commenced that much earlier every morning in the summer.

Senator Choquette says he was "speaking for himself" when he made his attack on recruiting on Wednesday last. This assurance is hardly necessary in this Province where Mr Choquette is known, but it is to be hoped will be noted elsewhere.—Star.

While the Germans are being told by some of their newspapers that Great Britain is anxious for peace, the peoples of the Entente are being assured that Austria-Hungary and Turkey are on the verge of collapse, and are about to surrender, while Germany cannot possibly hold out much longer. Meanwhile the battle rages more fiercely than ever and all the countries are preparing for next winter's campaign.

Events in the war have made a deep impression upon the minds of the American people. They have tried to be neutral and have gloriously failed. Lip neutrality has, perhaps, sometimes obscured their heart loyalty to the cause of freedom and civilization. The significant fact, however, of President Wilson's strong, if belated, action is this: that Americanism has triumphed over pretended neutrality and German propaganda.

The question of compulsory service versus conscription has brought about one more political crisis in Great Britain. Apparently there is a strong section of the Cabinet with Mr. Lloyd George at the head, who hold that conscription is absolutely necessary to remove the difficulties against which the Government have been struggling. Conscription gives the Government absolute power in many civil affairs, as well as in military ones.

THE GIRL DOWN STAIRS

The best thing about Mrs. Simpson's rooming house was its real privacy. Nobody knew anything about anybody else, and Mrs. Simpson never gossiped. Rawlinson, on the third floor, had often wondered as to the identity of the very pretty girl on the ground floor. What did she do? She wore stylish clothes, and had just appeared in some furs that must have cost every penny of a hundred and fifty dollars. But Mrs. Simpson would have frowned on an inquiry, and Rawlinson had to go on guessing.

He had not much leisure even for that. He had been supporting himself ever since he came to town by the hardest kind of hack literary work. Now he had practically received an order from a woman's magazine for a story at $75.

He had had a story published in a small magazine, and the editor had dropped him a note saying that a story of the same wholesome and cheery type would be considered acceptable at the price named. The editor practically wanted a wholesome story, with a strong "love interest."

Rawlinson knew what "love interest" meant. A story of a youthful pair who committed follies for each other's sake—and, how could he at twenty-five, he had begun to despair of ever attaining success? When despair, not love, was his dominant emotion.

He had puzzled his brain for days, but suddenly enlightenment came to him.

"I'll write a story," he said, "about the sort of a sweetheart I should like to have."

Once conceived, the plan was swiftly put into execution. There was a girl, simple, innocent, and sweet, and a young man suspiciously like himself. But the hero showed strong tendencies toward dumbness. Here Rawlinson stopped. He hadn't had a sweetheart since he was a lad in the home town, three years before. He had almost forgotten—Rawlinson blushed—how one made love.

He had written about half the story when he went out to the restaurant where he took lunch. Coming in he met the girl of the ground floor outside the entrance. She looked more entrancing than ever. Rawlinson raised his hat. The girl bowed kindly.

Somehow they fell to talking, and she asked him into the parlor floor. She was about the same age as Rawlinson, but she might have been his mother by the sympathetic way she spoke, and her apparent knowledge of things. It was not long before the young man had blurted out the story.

"And so you don't know how to put in the love-making?" asked the girl, smiling.

Rawlinson blushed again. "I—well, I guess it isn't altogether that," he answered. "But you see I've almost forgotten how a girl talks. It's been a hard grind for me——"

"Poor boy! I understand, quite well. Now I understand what we will do. You haven't any engagements tonight, have you?"

"No," stammered Rawlinson.

"Then we'll take dinner somewhere together, and you shall see how I talk and put me into your story. You see, I want you to make it a success, because I know what is is to be up against it."

He could hardly restrain himself from too earnest a declaration of gratitude. It was practically his first friendship, and a woman's friendship meant a great deal to him. When she was ready and came out of her room, neatly dressed, in the expensive furs, he felt that he would like to have her at his side for ever.

In the restaurant she drew him out further. Before the evening was ended he had told her all about his home and his struggles in New York.

"You mustn't give way," she said. "Everybody who has accomplished anything has had to go through just what you have experienced. That story once printed in the magazine may lead to other orders. And then it will be an advertisement for you. Cheer up, Mr. Rawlinson!"

He left her in high elation, and with the promise that she would listen to him reading the story to her on the following afternoon.

Rawlinson gathered that Miss Arthur was herself connected with some publishing house, from the way in which she spoke. She knew many of the leading people in the literary field, and wanted to give him some introductions. But his pride revolted against accepting this kindness, and she had had the tact to see and not to press the matter.

On Saturday, when he entered her pretty room to read his story he felt that they were already old friends. She did not interrupt while he was reading it, but when he had finished she said:

"I think that is a splendid story, Mr. Rawlinson, although I don't recognize myself in your heroine. At least, the hero must have been a very impetuous young man. I should change that love scene. No girl could fall in love as fast as that."

"But she might—later?" asked Rawlinson, and he was conscious of waiting for her answer as if his whole fate depended on it.

Miss Arthur blushed. "She might—later," she admitted; and then Rawlinson's hopes went high up in the air.

He knew already that he loved her. He had dared to surmise that she was not indifferent to him. But how many years must lie between that love and its fruition!

"I am going to end it in a note of hope on the hero's part, then," he said.

"That's capital, Mr. Rawlinson. One can always hope."

He rewrote the story in accordance with Miss Arthur's suggestions and sent it in. For three days he waited with a heart that thumped every time the postman's whistle was heard. On the third morning a letter came from the magazine. He tore it open. Inside was a check for $75.

When Rawlinson gathered courage to read the letter he found that it contained besides an acceptance a suggestion for another story. And the signature, which had formerly been impersonal, was now "Julia Arthur."

It was the girl below. He had heard a friend address her as Julia once. He could not be mistaken. He ran downstairs. He was a mixture of emotions, joy, indignation, hurt pride. So she had accepted the story to help him!

But when he rapped at the door and she came out, and stood before him, he could say nothing, but only stared at her speechlessly. The girl beckoned him in. And again she seemed to understand his feelings though he had not spoken.

"Now you mustn't be foolish, Mr. Rawlinson," she said. "I did know you had been asked to write a story, but the invitation came from the manager, Mr. Smith. It was he who wanted it more than I. And I didn't read it just because you were a friend. So I had nothing to do except to sign that letter. And you will forgive me for deceiving you?"

"If," answered Rawlinson slowly, "I may—hope."

And her blush was significant of his answer.

Plot Bared In Seized Papers

Documents of Von Papen's Secretary Expose Welland Canal Conspiracy

NEW YORK, April 19.—The papers seized by federal agents yesterday in the office of Wolfe Von Igel, former secretary of Capt. Franz Von Papen, recalled German military attache, will not be restored; neither will the prosecution of Von Igel for his alleged participation in the Welland Canal plot be dropped, Assistant United States Attorney Wood said to-day.

Mr. Wood announced that he had received instructions from Washington to proceed with the case just as if no protest had been made by the German ambassador over the seizure of the papers and by Von Igel himself, on the ground that he was officially connected with the embassy. The prosecutor said that he had examined the papers over night; that they all referred to the alleged conspiracy to destroy the Canadian waterway, and that there was no evidence that they were ambassadorial papers.

"If the papers are to be returned to the German Ambassador," said Mr. Wood, "he must swear that the documents are part of the archives of the German Embassy."

The papers, he added, furnished additional evidence against the five men under indictment in the case.

CANADA'S OPPORTUNITY IN EGGS

Great Britain formerly imported immense quantities of eggs from Russia and from the Scandinavian countries. These sources of supply, if not entirely cut off, are seriously diminished. With facilities for shipping in a fresh condition Canada has an opportunity of meeting the deficiency.

To accomplish this not only must the number of poultry breeders be multiplied, but increased watchfulness be manifested in tending the flocks and in the selection of stock. The average Canadian flock produces about 50 eggs per hen. The world's record is 314 eggs laids in one year by one hen, Lady Eglantine of Delaware. Just as there are pedigreed milking cows, so there are bred-to-lay fowl. It will pay you to find out about them. A good breed of poultry is no more costly to keep than a poor breed, and is infinitely more profitable. Having the fowl, the next thing is to see that the eggs are kept fresh. Candling is a simple method of testing eggs. A candling apparatus and instructions for handling may be secured free from the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Canadian Cavalry to Depart Soon

First Draft to Fight Side by Side With the British

HAMILTON, Ont., April 19.—The first draft of cavalry that ever left Canada to fight side by side with the British cavalry soon will depart from Hamilton. Lieut. Sippi will have charge of the men. Another draft of 100 men under Lieuts. Burlingham and Smith is to go soon. The boys were inspected yesterday by Brigadier-General Logie. To-day a big dinner was held at the barracks, when Major George H. Williams, the senior chaplain, addressed the soldiers.

Fifty pairs of socks, knitted by Toronto ladies and supplied through Mrs. Strathy, were presented to the cavalry draft, while Mrs. Gordon J. Smith presented to the C. M. R. draft 100 pairs of socks supplied by Brantford ladies.

The C.M.R. will hold its first church parade on Sunday to Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. Recruiting is again very poor here, only 14 men applying yesterday, of whom eight were accepted.

Within the Military Circle

BELLEVILLE

A large audience was present at a recruiting meeting at Wellman's Corners last night. Lieut. Sherman Young of the 155th Battalion was among those who addressed the meeting.

Lieut. Weller of the 155th Battalion, Trenton, brought in two recruits this morning.

A number of officers of the 155th Battalion arrived in the city today to attend the presentation of colors to the 80th Battalion.

Col. Hemming, O.C. the Third Military District, of Kingston, arrived in the city this morning.

The 155th Band paraded on Front and Bridge streets this morning. A number of selections were rendered outside the 155th recruiting office on Bridge street.

The entire 80th Battalion, consisting of 1100 men, paraded Front street last evening at five o'clock. Both the brass and bugle bands accompanied the troops. Many onlookers witnessed the parade and complimentary remarks were heard on all sides.

KINGSTON

Recruiting for the first two weeks of April has not been as brisk as for the last two weeks in March, and yet the returns only show a difference of 196 men enlisted. It is said that many young men are waiting for camp to open before enlisting, as they prefer a canvas home to living in a barracks. The following recruiting returns have been made to Major Wilson, D.A.A. and Q.M.G.:

80th Battalion, Belleville—31 appointed officers, 7 attached officers;—total, 1,159.

93rd Battalion, Peterboro'—42 recruits, 32 appointed officers, 2 attached officers; total, 927.

109th Battalion, Lindsay—63 recruits, 3 appointed officers, 29 attached officers; total, 1,010.

136th Battalion, Port Hope—76 recruits, 31 appointed officers, 14 attached officers; total, 759.

139th Battalion, Cobourg—64 recruits, 31 appointed officers, 10 attached officers; total, 982.

146th Battalion, Kingston—70 recruits, 41 appointaed officers, 12 attached officers; total, 927.

155th Battalion, Belleville—86 recruits, 41 appointed officers, 12 attached officers; total, 1,084.

156th Battalion, Brockville—44 recruit, 41 appointed officers, 12 attached officers; total, 1,029.

Engineer training depot, Ottawa—433 recruits, 10 appointed officers, 82 attached officers; total, 1,811.

Cobourg Heavy Battery, Cobourg—30 recruits, 1 appointed officer; total, 31.

C.A.D.C., Kingston—9 appointed officers, 7 attached recruits; total, 16.

Unattached recruits in the district—50.

Cyclist Corps, Kingston—1 appointed officer, 17 men; total, 18.

Total recruits for the two weeks, 1,390, as against 1,586 for the last two weeks in March.

Total appointed officers in the district, 449.

Total attached officers in the district, 231.

Total strength of all troops in the Military District to date, 14,173.

There are 12 lady clerks now engaged at headquarters, and these will go to camp with the staff. The 3rd District is fortunate in getting a very fine class of lady clerks, of which the officers are justly proud. At camp these clerks will wear an arm badge indicating that they belong to the staff, and it is felt this will save them from many petty annoyances. They will probably live near the camp, either in Barriefield village or in one of the cottages on the water front. Every officer and soldier will feel it a duty to see that the ladies of the clerical staff of headquarters, receives the best treatment and every courtesy to which a lady is entitled.

It is published that as far as possible troops of the C.E.F. training in Canada are to be permitted to attend their own church service on Easter Sunday.

Major Buritt, C.R.C.E. for the 3rd District, has returned to the city after visiting Lindsay and Peterboro.'

The following nine soldiers returned from England and the front, arrived in the city at 2.30 p.m., Tuesday and went to the Elmhurst Home. Their names and addresses are: C. Q. M. S. Branhill, 14th Battalion, Ottawa; Sergt. Major R. H. Case, 3rd Battery, Gananoque; Privates P. E. Bradley, 12th Battalion, Brockville; P. Brown, 18th Battalion, Lindsay; P. H. Furney, 21st Battalion, Point Alexander; R. T. Mason, Canadian Engineers Training Depot, Ottawa; A. A. Trapp, 25th Battalion, Belleville; C. Hall, 14th Battalion, Ottawa.

The fellow who can suggest a remedy for every ill seldom takes any of them.

Many Military Matters

The 146th Battalion will be camped away down the road at Barriefield in the field near Cartwright's farm. Lieut.-Col. C. A. Low, commanding 146th was at Barriefield on Tuesday afternoon and selected the best site available. It was at first hoped that the 146th would secure the ground formerly used by the 38th and 80th Battalions as there were a large number of Kingstonians in the battalion who would find the more westerly location more convenient in getting to the city. Headquarters, however, has decreed that the 146 will go down into the bush at the right hand side of the road.

Major C. J. Burritt, commanding Royal Canadian Engineers for Military District No. 3, has an excellent staff but the fact that he has added Prof. Thomas Scott to this staff will greatly increase its strength. The professor is going into military life with the rank of lieutenant. He is a graduate of Queen's University and went after graduation to Vancouver. Later he went to Mexico and his valuable experience added to his technical training finally brought him to the very important and responsible position as assistant city engineer for Toronto.

Owing to the fact that Capt. E. W. Henderson is on the sick list for a few days Lieut. Scott will be in command of No. 5 Field Company, Canadian Engineers, going into Barriefield camp as an advance guard on Thursday.

Hundreds of men are asking for leave of absence to go on the farms and help in the seeding of the crop. A Kingston representative was in the office of the 146th Battalion when a sergeant made application. Lieut.-Col. C. A. Low to make sure that every application is genuine made the usual inquiries: "What would your father do if he could get you for the time that he needs you?" asked the Colonel. The answer was: "My father is now running a big farm all by himself. If I don't go it means that he either has to hire men or the work is not all done."

There was never a more serious shortage in the ranks of available farm labor than there is now. The colonel passed the remark that some of the men loitering around the villages should be secured for the work and the answer came back that this farm was five miles from a village.

It was certainly a beneficial move to the farmers when the Government gave the order that leave of absence could be granted to bona fide applicants who desire to assist in putting in the crop. The commanding officers do not want any men who should be drilling," resting up on the south side of the barn," but men who are urgently needed for the work must be granted the furlough when the application is made.

No. 5 F. C. C. E., will go into camp and after establishing its own summer location will lay out the camp. The lines for the battalions will be drawn up and put into shape so that as soon as the authority is received the work of erecting buildings can be proceeded with. There are a number of buildings that must be erected to accommodate the increased staff.—Kingston Whig.

Next week will be the last for the second course at the District School of Signalling, which has been carrying on such splendid work at Kingston under the very able management of Major D. E. Mundell and his adjutant, Capt. N. Munsie. There has been an average attendance of over 150 at the course which has made the ordinary methods of personal instruction rather difficult to carry out but by considerably impressing on the minds of the signallers the necessity of individual study the progress has been up to schedule and very satisfactory.

1st Anniversary Of Langemark

Almost a Year Since First Glorious Achievement of Canadians at Ypres

The 22nd, 23rd and 24th of April mark an epoch in Canadian history without a parallel since the Dominion was called into existence. On these days the second battle of Ypres was fought, and on the 23rd of April the first Canadian division covered themselves with glory, and the field of Langemarck with their dead and wounded. The first anniversary of Langemarck comes on Easter Sunday, April 23rd, and this is the anniversary of the natal day of St. George, the patron saint of England.

A number of Belleville heroes took part in the memorable battle and some were wounded.

DIED AT MERCED, CAL.

Chas. C. Proctor, a mine owner, native of Belleville, Ont., died April 14th, at a mining camp near Merced, Cal.

Had a Nervous Breakdown, Could Not Sleep or Work

Is Now Cured and Attributes His Recovery to the Use of Dr. Chase's Medicines

Some splendid results have been reported to us from the combined use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. In complicated cases they work together with great success.

While the Kidney-Liver Pills arouse the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and so overcome derangements of these organs, the Nerve Food enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the system in a general way.

Mr. R. B. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes: "About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter. I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not sleep soundly and would start up so suddenly as to almost jump out of bed. My kidneys were bad, too, and I had awful pains in the back all day. I doctored with our family doctor, but he did not seem to know what I needed. I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and Kidney-Liver Pills. I take great pleasure in recommending these medicines, as I have proved that they do all that is claimed for them."

When used together the Nerve Food should be used after each meal and at bed-time, and the Kidney-Liver Pills only as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in healthy condition. Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

M. Mullett, also of the 80th Battalion, and Mrs. Mullett assisted the bride. The bride looked very charming in a beautiful changeable silk gown carrying a bunch of pink roses. The happy pair are enjoying a short honeymoon before the groom leaves for overseas. The popular young couple have the best wishes of many friends from this city.

INCREASED INCOME BY BOND INVESTMENT

Yesterday, following the action of the City Council, $80,000 of the city's sinking fund was invested in Government bonds of a ten year term. By this action the city will receive an increase of $1,500 per year for 10 years, the amount at present being realized for interest. By this move a sum of $15,000 will be added to the fund, which is without doubt an excellent stroke of business on the part of our city fathers.

Food For Warm Days.

"Heating" foods, as the expression implies, should not be used in the warm weather now approaching. Starchy and fatty foods are those which heat most, because they are concentrated, i.e., have not enough waste matter to stimulate intestinal activity. The result is absorption into the blood of decomposed products which irritate the skin, clog the organs of elimination, and reduce vitality required to withstand the heat. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal positively prevents all decomposition within the digestive tube, preventing the possibility of absorption of matters which "heat the blood." In summer make porridge at night and serve cold in the morning

Some time between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock last evening, an automobile was taken from in front of the Quinte Hotel, and up to the present time no trace of it has been found. It was an up-to-date car in every respect. Some lap rugs and other articles were in the car. The loss was reported to the police, who made every effort to locate it. PRESENTATION OF COLORS

Many were in the city today for the purpose of witnessing the presentation of colors to the 80th Battalion, which battalion will shortly leave for overseas. The presentation took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the parade ground in connection with the Armouries, and was witnessed by a great concourse of people. Col. Hemming of Kingston, commanding officer of military district No. 3, was in attendance as were other officers. Many prominent citizens were present, and took part in the interesting function. The 80th battalion under the command of Lt.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, was 1,100 strong, and presented a most imposing appearance. The march past was executed with neatness, and despatch and other manoeuvres were well done. A detailed account of the proceedings will appear in Saturday's issue.

What About Starchy Foods?

Aren't starchy foods all right? They certainly are. The starch of grains is one of the chief sources of food energy.

But some stomachs are not able to digest the starches as presented in ordinary foods, such as white bread and white flour products, which are often the unsuspected cause of digestive troubles—imperfect assimilation, fermentation and gas, biliousness, headache, constipation, anemia, and other common ills.

One food that supplies the valuable starch elements in easily digestible form is

Grape-Nuts

It is made of the energizing grains, whole wheat and malted barley, the starch cells of which are largely converted by long baking into dextrin and grape-sugar which are readily assimilated by even weakened digestive organs. Grape-Nuts digests in about one hour.

This food comes ready to eat, nourishing and delicious; and as it retains all the nutriment of the grains — including the mineral elements largely lacking in the usual dietary — it is a wonderful builder of well-balanced bodies, nerves and brains.

FARM AND GARDEN

Gossip Notes

The man who lets the other fellow know what he has to sell generally sells it.

It would be folly to ruin an orchard by cutting down the expense of proper spraying and care this year.

By all means sow large, plump seed, free from weed seeds and treated for smut.

Keep the water troughs full. Cattle craving for green feed have an almost unquenchable thirst.

You may not be able to seed for a few days, but you can at least test the seed and be sure of its vitality.

Make the surplus horse stock do the extra work falling upon your shoulders by the hired man going overseas.

Every farm boy should make the most of his opportunities to get education. The farmer of the future will need it even more than the farmer of to-day.

Note well the bad places in the roads this spring and repair them at road-work time. A little system in road maintenance often saves much trouble later on.

When the elite of New York, including a couple of hundred women, pay $150,000 to see two sluggers toy with each other for forty minutes, doubts arises as to whether humanity is going forward or backward.

A farmer offered a suggestion the other day re the government's campaign for thrift and economy, which sounded reasonable. He said that in his opinion a good place for them to begin was at home.

THE BIGGEST LITTLE DAIRY COUNTRY

Denmark holds the world's record for intensive farming. After Germany had taken Schleswig-Holstein Danish experts figured that their development must come from within, and they proceeded to develop the arid wastes of Jutland which have now become tremendous producers of agricultural and dairy products. The Danes claim that they have solved most of Europe's intensive farming problems and that much of German efficiency in this direction has been learned from them.

The little kingdom is one of the greatest dairy producers in the world and its butter is exported to every part of the earth. It is found in Mexico, and even in the far off islands of the antipodes as well as in Patagonia. Its reputation in Europe, particularly in England, is unexcelled and vast quantities have been shipped for years to all the countries of Europe.

American business men have always admired the wonderful cow-feeding methods employed by the Danish farmers who tether their cattle in rows in such a way that they can eat but a certain section of grass in a day. The next day they are moved forward in the meadows, and it is worked out on such a minute basis that by the time the cows have reached the end of the pasture the grass is again ready for grazing at the beginning.

PRODUCTION AND THRIFT.
THE RIGHT SPIRIT

We cannot all be patriots in the sense of appearing as such in public; but those of us to whom the privilege of platform speaking, or even of persuasion, is denied can by force of example declare ourselves. This form of patriotism is denied to no man. In exercising it we are serving God and performing a duty owing both to ourselves and to the country. We are also encouraging emulation. How far, or even in what direction, that may reach none of us can foretell. To the right-thinking man, to the true patriot, it will be enough to know that within his power he is doing all that may be done. The extent of his personal influence will not trouble him so much as the knowledge that he is bending all his best efforts to accomplish something useful in life will inspire him.

It is this spirit that paramount to all else without exception, we are specially called upon at this juncture to exercise. The man who fails is in a minor sense almost as much a traitor to his country as the man who is false to his place of birth or to the land of his adoption. It is in this spirit—the right spirit—that we are summoned to the fight that the Empire is waging for the liberty of all people, the freeservance of treaties and international engagements. By being actuated by it, no man will fall short in the responsibilities entailed by citizenship. It is this spirit that the campaign for production and thrift has been launched to develop and encourage.

No man or woman is justified in ignoring the call. He or she who recognizes it to the full by such useful production as lies within his power is fulfilling a God-given duty. He who is guilty of waste, of wilful extravagance, of woeful selfishness, places himself beyond the pale of the patriot, beyond the pale of Christian duty. This is a truth that one and all need to recognize and that in recognizing will bring into activity The Right Spirit. In producing and in saving, in practising a wise economy, we may not be doing as much as the soldier in the trenches who is exercising that divine quality of offering his life for his friend, but we shall, at least to some extent, show a becoming appreciation of the existing order of affairs. And this is possible to every man, be he lawyer, doctor, merchant, farmer or common laborer.

To Keep Your Skin Free From Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

If you are willing to spend a few minutes time in your room using a delatone paste, you can easily banish any ugly, hairy growth without discomfort or injury. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is then spread over the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rubbed off and skin washed. You will not be disappointed with this treatment, providing you get real delatone.

When the War is Over

In the rush and furore that accompanies the war, in the sudden revival of business that is sweeping over Canada and the return of conditions even better, financially, than before the war we Canadians are prone to bury everything that savors of sentiment or even duty, and like the gluttons for business that all on this side of the Atlantic are, confine ourselves solely to that end. It is not that we are hard of heart or not inclined to be generous or charitable—it is merely the spirit of the times in which we live. But what of the days to follow the war?

Canadians—these Canadians who are not at the front or not doing their bit—have a duty to perform, a duty such as has not faced mankind in modern years. We must stop and consider that we are thriving on the war. All financiers and all business men of sound reasoning tell us that it is war contracts and the consequent return of money to Canada that has again brought us out of the mire of business depression and into the brighter period of business extraordinary.

And what are we doing in return for this wealth brought us through the bloodshed of nations? Through the laws that govern life this business is rightly ours but as a result of it all we have a debt to pay—a debt that can never be paid in full. We must turn to those less fortunate, to those who stood with their back to the wall while we prepared, while we made the preparation that has finally brought us prosperity.

Belgium—and the thrill that goes through every patriotic person at the mention of the name—Belgium is starving. Seven millions of her people are hungry. More people than there are in the whole of Canada are crying, pleading, begging of the world to give them food. Shall not we out of the fullness of our purses in this period of business prosperity feed our hungry allies? We must remember that these are brothers in arms, and the fathers, mothers, wives and children of brothers in arms who are asking us to give them only such food as will keep the breath of life in them—food that we in our surfeited days of prosperity would scorn, yet it is life to them.

Canada must — Canada will—hear the cry so that when the war is over each man, woman and child in the Dominion can stand up, and say, "I did my duty."

The Belgian Relief Committee of 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, is organized, and giving its services for the purpose of helping Canada feed the Belgians. No Canadian who loves his country can deny the rights of those who stood up and protected that country when others were unable to do so. The committee is looking for your part in Canada's gift to keep Belgium from starvation. Will you

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

PRESENTATION OF COLORS TO THE 80th BATTALION C.E.F.

A Memorable Gathering at Belleville Armouries—Thousands View the Proceedings and Listen to Prominent Orators---Colors the Gift of the Ketcheson Family of Hasting County, Including the City of Belleville---Presentation Address by Miss Nettie Ketcheson

An event which has for some time been looked forward to with interest took place on Thursday afternoon. It was the consecration and presentation of colors to the 80th Battalion, C.E.F., which will shortly leave Belleville for overseas. The colors were the gift of the Ketcheson family of Hastings County, in recognition of the fact that Col. W. G. Ketcheson, who for years was the commanding officer of the 49th Hastings Rifles, is the popular commanding officer of the 80th Battalion.

This battalion was at Barriefield for some time, but last fall two companies, namely, A. and B., were transferred to Belleville, whilst C. Company has since been stationed at Napanee and D. Company at Picton. On Wednesday the last two mentioned companies arrived here, making a full battalion of 1100 men taking part in the memorable occasion.

The colors are most beautiful in every respect. One flag is made of red silk. It bears the inscription and crest of the battalion, and is adorned with gold trimmings. The second flag is the Union Jack, the King's colors, and is also of silk. Both flags are trimmed with gold fringe.

The ceremony took place on the parade ground in front of the Armouries. About the outside of the grounds were thousands of interested spectators from the city and county. The chief military officer present was Col. Hemming, commanding officer of the Third Division, who was accompanied by his aide-de-camp.

Previous to the presentation of the colors the 80th Battalion, under command of Lt.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, paraded from their quarters on Pinnacle street to the Armouries, where they were drawn up on the grounds in review form. The battalion is composed of men from this district which would be difficult to surpass, as every man has an excellent soldierly appearance.

In front of the main entrance to the Armouries a platform had been erected, and it was appropriately draped with bunting. Amongst those on the platform were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Col. Hemming, Col. Ponton, Mayor Ketcheson, C. Ketcheson, reeve of Sidney Township, T. Ketcheson, governor of the jail, Albert Ketcheson, of Sidney, R. H. Ketcheson, Belleville, A. M. Chapman,, county clerk, Judge Deroche, Dr. Faulkner, Foxboro, J. Elliott, Mrs. G. E. Deroche, Mrs. Wm. Johnson, and Miss Benjamin. The scene from the platform was most inspiring.

After the royal salute had been given and the battalion inspected by Col. T. D. R. Hemming, the consecration of the colors was proceeded with, and it was a most impressive ceremony. The colors were brought forward and placed crosswise upon two drums which were covered with a Union Jack. Rev. Canon Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas Church, performed the consecration service, previous to which he gave a brief address. In his opening remarks he said he desired to thank Mayor Ketcheson, as one of the representatives of the Ketcheson family, for the honor done him in asking him to consecrate the colors. The minister referred in a felicitous manner to Col. Ketcheson, the commanding officer of the 80th Battalion. He was the grandson of the founder of the Ketcheson family of this county, which was a noble family. "Ever ready" was the motto of the 80th Battalion, and there was no doubt the battalion would fully justify that motto and would make good for King and country. The colors would be consecrated to King and Empire. They were symbolic of reverence and justice to all men. May the battalion ever guard and protect the colors, which were also symbolic of obedience and loyalty to King and country. Into God's gracious care we commend the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the battalion. Two verses of the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," were sung, the band of the 80th Battalion leading in the music. The following prayer for the battalion was then recited:

O Lord, Who rulest over all things, accept, we beseech Thee, our service this day. Bless what we have blessed in Thy name. Let Thy gracious favor rest on those who shall follow the colors now committed to their trust. Give them courage; and may their courage ever rest on their sure confidence in Thee. May they show self-control in the hour of success, patience in the time of adversity; and may their honor lie in seeking the honor and glory of Thy great name. May they walk worthy of the vocation in which they are called, in dependence on Thy blessed will, and mindful that without Thee they can do nothing. Guide the counsels of those who shall lead them, and sustain them by help in the time of need. Grant they may all so faithfully serve Thee in this life, that they fail not finally to obtain an entrance into Thy heavenly kingdom, through the merits of Thy blessed Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Miss Bessie Ketcheson, daughter of Mayor Ketcheson, of this city, then read the following address:

PRESENTATION OF COLORS.

To Lt.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men of the 80th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force:

I am greatly privileged as the daughter of the Mayor of Belleville, to represent my kith and kin of the Ketcheson family from far and near, in presenting to you, gallant comrades in arms of the 80th Overseas Battalion, these Colours, the gift of the kindred of your Commanding Officer, whose past traditions for many generations, and whose present service, are linked up with loyal devotion to King and Country.

I ask you to believe that in the folds of these flags are interwoven the patriotism and pride of the British race, and also that in the web and warp and woof of the Colours—that do not run—is knit a warm personal affection and heartfelt God-speed to you our brothers who are about to stand the test, that our fellow-Canadians have already so nobly stood at Neuve Chapelle, St. Julien, Festubert, Givenchy and St. Eloi.

May the King's Colours inspire the King's men in the glory of service. May the Regimental Colours be your rallying centre of unity; and as these standards will, I trust, be an incentive to hope and courage in the future that lies before you, so too may they in the years to come, when victory will have crowned peace, be the nucleus and centre of proud memories of duty done together.

We commit these Colours to your soldier keeping as a sacred trust. Guard them well. You will, we know, bring them back to Belleville without a stain of dishonour.

You will, we trust, remember Belleville as your Regimental home; we will remember you in our hearts and our prayers, and will long for the time when we can welcome you and your Colours home again to the Bay of Quinte. Meanwhile, may the God of Battles strengthen you for the great conflict.

Across the world you keep the pride.
Across the world we'll mark the score

God speed you and God bless you, Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and men of our 80th Battalion.

An escort then marched to where the colors were located and they were handed to Lieuts. Drayton and Henderson by Miss Ketcheson. The two Lieutenants received them in a kneeling attitude. A general salute was next accorded the colors, and the band played the National Anthem. The escort and the two standard bearers then slowly, to an impressive slow march played by the band, marched around the battalion, the colors being carried aloft. At the conclusion of this part of the ceremony speech-making was in order.

MAYOR KETCHESON.

Mayor Ketcheson was the first speaker, and upon rising to speak was cordially received. His Worship said he desired to address a few word to Col. Ketcheson, commanding officer of the 80th Battalion, officers and men, and citizens of Belleville. He desifed to compliment the men of the battalion upon their excellent behaviour since they had been in the city. All had learned to love, honor and respect them, and we were sorry to lose them. The good wishes and blessing of all citizens would follow them and he had no doubt that all would do honor to their King, country and city.

COL. HEMMING.

Col. Hemming received a hearty welcome when called upon to speak. He addressed his opening remarks to Col. Ketcheson and the members of the battalion. A beautiful set of colors had been presented to the battalion as a gift from the Ketcheson family. In accepting those colors the battalion had multiplied their responsibilities ten fold. In these colors there are two emblems. They were the King's colors and the regimental colors. The regimental colors represented the honor of the battalion and in was incumbent upon every man to see that they were not tarnished by any misconduct. It will be for the men to show that they are true to what the colors represent. The King's colors you will defend if necessary with your lives. They represent the British army as a whole, and they call upon you to protect them. They have been consecrated, which adds to their value. The colors will not be carried to the field of battle, but will be temporarily placed in some church or cathedral. Even though you do not see them, never forget that they are in your possession, no matter where they may be. Let no blot or stain ever be placed upon them. The Colonel impressed upon the men that they should ever remember the Ketcheson family who had provided the colors. A soldier could be a gentleman as well as a soldier. Remember that a courteous man is preeminently a gentleman. Never allow a comrade to get into trouble if you can possibly prevent it. The battalion was one of the best leaving this country for overseas. The battalion was not perfect, but it had done remarkably well. They have a great deal yet to learn. When they landed on the shores of England they would be inspected, and would be judged by that inspection. See that you do your bit faithfully in the trenches. The speaker was sure they would. In saying farewell he wished for them God-speed and a safe return to Canada. Do not be frightened, but remember you are fighting for King, country and religious principles. In conclusion the Colonel said the red in the flags represented reverence, the white purity, and the blue temperance. If these were kept none would ever be ashamed of them.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell was most cordially received when called upon to speak. In his opening remarks the veteran statesman said that this was no time for speech-making. He complimented Col. Ketcheson upon the grand display made by the 80th Battalion. He knew the original Mr. Ketcheson and had known the Ketcheson family, socially and politically over three-quarters of a century. The same blood as coursed through the veins of the ancestors of the family coursed through the veins of those now on active service. Col. Ketcheson was

TRENCHES RETAKEN BY ALLIES

Germans Attempt to Rush Infantry Attack, But Are Repulsed by Artillery

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, April 22.—Afternoon statement: In Belgium our artillery energetically cannonaded the sector east of the Ypres-Pilkelm road during an action at this point by the British troops.

West of the Meuse, the enemy during the night, attacked our positions on slopes north of Dead Man's Hill. The Germans, who had succeeded in gaining a foothold in our first line, were ejected soon after by a counter-attack which won back for us all Terrain, previously conquered by us. Another attack in which liquid fire was used, was delivered against our trenches north of Caurettes woods. It was completely repulsed.

East of the Meuse at the close of the day yesterday, following an intense bombardment of our lines from Meuse as far as Fort Vaux, the Germans brought up large bodies of troops into their trenches on the front between the pond and Fort Vaux in preparation for attacks. Artillery bombardments immediately launched, prevented the advance and caused serious losses to the enemy.

In Le Pretre wood there was some fighting between patrols. On the rest of the front the night was calm.

Carried Big Liquor Supply

Napanee Temperance Worker Had 24 Gallons in Stock—Not a Case of Spite

TORONTO, April 22.—A druggist of Napanee, F. L. Hooper, was before the Ontario License Board yesterday to answer a charge of having a larger supply of liquor on hand than the law allows. He was chairman of the local Committee of One Hundred in Napanee, as well as having taken an active part in the temperance campaign.

Inspector W. S. Exley told that he found 24 gallons of whiskey on the premises; also that an examination of the order files failed to show a doctor's order since 1914. He said Mr. Hooper admitted selling a quart to a dentist without an order every two months. A Mr. Woods was also supplied twice within the last 30 days without a doctor's prescription. Hooper had been warned by the inspector, who before he was appointed as such knew that a bottle of liquor could be obtained at Hooper's store for a dollar.

Chairman Flavelle said:—"We have had letters, and some people have been tried to degrade our inspector. This is not a spite case, as was claimed."

Hooper admitted at one time bottles were sold, but said that he had been trying to reform these irregularities. Doctors had telephoned their prescriptions containing liquor, and he didn't know it was against the law to fill them. He thought he was within the law in keeping over ten gallons of liquor, and that selling to a dentist was all right. A case is pending in the courts at Napanee against him at the present time.

Decorates Officer Who Hit Sussex

PARIS, April 21.—Information was received from reliable sources to-day to the effect that Emperor William has decorated the commander of the submarine which is said to have torpedoed the Sussex.

It is understood Washington has been informed of this development.

The award of a decoration to this commander, it is believed here, would make it difficult, and perhaps impossible, for Germany to punish him in case such a demand were made by the American government.

MIGHTY ALLIED DRIVE IS NEAR AT HAND

Date of Grand Offensive the Absorbing Topic—Soldiers are Eager—Arrival of Russian Forces Quickens Discussion of Decisive Fighting on West Front—French Make Gains—Repulse Foe Attacks

PARIS, April 22—Special—The Allie's hour is at hand. All the anxiety and pessimism of the past few months have been swept away by the Russian landing at Marseilles. The date of the Allied grand offensive, which the arrival of the Czar's troops is universally taken to foreshadow, is now the sole and absorbing topic.

Yesterday the French made further progress west of the Meuse, around Le Mort Homme, and repulsed heavy German attacks east of the Meuse.

May 1 has generally been assumed as the time when the Allies would set their armies in motion. As far as preparations go all is nearly ready. It is no secret that the British troops in France have been eager to begin for weeks. In March General Haig offered to aid at Verdun, but Joffre declined, preferring that the Allies conserve their efforts until the "nibbling" process on the Meuse was completed.

With May only 8 days away, it now appears that the grand assault will be still further postponed. Although the French recovered ground at Verdun to-day, it was only a tactical move, and is not likely to be followewd, for the present at least, by an offensive on a large scale.

OTTAWA, April 22.—Special—Colonel John Wesley Allison is in Ogdensburg, N.Y., separated from the Dominion of Canada only by the mile width of the St. Lawrence River.

From his physical appearance it looks as if he might have a hard time to get through and keep what remains of his health.

This interesting information is contained in a lengthy despatch from Ogdensburg.

Her crew was landed safely, according to a despatch from South Shields.

GERMANY STANDS FIRM ON SUBMARINE POLICY

BERLIN, April 22.—Special—Nothing has yet developed as a result of the receipt of the American note to Germany concerning Germany's submarine warfare. No expression of opinion is obtainable from the Foreign Office, where absolute reticence is maintained.

Neither the note for any reference to it has been published in Germany, and there is no intimation as yet when the note will be made public. The celebrations of Holy Week and of the Eastertide, therefore, are proceeding undisturbed by any knowledge of foreign complications.

The Ministers and other officials who were entitled to it, received a copy of the note this morning and were engaged during the day in studying the document.

The note probably will be answered some time next week after serious consideration has been given the American contention, but there is little hope that any answer can go to the length demanded by the Washington Government, despite the fact that the Government desires to maintain good relations with the United States.

The sentiment is against any further weakening of Germany's submarine campaign, to say nothing of an abandonment of it.

Banish Pimples And Eruptions

IN THE SPRING MOST PEOPLE NEED A TONIC MEDICINE.

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

As a result of the collapse of a portion of a platform on the west side of Griffin's Opera House on Thursday afternoon, when a number of women and children were precipitated to a depth of about 10 feet, some of those who fell were more or less injured, but fortunately none seriously. A girl named Murphy sustained a fracture to her leg, and another girl Miss Prest, sustained severe burises. The lady who fainted only suffered from shock, and shortly after revived. It was almost miraculous that a number were not seriously or fatally injured. After the accident the platform was guarded by members of the militia, and no person was allowed to go thereon.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

LAST NIGHT AT THE PALACE THEATRE.

An interesting film programme at the Palace Theatre last evening was witnessed with pleasure by two large audiences, the repeating of the photoplays being equally well patronized, both filling the house. "One Hundred Years Ago," in which two fathers planned for the marriage of their son and daughter, into which arrangement the young couple entered with avidity; but the fathers quarreled over a trivial matter, and the lovers were separated by order of the obstinate parents, the young woman dying of grief; a curse vowed by the lover, rested upon the girl's father, and he took his own life. A generation later the scene was practically duplicated, but with far different results, love's triumph bringing joy to all. The pathos of the first, and the modern methods of the second, in which an attempted elopement figured—"but all ended happily"—made up an especially attractive play.

"Grace Hathaway's Lion Taming," with its intricate features, in which treachery, love, revenge and death abounded, brought out much fine acting; and a humorous sketch of two college boys, far from home and "broke" added zest to the evening's entertainment. The entire programme will be repeated tonight.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

Some idea of the magnitude of "The Battle Cry of Peace," which will be presented at Griffin's Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday, May 3rd and 4th, may be gained from the following facts. In support of the company there were introduced 16,000 National guardsman, 8,000 Union veterans, 5,000 horses and 17 aeroplanes, with Zeppelins torpedo boats, and armored motor cars. Of the many factors that make "The Battle Cry of Peace" the most impressive of war films, the series of thrilling pictures showing the bombardment of New York from land, sea and sky. The Wall street district in flames, and the dynamiting of public buildings are among the most sensational. A special musical score and augumented orchestra accompany the picture.

MARY PICKFORD

An exceptionally fine program has been prepared for Belleville photoplay lovers at Griffin's Opera House, next Tuesday and Wednesday evening, when the king of comedy, Charlie Chaplin appears in the 4-part comedy scream, "The Mix Up." Mary Pickford also appears on the same program in a beautiful filmplay offering entitled "Home Folks." In addition to the above offering Jane Gail and Gerald Amos appear in the United Kingdom Film company's 4-part "Spy Menace" was film, Fringe of War which is conceded to be better than "The White Feather."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

The next attraction at Griffin's Opera House, will be D. W. Griffith's mugthy spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement is for 3 days, next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a matinee daily except Thursday at 2.30.

This is the great production which is still making a record run of over 800 performances in New York City, where it created the sensation of the season. It is estimated that over two million people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the east. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago San Francisco, Los Angeles, Toronto and Montreal to its credit.

The story is one of romance and adventure, linked to the most vital periods of American history. It recoils its fact with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Love and conflict are its basic theme but a myriad of details illumine the narrative and lift it so far beyond anything our stage has ever known, that the usual avenues of comparison do not offer a road to follow in this instance. Linked with the drama is an operatice score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. This wonderful score which synchronized to the drama is in itself an incomparable work of art. An orchestra of thirty travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation.

That part of history dealing with the rise and fall of slavery problem is the vital spark upon which Griffith has built his story. The conflict which this question caused is reproduced in great battles and in all the thrilling things which are a part of war.

BOARD OF EDUCATION IN REGULAR SESSION

First Meeting Held in Two Months—Considerable Business Brought up and Disposed of—Reports Presented and Pushed Through

A regular meeting of the Board of education, the first in two months, was held on Thursday evening, and considerable business was transacted. The members present were Messrs. B. Mallory, chairman; H. Sneyd, F. E. O'Flynn, J. Elliott, T. E. Ketcheson, F. S. Deacon, A. McGie, S. S. Moore, L. S. Pascoe, J. F. Wills, Col. Ponton and A. E. Bailey.

Mr. Mallory said that he thanked the Board for the honor conferred conferred upon him in electing him chairman of the Board. This was the first opportunity of thanking the members, as no meeting had been held. Since the inaugural meeting a valued member of the teaching staff, Miss Urquhart, had passed away. He was informed that nearly all the copies of the rules of the Board were gone. Extra copies might be secured, and some of the rules revised.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A number of communications were received, some of which were filed and others acted upon.

Miss N. Nicholson applied to be placed on the teaching staff when a vacancy occurs.—Filed.

From Mr. Conroy, architect, asking to be considered if additions to any of the schools were made.—Filed.

Mr. W. L. Binniger applied for the position of Mr. Gardiner, if vacant Filed.

A communication re. penny savings banks in the schools was read and referred to the committee of the whole.

TRUANCY OFFICER.

The Secretary of the Police Commissioners informed the Board that Mr R. Arnott had been appointed Truant Officer at a salary of $150 per annum.

Mr. Bailey—Does not the Board make this appointment, or has it nothing to say?

Mr. Wills—The Police Commissioners make the appointment.

A vote of thanks from the Y's of the city was read thanking the Board for the use of the High School assembly room for the holding of a meeting. —Filed.

Miss Fleming asked to be appointed on the High School entrance examination board.—Referred to committee.

REPORTS.

Mr. MacLaurin, Principal of the High School, reported that the work of the school was satisfactory. Nine boys had enlisted since Christmas, and the honor roll now numbered 200. Some of the boys in the school this year had signified their intention of working on farms during the holidays and had passed their examinations.

HIGH SCHOOL INSPECTION.

Mr. J. F. Wetherell, who recently inspected the High School, presented a detailed report, of which the following is a synopsis: The Belleville High School was the only large school in the Province which has absolutely no equipment for physical training. Wands, Indian clubs and dumb bells are a necessary part of the equipment of every high school.

The staff in general are all qualified. The teachers of Art and Commercial work are specialists. The Cadet instructor is also a specialist. The discipline is generally satisfactory. Attendance, 130 girls, 178 boys. Catalogues of equipment satisfactory. English literature texts in lower school satisfactory. Spelling as a rule was not good. The report was referred to the committee of the whole.

Mr. Albert E. Lake presented a report of his inspection of the Domestic Science department of the school, which was satisfactory. He stated, however, that the teacher taught only sixteen hours a week. The other spare time might be employed in some way. —Referred to committee of the whole.

On motion the Board went into committee of the whole on reports, etc., Mr. Wills in the chair.

The balance of an account of C. B. Seantlebury for mounting and framing a picture was discussed. Three hundred dollars had been paid and a balance of $47 remained.

Mr. A. McGie considered the account was altogether excessive.

Col. Ponton said he was staggered at the amount of the bill, but evidently no price had been procured. It was much larger than he considered it would be. It is an historical picture that has been made.

A motion to pay the balance was passed after Mr. O'Flynn had spoken in favor of it.

A number of accounts were ordered to be paid.

Reports of the Printing and Supplies Committee for March and April, recommending the purchasing of some necessary supplies were adopted.

A report of the Public School Inspector for February was on motion adopted and a report for March was referred to the several committees to consider matters appertaining to them.

The High School Inspector's report was considered and the low percentage on spelling was discussed by several of the members.

Principal MacLaurin, of the High School said spelling has been a problem in the school. The trouble is that we have to go to the foundation, namely the Public Schools. The pupils were doing well, he thought. The report of the Inspector in this respect was unfair, he thought.

Mr. O'Flynn thought that a committee might be appointed to look into the matter of spelling.

The report was referred to the School Management Committee to consider and report upon.

PENNY SAVINGS BANKS

A report presented showed that a a result of the penny savings scheme in the schools $2,409 was deposited to the credit of scholars in the various schools of the city.

TRUANCY.

Col Ponton referred to the fact that there appeared to be a number of boys on the streets in the daytime who should be at school.

After some discussion the Secretary of the Board was authorized to notify the teachers that they report truants to the Inspector.

HIGH SCHOOL EXAMINER.

The communication of Miss Fleming asking to be appointed on the High School Entrance board of examiners was discussed. It transpired in the discussion that Mr. Thrasher had been appointed at the January session, which was the final meeting of the old Board.

A motion was adopted that the matter of the validity of the appointment be referred to the Solicitor and Inspector of the Board, to report at the next meeting.

The committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted. Board adjourned.

A quantity of goods were on Thursday night found outside of a Front street business place, after the store had been closed up. The police had the articles placed in another business establishment for safe keeping.

WHO OWNS THE CAR?

It was reported to the police this morning that an automobile bearing the number of 10084, had been left standing the greater portion of the night on Canifton Road. In the car were some robes and wraps, which were soaked by the downpour of rain. The police had the car taken to a garage for safe keeping for the owner.

A SHARP TRICK

Yesterday morning two soldiers hired a horse and rig from a livery man of this city, and last evening about 9 o'clock the horse returned to the establishment, but the buggy was without an occupant. It is supposed the men drove near the place of business and then allowed the horse to go alone. Who the men are is unkown to the proprietor, and he is without his pay.

MASONIC FUNERAL

Under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, of which deceased was a member, the remains of the late ex-Alderman Lott were yesterday consigned to the tomb. Many members of the craft and others were in attendance at the obsequies. At the family residence, on Mill street, the burial services of the Anglican church were conducted by Wor. Bro. Rev. Dr. Blagrave, rector of Christ Church, who also officiated in the Masonic services, which were taken by Rt. Wor. Bro. A. McGinnis. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket by relatives and friends. The bearers were members of the craft, namely Bros. A. Wallace, Geo. Walton, A. McGinnis, Col. Marsh, Col. Lazier and Mayor Ketcheson.

Deserter Charged With Stealing

On Thursday evening a man clad in khaki was observed in the vicinity of the G.T.R. bridge on North Moria street, to discard his military coat and don a civilian coat. The circumstances were reported to the police and also with the military authorities with the result that later the party was apprehended and proved to be John Schell, who was taken in custody here a few days ago with a comrade as a deserter from the 224 Forester's Battalion. The civilian clothes Schell had, it was subsequently learned, had been taken from room No. 10 on the third floor of the Kyle House, and were the property of Mr. Harry Barnum, a boarder of the house. Schell was yesterday brought up before Police Magistrate Masson and was remanded to jail until the 28th inst., being charged with theft.

Cow, Calf And Hens Cremated

At an early hour yesterday morning fire destroyed a barn on premises occupied by Mr. Benjamin Burton, situated on Bleecker avenue. As a result of the blaze a cow, a calf, some hens and tools belonging to Mr. Burton were burned in the frame building, which was destroyed. How the fire originated is not known. The building was the property of Mr. William Tuft, of Thurlow Township. Mr. Burton had some insurance on the contests, which will by no means cover the loss he has sustained. The building, we are informed, was insured. When discovered, the fire had gained considerable headway, and although the fire brigade responded with alarcrity, they were unable to save the building which was situated a considerable distance from the fire stations.

THIS IS THE 628TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

WILL GERMANY ACQUIESCE?

One can scarcely believe that Germany will accede to the demands of President Wilson's note and instantly cease her submarine warfare on all shipping except warships of her opponents. Germany must long ago have calculated upon her illegal and atrocious submarine policy bringing her relations with the United States to the present impasse. To accede to the demands of the United States now would be openly to accept humiliation before all nations, and at the same time to deprive herself of a means of "fighting" which for months she has been educating her own people to believe will result in the final and overwhelming defeat of Britain and her allies. It is difficult to see how Germany can further delay a settlement of the controversy one way or the other, since not words so much as actions will be the deciding factor. On the other hand, there has been so much quibbling and bamboozling on the part of Germany that nothing but the actual breaking off of diplomatic relations will convince people that the latest note will not be dallied with, just as the note that followed the ghastly crime of the Lusitania has been.

Many will be of the opinion that the President has followed the right course in his patient dealings with Germany, and that although Germany, to her lasting shame, has been murdering Americans and other neutrals, meanwhile, she has been allowed by her own actions to prove herself utterly and hideously wrong beyond all possibility of controversy or equivocation.

THE SPLIT IN CHINA.

Progress of the political division in China goes on apace. Section after section has come into line against the domination of Yuan Shi Kai and his ambitions. The latest is Kwang-tung, the first of the seacoast provinces to join the revolt. There are seven of them now, aggregating about half the territory of China proper and representing one-third of the population of the entire republic.

It is a deeply serious antagonism to the pretensions of Yuan Shi Kai. And it is violent indeed. "A war upon despotism," it is termed by governors of the states opposed to Yuan. "A President has turned traitor," declare the governors, military and civil of revolting provinces; "a destroyer of our constitution, a betrayer of his solemn oaths of office, a violator of the will and rights of the people, by infamous intrigues the usurper of an imperial throne."

This is the schedule of antagonism upon which the republican factions in China are fighting. As they admit, the Chinese republic has not been firmly established; but their insistence is that it shall not be set aside so long as the people of China want it. And they seem in fair way to demonstrate that it is wanted.

The Manitoba Free Press says that in its opinion "no member could vote for such a resolution (one to have the Dominion Government disallow Ontario bilingual legislation) and retain any right to be regarded as a Liberal member. The Liberal member, high or low, who would advocate a policy of disallowance to deal with the Ontario educational situation, would be a renegade to one of the most clearly defined principles of Canadian Liberalism." And the Quebec Liberal members at Ottawa who are fomenting racial feeling for their own purposes cannot rely on brotherly support from the rank and file of English-speaking Liberals, no matter what encouragement the party chiefs may hand out, adds the Toronto Mail and Empire.

Announcement that a through train service would be put into operation on the National Transcontinental Railway from Halifax and St. John to Winnipeg and thence to Prince Rupert on or about June 1, was made in the House of Commons Thursday by Hon. Dr. Reid, during the discussion of the railway estimates. There was a recrudesence of the whole Transcontinental Railway debate when Dr. Reid read the correspondence between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific last year relative to the taking over by the company of the eastern section of the Government built line.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

(From The Daily Intelligencer, April 22, 1868).

It is said that two men, supposed to be Fenians, were arrested at a late hour last evening near the servants' door of Buckingham Palace. They were carrying a hamper which contained a gallon of liquid phosphorus, or "Greek fire."

Chas. Dickens, the famous author, left New York today for England.

The Mayor of Toronto has been warned of a plot to burn the Drill Shed.

The Welland Canal was damaged this morning when the gates of Lock No. 2 were carried away by a steamer.

Current Comment

"The Government of the United States has been very patient," says President Wilson, and everybody raises his hand to make it unanimous.

There are eighty-one seats in the Legislative Assembly of Quebec which will be filled at the coming elections. In the last Legislature only seventeen of the members classed themselves as Conservatives.

No less than 309,616 young men were enlisted in Canada for war service in Europe up to the beginning of the present month. And in many places the recruiting is still quite good. The goal of 500,000 may yet be reached without the aid of conscription, although there is a big job ahead for the recruiters.

While Washington is racking its brains over the attitude of Germany towards neutrals in the submarine war, the German press is openly preaching the doctrine of "down with all neutral rights whenever they conflict with our aims."—Montreal Herald and Telegraph.

Since the war began the Dupont Powder Company has increased the number of its employees from 4,000 to 66,000. It has filled $160,000,000 in contracts and has that much more on its books. The stockholders, who are said to number 5,000, may not be yearning very much to see that terrible war brought to an early end.—New York Herald.

Mr. Lloyd George in his "too late" speech charged that the war department in Great Britain was inefficient, and neither resigned nor compelled anyone else to resign. The spectacle at present is painful. If it ends in a break-up of the Government the chances will be that what will follow it will be an improvement.—Montreal Gazette.

Easter is at hand, the weather is fine, and on many of Montreal's streets there are heaps of muck waiting to be carted away. The order must come from the City Hall, however, where a first-class attempt is being made to show how not to do things.—Gazette. Montreal must be an interesting city to dwell in.

When the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Act was passed it was hailed as the "most advanced piece of legislation of the kind," but a week ago the British Columbia Legislature started work on "the most advanced" compensation legislation. Each province or state with progressive Acts seems to have "the best," on the same principle as a bride has the best husband or a mother the best baby.—Mail and Empire.

TIRED ACHING FEET AND LIMBS

are promptly relieved by applying Absorbine, Jr., the antiseptic liniment. It is soothing, healing, and invigorating—puts vim and energy into jaded muscles. One of the many enthusiastic users writes: "I received the trial bottle of Absorbine, Jr., all right and at that time was unable to walk without a cane, just around the house. I used it freely and inside of two days could walk without limping, something I had not done in two months. I went to the drug store and procured a $1.00 bottle and today can walk as good as ever. I'll never be without it. I am recommending it to everyone I can, for I am a living witness."

Absorbine, Jr., should always be kept at hand for emergencies.

At druggists, $1.00 and $2.00 a bottle or sent postpaid. Liberal trial bottle for 10c. in stamps.

How Davis Got His First Job

A favorite story among newspaper men—how Richard Harding Davis got his first job in New York—is retold by the New York Post in his obituary. Davis, in 1891, was at work as a youngster on a Philadelphia newspaper. Then:

"He conceived the ambition of shifting his fortunes to New York. It is related that he visited the late Amos J. Cummings, then managing editor of the Evening Sun, with a bundle of clippings, and asked for a job. Cummings was not impressed by the raw-looking youth in a peaked cap, and refused his request. Disappointed, but not cast down, Davis left the old, red-brick Sun building—now no more—and sauntered across Park Row into City Hall Park, where he was besought by a bunco-man with gold-bricks for sale. Scenting his opportunity, Davis led the man along, finally making an appointment to meet him later in the afternoon with the cash value of the treasure. In the meantime, Davis got in touch with the detective bureau, and when he paid over the agreed sum in marked bills, police officers were standing by, and arrested the members of the gang. Staying only to recover his money, Davis rushed back to the Evening Post office with the story. He was engaged at once."

MONTREAL'S WAR BABIES

Since the inception of the Patriotic Fund in Montreal there have been 800 maternity cases. Last week a widow of one of the soldiers give birth to twins. The Government was awaiting the extent before granting the pension; now it will be required to pay $10 instead of $5. Statistics compiled by the Fund executive show that there have been more births in the Montreal district than there have been lives lost of soldiers who went into the battle zone.

ST. JULIEN

The Canadian Government has issued an order that the Union Jack be flown at the masthead of all Government buildings throughout the Dominion on Saturday, April 22nd, to commemorate the anniversary of the battle of St. Julien, where the Canadians won undying honor.

ST. JULIEN.

St. Julien — write that word
In the blood of the noble dead,
Of the gallant young Canadians
Who so bravely fought and bled.
They were noble young Crusaders,
Yes, a brave, heroic band,
Who died for King and Country,
And the honour of the land.

Tell me not those gallant heroes,
That now lie among the slain,
Will for ever be forgotten,
We will never see again.
They're not dead, they're only sleeping,
Waiting for the trump of God—
They have done their duty nobly,
And the holy way have trod.

Mothers, wives, and sisters dear,
Dry all your tears away;
You'll meet your loved ones by and by
On that bright Eternal Day.
They were true to God and country,
They did their very best—
And now from earthly warfare
Your loved ones are at rest.

COMPROMISES PROPOSED TO DELAY COMPULSION PLANS

LONDON, Eng., April 21.—The political situation is grave, although a temporary solution of the recruiting difficulties may be found in a Cabinet compromise on the basis of the report of the special Cabinet Committee. The progressive Ministerial wing may consent to a trial of the Committee's expedients before insisting upon the introduction of universal compulsion. Those expedients include the compulsory enlistment of young men of eighteen, the retention of time-expired men, and the removal of territorial restrictions, plus the results of the "combing out" processes which have retarded deliveries under the Military Service Act, and the yield of attested married men. Such a compromise would be in accordance with the Asquith tradition but would only defer the real issue for a few more months.

In the event that a compromise should fail, political opinion generally anticipates dramatic developments. According to the Parliamentary correspondent of The Daily Chronicle, the Cabinet Committee itself, while not regarding compulsion as absolutely essential for the time being, accepts it as inevitable in the future. The Chronicle's correspondent has little faith in the likelihood of a compromise and declares that the Cabinet Council of the next few days probably will decide the fate of the Coalition.

Mr. Lloyd George has submitted a proposal for a bill in favor of general compulsion, with the provision that the compulsory powers will only be exercised if the yield of attested married men under the new volunteer recruiting plan fails short of 50,000 per month. The majority of the Cabinet may accept this proposal but Labor will not be a party to it.

The Daily Chronicle says it is certain that unless the Government decides to take some step towards general compulsion, not only Mr. Lloyd George, but Mr. Bonar Law and all the Unionist members of the Cabinet will resign. The acceptance of compulsion, on the other hand, means the retirement of the three Labor Ministers. The Daily Chronicle suggests that there are two political alternatives. One is the retirement of the Unionist element in the Coalition and a reconstruction of the Government on a Liberal-Labor basis.

CHAPTER I.

The Great Eearthquake

The city of Lisbon, always beautiful was never more beautiful than on that fateful Tuesday, November 1, 1775, when the great earthquake came.

The sun flooded the bay with showers of gold; the spires of the town stood up as fair as ever.

The blue haze of an autumn day, in a climate where there is little or no winter, had coaxed even the invalids out of doors; and the streets were full of vehicles, carrying pleasure-seekers to and fro.

The bay was crowded with shipping. Two men-of-war, easily distinguished among the smaller craft by their trim rigging and exactly crossed yards, lay near the new marble quay, just completed; already a popular resort for fashionables and unfashionables to gather of an afternoon and listen to the playing of the bands.

In the midst of this peace and pleasure came a low rumbling, jarring sound. The windows rattled; horses stood still, snorting and trembling, refusing to move further.

Every one gazed in the face of his neighbor, growing pale—he knew not why; and then, as the tremor ceased, people laughed uneasily and said to each other that it aws "nothing, after all."

But still the horses refused to budge when whipped up.

Then came another grumble, which rose to a roar. The tremor was renewed, and became a swaying to and fro. Men and women staggered like drunkards; and in the midst of it all, the tower of the church of San Lorenzo, was seen to be tottering to its fall over the square of the same name.

People came running from the houses in every street, frantic with fear, making instinctively for some open place. The square was the nearest; and as the tower was beheld shaking, a bitter cry rose from the crowd.

Some tried to flee, but their limbs refused to sustain them on the heaving earth, which added a dizzy sickness to their misery and fear.

Then—crash!

The great tower, two hundred and eighty feet high, fell into the square, crushing hundreds. The heaving became a succession of waves. Hills rose and valleys sank where all had been level.

Then came a shock, more violent than before, and the rattle of falling buildings echoed through the doomed city.

People ran as fast as they could toward the river, with the instinct of hunted animals to seek the water. Selfishness ruled the hour, and men struck fiercely at women and children if the poor things got in the way.

In the midst of the crowd, near the square, stood a carriage. The panic-stricken horses had refused to stir. In the carriage sat two ladies, with babies in their arms. They were both richly dressed, but both had been abandoned, in that hour, by their nurses. All distinctions of rank were lost, and they only remembered that their babies were crying and that they must hush them. Then came a lull in the tremor of the ground, and both mothers sprung out of the carriage and began to run with the crowd.

As they did so, one said hastily to the other, in English:

"Keep up your courage, Marie. If you give way we shall never escape."

The other, who was nearly fainting, gasped:

"Oh, mon Dieu! Nous sommes pardus!" (Oh, my God! We are lost!)

"No, we are not lost!" retorted the first, who seemed to have courage in spite of the terrible commotion. "Only don't drop down. Keep on your feet, whatever happens, and hold fast to the baby!"

Then they began to run in the crowd, where all seemed frantic with fear.

Neither noticed that a man in sailor dress, with a face whose redness and dazed expression, showed that he was drunk, was following them in the crowd.

Out in the harbor, by the pier, the two men-of-war were a scene of hurry and confusion.

Their anchors were down; their officers shouting hoarse orders as they prepared to get the ships out to sea.

One was English, the other French.

In the midst of the commotion, the captain of the English ship heard a voice hailing him from a boat shooting past:

"Guy! Guy! vere are you?"

The English captain uttered a fervent "Thank God!" under his breath! for he recognized the voice and foreign accent.

A young officer, in French naval uniform, was waving his hand from the stern of the boat, as it passed the frigate, and called out in French: "I will save them. Be not afraid!"

The English captain waved his hand in reply, but his face was as pale as that of a corpse. His wife and child, and that of the French officer, were both ashore, and he dared not leave his duty to save them. Then, as the boat glided towards the quay, the English captain gave a shrug to his shoulders, as if to control the nervous shudder he could not avoid, and turned his attention to his own ship, resolutely repressing every feeling but that of strict duty.

At the moment the first rumble of the earthquake began, a small, half-decked craft, with a single mast, supporting a huge lateen sail, was floating not far from the pier, her crew of three men trying to propel her from the vicinity by means of clumsy sweeps.

When the first tremor came, it was not noticed on the water; but the sailors heard the rumbling sound; and the captain—a big, swarthy young fellow, with keen black eyes, and huge side-whiskers—rested on his oar a moment, to look round and say, in Spanish:

"That thunder ought to give us wind, boys." The next minute the shock came up through the water, like a blow, and the captain turned a shade paler through his bronze, and muttered in a voice of apprehension:

"Mother of Heaven! It is an earthquake! Pull your best for the open sea! God help us all! Pull, I say!"

The words, 'the earthquake," were enough for the two Spaniards who composed the crew, when they heard them. They bent to their oars with all their might, and the boat began to move through the water.

They were leaving the pier rapidly, when the three men felt a sudden sinking, as if the boat were going down. The water seemed to draw from under them, and then they were swept out to sea, with a rush, as fast as a horse could have galloped, the sensation of sinking growing stronger every moment.

Two of the men, who were pulling, dropped their oars and fell on their knees, in the instinct of man when he can do nothing more, raising their hands to Heaven, and praying wildly for mercy.

The captain, on the other hand, turned his face towards them, and snarled fiercely:

"Get your oars, you fools! The saints can't stop the earthquake! Get to your oars!"

The next minute he himself was hurled from his place by a violent shock, and the men raised a shriek of terror. Their nerves were completely unstrung by what had just happened.

The boat was high and dry on the bottom of the bay, and they could see the water rushing out to sea, as if it were being sucked up by some strange monster, revealing the ground, jagged with rocks and interspersed with pools of mud.

But the dauntless captain did not give way. He rose from the place where he had been thrown, and called to his panic-stricken men:

"Get to your oars! Look there!"

He pointed to the retiring wave. It had paused in its course, and was stationary, while a great wall of water was beginning to curl over at the top, as if contending forces were struggling for the mastery.

The trembling sailors obeyed him instinctively; but it seemed useless to hold an oar in the face of such a peril.

The wall of water curled over, and the wave came racing back; but the cool and heroic captain had not held his post in vain. In front of the great wave came a lower one, and, as it neared the Spaniards, it caught up their little craft, and swept it inland again.

A great cloud of dust had arisen from the ruins of the doomed city, and hung over the harbor, like a pall. Everything was dark; but a flash of lightning shot through the cloud.

By the light of that flash they saw a strange scene.

They were close to the great marble pier, and the bottom of the bay was clearly visible, all around it, while the pier itself was rising in the air; the rocks rending beneath it as it rose, with loud thundering reports.

The stately frigates lay helpless on their sides by the foot of the pier; and the wave, on which the Spanish boat hung, seemed to pause a moment before it completed its work.

Then something seemed to give way and down went the marble pier, the pride of Lisbon into the midst of a black, yawning chasm.

The wall of water, that had been following the boat, suddenly seemed to sink beneath it; the little craft was hurled high in the air, tossed about on the great billows like a feather, and then—

How or where the confusion first ceased, they knew not, but the earthquake was over, and they floated in the midst of the dark dust-cloud, on a wilderness of waters, alone.

Almost ere this end was assured, the dauntless catain of the Spanish boat was up in the bows, peering through the darkness for anything that might be floating.

Then he gave a shout:

"I knew it! I knew it! Pull hard!"

Within a minute from his cry, he was hauling into the boat, by the aid of a boat hook, a great sheet of cork, to which something was lashed.

What it was appeared from his surprised exclamation:

"Mother of Heaven! Two children!"

A low, strangled cry from one of the infants proved that it was alive—the only creatures that had been saved from the wreck.

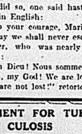
TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS



JOHN A. THIRTYACRE.

TESTIMONIAL.

I swallowed a large tack in April, 1910, and it lodged in my lung. This developed into tuberculosis. Four doctors treated me but I gradually became worse. Then my sister learned of Nature's Creation and got the medicine for me. When I began taking Nature's Creation, I was having night sweats continually, pains in my chest and both lungs. Several physicians said I could not live over 30 days. After taking the first bottle of Nature's Creation, a wonderful improvement was noticeable and I continue to improve. Weighed 107 pounds; now 180, and never have had any return of the old trouble.

No Relief is Yet Apparent

Difficulties of the Ribbon and Carbon Paper Makers

NEW YORK, April 20.—After an all-day discussion held at the Hotel Astor the Ribbon and Carbon Paper Manufacturer's Association, at its regular meeting yesterday, failed to find any solution for the scarcity of materials, or for alleviation of present soaring prices. A. L. Foster, of the Manifold Supplies Company, Brooklyn, President of the Association, presided at the meeting, which was largely attended by the leading factors in the trade. All sections of the country were represented, it being estimated that 90 per cent. of the total membership were present.

J. W. Davis of the Neidich Process, Burlington, N.J., reported that castor oil had risen 150 per cent. over normal prices, with no certainty of deliveries. The dyestuff situation was growing more serious daily, while other materials were harder to get each week.

E. A. Brecher, Secretary-Treasurer of the association, said:

"We have received no German dyes on the kind used in our trade since March, 1915. No American dyes that apply to our industries, with one exception, are to be had. To make matters worse, speculators are holding some supplies, but at prices ranging from 3,000 to 5,000 per cent. above normal. In dyes, as in other materials needed, we are trying to help out each other whenever possible, but this doesn't amount to much. Paper going into the manufacture of carbon papers is scarce, with soaring prices due to the shutting off of cotton rag imports from abroad. Of foreign papers not more than 10 per cent. are now coming in. As a matter of fact, domestic papers are now up anywhere from 50 to 200 per cent."

Mr. Brecher went on to say that cotton rags selling before the war at 4½ cents per pound now brought 9 cents, an advance of 100 per cent., and that no item entering into the manufacture of the association's members' products had advanced less than 40 per cent., while some items had risen as much as several thousand per cent. since the last meeting held in January. Paper materials, he said, had gone up anywhere from 30 to 5,000 per cent. The Secretary-Treasurer said that nobody at the meeting saw any relief in sight. The next meeting will be held in October unless conditions require calling a special meeting.

FARM AND GARDEN

THE USE OF SULPHUR ON CHICKENS

We cannot give too emphatic a warning against sulphur, which is a very commonly recommended remedy for the control of the lice on chickens, because its use usually leads to disastrous results. A great many have used sulphur and lard, a seemingly harmless combination, on chickens that have been infested from the lousy mother. Not knowing in just what proportion to make this mixture, the novice has added enough sulphur to make it yellow, feeling sure that it would be effective. It is the effectiveness of this preparation that leads to such bad results, for the sulphur soon begins to burn the tender skin of the chicken, making sores that seldom heal, and it is often the case that from one-quarter to one-half the young chickens thus treated die in from two to ten days after the application is made.

It is much better to use the lard, sweet, oil or blue ointment, but never subject young chickens to the danger of burns from the use of such an active agent as sulphur. Burns and subsequent sores should be guarded against as much as possible, for more harm will arise from these than from the work of the lice.—Connecticut Agricultural Bulletin.

A PREMIUM FOR THE BACON HOG

If ever it paid to produce pork in Canada it should at prices which have been recently obtained. Ten dollars to ten dollars and fifty cents per hundred weight f. o. b. local shipping points must pay the feeder well and the feeder deserves to be well paid. Within our memory choice pork sold as low as $4.35, dressed, on Toronto market, and even then some cushioned-chair critics grumbled that the farmer was making too much money. The bacon hog has helped solve many a farm problem since those days went by. But all is not right yet. If uniform type of bacon hog can be assured the packers in this country, packers must insist upon getting that type of hog and pay a premium on its production. As it is, the man with the comparatively "thick" fats gets as much per bound at his station as does the man who has taken the trouble to produce pigs of pronounced bacon type, and many believe that they are able to make pork more economically with a cross-bred or thicker hog. We have many times pointed out the futility of Canada attempting to compete with the corn-belt states in the production of the lard hog. We have also shown how easy it would be for our feeders to compete successfully with the pig-feeders of Denmark provided a price distinction were set by the packers in favor of choice bacon hogs. In the packing-house yards all the pigs are graded and packers know just about what percentage of a week's run of hogs will be selects and so on down the line and the prices paid to the feeders are set leaving a safe margin on all these classes, whereas, if packers would insist on the grading being done largely by the drover in buying, and would pay a correspondingly higher price for the best bacon hogs, they would soon increase the percentage of choicest bacon on the market. This is a problem worthy of the thought of feeders and buyers alike. The man who produces the high-class hog gets less than he should while the man who feeds the fat hog gets, comparatively speaking, a higher price.

GOSSIPY NOTES

One of the largest "Killings" that local followers of the thoroughbred have made in many moons resulted yesterday when A. N. Aiken galloped home an easy winner in the third race at Havre de Grace. It was the first start the horse had made this year and he was favored by the public at the track, the result being that the mutuals paid $64.00 for a two dollar ticket. Several large commissions were wired away by Hamilton people, and it is said that some Toronto people won even more money than the local players. One Hamilton man is credited with having won $5,000 on the race.

Charles (Pte) Hocking, who played lacrosse in Hamilton a few years back when several local lovers of the game attempted to make the pastime popular there, has been elected president of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse association by acclamation. Woody Tegart was also nominated for the office, but he has enlisted with the Northumberland battalion and expects to leave for the front shortly, and for that reason would not accept the office. Hocking should fill the office very acceptably, for he was a good player in his day and always had the interests of the game at heart.

Speaking of lacrosse recalls the fact that very few professional lacrosse players have answered the country's call. One Toronto writer figures it that only three professional lacrosse players of note have enlisted, although the majority of the amateur players in Toronto and throughout the province are now in uniform. The outlook for professional sport of any kind in Canada this year is none too bright, and the men who are so handy with the sticks might use them to good effect in throwing bombs at the Huns.

They do some funny things at the winter racing tracks. G. W. Scott, the owner of Sir L. Joe, reports that some clever manipulators were guilty of putting sponges in horses' noses at Hot Springs. He discovered one in Sir L. Joe's nose, and Clubs was treated in the same fashion. Another trainer, who owned a high-class horse, some years ago, tells this one: He couldn't understand the wretched showing of his horse one day in a race on a winter track, and the horse, while third, should have walked home. However, when the boy went to weigh in, he discovered the reason, as the jockey had so much extra lead in saddle that he could hardly carry it to the weighing-room.

The opening meetings of the Ontario harness racing circuit this spring will be followed by St. Thomas, Aylmer and then to Tillsonburg, with London and Chatham next. The circuit managers, the Canadian Sportsman says, are now negotiating with Seaforth, Stratford, Galt, Woodstock and other Ontario towns to give race meetings, and afterwards back to St. Thomas and Aylmer. In this way they expect to carry their racing up to the date of the London fair, where there will be five days racing. At none of the meetings will there be any early closing stakes, but at all there will be $500 purses, so the horsemen will have lots of money to race for.

PRESENTATION OF COLORS TO THE 80TH BATTALION

to be congratulated upon being in command of such a battalion, a battalion that would compare favorably with any he had seen in this or the old country. The ancestors of the Ketcheson family did duty at the time of the Revolution in 1812, 1837, and 1866, and never hesitated to risk their lives in defence of their country. The 80th Battalion was going overseas to fight for the freedom of the world, and that it may be continued for time to come. Sir Mackenzie congratulated Mayor Ketcheson and his daughter upon the duties they had performed. The battalion was leaving home to go to the old land, and his prayer was that the Almighty God might protect them, and he hoped for a safe return. "My heart goes with you and a fond hope that all may return safely."

COL. PONTON.

Col. Ponton was called upon and was heartily received. In his opening remarks he said all would agree with him that it was regrettable that the gallant Minister of Militia was not able to be present, but we had with us a former Minister of Militia and Prime Minister of Canada in the person of Sir Meckenzie Bowell. The Colonel spoke eulogistically in referring to the Ketcheson family. It is no wonder we have Col. Ketcheson the commanding officer of the 80th Battalion and Mayor Ketcheson, the Chief Magistrate of Belleville, when we know and consider the ancestry of the family. Mayor Ketcheson had two boys at the front, and another was going. What a proud record that was! We are all brothers in this conflict. In the colors that had been presented and conserated there was an inspiration. He had no doubt that the men before him would be happy warriors. In those colors are represented three crosses, namely, the cross of St. George who slew the dragon; St. Patrick's cross, symbolic of putting the snakes out of Flanders (give the enemy the bayonet, they cannot stand it), and the cross of St. Andrew, which is symbolic of brotherhood. These are all linked up in those colors. Under the free and happy flag of Britain it may be said of every man of the gallant 80th Battalion:

This is the Happy Warrior:
This is he—
That every man in arms
Would wish to be.

We have raised the standard today. Let every man of the 80th live up to the standard of a man, and let us raise the standard of chivalrous honor. How all must envy you the thrill you will feel when you, the soldiers of the King, are met by the gallant sailors of the King in the trenches of the deep, when you will be safely convoyed by the British fleet to the "tight little island" which is the centre and citadel of the liberties of the world. You are the sturdy sons of our grand old mother. Steel your muscles for the conflict. Be ready, be steady, be sober, be vigilant. What a welcome will await them when they return home, bringing honors with them! A fine thing it was to go together, but a finer thing it will be to welcome all home again. You are going to fight for the liberties of humanity. You have your standard. Live up to that standard in its truest sense. A great conflict was before them, but he had no doubt of the gallantry of the men of the 80th Battalion.

COL. KETCHESON.

Col. Ketcheson, the commander of the 80th Battalion, received a hearty welcome from all present when called upon to speak. His remarks were brief but to the point. On behalf of the 80th Battalion he thanked Mayor Ketcheson and other speakers for the kind and patriotic words spoken. He promised for the men that they would respect and take care of the colors which had been presented. On behalf of the men he would say farewell. We will fight and do all we can for King and country. Farewell till we come back.

Three hearty cheers were then given for the 80th Battalion.

Major Watson called for three cheers for the Ketcheson family, which were heartily given by the members of the battalion.

Major Watson — "Are we downhearted?"

The response was a loud emphatic "NO!"

The proceedings closed by the band rendering the National Anthem.

Escorted by a platoon the colors were taken to the 80th Battalion headquarters for the time being. Upon the return of the platoon the Battalion was reformed and the March Bast took place in front of the stand, the salute being taken by Col. Hemming. The men march with precision and neatness. The battalion then marched from the parade ground to the Armouries.

The complete list of officers of the 80th Battalion is as follows: Officer Commanding, Lt.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, Senior Major, Major R. M. Watson, Junior Major, Major S. W. Gilroy, Adjutant, Capt. N. SKETCH OF THE KETCHESON FAMILY

The Ketcheson family belonged to Yorkshire, England, and their ancestry can be traced back through the Parish records to about the middle of the sixteenth century and during all the years from then till now they have had part in all wars of the nation that are worth mentioning. The old land home of this family was at Howden, East Yorke, England. This town is noted for two things; first, its fine old Parish church dating back to A.D., 1400, and second, for its celebrated horse fair, one of the most extensive and finest held in England; coming from a place noted for its good horses one can readily understand why every member of this family are lovers of good horses.

About the middle of the eighteenth century, the entire family came out to Norfolk, Virginia, and among them was the boy who afterward became the founder of the family in this county.

When the revolutionary war started, William Ketcheson had just passed his 17th birthday. He enlisted with the Loyalists army at once, and was shortly after attached to Colonel Tarlton's Dragoons and with them served during the entire war. In 1779 he married Mary, a daughter of John Rull, a loyalist of New York city. He was wounded several times, but not seriously. At the close of the revolutionary war, he, with his family, went to Nova Scotia, staying there for three years. He was unfortunate in this colony, having been burned out. He then came on up to the Bay of Quinte, staying at Adolphustown for several years and in 1800 came to the Township of Sidney, settling on the farm in the fifth concession now owned and occupied by George A. Ketcheson, one of his descendants. His oldest son, William, settled on the next farm west of his father's, and this very farm is to-day owned and occupied by Lt.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson, his great-grandson.

William Ketcheson, sr., the founder of this family in Canada, lived to the good old age of eighty-nine years, dying in 1848. He was a man of iron will and great executive ability; possessing a strong constitution, he was active and vigorous up to the day of his death. Probably the only man living today who remembers him well is Sir Mackenzie Bowell. His family consisted of seven sons and three daughters, six of his sons serving their King during the war of 1812. His oldest son, Colonel William Ketcheson, from whom Lt.-Col. W. G. Ketcheson and Mayor H. F. Ketcheson are descended, had a family of fifteen children, all of whom grew up, married and had families of their own. He lived to a good old age, dying at ninety-six. He and his wife lived together as man and wife on the very spot where they settled, for seventy-two years.

The family have become very numerous and the history of this county for the last hundred years is blended with that of the Ketcheson family. At a reunion held five years ago on the old homestead where the first member of the family settled, over nine hundred of his descendants were present, coming from the Atlantic to the Pacific from all parts of Canada and the United States. I believe we are safe in saying that this was the greatest family gathering ever held in the Province of Ontario or even in the Dominion itself. It was intended that these gatherings should continue every five years, but owing to the outbreak of the war and over fifty members of the family being overseas or on the way, it has been deemed advisable to postpone the next gathering until after the close of the war.

To Mayor Ketcheson is due the honour of having originated and carried to success this great family reunion.

The great characteristics of this family are love of country and love of home. The descendants of no other family settling in this vicinity have become as numerous or moved about as little as they. There are many hundreds of Ketchesons and their descendants living in this county and city and until very recent years, they were all agriculturalists.

The Ketchesons are a sturdy, hardy race, and possess to this day those characteristics which enabled the originator of the family in this country to make for himself the name and place that he did in the community where he lived.

Of course you can live on 15 cents a day, but is it worth while inculcating the habit?

To the City Council of Belleville

Gentlemen,—As a taxpayer permit me to call your attention to an old adage, "Be just, before you are generous." Alderman Deacon states that, chiefly owing to grants to battalions, the city has a deficit of $15,000, which means that the city has incurred a debt for that amount over and above the amounts to be collected by taxes, and that amount, with interest, will have to be added to next year's taxes. Every taxpayer feels that our taxes are a very great and grievous load which have to be borne. Some gentlemen have asked you to still further run the city into debt by donating $40,000 to the patriotic fund. If their request is complied with you place upon the people of your city a debt of $55,000, which includes the deficit alluded to. Now, towards this fund many citizens have liberally subscribed. If the prayer of these gentlemen is granted these subscribers will be taxed again for this fund, which is not fair. You gentlemen represent a city which is composed of a very large percentage of people who have small means, and have all they can do to struggle for a livelihood. There is also a large class of laborers who have their little homes and have great difficulty (as we all know) in making both ends meet. Now these classes, including widows and orphans, have a right to your consideration. You are their guardians and they rely upon you to protect their interests and their homes. It is a fact that a number of citizens have the greatest difficulty in paying their taxes; as evidence of that the bailiff has already added to the burden of taxes his fees. Everything has increased in price, the cost of living has greatly increased. The long closure of the Rolling Mills, Pringle's Mill, Holton's Mill, and the cutting down of wages in other industries have had a terrible effect upon the laboring class, as well as citizens generally. In addition there has to be considered the increased taxation for pavements, expensive sewers in West Belleville, the erection of our costly schools, with their many teachers. All of these things it is fair and wise for you to consider before you add another burden to the already overburdened shoulders of the taxpayers. This fund is used for the support of families of men who have enlisted. Now take the privates, each of whom receives a daily wage. If married the wife receives a separation allowance; if children, the parent receives so much per child. Is it not a potent fact that, taking the average private, he is, with the allowances referred to, getting more money seven days in the week than he ever had before. If anything happens him the government grants his family a pension. We must also consider this fact, that in addition to our own city taxes we shall have to pay our proportion of the immense taxes which will be levied by the Dominion of Canada and Province of Ontario. I quite admit that we ought to see that the families are provided for, but if they are already receiving fair and reasonable payment you should not perpetrate a grievous wrong to the taxpayers, your constituents.

Prohibition will cause thousands of dollars of increased taxation from the deteriorated nature of the hotels. From what source do you derive authority to impose so great a sum upon the city without taking the sense of the people by a public vote upon a bylaw? If you can impose $40,000, what will prevent you imposing $100,000? The only limit would appear to be the sky. If a bylaw was submitted to be voted upon by the citizens who are to pay, and it passed, no one would murmur; but to impose such an enormous amount upon the citizens without consulting them would be a grievous wrong. To gentlemen who have stated salaries not subject to fluctuation from circumstances the tax would make little difference.

I am, yours truly,
CITIZEN.

TO REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT EASILY AND QUICKLY

If you are overstout the cause of your over-stoutness is lack of oxygen-carrying power in the blood and faulty assimilation of food. Too little is being made into the harder tissue of muscle and too much into little globules of fat. Therefore you should correct the mal-assimilation and increase the oxygen-carrying powers of the blood. To do this, go to any good druggist and get oil of orilene, only sold in original packages and in capsule form, and take one capsule after each meal, and one at bedtime till your weight is reduced to what it should be on all parts of the body. The effect of oil of orilene in capsule form is remarkable as a weight reducer and it is perfectly safe.—E.J.T.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co. Box 1240 Montreal, Can.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM CORP. E. W. WHITAKER.

It would appear, from the following letter, that in some instances at least Graham & Co.'s "Desiccated Vegetables," manufactured and canned in Belleville, travel many miles before reaching their destination, particularly when consigned to such regions as Salonica, where many of our Canadian soldiers are stationed.

The face of the label referred to in the message home is very handsome in design, consisting of a combination of colors showing the cabbage, the carrot, the beet, the turnip, the potato, and a bunch of celery, in a beautifully natural state, which, with the firm name of "Graham Co., Limited, Belleville, Ont.," must have made the boys in that far-away land feel decidedly homesick. The label was probably used in lieu of regular writing paper, and we can imagine the writer stripping it from a can for the purpose indicated.

The letter, presumably to one of the attaches of the big local factory, which we give verbatim, will be found very interesting, the portion preceding the letter proper being written on the back of the label.

Salonica, Feb. 6, 1916.

Dear George:

You will see I am using one of your firm's labels for notepaper, therefore you will know "Tommy" is being issued with vegetables—and don't they just make our stew A1! I must congratulate the Graham Co'y, Ltd., on the fine quality; for the flavor and richness would be hard to improve upon. Before reaching us out here they have been travelling "some." Keep us well supplied until the war is over, and I pray that may be very soon now. Trusting you are all in the very best of health; will write further anon. Good luck, best wishes.

Your affec. brother,
ERNEST.

6-2-16.

Dear George:

From the enclosed you will observe we are obtaining your desiccated vegetables, and they are very nice, too; wonder if the box from which I secured label went through your own hands? Have scribbled a few lines on reverse side of same. Am not expecting a cheque for the advertisement, but a nice smoke or two would not be amiss (ahem!). Always an eye for the main chance—what? Still, all joking apart, the said vegetables are most acceptable, and we only hope and trust the supply will be kept up. Our stew is really stew now; before we did occasionally manage to find an odd "swede" or two, sometimes a few carrots, but could not rely upon a regular supply, so you can guess what a change it is now, and for the better. Trust you are all in the best of health and that Clarrie is doing well in the army, training where he is, and being able to live at home. He is sure to be enjoying it. Have not yet quite recovered from enteric, but am improving daily, and expect to rejoin my unit again shortly.

When you reply I think it will be safest to put "c/o G.P.O., London, for although we are still in Greece, we may be on the move again very soon, and the G.P.O. is, of course, generally notified of our movements. Great delay in our mail is the order, and no wonder under the circumstances. Just before Xmas one of the boats, the Persia, was torpedoed, and as the same was carrying a tremendous lot of our Xmas mail, we were, of course, greatly disappointed, but more so for the valuable lives unfortunately lost. I had letters from Morris and Vivian, who spent holidays in Leeds. They said everybody had written to me and sent cards for Xmas, but up to now none have arrived, so I expect they are resting at the bottom of the mighty deep. Trust your ranch will be no worse for being left, but hope that when you return to it you may be more successful than ever. Should the war come to a conclusion within the next two or three years, I am thinking more seriously every day of trekking myself, providing I come through safely—and I pray I may do so for my boys' sakes—and I rather fancy the Fiji Islands or New Zealand. More later on, and now au revoir for the present. Kindest regards and best wishes; hoping we may meet again. Write soon to your affec. brother.

ERNEST.

ALBERT H. GREEN

Editor Daily Intelligeincer.

Dear Sir:—The casualty list published Thursday announces the death of No. 40,413 Driver Albert H. Green. Mr. Green was one of the first to enlist in Belleville, attaching himself to the 34th Battery. He was formerly in the employ of McIntosh Bros., and was in every respect a highly moral and honorable young man. He had just passed his 23rd birthday, and at the time of enlisting made his home with Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Frederick, John Street, by whom he was highly respected. The news of his sad yet noble death, is very deeply regretted by the staff of McIntosh Bros., and many other friends in Belleville by whom he was held in high esteem. He was a communicant of the Emmanuel Church, having been a member of the choir. He leaves a father and stepmother in South Kensington, England, also a brother and sister-in-law in Sask., to mourn his loss, to whom his friends in Belleville will extend heartfelt sympathy.

"Some men have no hearts," said the tramp. "I've been a-tellin' that feller I am so dead broke that I have to sleep out-doors." "Didn't that fetch him?" asked the other. "No. He told me he was doin' the same thing and had to pay the doctor for tellin' him to do it."

The Bile is an Antiseptic

Everything is good in its place. The bile, which, under certain conditions, causes so much distress, is of the greatest value as an antiseptic and cathartic when it is properly handled by the liver.

The chief function of the liver seems to be the filtering of bile from the blood, where it acts as a poison, and pouring it into the intestines, where it hastens the course of the food mass through the alimentary canal, and by its antiseptic influence prevents fermentation of the food.

When you suffer from biliousness and indigestion and have a coated tongue, bitter taste in the mouth, headaches and loss of appetite, you will do well to look to the condition of the liver. Other symptoms are wind on the stomach, which causes belching, and the formation of gas, which gives rise to dizziness and pains about the heart.

Because the liver has failed, the food in the alimentary canal is fermenting instead of being digested, looseness and constipation of the bowels alternate, the whole digestive system is thrown out of order and the blood is poisoned.

By immediately awakening the action of the liver and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills affords relief for this condition most promptly. On this account they are generally recognized as the most effective cure for biliousness, liver complaint, indigestion, constipation, and the pains and aches which arise from poisons in the blood. The benefits are lasting because this medicine removes the cause of trouble.

BELLEVILLE

Capt. McFee and Capt. Wills of Belleville, were in Marmora on Wednesray and inspected the Marmora Platoon.

Pte. Woodcock of Marmora, who was arrested last week as a deserter, has been transferred to the 80th Battalion, which is ready to proceed overseas. He was brought to Belleville on Tuesday by an officer of the 80th Battalion, accompanied by Sergeant Wright and Pte. Laird of the 155th Battalion.

Last week Pte. Dan. O'Connell, of the Marmora Platoon, left without leave, but later gave himself up in Norwood. He was brought back to Marmora and on Tuesday was taken to Belleville under guard of Lieut. Kelly and Sergeant Rupert. He has been transferred to "A" Co. of the 155th at Belleville.

That the churches have not been unmindful of the highest welfare of the troops, is evidenced by several shipments that arrived in Mr. Sharpe's care today. The Upper Canada Bible Society have sent 1154 copies of the Khaki Testament, their customary gift, to every enlisted man. The non-Anglican Protestant Denominations have sent copies of an attractive little booklet they issue, sufficient for all their men. The Bethel Hall of Belleville, and other friends, have presented 1,000 Soldiers' Guides to the men. This latter is a neatly bound collection of short, simple convincing messages from great leaders to soldiers, and its circulation among the troops is only second to the Testament.

15,000 sheets of writing paper and ten thousand envelopes will supply the men with writing material on the transport. A huge case of magazines from the supply at the Military Y. M. C. A. and the Khaki Club, is being packed for use on the boat. In addition a piece of reading material and a post card will be placed in every seat of every coach as far as the supply will go. Use can be made of any good reading material available for this purpose. It should be sent to the Y.M.C.A. or Khaki Club. Still further services are being planned, of which announcement cannot yet be made.

The 15th Reserve did not drill on the evening of Good Friday, but will drill on Tuesday and Friday evening of next week. This is as usual.

No. 5 Field Company, Canadian Engineers, Queen's University, went into camp at Barriefield Thursday morning. The C.O.C. issued equipment for 50 men.

Captain Henderson, No. 5 F.C.C.E., is on the sick list, and the command of the company in camp falls to Lieut. Scott until Captain Henderson reports for duty.

Some fellow of artistic ability and mischievous tendencies decorated "Prince," the bull terrier mascot of the 116th Battalion, and the dog looked like some Indian warrior in his war paint.

On Easter Sunday afternoon a memorial meeting in honor of the Canadian boys who so gallantly upheld the name of their country at Ypres, exactly a year ago, will take place in the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, at half-past three o'clock. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Women's Canadian Club of Ottawa, and Sir George Foster, Captain Rene de Salaberry and others have offered to give addresses.

Captain Frank Lee of Lindsay, who has been made district signalling officer of B.C., is a Kingston boy, and formerly worked for T. McAuley in the book business. Before leaving for the coast yesterday the officers of the 109th Battalion presented Frank with a fine travelling bag and companion.

The Canadian Club, Ottawa presented Lt.-Col. A. T. Thompson with a sword. Col. Thompson has been appointed to command a battalion at Brantford. The Colonel for several years has published the Canadian Military Gazette, and has a host of friends all over Ontario. He was formerly M.P. for Haldimand.

All unqualified officers attached to overseas units have been dropped, and the order includes both infantry and artillery. Even if the officers affected complete their qualifications, they have little hope of receiving appointments unless they join units as privates. A qualified officer may be appointed but he cannot be attached according to the new order.

WEDDING BELLS

CURLETT—JOHNS

At the home of the bride's parents, Harriet Street, on Thursday evening, April 20th, by Rev. S. C. Moore, Miss Lottie Una Johns, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Johns, was united in marriage to Pte. Norman Allan Curlett 155th Battalion.

BROWER—PRENTICE

A quiet wedding was celebrated on Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Prentice, Bethel, Thurlow Township, when their youngest daughter, Miss Florence E., was united in marriage to Mr. F. Garfield Brower, of Belleville, in the presence of immediate relatives. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Huffman, of Plainfield. The bride was gowned in shadow lace, over white net with satin trimming, wearing tulle veil, and entered the drawing room, taking her place beside the groom, under an arch of evergreen and flowers. She carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bride was assisted by Miss Irene Prentice, of Foxboro, and Mr. Earle Prentice did honors for the groom. The bridesmaid carried a bouquet of pink carnations. After the ceremony and congratulations, the wedding party were invited to the dining room, where they partook of a sumptuous repast. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent and to the groomsman a set of cuff links. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue with hat to match. The wedding party motored to Belleville where they took a train for the west. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville. The hearty congratulations of many will be extended to the young couple, with a wish for a long and happy married life.

SUDDEN DEATH OF 80TH SOLDIER

Death came suddenly on Thursday night to Private Henry Kerr, a member of the 80th Batalion. Deceased was out on parade on Thursday afternoon at the presentation of the colors, and was about this city in the early part of the evening. Upon returning to the barracks Kerr was taken suddenly ill, and in a few minutes expired. Heart failure was attributed as the cause of death. Deceased was 36 years of age.

He was born at Hull, Quebec, and was unmarried. At Ottawa he enlisted and was attached to the 80th Battalion. The body was taken to the Belleville burial company and prepared for burial. Deceased was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. His mother arrived here today. The remains were this afternoon taken to St. Michael's church, where Rev. Father Killeen conducted a service, after which they were shipped per C.N.R. to his late home at Hull.

IN And ABOUT THE CITY

FRACTURED ARM

Mr. John Burke proprietor of the International Hotel, in this city, had the misfortune on Thursday to fall and fracture his arm, just above the wrist.

LIQUOR STORE ENTERED

Some time during Thursday night a window on the north side of Mr. Hewson's liquor store in this city was broken and, and an entrance gained to the premises. The only articles missing are two bottles of wine and a bottle of whiskey. The affair was reported to the police, who are investigating same.

Hungerford Yeoman Is Missing

On Thursday Mr. Jerry West, a well known yeoman of Hungerford Township, residing near Thomasburg, came to the city, being accompanied by his adopted son, Harry Brewer. They witnessed the presentation of the colors to the 80th Battalion, and that evening they became separated. From that time up to the present no trace has been found of Mr. West, and his absence is causing relatives and friends much uneasiness. His horse and vehicle was placed at the Windsor Hotel, where they still remain. The police were notified of the occurrence and have made every effort to locate the missing man without result. Mr. West is a rather aged man and has lived in Hungerford for many years.

Up to the hour of 3 o'clock this afternoon, no trace of Mr. West had been found, although the police and others had made diligent search and enquiries. The missing man is an uncle of Mr. T. E. Wilson, superintendent of the House of Refuge here.

80th Battalion Band Concert

A most enjoyable concert was given by the 80th Battalion Band in the Armouries on Thursday evening, which attracted a large audience. The programme was an extremely interesting one, and spendidly rendered by the musicians. Lieut. H. A. Stares, the Bandmaster, is surely to be congratulated upon the music he has been giving our people of late, and Thursday night's event was no exception to the general excellence of the Band's efficiency. The programme:

The "Quinte" 155th Overseas Battalion

The "feel" of the snug-fitting khaki—the grip on the bayonetted rifle—the clean, invigorating, fresh-air life—the shoulder-to-shoulder comradeship of real men—these rapidly transform ordinary civilians into those Canadian troops whose deeds have astonished military Europe.

With their efficiency goes a passion for trim cleanliness. They are devotees of the razor, and strong partisans of the "Made-in-Canada" Gillette. They enjoy its clean, velvety shave when they have time and toilet conveniences, and appreciate it even more when both are lacking, and no other razor could give them any sort of a decent shave.

Don't these gallant lads deserve every comfort we can give them? Make the campaign easier for one of them at least by giving him a 117

Mr. and Mrs. Hazen left this afternoon for St. John after receiving the sincere condolences of Premier Borden and the other members of the Cabinet.

Cheese Board

The first meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board for 1916 was held in the city this morning and was fairly well attended by buyers and salesmen. Owing to the death of the Secretary, the late Mr D. J. Fairfield, Mr. Frank Knight was appointed secretary, to act until the annual meeting in May. A committee of the Board was appointed to draft a suitable resolution of sympathy to the family of the late Secretary.

There were boarded 696 boxes of cheese, of which 234 boxes were colored. The bids were 17 15-16c. and 17 7-8c. The greater portion was sold at the former price, Mr. Morton being the highest bidder. The factories represented were as follows:

PEACE STOCKS—THE SILVERS

The silver stocks will be helped as much as any by peace. The recent advance in the metal has been due as is well known, to the increased demand for coinage in consequence of the impounding of such huge reserves of gold in the great Banks of Europe. It has been the history after all wars that further enormous loans are floated by the belligerent governments and that the demand for gold for reserve purposes increases, with a consequent increase in the demand for silver to take its place in circulation. To-day the silver metal reached 63¾, which is a new high. The top in 1907, which represents the highest of recent years, was 65. Experts on silver say that the rise has only begun, and predict very much higher figures after the war. The advance, especially that of the last few weeks, is one of numerous signs that the markets have been showing preparation for the end of the war.

OFFENSIVE IS TAKEN BY FRENCH TROOPS

Part of German Trenches Captured and Redoubt Occupied on Right Bank of the Meuse—Several Hundred Made Prisoners

PARIS, April 21.—French troops took the offensive last night in the Verdun region on the right bank of the Meuse. The War Office announcement of this afternoon says that they captured parts of German trenches, occupied a redoubt, and took several hundred prisoners.

Text of Official Statement.

The text of the statement follows.

"In the Argonne at Haute Chevauchee there has been some mine work, which resulted to our advantage. We caused the explosion of a small mine which destroyed some subterranean works of the enemy.

"On the left bank of the River Meuse, the bombardment of our second line continued last night. On the right bank of the river our troops yesterday evening delivered a spirited attack against the German positions to the northwest of the pond of Vaux. This operation made it possible for us, to occupy certain sections of the German trenches as well as a fortified redoubt.

"In the course of this action, which caused heavy losses to the enemy we took prisoner, ten officers, sixteen under-officers and 214 men. In addition to this we captured several machine guns and a certain quantity of war material.

"In the Woevre district our artillery has directed a concentrated fire upon the communicating roadways of the enemy.

"There has been no event of importance on the remainder of the front."

CUTTING OUT THEORIES

(By W. Werner)

The Denhams had ended their honeymoon and had entered upon that era of exploration and discovery which domestic life holds out to newly married couples. As they met and solved the many problems which harass young home-seekers the days flew by with never a ripple to mar the tranquil surface of their domestic peace, until one day Mrs. Denham resolved that the time was ripe to try out a few theories she had harbored since her girlhood.

Fred Denham enjoyed his dinner that evening, and the zest with which he attacked the piece of pie served as desert was a great compliment to the makers of the pie. "Charlotte, you surely are an artist when it comes to turning out a pie, and this is one of your masterpieces," he said, as the last crumb disappeared. "I'll have another piece, please."

"Why, Fred, I—I——" Mrs. Denham's voice trailed off somewhat uncertainly.

"What's the matter? Isn't there any more?" he questioned, showing much mock concern.

"Well, the truth is, I think you eat too much pie, dear. I don't think you should have any more."

"Pish! Likewise tush!" exclaimed Fred. "Now where on earth did you dig up an idea like that?"

"I didn't dig it up, as you say," she retorted rather warmly. "I have been interested in the subject of diet for many years, and the menus you call for are so poorly balanced that I have concluded to change them at once and substitute some which contain all the necessary nutritive elements. You eat too much pastry and meat, dear, and you never touch cereal."

Denham's surprise was so great as to be ludicrous. "Why, what on earth do you think I am—a canary?" he exclaimed. "I can't live on bird seed."

"Now, dear, don't be silly," she pleaded. "You shall have plenty of good wholesome food, only it will be more adapted to your needs than the things to which you have become accustomed."

THE FIRST SPAT.

"I must confess I'm amazed, Charlotte. Who would ever have suspected that a girl who can turn out steaks and pies like yours entertained notions like that? If I had been ailing there might be some excuse for it. But look at me. I am flourishing like a green bay tree. I have been eating meat and pastry all my life, and I need them. Remember, dear, that I have an outside job. I'm continually in the open air and ever on the move, so please don't try to introduce any of these fool food fads into my happy home."

"The fact that they haven't harmed you is no guaranty that they won't in the future, Fred, dear. Also I am not trying to tintroduce any fool fads or any other kind of fads into your home. All that I am asking is that you conform to a more scientific and rational diet than that to which you have accustomed yourself. I feel that it is my duty as a wife to insist that you do so."

"Pish! Likewise tu—"

"You said that a moment ago," she broke in, sarcastically.

"Well, then—bosh! Why, the only time I ever abstained from pie in my life was at training table at college. At all other times I have eaten it and waxed fat on it. As for meat—when meat is taken from my bill of fare my interest in mundane affairs will be fast waning. Tinkering with diet is very much like charity, my dear; it should begin at home. There is ample opportunity for you to try a little reform in your own individual case."

"Why, Fred Denham, what do you mean?"

"I refer to your tea drinking proclivities. You drink sufficient tea every week to float a bond issue."

"Nonsense, Fred. You're teasing."

"I was never more serious in my life. What does tea contain? Tannin. What will tannin do to you? Turn the inside of your stomach into a piece of Russia leather. Charlotte, dear," he continued tragically. "I have watched you with deep concern. This insidious tea drinking habit is fastening itself upon you, and if—"

"Oh, Fred, do be serious."

"Let us both be serious. You drop your nonsense and I'll drop mine."

"Mine is not nonsense," said Mrs. Denham, firmly. "Moreover, the new order of things goes into effect tomorrow."

"Really?"

"Really," she replied with an air of finality.

Fred was nonplussed. Discord had at last entered Eden. It was all very well to humor one's bride in small things, he reflected, but at present a vital principle was involved.

"Do you really mean to tell me you are serious in your intention to place upon our table menus which are a cross between those served on poultry farms and at homes for convalescents?"

"The food I shall serve will be wholesome and appetizing in every respect."

"What we've been having belongs to that category."

A MOTHER-IN-LAW.

"I have already stated my objections to it."

"Well, if you wish to eat your fad stuff you may, but I don't want any of it. If I can't get what I want to eat in my own home I'll go where I can get it," he said crossly, as he arose from the table. "It isn't such a far cry back to the days when I haunted the lunch counters and ate 'ham and ——' and 'beans with ——' and dill pickles with infinite relish."

Mrs. Denham shuddered at the mention of those gastronomic horrors, but desisted from further argument, hoping that time would affect a change of heart in her recalcitrant spouse.

Fred sniffed audibly at the cereal which was placed before him at breakfast next morning. "I suppose this is the beginning of your era of rational and scientific diet," he growled.

"It is," she answered sweetly.

"And about dinner this evening—what are we going to have?"

"I prefer not to tell you now; I wish to surprise you."

"Will there be any meat?"

"No."

"Pie?"

"No."

"Thanks for the warning. I'll stop at a restaurant and get some real food before I come home."

She allowed him to depart without making answer to this last shot. She still had faith in the healing ability of time.

"Fred approached the dinner table that evening with some hesitancy. "Veal cutlets!" he exclaimed, as he caught sight of the platter in front of his place. "Why, dear, I hardly expected——"

"Don't, Fred, dear. Don't say a word, please," she broke in. "I had a talk with mother today. She sat down hard on my fantastic notions concerning diet, and gave me some wholesome advice relative to the care and feeding of husbands. There's a lovely lemon meringue pie in the kitchen."

"You darling!" he cried, catching her to him. "Go into the hall and get that package I left there. It's a pound of the best tea I could find in this burg."

Morbid Blushing

Blushing is one of the normal phenomena of life. It is the expression of a natural reaction to any thing that shocks or embrasses.

But it may result under circumstances when it would not ordinarily be looked for. In such cases it is abnormoral and pathological, amounting to a disease.

And abnormal blushing is far commoner than most people imagine. I am frequently in receipt of letters from people who seek relief, from an uncontrollable and seemingly inexplicable tendency to blush without real provocation.

For example one young woman asks:

Will you please tell me what I can do to overcome a habit I have of blushing when anybody speaks to me?

'No matter what the subject of conversation, as soon as I am directly addressed I feel the blood reddening my face.

"This makes me miserable. I stammer, I tremble, I act in the most awkward way, to my great annoyance. Afterward I reproach myself for my foolishness.

"But the next time I have to talk with anyone, the same thing occurs. I must overcome this for it is spoiling my life.

"It makes me keep by myself, avoiding company of any kind. I am thought queer by my friends, and I certainly act in a queer way."

When blushing is as extreme as this, the wisest thing a person can do is to consult a doctor. But it is important to select a doctor who has had a good psychological training.

For it is not a question of dieting and drugs. It is a question of finding what is lurking in the background of the mind to cause supersensitiveness in the presence of others.

The morbid blushing is in fact a symptom of bashfulness. And bashfulness is always rooted, not merely in self-consciousness, but in self-consciousness connected subconsciously with ideas of shame, selfreproach, and fear.

This is something of which most people are unaware.

They regard bashfulness as nothing more than a peculiarity of temperament. Actually it is a habit having its origin in unpleasant experiences of childhood.

These experiences—most often childish misconduct of one kind or another—have been such as to arouse in an extreme degree sentiments of timidity and self-reproach.

There is a feeling that one has a shameful secret, which must be carefully kept, but which others are likely to perceive in the expression of the face, particularly the eyes.

Hence an embrassed feeling in the presence of others— a feeling which gradually becomes habitual, persisting after the original distressing experiences have long been forgotten.

To break up this habit of bashfulness—and, similarly, of morbid blushing—it may be necessary to call back to memory the forgotten experiences and give reassurance as to their harmlessness. This the psychologically trained physician can do.

Consequently it is such a physician who should be consulted by all victims of bashfulness and morbid blushing.

Sedition Charge Faced by Official

Letter Calling Allies "Mad Fools" Seized By Censor

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., April 21.—W. Ramsay, employed as Dominion Government Inspector of Shells at St. Catharines munitions factory, was held by the magistrate to-day on a charge of sedition. The censors at Niagara Falls, Ontario, yesterday intercepted a letter purporting to have been written by Ramsay to a man working in a munitions factory in an Indiana town in which the expression was used that he supposed another man whose name the authorities are keeping quiet at present, "was still making shells for the Allies for, believe me, they still need them, for they haven't got to Berlin yet to keep even with the Germans."

Crown-Attorney Brennan was handed the letter and at once ordered Ramsay's arrest. When brought to the police headquarters and asked if he had written the letter, Ramsay is alleged to have said: "Yes, I certainly did write it. King George has no business on the throne and he ought to be dethroned!"

On the police slate, Ramsay's birthplace is given as Scotland.

Germans Rushed West to Verdun

PARIS, April 20.—French resistance in the region of Verdun is compelling the German General Staff to withdraw large forces from the Teuton front in Macedonia and Serbia and in Russia, according to information obtained today from the highest military authorities here.

The first division of the First German Army Corps and another division not yet identified are said to be among the troops which have just been brought from the other fronts. The Eighteenth Army Corps and the Eleventh Bavarian divisions it is declared, have been brought from Serbia.

Great Flotilla Brought Russians

PARIS April 21.—The arrival of Russian troops is regarded here as an event of great importance and of significance from both a military and political standpoint. It represents realization of hopes aroused in the war by reports that large bodies of Russians were coming.

The Russians came on a great flotilla of transports.

Not a single word of their coming was permitted to become generally known until they actually had concluded the journey and were landing on French soil.

Ten Days Required For Berlin's Reply

Bernstorff Suggests Declaration Covering all Submarine Operations

WASHINGTON, April 21.—After today's conference between Count von Bernstorff and Secretary of State Lansing it was learned that German diplomats regard the receipt of a reply from Germany within two or three days as virtually impossible. It was believed that a reply could not be received here before ten days. It was pointed out that Easter Monday is a holiday in Germany, and that necessary consultations of officials would cause almost another week to elapse before the German answer could be transmitted.

Ambassador Bernstorff refused to discuss his conversation with Secretary Lansing, but indicated his call was not prompted by the arrival of instructions from his Government. Regarding the hope held by German officials here for an amicable settlement, one official described the prospect as a "toss-up."

The Ambassador informed the Secretary of a message of a highly confidential nature he had received from Berlin.

Last night Count von Bernstorff appeared hopeful that some way would be found to prevent a break of relation. His manner to-day indicated that he was not so sanguine.

After returning to the Embassy Count von Bernstorff prepared a long despatch, which probably will be sent to his Government before night. The Ambassador was authoritatively represented as having sought the Secretary's views in regard to a tentative proposal that Germany issue immediately a declaration covering all submarine operations, similar to that issued on January 7 for the operations in the Mediterranean. How the suggestion was received was not divulged, but the general belief is that no step will be considered until some direct response from Berlin has been received by the Secretary of State.

SECRET SESSIONS OF BRITISH HOUSES TO DISCUSS NEW PLAN

Agreement Has Been Reached by Cabinet on Recruiting Proposals According to an Official Statement—Compromise on Compulsion Considered Only a Makeshift

LONDON, Eng., April 21.—At a meeting today of the British Cabinet an agreement was reached upon the proposals which the Ministers will make to Parliament on the subject of recruiting. Their proposals will be submitted as a secret session of each House of Parliament on Tuesday. The foregoing was announced in an official statement issued this afternoon.

It is understood that a proposition advanced by Arthur Henderson, President of the Board of Education, and a Labor leader, will have the effect of reopening the voluntary enlistment scheme for a month or six weeks, and that this proposal was accepted in principle by the Cabinet with a view to ascertaining whether sufficient men would come forward for military service without the introduction of general compulsion.

The Labor members, however, demand that all facts and figures regarding the military situation and requirements shall be submitted to the House of Commons before they consent to any measure of universal conscription. This has not been officially.

Up to yesterday the Labor members had steadfastly refused to listen to any proposition concerning universal conscription. It is understood, however, that at the Cabinet meeting yesterday, when the Ministry was about to be disrupted, Arthur Henderson made a compromise proposal for a further trial of the voluntary service, was to be followed by compulsion if the necessary number of men demanded by the Army Council was not forthcoming.

TEXT OF AMERICAN NOTE TO GERMANY SHOWS NO LOOPHOLES

Issue is Laid Down Plainly Demanding Cessation of Use of Submarine Against Freight or Passenger Boat on Pain of The Severance of All Diplomatic Relations

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 21.—President Wilson's note to Germany on the submarine question, which is already in the hands of the German Foreign Office, has been given out.

The text is as follows:

"The Government of the United States has been very patient. . . . it has accepted the successive explanations and assurances of the Imperial Government as of course, given in entire sincerity and good faith, and has hoped, even against hope, that it would prove to be possible, for the Imperial Government so to order and control the acts of its naval commanders as to square its policy with the recognized principles of humanity as embodied in the law of nations. It has made every allowance, for unprecedented conditions and has been willing to wait until the facts became unmistakeable and were susceptible of only one interpretation.

"It now owes it to a just regard for its own rights to say to the Imperial Government that that time has come.

"It has become painfully evident to it that the position which it took at the very outset is inevitable, namely the use of submarines for the destruction of an enemy's commerce is of necessity, because of the very character of the vessels employed and the very methods of attack which their employment of course involves utterly incompatible with the principles of humanity, the long-established and incontrovertible rights of neutrals and the sacred immunities of non-combatants.

If it is still the purpose of the Imperial Government to prosecute relentless, and indiscriminate warfare against vessels of commerce by the use of submarines without regard to what the Government of the United States must consider the sacred and indisputable rules of International Law and the univesally recognized distates of humanity, the Government of the United States is at last forced to the conclusion that there is but one course it can pursue.

An Outspoken Declaration.

"Unless the Imperial Government should now immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare against passenger and freight-carrying vessels, the Government of the United States can have no choice but to sever diplomatic relations with the German Empire altogether. This action the Government of the United States contemplates with the greatest reluctance, but feels constrained to take in behalf of humanity and the rights of neutral nations."

Had the recent attack on the Channel steamer Sussex, the note tells Germany, been an isolated case, the United States might have hoped that the submarine commander acted in violation of his Government's solemn pledges and that the ends of justice might have been satisfied by a disavowal, reparation and his proper punishment. But, it adds, this case, "unhappily does not stand alone."

"On the contrary," says the note, "the Government of the United States is forced by recent events to conclude that it is only one instance, even though one of the most extreme and most distressing instances, of the deliberate method and spirit of indiscriminate destruction of merchant vessels of all sorts, nationalities and destinations, which have become more and more unmistakeable as the activity of German undersea vessels of war has in recent months been quickened and extended."

Sussex Case Fully Proved.

The United States, the communication declares, considers the torpedoing of the Sussex not only proved by the evidence, but actually substantiated by the German disclaimer of responsibility.

Attached to the American note as an appendix are the facts in the Sussex case. These show that three American army and naval officers found in the hall of the destroyed ship not only screw bolts which correspond in use on German torpedoes in possession of the French Government at the naval station at Toulon, but that the American officers actually found 13 pieces of metal, which they have identified as parts of German torpedoes. Four of them, steel parts of the "warhead" of the torpedo, still bear the distinctive red paint common to German "warheads."

Besides this evidence, the note contends, every circumstance either admitted by Germany in her disclaimer or proved by affidavit of persons on the destroyed liner proves beyond question that she was torpedoed without warning.

Copies of the American note were sent to representatives here of neutral nations on the assumption that they are as much interested as the United States in the protection of neutral rights. The document was not given to any of the belligerent diplomats, as the controversy is regarded as being solely between the United States and Germany.

Count von Bernstorff already has reiterated to Secretary Lansing that under no circumstances will Germany give up the submarine as a weapon of warfare.

Clearly the President's demand is that the use of the submarine shall be restricted to operations against warships. Upon that rock the friendly relations between the two countries may be rent.

Bilinguals Decline To Pay Tax

OTTAWA, April 21.—A slight change in the separate school situation may be occasioned by the action of Hon. Howard Ferguson in having clauses added to the statute law amendment act more clearly defining the financial powers of commission and stripping the old board of any authority it thought it still held.

Those connected with the commission are under the impression that the action was taken to prevent litigation next year. The decision of Justice Meredith gives the commission this year's money, aus it is believed it was to provide against any entanglements in 1917 that the clauses were added.

It was also to remove any doubt from the mind of the city solicitors as to who had the power to collect taxes. The position of the commission is strengthened, but their course will be unchanged.

Trustees May Change Plans

It is the board of trustees who may alter their plans, although no decision has been made yet.

"This move may stop us collecting taxes, but it won't prevent us keeping our money in our pockets." was the statement of Chairman Genest, and it is quite possible that this is the action that may be taken.

"I have not seen the text of the clauses, but I am sure the acting Ministers of Education were aware that we had the power to collect taxes as representatives of the people," said the chairman.

No Law to Halt Trustees

He was quite sure the city was convinced it had no right to collect the taxes, and that there was no law to prevent the trustees doing so; also that they couldn't take any action to recover taxes if the board collected them. The move was made in the Legislature to straighten up these points.

Bilingualist point out that in bringing in the amendment at one o'clock, Mr. Ferguson was following the policy that had been adopted by the Ontario government throughout the school fight, viz., introducing and having passed important legislation in the dying hours of the night and session.

WHEN WAR CAME TO CHIPEWYAN

By FRANCIS J. MICKIE.

"THE Great White Father and his people are at war. Already there are many empty lodges in their land, and, because of this, I have summoned you today." Hector Frazer, Hudson's Bay factor at Chipewyan paused. His eyes swept the congregated chiefs and braves, sitting cross-legged and silent in a semi-circle about him; and by the very tenseness of their stoical calm he realized how deep was their interest.

"When the white men go to war," he continued, after a minute, "it is bad for us of this northland. My company and all the traders of Canada are now without money. The furs of last year lie piled high in the storehouses of the land, for there is no market. The white men fight among themselves. They who would have bought from the companies of this land are no longer friends and the peaceful trade of yesterday is gone. To-day the red fire speaks from the mouths of great guns and there are many widows in the land beyond the shores of Kechegame (the sea) Keshamanito, the great merciful spirit, who looks down upon us all in time of peace, has turned his face away. Machamanito, the spirit of all evil, rules men's hearts in the world outside. And so, listen well, my brothers, for I must give you a message that Attilaw, whom you all saw arrive from Landing this morning, has brought me."

Appreciating the deep love of display innate in the Indian, Frazer reached slowly into his breast pocket and brought forth a long, official blue envelope. Holding it in his half upraised hand he continued:

"The company, because there is no money coming into the land and their fur lies piled high within many storehouses to which no buyers come, have commanded me no longer to allow a 'debt.' And even to you, my people, who have come for these many years to this post and paid off your 'debt' without fail, a new one cannot be given."

As the factor ceased speaking a low murmuring wail came from the gathering. Too well they knew the pinch of empty bellies, and now, with the knowledge that no new "debt" of food, of powder, and ball, would be forthcoming, there came a terrible dread of winter. Robbed of this lifelong privilege they stood empty handed, unprepared, with nothing to contend against it.

For a long moment they sat, till the factor disappeared within the door of the post. Then rising, they walked slowly back to their encampment, a half-mile away on the shore of Lake Athabasca. As they went they bowed their heads and their hearts were heavy with foreboding.

With heavy heart the factor entered the little living room that adjoined the store. Going over to his red book case, upon which rested a few scant volumes, he picked out one. Sitting down at the nearby table he turned over the well thumbed pages, almost instantly reaching the passage he sought. It was Tolstoi's Prevision. And as the trader reads he realized dully how true the words now were. At the bottom of the page long months ago he had written in his own scrawling hand "When it does come there will be bad times in the northland."

Again he read over the passage:

"This is a revelation of events of a universal character which must shortly come to pass. Their spiritual outlines are now before my eyes. I see floating upon the surface of the sea of human fate the huge silhouette of a nude woman. She is —— with her beauty, her poise, her smile, her jewels, —— a super-Venus.

"Nations rush madly after her, each of them anxious to atract her specially.

"But she, like an eternal courtesan, flirts with all. In her hair in ornaments of diamonds and rubies is engraved her name, 'Commercialism.' As alluring, as bewitching as she seems, much destruction and agony follow in her wake. Her breath, reeking of sordid transactions, her voice of metallic character like gold, and her look of greed are so much poison to the nations that fall victim to her charms."

Presently Frazer closed the book and sat staring straight ahead at the whitewashed log wall, his mind being troubled with the thought of those red men gathered on the shores of the lake.

Thirty years he had served the Hudson's Bay Company, but during these years he had assumed another duty, one apart, different from any which his position necessitated.

When he had taken over the post, the Indians, like those trading at neighboring ones, were fast becoming depleted in numbers. Swayed by his religious feelings he had come to look upon the red men about him as his own personal charges. Too, lacking children or kin to love, he had given over to these wilderness people the empty places in his heart. So he had watched over his own little band of Indians until they, weak, unthinking, eternally improvident, had in recent years increased in numbers and become prosperous according to Indian standards. The factor had come to view with growing complacency the successful results of his labors on their behalf. For this reason the carrying out of these official orders was now a bitter task.

Only two days ago the band had arrived to secure the yearly outfit, and preparatory to leaving for the winter trapping grounds had camped upon the shore of the lake. In two more days they would have been on their way. In view of this, Attilaw's untimely arrival was the more to be deplored. But to Frazer, master of his own domain and upon whose goods no outside check had ever been made, came no thought to make the usual advance in defiance of the orders. Despite his love for his charges, his desire for their welfare, 30 years in the company's service had made obedience a thing of second nature. Now that these instructions had arrived there was only one thing to do.

Again Frazer brought out the new orders, reading them over slowly. As he came to the words: "Not one debt shall be given the Indians," a wave of honest anger swept over him. There came a realization of how little, after all, did those men out in the big world care whether famine or death visited there children of the wild. How truly, he thought, had Tolstoi spoken when he said of commercialism, "Her breath, reeking of sordid transactions, her voice of metallic character like gold, and her look of greed are so much poison to the nations that fall victim to her charms." Truly, these words were equally applicable to men and companies as to nations.

Deep in thought the factor did not hear the storehouse door open. Not until a soft tap sounded at his own portal did he rouse. Turning, he saw before him Opapamotao, chief of the band.

"We have held council among ourselves, Okosapuhchegac," the chief said, addressing the factor by his Cree name, which meant "He-Who-Sees-Ahead." Long ago the tribe had given Frazer a name and honorary place among them. "And," the chief went on, "the braves wait outside. There are many words to be spoken." Finishing, Opapamotao retreated, closing the door softly behind him.

Outside, around the door, the braves sat as they had a few hours before, in a semi-circle, cross-legged and silent. Frazer sat down on the step of the Post. The long pipe passed around the gathering. When the last man had taken it from his lips, Opapamotao arose. Dropping his blanket from his shoulders he stood up straight and tall. His eyes swept once over the gathering, then he turned and addressed Fraser.

"To-day, Okosapuhchegac, you have received word from the Great White Company that no 'debt' should be given to us this winter. All day we have talked in council of this order of the white man. The Great Company are very rich. In their store houses lie thousands of pounds of tea and flour, and all the things that are now necessary to us of this northland. God made the fur bearing animals and the game for the Indians. Before the white men came, our forefathers lived upon these and were independent. Then the white men came with their demands for fur and the Indian turned from his hunting fields and became a hunter for the white man. Now we are not as our fathers were. To-day the game is scarce, the fur must be hunted long and over great distances. And because of this we have come to look to the white man for many things. We have made the men of the Great White Company outside," he waved his hand dramatically toward the south, "very rich. They have great wigwams and much food stored away, even in times of war. Why then should they make us suffer for something that is not our fault? Have we not these many years traveled far and hunted much for them? Have we not always paid our debts and brought much fur to this post? Yes, my brother, we have done all this. And yet the white men would take away our debt when the winter is coming on, when we must travel far, and many of our squaws are big with child. My brothers in council have begged me to lay these matters before you. You are one of us, have been long a part of the northland."

Opapamotao stopped abruptly, gazed for a long moment at the factor stretching out his arms in a gesture of supplication.

"You, Okosopuhchegac, understand that we are not as our forefathers, that now without the white man's aid we cannot live."

With a little sharp gesture of finality Opapamotao resumed his seat. There was a long silence. Fraser sat with bowed head, a new realization of the situation sweeping over him.

Yes; that was it. He understood now. He recognized as he had never fully done before, that it was he and his kind that had changed the wilderness, making the Indian a dependent.

Slowly Frazer got to his feet; duty, obedience, the training of 30 long years, he put suddenly behind him.

"It is well, my brothers," he said, "The words of Opapamotao are good and full of wisdom. To-morrow you shall be given your 'debt' as before, so that you may go into the wilderness to the trapping grounds."

Turning, Frazer went within the post.

Once within he brought out the heavy ledger of the company. For an hour he calculated the sum that would cover the cost of outfitting this band of 100 red men. Arriving at the answer he closed the book heavily, went within to his bedroom, took from his ancient money box his bank book on an Edmonton bank, 500 miles away.

Within it lay the savings of all these years; he compared the total of this with that of his recent calculations and he breathed a sigh of relief. His bank balance covered the sum and left $10 over.

Then a little wearily he sat down and wrote out a check to the company for the full sum and folded it away in an envelope which to-morrow Attilaw would carry to the outside to the offices of the great company, to those men who lived soft lives and did not care.

VALUE OF FARM LANDS.

Average in Canada Counting Everything is $38.90 an Acre.

A bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office summarizes the results of reports made by crop reporting correspondents respecting the values of farm land, of farm help, and of farm live stock in the year 1915.

For the whole of Canada the average value of farm land held for agricultural purposes, whether improved or unimproved, and including the value of dwelling houses, farms, stables, and other farm buildings, is returned as $38.90 per acre. Last year the average value was returned at $38.41. By provinces the averages per acre range from $22.48 in New Brunswick to about $125 in British Columbia, the values for the other provinces being as follows: Prince Edward Island, $37.64; Nova Scotia, $28; Quebec, $51.36; Ontario, $52.49; Manitoba, $30.36; Saskatchewan, $24.20, and Alberta $23.15. In British Columbia the higher average is due to orcharding and fruit growing.

The wages paid for farm labor in 1914 fell to a lower point than in any other year. The causes for this decrease were the small crops of 1914, for the gathering of which fewer hands were required, the release of other laborers on the outbreak of the war and the increased cost of board. In 1915, owing to the abundant harvest and the effects of recruiting for the army, there was some reaction, and the average wages paid were more than in 1914 if not quite equal to those paid in 1910, the date of the previous inquiry. For the Dominion the average wages per month during the summer, including board, were $37.10 for male and $20.20 for female help, as compared with $35.55 and $18.81 last year. For the year, including board, the average wages were $341 for males and $200 for females, as compared with $323.30 and $189.55 in 1914. The average value of board per month works out to $14.57 for males and $11.45 for females, the corresponding figures of 1914 being $14.27 an $11.24. Average wages per month were lowest in Prince Edward Island, viz., $26.67 for males and $14.59 for females; in Nova Scotia the averages were $32.95 and $15.85; in New Brunswick $33.73 and $16.11; in Quebec $33.08 and $16.44; in Ontario $31.09 and $17.12; in Manitoba $45.18 and $27.29; in Saskatchewan $42.22 and $23.81; in Alberta $44.02 and $24.25, and in British Columbia $48.27 and $31.21.

The value of horses is somewhat less than that of last year, but the prices of cattle show an increase, especially for milch cows. Swine are appreciably dearer except in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, where they are about the same as last year. Sheep, too, have risen in price, and there is a notable increase in the value of wool, the average for Canada being 28 cents per lb. for unwashed and 38 cents per lb. for washed wool, as compared with 19 and 26 cents respectively in 1914. The average values for Canada are as follows: Horses $122 as against $126 in 1914; milch cows $61 as against $57; other cattle $44 as against $42; sheep, $8 as against $7, and swine $15 as against $12. Approximately the total value of farm animals in Canada at the end of December may be estimated as $750,667,000, compared with $725,530,000 in 1914.

Honoring the Sabbath.

On one occasion Lord Strathcona took with him to Scotland on Saturday night a young secretary, with whom he was personally unacquainted. On Sunday morning he planned to answer a number of pressing letters, largely dealing with his various charities, so as to catch Monday morning's mail. The secretary objected to working on the Sabbath, saying he had never done so. (?) For a moment Lord Strathcona seemed disconcerted. Then he said, quietly: "Say no more about it. Go and take a walk up the glen."

The young man spent the whole day walking about enjoying the scenery and retired weary and footsore. Promptly at midnight, when he was wrapped in the soundest slumber, he was aroused by a thunderous knock at the door. He sprang out of bed, and encountered Lord Strathcona, taper in hand, and a winning smile on his face.

"Come, Mr. Blank—the Sabbath is now over, and we must make haste with those letters, you know, so as to catch the morning mail."

By dint of incessant industry the morning sun had not risen very high over the vale of Glencoe when the letters were finally despatched, and Mr. Blank, a sadder and a wiser man, once more sought his couch to snatch a couple of hours repose before breakfast.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It if your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used a few months, do their eyes more injury than good.

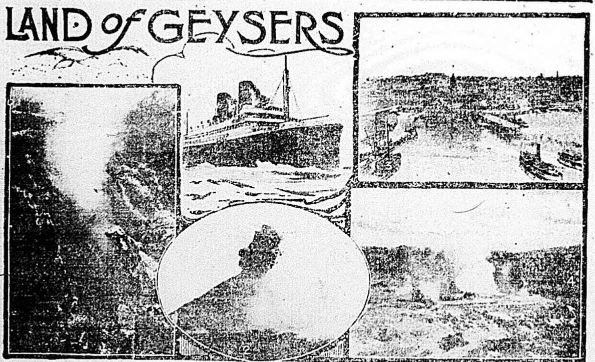
Here is a simple prescription that every one should use: 5 grains Bon-Opto dissolved in ¼ glass of water. Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Bon-Opto system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use.

It is good for the eyes, and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Your own druggist can fill this prescription, or the Valmas Drug Co. of Toronto will fill it for you by mail. Try it, and know for once what real eye comfort is.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations, I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

J. S. McKeown and W. H. Lattimer fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and

LAND of GEYSERS



(1) Dragon's Mouth Geyser, Wairakei. (2) Active Volcano, Ngaurukoe, N.Z. (3) Harbour Front, Auckland, N.Z. (4) Prince of Wales Feather Geyser, Whakarewarewa. (5) S. S. Niagara.

NATURAL philosophers have been searching for decades for a sound explanation of the geyser phenomena, and yet they are not able to give the interested world full details about them; philosophy has been able to ascend to the heavens and bring down to the world dimensions and particulars about the planets, has been able to tell why the stars wink, why the sun and moon appear and disappear, when there will be an eclipse of some distant revolving body, and why the eclipse will occur; philosophy has taught us all about all the variations of the firmament, about all the motions of the earth itself, but geysers are puzzles. Nobody fully understands them. At any rate we know something about them—we know they are beautiful.

A geyser may be best described as a volcano of hot water. The word geyser means—to burst forth with violence. They are springs which throw forth intermittent jets of heated water and steam. In pouring itself over the surface of the earth the water sometimes makes a noise just like the water that hums an irregular tune as it escapes boiling from a kitchen kettle. It may be reasonable to assume that the water leaves the overheated kettle for the same reason that it leaves the geyser—things were made too hot for it. All things of extraordinary beauty are rare. The only geysers yet discovered are those of Iceland, Wyoming and California in the United States, and those of the North Island of New Zealand.

Those who are fond of travel and interesting sights should see a geyser. For Canadians the most attractive are those in New Zealand, for the islands of New Zealand are important parts of the great British Empire. The Canadian Pacific train and steamship connections can bring sightseers from almost any part of the Dominion right up to the home of geysers. The S.S. "Niagara" of the Canadian-Australasian Line, plys regularly between Vancouver and Auckland. From Auckland the New Zealand geyser basins can easily be reached. At Rotorua are numerous hotels to accommodate health seekers and the bubbling mud geysers in the vicinity are as wicked-looking as they are extraordinary. But geysers are not the only attractions that New Zealand has to offer; there are hosts of others, and not the least are the New Zealanders themselves, who are our cousins. At this period when the links connecting the Empire are being knit closer than ever they had been before, it is only appropriate that there should be more intimate intercourse between its members. Present day travelling facilities almost annihilate distance, and any of us who have the means should not grudge our kindred and neighbours a visit.

The city of Auckland, which is the largest in New Zealand, had in 1906 a population of 82,189, but during the past ten years it is likely that this number has had another 10,000 added to it. Auckland has a good harbour. The interior of the city is interesting. It contains some impressive buildings, but it is only yet in its youth, and as it is a favorite amongst the young daughter cities of the great British Empire, it is likely to become very large and very wealthy, a busy depot of commerce, and a home of culture.

MONTREAL IN FICTION

WRITERS HAVE NEGLECTED PICTURESQUE CITY.

Ancient Seat of the French Regime With Its Heroes and Martyrs and Its Devoted Teachers Still Leaves Fertile Fields for Writers — The Poets Have Made Better Use of the City's Color.

PERHAPS no city in America, with the single exception of Quebec, offers greater opportunities to the writer of romance than does Montreal, and yet few have been more neglected. It has everything almost that the heart of the romanticist could desire. A picturesque and fascinating history of three centuries, partly under English and partly under French rule, presents possibilities of unusual interest. The founding of the city was the result of a mystical religious impulse, its first establishments were a seminary, a nun's hospital, and an Indian school, and to this day it remains one of the most pronounced strongholds of the Roman Church.

Almost from the first, Montreal was the headquarters for the fur trade in New France, and its history is full of memories of great trading companies, of daring adveuturers, of merchant princes, of missionaries, and of royal governors. In many respects there is still much to suggest a city of the old world, rather than of the new, in its early buildings, its narrow streets with their curious names, its historic landmarks, its quaint market places, and its interesting old churches.

History takes on a new interest as one walks the streets of Montreal. Here were the homes of D'Iberville, who conquered Hudson's Bay for France; of La Salle, who discovered the great west and followed the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico; of Du Lhut, who explored the Upper Mississippi and after whom the city of Duluth was called; of Cadillac, the founder of Detroit; of La Verandrye, who discovered the Rocky Mountains. Here also lived Alexander Henry, the pioneer of the fur trade in the far west; Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the first European to cross the Rockies; Simon Fraser, who found the river bearing his name; and other of the great merchants, who formed the famous North-West Company, which a hundred years ago and more established the commercial importance of Montreal.

But if the romanticists have overlooked Montreal, the poets have made up for their neglect. The city and its immediate neighborhood have furnished themes for many writers of poetry. W. D. Lighthall, who has been a diligent student of its history, has used it many times. "The Battle of La Prairie," is a ballad of the first encounter of the French and British in America, which took place in 1691, in the valley of the Richelieu. His "Caughnawaga Beadwork Seller," is placed in the Indian village at the head of the Sault St. Louis Rapids, opposite Lachine. Tom Moore's famous "Canadian Boat Song," written a century ago, will always keep in memory the village of Ste. Anne, at the western end of Montreal Island. The late Dr. W. H. Drummond, Mr. Alan Sullivan, and Dr. John Reade, the distinguished journalist, among others, have recalled the heroic exploit of Madeleine Vercheres, the young heroine of fourteen, who for an entire week, with the aid of three men and two little boys, withstood an Iroquois attack on the Vercheres seigneury, a few miles down the St. Lawrence near the Richelieu. It would scarcely be possible that the famous ice palaces and winter carnivals which a generation ago were held in Montreal, and which were responsible in some measure for the reputation of ill-omen attached to the climate of Canada, could escape the attention of writers dealing with Montreal subjects. John Reade in "The Winter Carnival," and Mrs. L. A. Lefevre in "The Spirit of the Carnival," have handled it in verse and cleverly caught the spirit of the occasion. The visit of Jacques Cartier to the Indian village of Hochelaga, which occupied the site of the city a hundred years before Montreal was founded, gives subject and title to a fine poem by T. D'Arcy McGee, and the retirement to St. Helen's Island of Marquis de Levis, commander of the last French army, where he burnt his flags in the presence of his army on the evening before surrendering the colony to the English, is the basis of Frechette's poem, "All Lost but Honor."

In prose Montreal's record has not been quite so ample. Many of the historic legends of the city and vicinity have been preserved in the "Jesuit Relations." Here they were discovered by Parkman and turned into glowing prose in "The Old Regime," "The Jesuits of New France," "Pioneers of New France in the New World" and other volumes dealing with the French occupation of Canada.

The story of the wonderful exploit in which young Dollard des Ormeaux with sixteen companions, four Algonquins and a Huron chief, sacrificed their lives at the Long Sault Rapids on the Ottawa, in May, 1660, is one of the most thrilling incidents in Canadian history, and the names, ages, and occupations of the young men are still to be read in the old register of the Parish of Ville Marie. George Murray tells the story of Dollard in stately verse in his poem "How Canada Was Saved," and Mary Hartwell Catherwood, an American novelist who has several times used Canadian historical material for literary purposes, has in "The Romance of Dollard" woven a fascinating love story around the person of the leader of the little band of heroes.

BOY SCOUTS AT FRONT.

Montreal Has About Three Hundred in the Fighting Ranks.

When the Boy Scout movement was still young, King Edward sent the following message on the eve of one of the Scouts' first parades:

"The King is pleased to know that the boys are holding their first parade. Please assure the boys that the King takes the greatest interest in them, and tell them if he should call upon them in latter life, the sense of patriotic responsibility and habits of discipline which they are now acquiring as boys will enable them to do their duty as men should any danger threaten the Empire."

King Edward's message with its prophetic vision has been realized, and the Boy Scouts the world over have proven worthy under the test. Montreal, with a membership before the war of some 1,200 Scouts, has given some 300 to the fighting ranks. Its Scout Masters were the first to answer to the call, and to-day the Montreal Scout troops are sadly wanting in leaders, so many being with the colors defending King and country.

Writing some days ago to the Montreal Scout Headquarters, from the Selge School, at Horshan, England, Colonel Minden Cole, former Chief Scout Commissioner for Montreal, just appointed to command a brigade of artillery, says:

"I wish I had boy scouts for signallers, they are much better at the work than the average grown up."

[illegible] tributed to feed the firing line are: The 20th Montreal, twenty-three members; 14th Montreal, twenty members, including seven scout masters, when the war started. The 16th Montreal, fourteen members, which includes four officers. The 3rd and 13th Verdun Composite Troop which gave seventeen members. The 11th Montreal gave nine members, including three scout masters, the 1st Westmount i.e., 6th Montreal troop also sent a large number of its members to the front. The Old Outremont, 5th Montreal Troop, now disbanded because of the loss of its scout master, gave ten of its membership. The Lachine Troop, 25th and 29th Montreal gave twenty to the colors.

Haggis for the Scots.

Scotchmen all over the world should thrill with delight at the news fresh from the War Office that this imposing body has at last given official recognition to the national dish, the haggis. This was related to The Montreal Standard recently by one of the returned boys at the convalescent home in the Grey Nunnery. He explained that it was a laudable object the powers that be had, in that they wished to make the trenches as homelike as possible to the Scottish troops. This man, named Mackenzie, stated that Mrs. Peter Brown, No. 16 Holland road, Kensington, had raised a fund to provide real haggis in bulk for the War Office. If this does not bring to the the scent of the heather and the music of the burn, nothing will.

The haggis is one of the few national dishes which has maintained its splendid isolation. Except, maybe, on Burns' nights or at private gatherings of exiles from north of the Tweed, it is seldom seen in England or even in Canada. To Scotch whiskey and shortbread the so-called foreigner and even the Canadian has taken very kindly, but to him the haggis is still an alien.

And now, so, Mackenzie says, the War Office has recognized Mrs. Brown. Her rich and rare "puddings" are to go to the front with the sanction of the big bosses and "Jock" and "Tam" once again will sit round their well-beloved all hot from the pot. And when they have eaten of it, woe betide the "Boche" that comes within striking distance of their "walie nieves." There will be dirty work surely. For as a Scotsman will tell you, there is Scotland in the haggis. There is Bannockburn, and Flodden Field, and Forty-five. There is the wind in the heather and the plunge of the salmon stream.

New Flax Expert.

The announcement that G. G. Bramhill, district representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture in Lambton County, has been appointed flax expert in the Federal Department of Agriculture, was made in the House of Commons recently.

Mr. Bramhill, who was recommended for the position by Mr. B. H. Grisdale, director of experimental farms, is a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College, and has gained practical knowledge of flax growing in Lambton County. He will familiarize himself with the whole flax question in Canada, carry on investigation work in connection with fibre production, fibre manipulation and grading, and with the utilization of the straw where flax is grown for the grain, as in Western Canada. His salary will be $1,800 a year.

Mrs. Pankhurst in Commons.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British suffragette leader, occupied a seat on the floor of the Dominion House a few days ago, and heard Sir Thomas White's elucidation of his revised Budget proposals. She arrived three days late to hear the debate on women suffrage, which was precipitated by Dr. Pugsley.

Sea Lion Leather.

On account of the increased demand for leather caused by the war the use of sea lion hides for leather has been proposed. Already one British Columbian factory, it is reported, has made excellent gloves, belting, and other articles from these hides.

Japanese Offer to Fight.

General Sir Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of War, has received from British Columbia a proposal to organize a regiment of Japanese naturalized in Canada for service as an overseas regiment, the officers also to be naturalized Japanese.

Goes Home to Work.

Dr. J. W. Todd, professor of history and economics at Dalhousie University, has tendered his resignation to the Board of Governors, to take effect at the end of the present college term, and will sail for Scotland, where he will take a position in one of the munitions plants. Dr. Todd is a Scotsman, who came to Canada several years ago. He was assistant professor at McGill University, when he was called to take the chair formerly occupied by ex-President John Forest and later by Prof. Estey.

Knees Versus Feet.

Mr. John Ross Robertson, owner of The Toronto Telegram, is an old-time reporter, and as such has his eye open for good stories. He nailed one on the street car the other day. A soldier in kilts was sitting opposite a man in civilian attire, who observed that his knees must be very cold in the keen weather prevailing. "Not half so cold as your feet," was the sharp rejoinder.

Is 107 Years Old.

New Brunswick's oldest man, Timothy Sullivan, sr., celebrated his 107th birthday recently at his home at Burton, Sunbury County, where he is now practically bed-ridden. Mr. Sullivan's span of life has extended over the reign of five British sovereigns. He has always used tobacco and liquor in moderation.

THE VALUE OF CHEESE.

Greater Use of Daily Product Would Save Canada Millions.

Just a year ago Prof. H. H. Dean, of the Ontario Agricultural College, in an address before the dairymen of Ontario strongly urged a greater home consumption of cheese. He contended that by so doing not only would the cost of living be reduced but an additional market would be provided for our dairy products. He argued as follows:

"The food value of a pound of cheese is estimated to be equal to that of two pounds of average meat. Estimating the present meat consumption at 25 lbs. per capita (a low estimate), Canadians are consuming about 200,000,000 lbs. meat annually, at a cost of about $40,000,000. By a proper understanding of food values, we might save about $16,000,000 annually on this one item alone by substituting a part of the present meat ration for cheese. This would figure somewhat as follows: A cheese consumption of ten pounds per head would be about 80,000,000 lbs. This would take the place of about 160,000,000 lbs. meat, and still leave 40,000,000 lbs. meat for those who prefer corpse to cheese. The eighty million pounds of meat saved would cost about sixteen million dollars. The saving, by using cheese instead of so much meat would be sixteen million dollars annually. If a person were to go to the Finance Minister of Canada and tell him how to save sixteen million dollars annually for the people, such a person would be looked upon as a wizard or a fanatic and would probably get a 'soft job' with the Government—or be committed to a lunatic asylum—yet the figures show these astonishing results."

Prof. Dean's conclusions are certainly astonishing, but they would have been even more so if he had calculated on the actual meat consumption per capita, for, instead of twenty-five pounds statistics show it to be 175 pounds, while the consumption of cheese is estimated to be only three pounds.

Theoretically the substitution of cheese for meat works all right, yet doubtless, there were many heard the address or read a report of it who doubted its practicability. It seemed too good to be true. On a study of the British imports during the past two years, however, we see that it works practically as well as theoretically. During the year previous to the war 2,400,100,000 pounds of meat were imported while during the first twelve months of the war only 2,332,000,000 pounds were imported; a decrease of 68,100,000 lbs. R. H. Rew, Assistant-Secretary to the Board of Agriculture, says: "The large demands on imported supplies of meat for the British and French armies occasioned a distinct shortage for the civil population, but this was relieved by a reduced demand." Now, there must have been some substitute for these 215 million pounds of meat, and, on looking further we find that the imports of cheese during the same period increased by thirty-eight million pounds or about sixteen per cent. Thus it is quite evident that cheese has been taking the place of some of the meat.

The question then naturally comes up, why does not the Canadian consumer use more cheese? It is owing to the lack of knowledge regarding its economic value and how to prepare it in appetizing forms, such as meats are prepared. Prof. Harcourt in Bulletin 221 states: "Cheese is one of our most concentrated foods. More than one-fourth of its weight is protein, about one-third fats, and one-third water. It is not only valuable for the amount of protein, or muscle-forming material, and fat it contains, but, also because of the ease with which it can be kept and prepared for the table and for the variety of ways in which it may be served.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

General Kissed Canadians.

The French military authorities, who have long admired the splendid gallantry of the Canadians, gave public proof of their appreciation a few days ago by decorating a number of officers and men with the Legion of Honor and Military Medal, says Philip Gibbs in the London Telegraph.

Canadian guards of honor, with two brass bands and pipers of Canadian Scots, were drawn up in a square in an old Flemish town opposite a French infantry group, generals and staff officers stood in advance of the men and the officers and non-commissioned officers who were to receive the decorations were in a separate place. It was strange that Canadian soldiers should be here to receive the kiss of the French general. He passed along their lines with his staff while the bands played the Marseillaise, and the general commanding the Canadian corps inspected the French troops. Then the tri-color was brought forward by a guard of honor and with the symbol of the spirit of France, unfurled in the grey old market place, the French general pinned the Legion of Honor and Military Medal to the breasts of the men marked out for honor, and saluted them with that kiss which France herself gives those who defend her soil. Canada will be proud of her soldiers who now wear the ribbons of French chivalry. They have won them by good and brave work on the field of honor.

For one of them, Captain George Taylor Richardson, of the Second Canadian Infantry battalion, the Cross of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor came too late except as a memorial of his gallantry, for he was killed on February 9.

Women's Emergency Corps.

The newly-organized local branch of the Women's Emergency Corps in London, Ont., has decided to launch a campaign for 100 members. An effort will be made to have a local corps organized in every county in the first military district. Membership does not commit one to taking the place of a man at the front. This is provided for by registration.

SPIRIT OF THE WEST.

It Has Contributed Half of Canada's Soldiers So Far.

An inspiring tale of the gallant part that western Canada is playing in the war is told in an article by Mary Synon in Scribner's Magazine.

"Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, the North-West Territories, and the Yukon," says the writer, "with less than one-fifth the population of the Dominion of Canada within their far-flung boundaries, have contributed more than one-half the 121,000 soldiers which Canada has given the Allied armies. Sixty-five thousand men have enlisted from the western provinces. . . One in three is an extraordinarily high rate of eligibles for service among the men of the country. Using this rate, a few more than 99,000 men of the West of Canada were eligible to serve in the army. The 65,000 who have enlisted are therefore more than two-thirds of the available men of the country. There is only one instance in history of a volunteer enlistment that equaled the same ratio—that of the Confederate State of America during the Civil War. Consider with this that the soldiers of the Confederacy were fighting in their own territory and that the Canadians have traveled anywhere from 2,000 to 4,000 miles overland before they came to the sea they must cross, and you will face the fact of an army—not of mercenaries, but of men—that has set out with the zeal of crusaders upon a journey that makes the Anabasis of the army of Cyrus the Persian a child's wandering."

British Columbia, we are told, has sent more men to the war than any other division of the British Empire. The little town of Wallachin, on the Cariboo Trail, has contributed forty-seven soldiers out of its sixty-seven eligible citizens. Vancouver, with a population of 110,000, gave 10,000; Prince Rupert went even higher; but Edmonton has apparently surpassed all the cities of Canada in patriotic sacrifice, for from her population of 60,000 Edmonton has sent more than 9,000 fighting men out with the bugles.

In accounting for this remarkable response of western Canada to the call to arms, the writer says:

"In the time while England's entrance into the war hung in the balance eastern Canada, except French Quebec, swung toward a policy of upholding England in any possible contingency. The West of Canada, un-English in sentiment, opposed the idea. Then Germany entered Belgium. The West blazed with beacons of anger. Western Canada went to war, not because of any so-called 'colonial' loyalty to England, but from a desire to avenge the invasion.

The old-time Western idea that no man should stand idly by while the big fellow strikes his little neighbor has been the motive that took the farther provinces to war."

The Bayonet.

How does the soldier of to-day pronounce the word "bayonet"? Apparently much as his officer does. But when "Tommy Atkins" was "Jack Firelock" he called his arme blanche a "bagonet." That was his own word, as "revally" was, and is, his version of reveille. According to undisproved tradition, the bayonet was first improvised at a mountain fight in Bayonne, when the Basques, short of ammunition, tied sickles to their muskets in a rush upon the Spanish enemy. The French took up the word, and the other nations after them.

KIDNEYS

Regulate Kidneys AND Relieve Constipation

Gin Pills are acknowledged to have the largest sale of any proprietary medicine in Canada—an achievement solely due to their remarkable virtue as a Kidney and Bladder remedy.

But users of Gin Pills have discovered that this invaluable remedy also acts as a mild cathartic. The evidence of hundreds of letters we have received establishes the very logical fact that in compounding a medicine to heal and tune up the Kidneys and Bladder certain of the ingredients have a stimulating effect upon the other organs, especially the bowels.

It is important to know, in the case of constipated patients, that Gin Pills do not act harshly on the bowels; there is no griping, but a gradual and gentle restoration of the function. Try Gin Pills for constipation. In thus relieving the bowels, you safeguard yourself against possible Kidney trouble.

Gin Pills are 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50 at your dealer's. A trial treatment will be sent upon request, to 16

TAIT M'KENZIE ON SERVICE.

Noted Surgeon, Sculptor, and Writer is Now at Heaton Park.

The Command Gazette, published at the Command depot, Heaton Park, Manchester, gives the following account of Major R. Tait McKenzie, R. A.M.C., medical officer in charge: The Major of the number 9's is a Canadian, and he was born in Almonte, Ontario. He went to the Collegiate Institute, Ottawa, and then to McGill University, Montreal, from which he graduated in the year 1892, and at once became House Surgeon in the Montreal General Hospital, a post he held for one year. The next summer he spent as surgeon on board one of the Beaver Line ships plying between Montreal and Liverpool, following which he commenced practice in Montreal, and soon became Household Physician on the staff of the Governor-General of Canada, holding the post for a year, during which he travelled extensively throughout Canada, England, and Scotland.

Resuming practice, he became demonstrator, and then lecturer in anatomy at McGill University, having been prominent in athletic sports and gymnastics. While at college he undertook the medical supervision of sports and exercises at McGill, and he became the first medical director on that subject.

In 1904 he accepted the chair of Professor of Physical Education and Physical Theology at the University of Pennsylvania, a position he still holds, being absent on leave at present. He organized the system of exercise which is required from all the 8,000 students of that University, and gave courses of lectures to the medical students on massage and exercise in medicine.

He has been for three years President of the American Physical Education Association, and has represented America at a number of International Congresses on Physical Exercise and Hygiene at London, Paris, and Brussels. In 1912 he was on the American Committee for the Olympic Games at Stockholm, and was decorated by the King for his distinguished service in athletics and art.

As a sculptor he is best known as the interpreter of the athlete in action, and examples of his work in bronze are to be found in the Metropolitan Museum, New York; National Gallery, Ottawa; Ashmolean Museum, Oxford; Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge; and in many private collections both here and abroad, while his portraits in bas relief are to be found in the National Portrait Gallery, Edinburgh; University of Pennsylvania; McGill and Brown Universities; and in many private collections.

He has written extensively on medical subjects connected with anatomy, physical education, and treatment of diseases by massage and exercise, and his textbook, "Exercise in Education and Medicine," has become a standard work. He is the greatest living authority on "Movement."

Last June he came over from Philadelphia, took a commission in the R. A. M. C., and was appointed Medical Officer at the Headquarters Gymnasium at Aldershot. He then made inspection tours with the Inspector of Gymnastics, reported on the necessity for treating convalescent soldiers, and was appointed as Medical Officer in charge, last October.

Not All For Love.

Little Florrie—Oh, aunty, dear, don't you go yet, please. Aunt—But I must, darling. I should like to stay longer and it is sweet of you to love your aunty so. Florrie—Oh, please, aunty don't go yet. Mamma said she'd whip me as soon as you went.

Indian Dies at 106.

Shall We In Our Prosperity Forget War-Destitute Belgium?

Nine Million Belgians Face Starvation While Canada Thrives on Record Crops and Huge War Orders?

When at first the War depressed business, and we felt the pinch ourselves, our sympathies and aid went out freely to Belgium, suffering in the same cause.

Now that prosperity has returned to Canada, and we are engrossed in paying business, there is danger that we forget our debt to our destitute Allies. For this is a real debt that we owe! Our present prosperity is, directly or indirectly, almost entirely a result of the war. We are profiting legitimately, of course, but it is only simple justice that we share these profits with those to whom the War has brought only want, suffering and sorrow.

FLOUR FROM CANADA

Belgium's need was never greater, if as great as it is today! Germany's rule has lost none of its ruthless, heartless, grinding oppression! Practically unable to earn money except by hateful munition-making for the enemy, the Belgians are gradually exhausting what little financial resources the Hun levies have left them.

For food they are absolutely dependent on the Belgian Relief Commission, which imports it from this side of the Atlantic. Those who can pay for it do so—those who cannot are fed anyway. As the proportion of the 7,000,000 hungry Belgians who cannot pay is steadily growing, this means a heavy demand on the generosity of Canada, Great Britain and the United States.

So far, with splendid gifts of flour and money, Canada has done her share. Now, in the face of urgent need, the Belgian Relief Commission is sending out another call. Besides the growing demand for flour, there is now pressing need for condensed milk for Belgian babies. This call comes right home to those of us who are living in comfort and prosperity—who have made no real sacrifices either to help along the war or to aid its victims.

A subscription of $2.50 a month, in the hands of the wonderfully efficient Belgian Relief Commission, will provide bread for one Belgian family, and save their lives! How many Belgians can you afford to support till the War is over? Whatever you feel you can give, send your subscription weekly, monthly, or in one lump sum, to Local or Provincial Committees, or 9

Cannot Find Ships.

The most serious problem confronting Newfoundland is that of securing ships to carry her catch of fish to market. At the present time this matter is causing grave concern to those interested. For the convenience of purchasers it is found most suitable to transport Newfoundland fish in sailing craft, especially to hot climates, because the heat generated in the engines of steamships, coupled with the heat of the zones themselves, helps to impair the quality of the article. The fishing craft used from Newfoundland on the Great Banks are not large enough to carry profitable cargoes to foreign ports, and the only resort left is to utilize the fishing vessels from Nova Scotia, which, having longer distances to go, are of larger dimensions than the Newfoundland vessels engaged in the same industry. Fully thirty of the finest ships in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, the home of the Canadian deep sea fishery, have already been chartered by Newfoundland dealers to take cargoes of codfish to various markets, and this total has about exhausted the number of certificated men available in that vicinity.

His Memory Returned.

Malcolm P. Johnston, senior member of the shoe firm of Johnston & McCormick of St. Thomas, who has just returned to St. Thomas after an absence of twenty months, tells an interesting story of his experience. A few weeks after recovering from a fractured skull, sustained by a fall down a cellar stairway in the summer of 1914, he remembered walking along the streets of St. Thomas, but recollects nothing between that time and when his memory returned while at work on a cattle ranch 50 miles from Tulsa, Oklahoma. How he got to that far-away State he has not the slightest idea.

When his memory returned a month ago he was helping to brand cattle. Mr. Johnston had charge of a fractious young steer, in handling which he received a sharp blow on his forehead. He was stunned by the shock, and his comrades dragged him from the enclosure to prevent the cattle from trampling over him. Upon recovering his senses he also recovered his memory of St. Thomas, his partner, business, and friends here, but his mind was left a blank as to the events of the past twenty months. Soon after this awakening Mr. Johnston left for his brother's home near Chicago to spend a few days to recuperate before coming on to St. Thomas.

Of these, 112,000 are in Great Britain or at the front, and 136,000 are in Canada. There have been 22,000 casualties, and the wastage has been 21,700. At the end of February the total war cost

COLONEL ROOSEVELT IS AMBITIOUS TO FIGHT IN EUROPE

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT BRIDGE ST. CHURCH

Death of Sergeant Signaller Horace E. Yeomans at the Front Commemorated—Soldiers and Civilians Attend in Large Numbers—An Impressive Service

A memorial service, very impressive in its nature, was held in Bridge street Methodist church, in this city, yesterday morning, for the late Sergt. Signaller Horace Eugene Yeomans, who a few days ago "somewhere in France" sacrificed his young life in defence of King and country. It was a service that will linger long in the memory of the hundreds of citizens who were able to gather within the sacred precincts. The interest in the service was added to by the fact that the 80th Battalion, which will shortly leave for overseas, was present in a body, under command of Lt.-Col. Ketcheson. The number of officers and men on parade was such as to fill the church. The battalion marched from the barracks on Pinnacle street to the church, being led by the fine band under the capable leadership of Lieut. H. A. Stares. The band also took part in the service, furnishing the music for the hymns and rendering other selections in a pleasing manner. While the offering was being taken a cornet solo by Bandsman Eldon Brethour was given in a manner as to have a feeling effect upon the large cangregation. The band also played a funeral selection from Chopin, and at the close of the service, while the congregation remained standing, The Dead March in Saul was played.

Mr. Staples of Albert College sang in fine voice and with much feeling, a solo entitled "Face to Face."

Two addresses were given during the service, the speakers being Judge Deroche, who is superintendent of the Sunday School in connection with the church, and the Pastor, Rev. H. S. Osborne.

"Pat," as he was familiarly known in the city, was a teacher of a boys' class in Bridge street church Sunday School, and was also active in Y.M.C.A. work, the Boy Scouts and in sports. He was in every sense of the word a young gentleman. His capabilities as a signaller were well known, and when it was learned that the 34th Battery would leave this city for overseas service he was at once selected, and with a younger brother, "Ted," went forth to do his bit.

Judge Deroche, in his remarks, referred more particularly to Pat's identification with the Sunday School. In his opening remarks the Judge said it was rather difficult in a way to speak of the young lad whose life had been sacrificed. He was a good soldier of the King of the British Empire, and also a good and loyal soldier of the King of Kings. It counted much to Pat to be a soldier of the King, but it counted much more to him now that he had been a true soldier of the King of Kings. His life was known to all in the city. He was not only a good soldier, but an exceptionally good boy. Energy and attractiveness were combined in him. His home and family influence were good. The Judge then referred to the lamented soldier's quick obedience to a superior officer, and how when requested by the Judge to take charge of a boys' class in the Sunday School, he readily replied, "I will try." He was zealous in his work; and what an influence for good he has left behind. He was naturally adapted to be a leader of boys. He had a personal magnetism that drew all towards him. He had the moral, manly, Christian courage to face the fight, no matter what the result was. Not only was he identified with Sunday School work, but also with Y.M.C.A. work, where he formed what is known as the Triangle Class. He also loved the field of sport, and always stood for clean sport. As he gave his best service to Sunday School and other good work, so he gave his best service to his King and followed the colors to the battlefield. We lament his death, but he has passed through the gate to a larger and better life.

Rev. H. S. Osborne in prefacing his remarks, said that twice had a welcome been extended to the officers and men of the 80th Battalion to the church service, and he welcomed them again. We desire to do honor to the living soldier whilst we revere the dead. In speaking of Sergt. Signaller Yeomans the minister said that seldom had the city been more stirred than on Monday last when a message was received announcing the sad fact that Horace Yeomans had fallen. He was just 20 years of age on April 11th of this year. His popularity and his opportunity to do things found in him a capacity to do them. He was a leader, especially of boys. He was a leader in the High School, Sunday School and Y.M.C.A., in the Boy Scouts and in the field of sport. He was an expert signaller, and when the declaration of war came he was found ready for service. When he consulted his father about the matter he said, in his true and brave spirit: "If I do not go, who will go?" He went, and with him a younger brother, scarcely 17 years of age. Side by side they went at the call of duty. To-day Horace sleeps "somewhere in France." He has entered into a personal glory and a national renown. His brother is alone in France following the path of duty. Age or life is not measured by years, but by treasure and service.

Scarcely twenty years of age—and what a life! He had been recommended for a distinguished service medal, which the speaker hoped would be given. There is a game to play in life, and Horace played it well. He played the greatest game of war to the last. He fought for the true heart of the world against a type of intelligence that defies it. We all feel the great sacrifice that is being made, yet faith in the ultimate good is the motto. "Somewhere in France" Horace rests—for such lads as he cannot die—their memories go on and on. Christ died for all that we might live. How thankful we should be that we can remember the good lad that is gone in the manner we do. He has uttered his last word as a soldier. His prayer was that God would help and comfort the parents, brothers and sisters and relatives who have been bereft of a loved one.

After prayer a hymn was sung, the benediction pronounced, and the National Anthem sung.

The pulpit was appropriately draped with a Union Jack, while on either side were beautiful Easter lilies.

Germans Attack, But With Minor Energy—Some Prisoners Taken—Bombarding Continues

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, April 24—(Afternoon statement). To the north of the Aisne a reconnoitring party endeavoring to penetrate our lines on the plateau of Paissy was repulsed with losses.

West of the Meuse last night we dispersed several reconnoitring parties of the enemy. To the southeast of Haucourt and to the northwest of Caurettes Wood we made progress with hand grenades in communicating trenches of the enemy and took about thirty prisoners, including one officer.

The enemy has delivered a fairly spirited bombardment in the region of Dead Man's Hill.

East of the River Meuse in the Woevre district the night passed with relative quiet. At Eparges the explosion of a German mine caused no damage.

In the Forest of Apremont our artillery has shown activity, and it has been efficacious in combatting the trench guns of the enemy. In the Vosges we have captured a small German position in the vicinity of Bonhomme.

In Belgium during the day of April 23 and night 23-24, the French aerial squadrons bombarded on two different occasions the railroad station at Wywege, east of the forest of Houthulst. On the first occasion thirty, and on the second eighteen shells of large calibre were thrown down by our aviators, and many of the missiles reached their objective. Our aeroplanes returned unscathed.

CONCESSIONS MADE BY GERMANY

Whether Satisfactory to America is Yet to be Ascertained—Patiently Waiting

Canadian Press Special.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Confidential despatches from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin indicate that Germany will make certain concessions to the United States in response to the note demanding the immediate abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare.

Whether the concessions will be sufficiently broad to meet American demands appears uncertain. However, the official reflected an air of hopefulness for an amicable settlement of the issue. A forecast of Germany's reply is expected from Ambassador Gerard by tomorrow night, and the reply itself, it is believed, will be handed to the Ambassador on Wednesday or Thursday, and be laid before President Wilson by Saturday.

The city Fire Department fought the flames till about 6 o'clock this morning, though they were under control about 3 o'clock.

CHILD'S HAIR BURNED OFF BY LIGHTNING

MERRITON, April 24.—(Special.)—A strange freak of lightning was performed here, a chimney on the house of Pte. H. J. Christie, 176 Overseas Battalion, being struck. The fluid entered an upstairs bedroom, where two children of the soldier lay sleeping, and burned the hair off one little girl's head, but caused the child no other harm. A stovepipe was knocked down, and the lightning descended to the room below, striking Pte. Christie, burning his hip, though not seriously.

Von Der Goltz Has Been Killed

Head of Turk Forces Said Also to Have Met Death by Assassination

PARIS, April 24.—Special—Reports from Swiss and Italian sources say that Field Marshal von der Goltz was assassinated immediately after the news of the fall of Trebizond reached Constantinople and when he was about to board a train for Berlin.

On April 19 the Berlin papers announced that the Field Marshal was coming to the capital, but said nothing about his being ill.

Another story says that upon seeing that the Russians were about to decisively defeat the Turks before Trebizond von der Goltz, despairing of the collapse of his twenty years of work with the Turkish army, placed himself with all his staff at the head of the Ottoman force, and charged to certain death.

Yet another version of his death says that it was due to the rigors of the 30 mile retreat on horseback after the rout of the Turks before Trebizond.

LONDON, April 24—Special—A special despatch to The London Daily News from Constantinople says that Field Marshal von der Goltz met a violent death in Constantinople, and did not die in Mesopotamia. The reports adds that other German officers also were killed.

Corkey Outruns Tom Longboat

TORONTO, April 24.—(Special.)—Toronto's sport lovers were treated to one of the finest programe of sporting events ever held in the city at the great entertainment organized by the Second Division Amateur Athletic Association at Riverdale Park on Saturday afternoon. The marathon race drew the attention of everybody on the grounds and those living in the neighborhood of the park. Forty-seven entries were received for the event, which was won in fine style by Corp. Jim Corkey, 180th Batt., who beat Corp. Tom Longboat, 180th Batt., in the last few laps by a good margin. The entries included in addition to Longboat among them being George Ernie Wood, and Percy Sellers.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS DISTINGUISH THEMSELVES

OTTAWA, April 24.—(Special.) — Thrilling stories of individual soldiers' bravery are given by the Canadian General Representative at the front in his weekly communique telling of the period of April 11-18. He says:

During the period that our troops held the line in front of St. Elol the circumstances of the fighting afforded a wealth of opportunity for deeds of daring, and several members of each battalion greatly distinguished themselves in the eyes of their comrades.

SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND GERMANS AT VERDUN

Thirty Different Divisions Are Used Against French—Petain's Troops Take Several Posts in Avocourt Wood—Only Artillery Activity Elsewhere—Enemy Claims Success on Left Bank of Meuse

LONDON, April 24.—(Special.)—The Germans are launching 600,000 men in successive relays against the French positions north of Verdun, according to an official estimate made in Pairs to-night.

During the day the artillery bore the brunt of the fighting, the foot troops, after a night of sonsiderable activity, remaining in their trenches and dugouts while the big guns hammered away on nearly every sector of the 5-mile front from the Argonne to far in the Woevre. The strongest bombardment of the day took place on the west of the Meuse, where the Germans are clearing by gunfire their way for an attack on the dominating crest of Hill No. 34.

The French made some minor gains in Avocourt Wood during the day.

ROOSEVELT READY TO FIGHT IN EUROPE

OSYTER BAY, N.Y., April 24.—(Special.)—Responding to an inquiry as to the nation's preparedness for possible war, former President Roosevelt to-day made the following statement:

"Men are saying that they stand behind the President or by the President. I wish to speak for the men who in the event of war will stand in front of the President and between him and the foreign enemy, and who therefore will stand between danger and the men who are behind or beside the President.

"These are the men who will go to the war at once if there is war with Germany or with any other great power, and who feel as I do, that we would far rather go to war unprepared than see our women and children murdered with impunity and the honor of the flag stained.

"But it is a wicked thing that the folly of our rulers in obeying the behests of the peace-at-any-price people and of the apostles of anti-preparedness should make the sacrifice either useless or else needlessly and appallingly wasteful in blood.

"In the event of such a war my four sons will go, and one, and perhaps both, of my sons-in-law; I will go myself; the young kindsfolk and friends of my sons will go; so my words are spoken with my eyes open.

"It is of small consequence what happens to us of the older generation, but when I think of the young men my heart grows bitter that their fine and gallant lives should be sacrificed, not to the nation's need, but to the nation's folly."

EASTER SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE CHURCHES

Beautiful Floral Displays—Appropriate Choral Programmes—Pulpit Discourses on Themes of the Risen Christ

AT THE TABERNACLE

Large and appreciative congregations gathered at the Tabernacle church yesterday, morning, afternoon and evening; and the services were unusually impressive and inspiring. The floral decorations, consisting of Easter lilies and palms, were chaste and beautiful.

Easter sermons by the pastor, Rev. S. C. Moore, were most timely and uplifting messages on the greatest theme of the Christian church. The morning subject, "The Glory of the Easter Sun," gave emphasis to the important truth that the real Easter joy and glory does not really dawn on the individual until the risen Christ has really entered the heart and became the welcome guest and constant companion.

The music throughout the day was under the direction of Mrs. Grant, with Mrs. Duff at the organ, and was of a very high order, rendered with exceptional smoothness, and was unusually devotional and inspiring. At the evening service the full choir rendered two anthems: "Christ our Passover," by Foster, and "Hallelujah, Christ is Risen," by Simper, and a special male quartette, composed of Messrs. Mitchell, Schryver, Moorman and Lavoie, sang in splendid voice and harmony "Glorious Things of Thee are Spoken."

The evening service carried with it two anthems by the choir "They have taken away my Lord," by Stayner, and "Hallelujah, Christ is Risen." A beautiful solo, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," by Miss Bawden, and a mixed quartette, "Magdalene," by Warren rendered with marked sweetness by Mrs. Grant, and Mrs. Nicholson, Messrs. Schryver and Moorman.

The Easter session of the Sunday School was one of the brightest and best for years in interest and attendance. A selection by the mixed quartette was greatly enjoyed, while the address of the afternoon on "Christ as the Diamond Easter Lily," was given by Rev. C. G. Smith, of the Baptist Church to the delight and profit of the large gathering of young and old.

AT ST. ANDREW'S

The services at St. Andrew's church yesterday were in keeping with the spirit of Easter. The attendance at both services was very good notwithstanding the dull, heavy weather. The choir furnished Easter music under the able leadership of Mrs. A. P. Allen and Miss Edith Lenn, organist. In the morning the choir rendered two anthems—"This is the day that the Lord hath made," and "King of Kings." Bandsman Burke also gave a solo entitled "There is a Green Hill." The pastor's theme was based upon John xx:26—"Jesus came, the doors being shut," and spoke of how the appearance of Christ in the world brought joy, peace and power to the world.

In the afternoon there was an open session in the Sunday School, Mr. Wm. McIntosh, superintendent, presided. The lantern was used, and an illustrated address was given on the Life of Jesus by the pastor, setting forth the significance of Easter to the boys and girls of the school. A splendid offering for missions was received.

In the evening the congregation were delighted with the new system of electric lighting which has recently been installed. All were loud in the praise of the Ladies' Aid, who were responsible for the great improvement made in the lighting of the church. The choir rendered appropriate music. Miss G. Price sang "There is a Green Hill." A trio by Mrs. Allen, Miss Ketcheson, and Miss Price was sung very sweetly. There was also an anthem in which Miss Mamie Waters took the solo part, a duet by Mrs. Allen and Mr. D. Clark, and a chorus by the choir. The pastor based his evening sermon in the words in John xx-19—"And He showed them His hands and His side". He pointed out that the wound prints constituted Christ's mark of identification; that the spirit of self sacrifice should distinguish His people and His church. Then the world would be impressed with His power and His salvation.

The pulpit was beautifully decorated with ferns and Easter lilies at both services.

AT ST. THOMAS CHURCH

The "Three Hours" at St. Thomas' Church on Good Friday was exceptionally well attended, there being a large congregation throughout the entire service, but more especially towards the close. The service was most impressive, and the congregational singing of the passion hymns was a most impressive feature. The eight addresses by the Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, M.A., of Napanee, were of a character suited to the day, and were founded on the "seven sayings" from the cross. They were listened to with marked attention and earnest devotion.

Easter Day services in St. Thomas' Church began with three celebrations of the Holy Communion, at seven, eight and eleven o'clock. There were in all two hundred and fifty-three communicants. The eleven o'clock service was fully choral, with Easter anthems and hymns, rendered by a large choir, and directed by Mr. Ernest Wheatly, Mus. Bac., who presided at the organ. The communion service was rendered to an admirable setting composed by the organist. The Rector was the preacher at the eleven o'clock service, and was assisted by the Rev. J. F. Fraser, M.A., his theme being the glory, the comfort and the joy of Easter.

In the afternoon a children's festival service was held in the church, addresses being given by the Rector, Rev. Capt. Ketterson, and Mr. John Elliott, superintendent of the Sunday School.

The evening service was fully choral and was beautifully rendered, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Capt. Ketterson, chaplain of the 80th Battalion.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather the services were very largely attended, and the offerings were large, amounting to over two hundred and fifty dollars. The Easter vestry meeting will be held on Thursday, May 4th, in the Parish House.

AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Services of a special Easter character were held in the Baptist church yesterday, morning and evening. The church was decorated with Easter lilies and presented a very attractive appearance. The pastor, Rev. Chas. Geo. Smith B.D. preached appropriate sermons, and the music was of a high order. At the morning service the officers and men of the 155th Battalion were present and occupied the central part of the auditorium. There was a large concourse of members and visitors and the church was crowded to the doors. The choir seats were occupied by the Band of the 155th, under the direction of Bandmaster Hinchey. In addition to playing the hymns, the band rendered "After Sunset" by Pryor, and "Berceuse" by Godard. The Pastor welcomed the Battalion in behalf of the deacons and members of the Baptist church. The subject of the sermon was "The Risen Christ," and Mr. Smith emphasized the fact that Christ's resurrection is (1) the foundation of Christianity, (2) the proof of the miracles, (3) the hope of immortality. IN and ABOUT THE CITY

CAMPBELLFORD MAN WOUNDED

Among today's Canadian casualties appears the name of Albert Edward Dunk, of Campbellford, who has been wounded at the front.

HEROES OF LANGEMARCK

Yesterday and today were being commemorated as the first anniversary of the Battle of Langemarck or St. Julien, where the Canadian boys won undying fame. Several Bellevillians were numbered amongst the wounded Canadians, namely, Major R. D. Ponton, Lieut. Sandford, Bombardier Blaylock, Pte. John Prince, Lieut. S. Young and Pte. Wm. Rawlinson. The latter served six years in India.

NO TRACE OF MISSING MAN

Up to the hour of going to press, no trace whatever has been found of Mr. Jeremiah West, of Hungerford Township, who on Thursday evening last, disappeared in this city. Although a diligent enquiry has been made by relatives and friends, the man has evidently not been seen here since a few minutes after 8 o'clock on Thursday evening last. Mr. West has relatives in this city who are making efforts to locate him. The general impression is that something has befallen him.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

We are constantly hearing of the splendid work being done by the Young Men's Christian Associations overseas amongst our soldiers. Here is what Rt. Hon. H. H. Asquith says of the Y.M.C.A. "It is the finest thing in Europe."

We too are trying to make the soldiers located here feel welcome to our building, and they are still enjoying the free privileges of the baths, swimming pool as well as the reading room with all its equipments of writing material, etc. They seem to enjoy coming around and show their appreciation by their constant attendance amongst us.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF PRESBYTERIAL UNION

Large Attendance And Profitable Sessions— Speakers From Abroad Give Interesting Addresses

The annual convention of the Kingston Presbyterial Union was held in John Street Church on Good Friday, and proved to be one of the most successful meetings yet held. At both afternoon and evening sessions the attendance was good. Delegates came from as far east as Lansdowne, and from as far north as Madoc, Eldorado, Stirling, Burnbrae and Bancroft. Kingston had a splendid representation, and the enthusiasm they manifested made everybody ready to vote for Kingston, as the place of next meeting, when that matter came up. The devotional service of the afternoon session was conducted by the pastor of the church who also welcomed the delegates in a few felicitous words. Then came the address of the late President, Mr. William McIntosh, who for the past three years has been the chief executive of the union, and has done much for the enlargement of its work. The report of the Treasurer, Mr. D. A. Shaw, of Kingston, was the best yet, and showed a much larger balance to the credit of the union than previous years have shown. On the basis of this report, the union decided to extend its work, and upon the motion of Mr. D. V. Sinclair it was resolved that the Presbyterial raise an additional hundred dollars viz $500, for its extensive mission field. Rev. D. Fiske, of Bancroft, gave a descriptive account of the work required to be done in North Hastings. Rev. Dr. W. S. MacTavish, of Madoc, gave a most interesting and effective address on the subject of "Missions and the Sunday School." Then followed an address full of gripping points by Rev. J. C. Robertson, B.D., of Toronto, on "The Church and Sunday School of the Future." A discussion was led by Mr. D. V. Sinclair, followed by Mr. Wm. Moore, of Thurlow, Mr. Wiley of Kingston and others. The program of the afternoon session was enlivened by Miss Lobb, who presided at the organ, and by the solo of Mrs. H. A. Singer. Then came intermission and the delegates assembled in the lecture room, where supper was spread in the most attractive and ample style by the ladies of St. Andrews and John street churches. Brief addresses followed the supper, and points of interest were discussed. The Summer school question got its share of attention, and a committee consisting of Mr. Sinclair, Miss Redmond of P'cton, and Rev. Mr. McLean, of Kingston, was appointed to consider the feasibility of it and to report at next meeting. On motion of Mr. Wm. Moore and seconded by Rev. Mr. Fiske a vote of thanks was heartily sustained, and extended to the ladies for their lavish supper, and an adjournment followed.

The evening session was prepared by a song service, and the scripture reading and prayer were led by Rev. Mr. McLean, of Cook's Church, Kingston. The presence of the choir added much to the musical program of the evening.

The Rev. A. S. Kerr, of St. Andrews, then introduced the new president, Mr. D. V. Sinclair, who in the most happy and graceful way assumed the new duty thrust upon him. Two interesting addresses were given at the evening session. Rev. J. C. Robertson spoke on "Training for Leadership," and Rev. C. C. Salisbury, of Burnbrae, where one of the most active Young People's societies of the Presbytery is found, presented to the convention, "Some Ideals for Young People." Thus came to conclusion one of the most profitable conventions. The following are the officers and committees for 1916—1917:

William McIntosh, Belleville, Hon. President; D. V. Sinclair, Belleville, President; Miss J. Redmond, Picton, Vice President; H. W. Newman, Kingston; Secretary; D. A. Shaw, Kingston, Treasurer.

Executive Committee.—Dr. Gracey, Gananoque; Alex. McGregor, Napanee; J. C. Bremner, Bancroft; W. H. Wiley, Kingston; Miss Gaudier, Newburg.

Finance Committee—D. A. Shaw, Kingston; J. W. Cook, Belleville; Wm. Moore, Latta; J. C. Linklater, Gananoque.

Steady Flow of Food Necessary

Plight of Belgian People Cannot be Imagined Says Mr. Wolcott

MONTREAL, April 24. —"There would be wholesale starvation within three or four weeks if the importation of food into Belgium were stopped," says a London despatch quoting Frederick C. Wolcott, who has been investigating conditions and the work of the Belgian Relief Committee.

Continuing Mr. Wolcott says," If any who cavil at the sending of relief supplies to Belgium could only visit Belgium and see personally the plight of the suffering people they would come back as eager for the continuance of the work as I am."

Of the 7,000,000 people in Belgium Mr. Wolcott says 3,000,000 are virtually destitute and drawing but one meal a day consisting of three slices of bread and a pint of soup. According to his description thousands of people stand in lines outside of relief stations which were originally designed to accommodate fifty persons. Chilled to the marrow, poorly clad and sometimes wet almost to the skin these people are forced to stand waiting for the meager ration made possible to them through the generosity of the people of Canada and other parts of the world not immediately affected by the war. And these people are not beggars, they are willing to work to provide themselves with food but the work and the food are not there to be had.

Unless Canada joins the rest and keeps a steady flow of food going to Belgium at least three million innocent victims of the war will already be added to the toll now so appalling. There is but one means of providing Belgium with succor. Send your bit to The Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, and it will be spent where it does the most good and goes farthest.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

STAMFORD, CONN., NURSE TELLS HOW SHE FOUND HEALTH

Stamford, Conn.—"I am a nurse and suffered from a nervous breakdown, I had no appetite and could not sleep night, and nothing seemed to help me. By chance I heard of Vinol, and after taking the first bottle I noticed an improvement, and four bottles made me well and strong, it gave me a hearty appetite, so I can sleep soundly night or day. I consider Vinol a wonderful tonic." Edith R. Forbes, Stamford, Conn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in overcoming such conditions is because it is a constitutional remedy and goes to the seat of the trouble. It is the greatest strength creator we know—due to the extractive medicinal elements of fresh cod livers without oil, combined with peptonate of iron and beef peptone, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine.

We have seen so many wonderful recoveries like this right here in Belleville caused by Vinol, that we feel perfectly safe in offering to return money in every such case where Vinol fails to benefit. J. S. McKewon, Druggist, Belleville, Ont.

TO LET CONTRACT FOR PARLIAMENT

OTTAWA, April 22.—The special committee of Parliament, appointed by the Government to consider plans for the new parliament buildings, has made its decision, it is announced. The committee has decided to follow the general plans as drafted by architects Pearson and Marchand, of Toronto and Montreal, with some minor changes. The contract will be let almost immediately and will be for something like $1,500,000.

The plans, as approved, call for Commons and Senate chambers situated at the extreme west and east ends of the new building, respectively. There will be a long corridor leading from the main entrance to the library, which will be made a species of hall of fame for Canada's statesmen. Through rearrangement of the interior nearly forty per cent. more space than afforded by the old buildings will be available. The principal exterior change will be in the rear of the structure, which will be made of a uniform height. Men are still at work removing the debris and patching up the ruins of the old building.

CLEANER ADVERTISING IN CITY OF WINNIPEG

The Telegram Believes It Pays To Be Decent.

The campaign for cleaner advertising has already been productive of results in Winnipeg. The crusade was opened by The Telegram early in February, and the policy of the paper has been endorsed by the solid merchants in almost every line. Winnipeg, unfortunately, had acquired a reputation for being an easy mark for these salesters, and, therefore, it required drastic action to purify the local advertising copy.

An example of the flagrant and flamboyant advertising in vogue for a number of years was nipped in the bud when The Telegram exposed the Kelly sale of ready-to-wear clothing in the Kensington block. This, it will be remembered, was announced as "the greatestfi biggest, broadest, most unparalleled legitimate and far-reaching clothing event that has ever occurred in Western Canada." The stock, it was claimed, was valued at $72,000, but the stock sheets in the possession of the assignee showed less than $30,000. The Telegram, it will be remembered, engaged an expert in the clothing business with 35 years' experience to his credit, to investigate the so-called bargains, and his report gave the public ample evidence that this sale was not being conducted on proper lines, to say the least. The result of The Telegram's clean-up policy in this particular case is well known to the clothing trade in Winnipeg.

DRIVEN OUT OF TOWN

The week following, a so-called "Doctor," who claimed to cure every ill to which mankind is heir by the use of electricity, was driven out of town.

Then came the exposure through the paper of the methods practiced by a dozen or more palmists, or fortune-tellers, in town, and later on a number of them appeared in the police court and were fined.

The Telegram has continued this protective policy with unrelenting vigor. At the same time it has been obliged to refuse considerable advertising. Only the other day a ready-made clothing firm tendered a page advertisement, which The Telegram refused because it believed the goods advertised were misrepresented.

The next was the investigation of Mitchell & Company's jewelry announcements in the Tribune. W. J. Ryan, inspector at Ottawa of the Gold Stamping act, wired The Telegram that Mitchell & Company's advertisements, published in the Tribune, were contrary to law, and the whole matter has been referred to the proper authorities.

It PAYS TO BE DECENT

When The Telegram announced its policy of standing for clean advertising, it had made its irrevocable decision to live up to its motto—the honest offering of honest goods—no matter what the cost might be.

The Telegram believes it pays to be decent. As a common carrier of advertisements this paper has no favorites, neither does it intend to admit to its thoroughfare any footpads, highwaymen, or robbers of any kind. To its readers and advertisers equally The Telegram owes its existence, and therefore intends to protect them, so far as it may be able, whether in the announcement of a horse trade, jewelry or clothin gbargain or other special sales. The Telegram refuses wittingly to deceive or mislead its readers.

Mr. John Ross Robertson, owner of The Toronto Telegram, is an old-time reporter, and as such has his eye open for good stories. He nailed one on the street car the other day. A soldier in kilts was sitting opposite a man in civilian attire, who observed that his knees must be very cold in the keen weather prevailing. "Not half so cold as your feet," was the sharp rejoinder.

By Purifying the Blood You Get Rid of Pain

Here is the Sworn Statement of a Lady Who Was Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Poison causes pains and aches, tired, languid feelings and derangements of the vital organs of the body. By ridding the human system of poisonous impurities Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure rheumatism, headache, backache and pains through the body and limbs.

As an illustration, we would refer you to the sworn statement of Mrs. Bergland. It is just such experiences as this that has made so many thousands of people enthusiastic about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This is why they are to be found in the great majority of homes.

Mrs. O. Bergland, Dunkirk, Sask., writes:—"I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to all who are suffering from weak kidneys. I suffered from headache and backache, had heart flutterings and my sleep was so broken and unrefreshing that it was with difficulty that I could get any rest. I had rheumatism and always had a heavy feeling in the region of my kidneys. I was nervous and often dizzy. Reading about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills led me to use them, and with the most highly satisfactory results, and I can recommend them to everyone who wants to be cured of kidney troubles."

Mr. W. E. Johnson, Commissioner to take oaths, writes: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Bergland and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Put Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to the test when suffering from torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and you will soon appreciate their value. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

TREE PLEADS FOR NATIONAL THEATRE

Distinguished Actor Says Every Country Needs One.

WELL RECEIVED ON VISIT

Dean of the British Actor Managers Has Been Outspoken in His Comments on the War, and Has Had a Splendid Reception on This Continent—Duty of Theatre.

AS EARNEST of the strong pro-ally feeling which now prevails in America is the cordial reception given across the border within the past few months to Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the dean of English actors. He has been lionized wherever he has gone, and has not hesitated to speak vigorously and fearlessly regarding the war.

Sir Herbert's chief activity, however, in addition to his artistic work, has been his propoganda for his pet desire in life, the furtherance of the national theatre movement in all English-speaking countries. In a recent interview he said:

SIR HERBERT TREE.

"It is strange, by the way, that the English-speaking nations are the only people who do not recognize the necessity of a national theatre. It is to be hoped that the state may turn its attention to this aspect of education, and I notice already a tendency in the universities to devote their consideration to the drama.

"I hope that every English-speaking country will some day have its national theatre. The necessity of a people's theatre will probably not make itself felt to the full extent until the supply shall have created the demand.

"I think that the powers that sway the destinies of the English nations have not realized yet how important to the state is the health and well being of the theatre. They have not yet recognized how potent a factor is the playhouse in shaping the minds of the people and, above all, how greatly influenced young men and women are by what they see when sitting at a play. It is their social education. In the theatre they learn how to behave and sometimes how not to behave. Yet in spite of this neglect by the state the influence of the theatre for good or evil is to-day no less great than that of religion itself. After all, the teaching of Shakespeare is the religion of humanity.

"It is this religion of humanity and of truth that is demanded by most of us to-day.

"There is in the education of today, I am glad to say, a tendency to look at life and death fearlessly by the light of truth. Truth is the most important thing in science and in everyday life."

Trench Torpedoes.

The term "air torpedo" has been indiscriminately applied to various kinds of German projectiles used in trench warfare. There is the large bomb, or mine, containing anything up to 100 pounds of high explosive, which is fired at short range; and there is the aerial torpedo, properly so called, which is driven through the air in the same way as a marine torpedo through water—that is to say, by a motor, and not by the initial propulsion given by an explosive charge. The torpedo used by the German army is believed to be driven by compressed air. The explosion of the air torpedo is most destructive and demoralizing in its effect. At the fighting on the Yser in October, a whole section of a Belgian trench, with its occupants, was blown out of the bank of the Yser canal into the water by one of these projectiles.

He went out to France with the London Rifle Brigade in November, 1914, and has been in and out of the trenches for the past fifteen months.

THE KYTE CHARGES— SIR SAM'S DEFENCE.

The serious charges hurled at the gentlemen who constituted what is known as the Shell Committee, of having been too prolific in their dealings with munition contractors, in which millions of dollars are alleged to have been improperly squandered, are about to be investigated by two of Canada's most eminent Judges, Sir William Meredith and Mr. Justice Duff.

The important and serious feature in these charges of malfeasance of office in the awarding of contracts is that an attempt has been made by Messrs. Kyte and Carvell, M.P.'s, the accusers, to link Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, in the frauds—for such they are if what is alleged to have been done is true.

The Minister of Militia has made a general and positive denial of all that was charged, inferentially or otherwise, against him, and against those with whom he was acting, so far as he was concerned or had any knowledge.

The report of the Minister's speech appeared at length in both the Toronto Mail and The Globe. The Globe's report, however, was a running comment, other than a report of his actual utterance, upon every point to which the Minister called attention and upon which he commented. This mode of dealing with the utterances of the Minister was legitimate enough from an Opposition standpoint, provided, however, that such comments were based upon facts and not distorted. Upon this point our readers shall be the judges. Dealing with the Shell Committee's transaction with Allison the Globe says:

> "Turning to the purported agreement between J. Wesley Allison, Eugene Lignanti and B. F. Yoakum for the division of profits, as read to the House by Mr. Kyte, Sir Sam declared—"I am assured that when the honorable member stood up in his place in this House and professed to read from an agreement he knew there was no such an agreement in existence. He goes on to speak of various companies of which I know nothing." That was the way Sir Sam curtly dismissed one of the most serious of Mr. Kyte's charges."

To charge a member with having "professed to read from an agreement" (providing for a division of profits) when he knew there was no such agreement, is, in the opinion of the Globe, but a "curt dismissal of one of the most serious of Mr. Kyte's charges."

Most readers will pronounce such conduct little less than a criminal violation of all that is right, proper or honest. It would be interesting to learn how judges would treat a lawyer who would pretend to quote from a law book that which it did not contain. Such is what Kyte did in hurling his charges.

That the reader may the better understand what the Minister did say upon this point, we quote from the report of his speech that was published in the Mail. It is as follows:

> The Minister then went on to read from Hansard Mr. Kyte's remarks to show that that member had given the impression that he was reading from agreements in every case when he endeavored to prove that Allison had benefited.
>
> "They say an equivocation is worse than a falsehood," said the Minister. "If the inference from what I have read from Hansard is not that the Richmond member was reading from an agreement I do not understand the English language. (Conservative cheers). Then the Richmond member went on to read a list of commissions which I understand turned the heads of the House of Commons, the figures were so magnificently large—all rainbows. I am assured by my counsel, who has been in New York awaiting my arrival, that he has examined into these, and that not one dollar of this has ever been divided or ever will be divided."
>
> Mr. Kyte had claimed that Allison had benefited from the "Southern rifle deal" to the extent of $625,000. Not one dollar had, as a matter of fact, ever been received by Allison from this deal. The Richmond member had claimed again that Allison had received $175,000 in the other purchase of 140,000 rifles. As a matter of fact Col. Allison had received not one dollar from that.
>
> "And yet a gentleman representing a free constituency in the Dominion of Canada, knowing that he has no data whereon to make these statements stands up here and tells this House and country these abominable misstatements," said the Minister.
>
> Mr. Kyte had gone on to refer to the picric acid contract, and claims that it had paid a commission of $262,500. As a matter of fact not one dollar was ever received for this contract. The House and the country had been told that Allison and his confreres had in this matter pocketed huge sums, but there was not a single particle of truth in that statement.

This style of dealing with charges by Kyte is, in the judgment of the Liberal organ, a "curt" dismissal of them. Had the Globe given to its readers an unbiased and unaltered report of Sir Sam's speech, its readers would have been better able to form a correct opinion of what the Minister did say, and how far he did go in dealing with and denying the charges and insinuations of the twin-Grits, Carvell and Kyte, whose sponsor and godfather has been in these Shell Committee charges—the Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, K.C.M.G., and a number of other titles.

TIME TO CONSIDER.

The politicians are away from Ottawa for the Easter holiday, after several months of communing among themselves in an atmosphere where extreme partizanship is fanned through personal contact of irreconcilables. They will have an opportunity of hearing what the people—their constituents—have to say about the conduct of affairs. They should "Stop, Look and Listen" so that they hear. We believe more of the people are interested in the successful waging of the war on behalf of the Empire than they are bound up in the fortunes of their party. They realize, as the politicians should realize, that the present is a time when partizan strife should be put to one side, for the critical period of the war is not yet at an end. But apart from that, the huge lists of Canadian casualties should arrest the attention of the squabblers and remind them that a political truce is necessary. There is the business of replacing those who have fallen; of binding up the wounds of the suffering, and properly mourning the dead. Are the politicians losing sight of these things? They are, we believe, to an extent that, if not indecent, closely approaches it. The political truce has given place to a sort of "spring drive" of the partizans. The time has come to call a halt.

The politicians should go back to Ottawa with saner and sounder views and a more patriotic perspective. If they go to the Capital after Easter in this frame of mind the lesson of the season will not have been read them in vain.—Montreal Mail.

Current Comment

President Wilson has taken a position from which there is no possibility of receding. The Huns will have to do the receding or take an even more unmerciful licking than he has yet enjoyed.—Montreal Herald.

If a member of your family fell ill, the relatives and the doctor and the nurse and the neighbors might all take a share in getting him well again, and it would be very silly to waste time in enquiring who did the most. Europe is sick, and the world is sick, and everyone who is willing to "do his bit" to restore the health of the patient is welcome.

Mr. Rowell's aim has been to secure the abolition of the liquor evil, and he has given his sincere support to the government that has moved in that direction, even though the legislation of the government is not all it might have been. Mr. Rowell has played the part of a statesman rather than that of a politician.—Ottawa Free Press. But he is not averse to sliding into power on a temperance plank when the momentum is sufficient to reach his goal.

The commission formed to organize the resources of Ontario is remarkable in its composition. It is headed by the Lieutenant Governor. It includes the Prime Minister, the leader of the Opposition, several members of the Government, and members of the Legislature on both sides of politics. If anything can be effected by the co-operation of the two parties, it ought to be done by this commission.—Toronto Star.

The German plotters who planned to make raids on towns on the Canadian shores of the Great Lakes by means of motorboats armed with machine guns, really contemplated murder. Such forays could result in no possible military advantage, which probably was one of the reasons why Count von Bernstorff frowned on the idea. Anyway, the raiders would have had a hot reception had they ventured to attack any point of even minor importance. The military authorities have all along been prepared for such mad schemes.—Montreal Gazette.

The Poets' Corner

"AYMEZ LOYAULTE."

(By Charles Ewart Butler.)

Who that loves his Native Land
  Will shrink in danger's hour
Boldly in her defence to stand
  And bravely shield her power?

Who that loves his Liberty,
  Saved by his valiant sires,
Can sell his soul to tyranny,
  While that his heart inspires?

Who that loves his peaceful Home,
  If enemies draw nigh
Can fail to meet them, when they come,
  By sea or land or sky?

Who that loves his Honor best
  Of all the world contains
Will suffer lying foes to rest
  Secure with stolen gains?

Who that loves the glorious Name,
  His proud inheritance,
Can ever hide his head in shame
  When hostile ranks advance?

England! now summon all thy sons
  To join the noble fight!
Disown the cowardice that shuns
  Thy loyalty to Right!

FOREST PROTECTION IN CANADA

According to press reports, Sweden proposes to cut off the export of chemical pulp to Great Britain. Naturally, all eyes are immediately turned to Canada to supply the threatened deficiency.

The Commission of Conservation has just issued a report on "Forest Protection in Canada, 1913-1914", which is of particular interest in this connection. It contains much information respecting the work of the provincial forest services and of the federal department intrusted with the care of our forests.

Forest fire protection is assuming a large place in public attention. It is obvious that, if Canada is to continue as a wood-producing country, she must conserve her resources of this natural product. The report treats exhaustively of the fire protection of forest lands along railway right-of-way. Through co-operative action, great headway has been made losses through fires traceable to railway causes.

The forests of British Columbia and on Dominion lands in the West have been dealt with in reports containing the results of special studies conducted by Dr. C. D. Howe and Mr. J. H. White. The Trent watershed in Ontario, has also received especial attention, in a report of an investigation by Dr. C. D. Howe in the townships of Burleigh and Methuen. This district is important in that, while of very little value as an agricultural area, it is being repeatedly overrun by forest fires and the little remaining merchantable timber destroyed. It is suggested that the area be placed under the control of the Dominion Forestry Branch for protection from fires and for reforestation.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price, $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Preemption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territories, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal sub-divisions of sections and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

Deputy Minister of the Interior.

MORE ABOUT THE "MASTER BANDIT."

By Harry H. Dunn

Readers of the "Wide World" will probably remember the startling story of the career of Emiliano Zapata, the notorious Mexican bandit, published in these columns in September, 1912, and the scarcely less amazing development which followed a month later, when Mr. Dunn, the author, was expelled from Mexico by the Madero Government on charges of having written the story. Zapata is, to-day, even stronger than he was when the "Master Bandit" was published, and he has changed from a bandit-rebel to a sort of millionaire Robin Hood who, while laying up a fortune for himself, has distributed ten thousand square miles of land to the poor of the section of Mexico which he controls. He has named two Presidents of Mexico, his agents have been Ministers in two Mexican Cabinets, and he has defeated two considerable armies sent against him. Besides this he has collected toll from the Government of Mexico at the rate of 150,000 pesos a day for weeks at a time. The "Master Bandit" is now in control of nearly twice as much territory as he was when the famous story was written about him in 1912, has three times been in possession of the capital of Mexico, controls a port on the Pacific side of the southern republic, and has more than a million dollars in cash in the banks of the United States. Mr. Dunn has visited Mexico since his expulsion by Madero, and while there collected the data and the photographs used in the following article descriptive of Emiliano Zapata's amazing career during the past three years. "I have gathered my facts from reliable sources," the author writes, "and every word of the article

CHAPTER I.

The Great Eearthquake

The city of Lisbon, always beautiful was never more beautiful than on that fateful Tuesday, November 1, 1775, when the great earthquake came.

The sun flooded the bay with showers of gold; the spires of the town stood up as fair as ever.

The blue haze of an autumn day, in a climate where there is little or no winter, had coaxed even the invalids out of doors; and the streets were full of vehicles, carrying pleasure-seekers to and fro.

The bay was crowded with shipping. Two men-of-war, easily distinguished among the smaller craft by their trim rigging and exactly crossed yards, lay near the new marble quay, just completed; already a popular resort for fashionables and unfashionables to gather of an afternoon and listen to the playing of the bands.

In the midst of this peace and pleasure came a low rumbling, jarring sound. The windows rattled; horses stood still, snorting and trembling, refusing to move further.

Every one gazed in the face of his neighbor, growing pale—he knew not why; and then, as the tremor ceased, people laughed uneasily and said to each other that it aws "nothing, after all."

But still the horses refused to budge when whipped up.

Then came another grumble, which rose to a roar. The tremor was renewed, and became a swaying to and fro. Men and women staggered like drunkards; and in the midst of it all, the tower of the church of San Lorenzo, was seen to be tottering to its fall over the square of the same name.

People came running from the houses in every street, frantic with fear, making instinctively for some open place. The square was the nearest; and as the tower was beheld shaking, a bitter cry rose from the crowd.

Some tried to flee, but their limbs refused to sustain them on the heaving earth, which added a dizzy sickness to their misery and fear.

Then—crash!

The great tower, two hundred and eighty feet high, fell into the square, crushing hundreds. The heaving became a succession of waves. Hills rose and valleys sank where all had been level.

Then came a shock, more violent than before, and the rattle of falling buildings echoed through the doomed city.

People ran as fast as they could toward the river, with the instinct of hunted animals to seek the water. Selfishness ruled the hour, and men struck fiercely at women and children if the poor things got in the way.

In the midst of the crowd, near the square, stood a carriage. The panic-stricken horses had refused to stir. In the carriage sat two ladies, with babies in their arms. They were both richly dressed, but both had been abandoned, in that hour, by their nurses. All distinctions of rank were lost, and they only remembered that their babies were crying and that they must hush them. Then came a lull in the tremor of the ground, and both mothers sprung out of the carriage and began to run with the crowd.

As they did so, one said hastily to the other, in English:

"Keep up your courage, Marie. If you give way we shall never escape."

The other, who was nearly fainting, gasped:

"Oh, mon Dieu! Nous sommes pardus!" (Oh, my God! We are lost!)

"No, we are not lost!" retorted the first, who seemed to have courage in spite of the terrible commotion. "Only don't drop down. Keep on your feet, whatever happens, and hold fast to the baby!"

Then they began to run in the crowd, where all seemed frantic with fear.

Neither noticed that a man in sailor dress, with a face whose redness and dazed expression, showed that he was drunk, was following them in the crowd.

Out in the harbor, by the pier, the two men-of-war were a scene of hurry and confusion.

Their anchors were down; their officers shouting hoarse orders as they prepared to get the ships out to sea.

One was English, the other French.

In the midst of the commotion, the captain of the English ship heard a voice hailing him from a boat shooting past:

"Guy! Guy! vere are you?"

The English captain uttered a fervent "Thank God!" under his breath! for he recognized the voice and foreign accent.

The man in the boat, who wore a uniform, was waving his hand from the stern of the boat, as it passed the frigate, and called out in French: "I will save them. Be not afraid!"

The English captain waved his hand in reply, but his face was as pale as that of a corpse. His wife and child, and that of the French officer, were both ashore, and he dared not leave his duty to save them. Then, as the boat glided towards the quay, the English captain gave a shrug to his shoulders, as if to control the nervous shudder he could not avoid, and turned his attention to his own ship, resolutely repressing every feeling but that of strict duty.

At the moment the first rumble of the earthquake began, a small, half-decked craft, with a single mast, supporting a huge lateen sail, was floating not far from the pier, her crew of three men trying to propel her from the vicinity by means of clumsy sweeps.

When the first tremor came, it was not noticed on the water; but the sailors heard the rumbling sound; and the captain—a big, swarthy young fellow, with keen black eyes, and huge side-whiskers—rested on his oar a moment, to look round and say, in Spanish:

"That thunder ougnt to give us wind, boys." The next minute the shock came up through the water, like a blow, and the captain turned a shade paler through his bronze, and muttered in a voice of apprehension:

"Mother of Heaven! It is an earthquake! Pull your best for the open sea! God help us all! Pull, I say!"

The words, 'the earthquake," were enough for the two Spaniards who composed the crew, when they heard them. They bent to their oars with all their might, and the boat began to move through the water.

They were leaving the pier rapidly, when the three men felt a sudden sinking, as if the boat were going down. The water seemed to draw from under them, and then they were swept out to sea, with a rush, as fast as a horse could have galloped, the sensation of sinking growing stronger every moment.

Two of the men, who were pulling, dropped their oars and fell on their knees, in the instinct of man when he can do nothing more, raising their hands to Heaven, and praying wildly for mercy.

The captain, on the other hand, turned his face towards them, and snarled fiercely:

"Get your oars, you fools! The saints can't stop the earthquake! Get to your oars!"

The next minute he himself was hurled from his place by a violent shock, and the men raised a shriek of terror. Their nerves were completely unstrung by what had just happened.

The boat was high and dry on the bottom of the bay, and they could see the water rushing out to sea, as if it were being sucked up by some strange monster, revealing the ground, jagged with rocks and interspersed with pools of mud.

But the dauntless captain did not give way. He rose from the place where he had been thrown, and called to his panic-stricken men:

"Get to your oars! Look there!"

He pointed to the retiring wave. It had paused in its course, and was stationary, while a great wall of water was beginning to curl over at the top, as if contending forces were struggling for the mastery.

The trembling sailors obeyed him instinctively; but it seemed useless to hold an oar in the face of such a peril.

The wall of water curled over, and the wave came racing back; but the cool and heroic captain had not held his post in vain. In front of the great wave came a lower one, and, as it neared the Spaniards, it caught up their little craft, and swept it inland again.

A great cloud of dust had arisen from the ruins of the doomed city, and hung over the harbor, like a pall. Everything was dark; but a flash of lightning shot through the cloud.

By the light of that flash they saw a strange scene.

They were close to the great marble pier, and the bottom of the bay was clearly visible, all around it, while the pier itself was rising in the air; the rocks rending beneath it as it rose, with loud thundering reports.

The stately frigates lay helpless on their sides by the foot of the pier; and the wave, on which the Spanish boat hung, seemed to pause a moment before it completed its work.

Then something seemed to give way and down went the marble pier, the pride of Lisbon into the midst of a

Made in Canada.

The wall of water, that had been following the boat, suddenly seemed to sink beneath it; the little craft was hurled high in the air, tossed about on the great billows like a feather, and then—

How or where, the confusion first ceased, they knew not, but the earthquake was over, and they floated in the midst of the dark dust-cloud, on a wilderness of waters, alone.

Almost ere this end was assured, the dauntless catain of the Spanish boat was up in the bows, peering through the darkness for anything that might be floating.

Then he gave a shout:

"I knew it! I knew it! Pull hard!"

Within a minute from his cry, he was hauling into the boat, by the aid of a boat hook, a great sheet of cork, to which something was lashed.

What it was appeared from his surprised exclamation:

"Mother of Heaven! Two children!"

A low, strangled cry from one of the infants proved that it was alive—the only creatures that had been saved from the wreck.

The Lisbon earthquake lasted eight minutes by the clock. Sixty thousand people were swallowed up, the city reduced to a heap of smoking ruins: all in that brief space of time.

Over the place where the great marble peer had stood, a hundred fathoms of water rolled their troubled waves, stained with red mud; the dust-cloud brooding over the scene of desolation like some evil angel of death that gave up no secrets.

Of all the people on the pier, of the goods piled in the marble pavement, of the ships dragged by their anchors down into the black gulf, nothing came up again.

There they lie, buried in the bowels of the earth, never to be given to the light of day till another earthquake restores the victims of the first.

But the Spanish captain, as he gazed at the two infants, repeated to himself:

"God has given me the children of the earthquake!"

CHAPTERR II.

An English Castle-Home.

The news of the great earthquake thrilled all Europe, though it was weeks before the tidings reached any other country; but the great convulsion of nature, which had culminated there, had not left other places unvisited.

The lakes of Scotland rose several feet above their usual level, and sank below it, with great agitation; the hot springs of Brunnen, in Germany, dried up and then gushed out again with violence; the coast of far Massachusetts was shaken violently, windows rattled for days together, and a tidal wave, twenty feet in height, rolled along the whole Atlantic coast of America.

Only in England no disturbance was felt, and therefore it was that an exclamation of surprise and horror came from the lips of Lord Warwick as he opened his "News-Letters" from London—the substitute in those times for our great dailies—at the breakfast table.

Lord Warwick was a tall, handsome man of fifty, with the clear-cut feature, rather fierce blue eyes, haughty expression, and active frame of an English nobleman of high blood, in those days, hardened by a life of field sport.

The breakfast-table was laid in a pleasant room in "Guy's Tower."

This tower, dating from six centuries before, rose a hundred and twenty-eight feet in the air over the tops of huge trees, that would have been giants anywhere else, but which looked dwarfed at the foot of the great pile of Norman masonry, near the summit of which the earl chose to take his morning meal.

From the window, which let in a flood of light through its variously stained panes, the sun cast rainbow hues over the sonwy cloth and flecked the nose of my lord's valet, who waited at the table.

As for the earl himself, he sat in the only place where there was a white pane, through which he could see miles and miles of fields, brown, for it was late in November, and the fields bare, while the red spots which could be seen here and there in the lanscape would, in a glass, have resolved themselves into gentlemen in red coats coming towards the castle, where there was to be a meet of the fox-hounds that day to hunt the earl's favorite coverts.

The breakfast of this nobleman, who was worth about twenty-five thousand pounds a year, was as simple as that of an anchorite; for the earl was afraid of getting fat too early, and he was going to hunt that morning.

But he never neglected the news-letter, which only came once in a week, and he was anxious to finish it before the guests of the hunt arrived.

The first glance made him drop the fork, which he had been holding in the other hand, and exclaim, in an undertone:

"Good heaven! Why, Guy must have been near there!"

Then he stopped short, and eagerly ran his eye over the account—the first published in England—of the great London earthquake, muttering comments as he went, breathing short as he seemed to be hunting for something he almost expected to find there.

At last he turned to his valet, to ask:

"Matthew, when did Lord Neville say his ship would be on the coast of Portugal?"

The valet whose business was never to be surprised at anything his master said or did, was yet, for a moment, confused; but he put his hand to his forehead, and replied, after some hesitation:

"It seems to me, my lord—yes, I remember now—his lordship said about the beginning of November they were going to Lisbon, if they didn't meet no French on the way."

The earl had been listening, and his face fell as the recollection of the servant confirmed his own. The ship referred to was the Boadicea frigate, commanded by his only son, Lord Neville.

Just then the cheery call of the huntsman, in the court below, came up to the breakfast-room, and the earl exclaimed, irritably:

"Confound it, Matthew! go and tell that fool of a Tom White to hold his tongue. I shall not hunt to-day."

This time Matthew was sorely put to it not to exhibit any surprise, for such a thing had never been known as the sporting Earl of Warwick to stay at home on a glorious hunting morning like the one that was shining outside.

"Not hunt, my lord!" he actually said.

Then he blushed up to his eyes at the solecism he had committed, and added:

"I beg a thousand pardons, my lord. I—I didn't mean to. I'll go and tell 'em, my lord."

And he was going out, when the earl said, in a quiet, grave tone of voice:

"Stop a minute, Matthew. There must be some one to tell the gentlemen why the hunt is put off. Tell them that there has been a great earthquake at Lisbon, and that sixty thousand people have been killed, while several men-of-war have been buried under a hundred fathoms of water by the pier. Tell them that till I know whether my son's ship was there, I am in no mood to hunt, or anything else."

Matthew listened respectfully, and made no comment, for he had recovered his coolness and his command of the muscles of his face. He simply bowed, and said:

"Very good, my lord."

The door was opened, and he was going, when the earl went on, in an agitated voice:

"Don't let any one come here, Matthew, unless it is some one who has news from Lisbon. No matter who that is, let him up, but no one else."

Then he sank back in his chair by the untasted breakfast, and covered his face with his hands, while a bitter groan burst from him.

"The last of the Nevilles! The old house must go down at last, for I am too old to have another heir now, even if I had time to marry."

That was the bitterest drop in his cup at this moment. He had lost not only his son—for he had no doubt that the Boadicea was the English ship that was destroyed at Lisbon—but in that son the only hope of handing down the title of the earldom to a "Neville of the old stock."

Guy had been his only son; and the next heir to the earldom was a cousin of the name of Seymour, whom he hated bitterly, being as unlike his own frank and hearty character as could be imagined.

Guy Neville, Earl of Warwick, was a bluff, outspoken man of his word. Oliver Seymour, his cousin, was a silent, self-contained man of business, who never let his secrets escape him, and had disgraced his family, in their estimation, by "going into trade."

The one was an aristocratic to the tips of his fingers; the other, a cautious hard-fisted tradesman, who never spent a penny if he could help it, when he might have led the most delightful of lives—that of an English country gentleman.

FARM AND GARDEN

NECESSARY TO SUCCESS IN CO-OPERATION

We have attempted in articles recently published to start more of our readers thinking on agricultural cooperation and its bearing upon the future of agriculture in this country. The farmer's business is a manufacturing business and he is naturally first interested in the sale of his products to best advantage. He is interested also in economy of production and so desires to buy supplies reasonably cheap. He cannot, acting individually, make the success of agriculture that should be attained in this young, agricultural country. Organization is his only salvation.

We are not going into the details of organization. These may be had from other associations nearby, from the Central of the United Farmers of Ontario, or from the Co-operation and Markets' Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. They have been published many times. There are a few essentials to permanent success which must not be overlooked.

First of all after the meeting for organization the men composing the association, club, society, or whatever it is called, should be voted in on the recommendation of neighbors of known integrity and who are members of the association. The Board of Directors should be alert, honest, business farmers and the manager the best man available. Cheap managers mean failure. The man that can do the work of a flourishing Co-operative association is worth the good pay which he earns.

But this is not what we wanted to especially bring out at this time. We desired to emphasize the importance of having a place to do business—a warehouse and office. Not long ago a reader cited the cast while in conversation in this office, of a farmers' organization which had done considerable business in his particular locality and mentioned, in particular, a carload of cedar posts which had been brought in by the association. The enterprise was entirely successful but two members of the association had to lose a whole day dispensing these posts to the neighbors, who came in from time to time all day for them. This loss of time was a drawback and only serves to show the necessity of a warehouse in which and from which to carry on the business of the association. Goods must be bought and sold in large quantities to make the business pay as it should. A warehouse necessitates that someone be in charge and until such arrangements are made no local organization can mean to the surrounding community what it should mean.

We believe in getting prices for goods bought and produce sold through the association at such a level that a fair profit accrues to the association to be divided according to business done through the organization—by each member. Of course, a fair rate of interest must first be paid those who put up the necessary funds to finance the proposition. Some pay six per cent. After that, profits are divided according to business done.

Something must be done in framing the constitution and bylaws of the organization to make it safe that the people who create the profits ultimately get them and are able to control them. To do this the principle of one man one vote should be adhered to and at meetings of the shareholders no proxies should be allowed. No one man or group of men can then control the business by exercising a vote for each share held or by collecting a bunch of proxies to swing any important question as desired. It resolves itself, by the one-man-one-vote system, into government of the association affairs by the members for the members.

Then, pick and choose members carefully; select the best manager available; plan to build, equip and maintain suitable warehouse and office, preferably where interswitching facilities are available; put the business on a one-man-one-vote basis; allow no proxies and success will surely follow.—Farmer's Advocate.

TELEPHONE CONGRATULATIONS TO TRAFFIC CLUB PRESIDENT OVER 2,500 MILES OF WIRE.

Mr. F. L. Bateman was elected a few days ago to the Presidency of the Chicago Traffic Club. The new president of this important organization was in the Transportation Club at San Francisco when six hundred of his fellow club members met in Chicago at their annual dinner to do [illegible] honor. It was arranged to give him the news of his election by transcontinental telephone, and accordingly telephone receivers were placed at the dinner tables for the use of each guest. Mr. Fred Zimmerman, retiring President of the Club, conveyed the congratulations of the members over 2,500 miles of wire, and each person in the banquet hall heard distinctly this valedictory and the address of acceptance by Mr. Bateman. The Chicago Traffic Club warmly congratulated Mr. William E. Bell, division commercial superintendent of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company—a brother of Mr. G. T. Bell, Passenger Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway System—on this wonderful demonstration of the efficiency of the transcontinental telephone.

Production and Thrift

"GAIN or no gain the cause before the farmers of Canada is as clear as it was last year—they must produce abundantly in order to meet the demands that may be made, and I believe this to be especially true in regard to live stock, the world's supply of which must be particularly affected in this vast struggle."—HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

THE FOLLOWING STATEMENTS ARE BASED ON REPORTS CONTAINED IN "THE AGRICULTURAL WAR BOOK, 1916," PUBLISHED BY THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, OTTAWA, ONT.

LIVE STOCK—The herds and flocks of Europe have been greatly reduced. When the war is over there will be a great demand for breeding stock. Canadian farmers should keep this in mind.

MEATS—In 1915 Great Britain imported 664,508 tons of beef, mutton and lamb, of which 364,245 tons came from without the Empire. Out of 430,420 tons of beef only 104,967 tons came from within the Empire.

The demands of the Allies for frozen beef, canned beef, bacon and hams will increase rather than diminish. Orders are coming to Canada. The decreasing tonnage space available will give Canada an advantage if we have the supplies.

DAIRYING—Home consumption of milk, butter and cheese has increased of late years. The war demands for cheese have been unlimited. The Canadian cheese exports from Montreal in 1915 were nearly $6,500,000 over 1914. Prices at Montreal—Cheese: January 1915, 15¼ to 17 cents; January 1916, 18¼ to 18½ cents. Butter: January 1915, 24 to 28¾ cents; January 1916, 32 to 33 cents.

EGGS—Canada produced $30,000,000 worth of eggs in 1915 and helped out Great Britain in the shortage. Shippers as well as producers have a duty and an opportunity in holding a place in that market.

WRITE TO THE DOMINION DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND TO YOUR PROVINCIAL DEPARTMENT FOR BULLETINS ON THESE SUBJECTS

Tens of thousands of Canada's food producers have enlisted and gone to the front. It is only fair to them that their home work shall be kept up as far as possible. The Empire needs all the food that we can produce in 1916.

ASQUITH MADE ZUPPELI QUIT

Reactionary Italian War Minister Forced to Retire.

REFUSED AID IN BALKANS

Member of Salandra Cabinet Who Failed to Give Adequate Assistance to French and English Troops at Salonica Resigns After British Premier's Visit to Rome.

ITALY'S failure to co-ordinate her military program with that of her allies brought about the enforced resignation of General Zuppeli, Italian Minister of War, according to reports received in Geneva recently.

It was pointed out to the Italian representatives at the Paris conference that Italy's failure to participate in the Balkan campaign had cost her allies heavily.

Zuppeli's downfall followed Premier Asquith's visit to Rome, and his conference with King Victor Emmanuel at the front.

GENERAL ZUPPELI.

General Zuppeli belongs to that section of the Italian administration which entered the war only when popular feeling demanded it, and has maintained more or less the position of the bulk of Italian aristocrats that the country is doing a great deal for the allied cause by merely staying out of the triple alliance. Along this same line they feel that the Italian campaign against Austria is a sufficient reason to secure for Italy favorable consideration from the Allies when the time comes to make a redistribution of Mediterranean territory.

The request of the Allies that Italy participate in the Balkan operations was looked upon as too great a demand, and several members of the Italian Cabinet held back. It required a visit from Premier Asquith to bring about a better condition, and incidentally it spelled the retirement of the reactionary Zuppeli.

A Wonderful City in Galicia.

In Galicia there is one of the most remarkable underground cities in the world. It has a population of over 1,000 men, women, and children, most of whom have never seen the light of day. It is known as the City of the Salt Mines, and is situated several hundred feet below the earth's surface. There, there is the greatest salt mine in the world, and though it has been mined for many generations, the supply seems inexhaustible. The city has its town hall, church, theatre, and assembly room, all made from the crystalized rock salt. It has long wide streets and big squares lighted with electricity. There are numerous instances of families in this underground city where not a single individual in three or four generations has seen the sun.

Mr. Kipling's Bereavement.

Among the multitude of domestic calamities inflicted on the nation by the war, the loss of Mr. Rudyard Kipling's son makes a singular appeal for sympathy (says one London correspondent). This is the third family bereavement in recent years that the famous author has had to endure. He was himself almost at death's door when the news had to be broken to him that his six-year-old daughter Josephine had been taken from him. In 1910 he lost his mother, and a few months later his father also passed away. Mr. John Kipling, who is "missing, believed killed," was a promising lad of eighteen. He was a year younger than his sister Elsie, now her parents' only child.

Whimperers and Chatham.

Whimperers at Mr. Asquith are given to exclaiming, "Oh, for a Chatham!" But they forget how the little men whimpered round Chatham himself until victory had come. Chatham did not forget it. Speaking in the House of Commons in November, 1759, in reply to congratulations upon Quebec, he used these words: "Not a week all summer but has been a crisis, in which I have not known whether I should not be torn to pieces, instead of being commended as now by the honorable member. . . . Success has given us unanimity, not unanimity success."

She Experienced German Atrocities

THE Marquise de Gozdawa, wife of a Polish agricultural scientist, has just reached America, after having spent some eighteen months in Poland. She saw the Russian retreat, and lived through the horrors of the German occupation in Suwalki, a town of about 30,000 inhabitants. She speaks in the strongest terms of the brutality and cruelty of the Germans, and as an eye-witness well known before her marriage in the United States, her testimony must be considered important. Her husband having been summoned from home to attend to some important work for the Russian Government, she concluded to remain at home, her house being one of the largest in the town, with her three children and a couple of servants. At that time she had no fear of a German invasion, and when it came she was unable to escape, since she was nursing a couple of her children who were ill with typhus.

She described the first sign of a German helmet down the street, the soldier evidently being on the lookout for snipers. Then an officer appeared, and as soon as he was in sight a Jewess walked out to him and handed over a bundle of papers, which contained full information about the people in the town. She was a spy. The marquise's house was occupied by German officers, and they lived with her for months, for the battle-front was only a few miles away, and the sound of the guns was for ever in her ears. For three or four days von Hindenburg was one of her "guests." The marquise says that he is just like his portraits, and his talk was either about what he had done or what he was going to do. He was considered to be absolutely careless of losses inflicted upon his own armies so long as they captured positions determined upon.

The marquise always wore her Red Cross uniform, and the fact that she insisted upon her American citizenship, and that she was known to be nursing children who had a communicable disease, enabled her to keep the German officers who swarmed about the house at a distance. On one occasion she was able to report an act of kindness. They had been drinking wine, and as she passed an officer poured her out a drink. She transferred it to a small bottle, saying that she would keep it for her children. Whereupon the officer presented her with a whole bottle, which she was allowed to carry away. The worst of the officers was the doctor. The marquise appealed to him to treat the finger of her little boy, which had been crushed. He refused until she paid him 30 marks in gold. She protested that the Germans had already taken about everything she possessed, but nevertheless she scraped up the money. Then the doctor took the child's hand in his, and without giving him anything to dull the pain, cut off the finger-nail and part of the flesh. He left the hand raw and bleeding, remarking that as the mother was a nurse she could attend the injury herself.

The same doctor stole the maid of the marquise, and when the mistress protested to the commandant he said that the girl belonged to the soldiers, and could give her no redress. He did, however, punish a woman who had been a party to the abduction, but refrained from disciplining the doctor because he was an officer. Later on this same brutal doctor was sent to attend the Russian prisoners, the Germans refusing to allow him to look after their own wounded. One of his colleagues permitted a Russian to die of gangrene because he was somewhat dilatory in raising the money that the doctor demanded before he would perform an operation. The patient had to send to friends to beg assistance, but as the marquise observes, "gangrene will not wait," and he had died before the money was available to satisfy the German doctor. These patients, she says, were not fed by the Germans, and would have starved to death if it had not been for the people of the town, who out of their own meagre stores supplied the wounded and imprisoned Russians.

Drunkenness was common among the Germans, both officers and men. When news of the Lusitania murders was received there was a regular orgy, and there was champagne and schnapps for all who could drink, which seems to have included all the Germans in the neighborhood. The marquise witnessed many scenes of brutality on the part of the Germans to their prisoners. She saw the Russians hitched to guns and wagons in order that the German horses might be spared. One of these almost famished peasants was offered a loaf of bread by a child. One of the Germans knocked the bread out of his hands. It fell in the mud, and as he stooped for it, the guard kicked him in the mouth, knocking out several teeth. Many prisoners were butchered in cold blood, and they were perhaps the happiest. On her way home in Berlin the marquise was attacked by a mob of women, who would have torn her to pieces had not an officer intervened. When she explained that she was not English, but American, they said it was just as bad.

Smokes for Soldiers.

The French Line steamship Rochambeau, which sailed a few days ago from New York for Bordeaux, has on board 42,000 pounds of smoking tobacco, 2,500,000 cigarettes, and 422 gross of corn cob pipes, which will be distributed among the soldiers of Great Britain and France, in France and Belgium. The consignment is in charge of Mrs. George W. Lopp, who, since early in the war has been devoting all her time to the collection of tobacco and pipes for the men in the allied trenches.

A PERPLEXING PERSON

SIR EDWARD GREY IS AN ENIGMA TO THOSE ABOUT HIM.

British Foreign Minister Always Has Something in Reserve for an Emergency, and He Cannot Only Make Up His Own Mind, but Also the Minds of Other People—Patient With Neutrals.

THERE is this about Sir Edward Grey—that he always has something in reserve for an emergency. That is what makes him, or helps make him, one of the most perplexing personalities in a perplexing Ministry. It makes him also a very interesting study, says G. W. Smalley in a recent article. I have tried several times to sketch him. There are salient features and traits which do not change; which are individual, permanent, indestructible. At whatever angle you see the face it is clear cut, eagle-like; the face of a man, in these days inestimable, who is capable of making up his mind and of making up other people's minds. And yet before my sketch is a week or a month old I want to tear it up and begin again; as I am doing now.

I suppose there may be, at the moment and for the moment, in America a certain regret, or perhaps resentment, at Sir Edward Grey's new attitude and new firmness of speech. It is not a point I am going to argue, but I should like to make two remarks: First, what would you think of a British Minister who in a controversy with any other Power did not fly the British flag and nail it to the mast? Second, it is not disputed in America that Sir Edward Grey's diplomacy with the United States has been patient in tone and conciliatory in matters not vital to the defence of British policy. What sort of thanks did he get for it from us? We have kept on saying: "Yes, but polite speeches are not what we are after. Deliver the goods."

It was an answer which showed two sides of us. We have our own standard of diplomatic punctilio, which diplomatists bred in European traditions sometimes think a little abrupt. We have also a respect for results. It is results we want. I put that to you as a curt summary of a European view which has perhaps been expressed too freely in the European press. I need it as a background for what I am going to say of the Sir Edward Grey whose unexpected attitude in a recent speech captivated the House of Commons.

It is the fashion, except in Germany, to think or speak of Sir Edward Grey as an apostle of peace. But there have been very sharp curves in his career. The sharpest of all was on that memorable night of August 3, 1914, when he stated to the House of Commons what he had done and tried to do for peace. He had shrunk from no step. Since the tragedy at Sarajevo he had intervened at each moment. He had appealed to Germany, to Austria, and, after she had avowed herself the champion of Serb interests—to Russia. He had exhausted every means. Long after it had become plain that Germany was resolved on war and that Austria was only the pretext and tool, he persevered. He had secured an agreement for France to respect the neutrality of Belgium, shattering at a blow Germany's sole pretext for violating it. Not till Germany made her "infamous proposal" to England to join with her in trampling on the freedom of Belgium, which both had sworn to protect, did Grey desist.

The history of his unremitting efforts to keep on terms with the Neutral Powers in respect of blockade might be written in much the same way. He has borne much and asked his country to bear much. There grew up in England a feeling that his concessions to America went too far and yet bore no fruit. A suggestion was sometimes heard from the United States that we had only to press a point and Grey would give in, a suggestion which did him injustice and was injurious to us both. But here again comes in the personal element. Long before the war began or was thought unavoidable, Sir Edward Grey had accustomed himself to approach questions affecting belligerents and neutrals from the neutral point of view. During all the negotiations which brought about that unhappy Declaration of London, he conceived of England as a Neutral Power. On that theory was that Declaration framed. The House of Lords, with the broad patriotism which often distinguished it in foreign affairs, had rejected it. On what theory the Government revived it and by an Order-in-Council declared it, with specified exceptions, in force, has never been explained. I rather imagine the only explanation is psychological. Even in a war which Grey was for conducting to a complete victory, the ghosts of his theories of neutrality still hovered about.

Is it then a wonder that he was accused of crippling the Navy? He denied it. He was expected to devote his speech of Wednesday to clearing himself of that charge. He touched on it, denied it again, explained certain incidents and reaffirmed the solidarity existing between the Navy and the Foreign Office, Mr. Balfour, as First Lord of the Admiralty, sitting by and applauding sentence by sentence. All this was prettily stage-managed, but not quite convincing. Sir Edward must have felt he was making little headway. I touch on the debate only so far as it helps explain Sir Edward, who is perhaps at this moment better worth understanding than anybody else, since it is he with whom we are first of all in contact; and he who holds in his hands as Foreign Minister the conduct of the discussion which Mr. Wilson never ceases to press and press and press upon England in her death-struggle with the Central Powers.

SAILORS DREAD JONAHS.

They Draw Only One Moral From the Biblical Story.

There is still firm belief in Jonahs at sea. Recently a sailor, who was prosecuted for failing to join a British admiralty transport, pleaded in excuse that he was known to seamen generally as Jonah, and that the sailors on the transport had threatened to throw him overboard if he did join.

Certainly if superstition ever could be rational, they had some reason for theirs. This sailor had served on the Titanic and the Empress of Ireland, both of which were wrecked, and on the Lusitania and Florizan, both of which were torpedoed.

It seems a pity that sailors should know the story of the prophet Jonah, since they get only one moral from it. The book was certainly not written to instruct seamen how to deal with Jonahs.

Yet it is unfortunately the only moral which sailors seem to draw. Jonah is probably the character best known to them in the Old Testament, and what they know about him is that he caused bad weather through his own fault, and was very properly dealt with by his fellow voyagers. They forgot, if they ever knew, that the sailors cast lots to discover who was the cause of the bad weather and that lot fell upon Jonah.

The Jonahs of modern times are not discovered by such means, nor do they ask to be thrown overboard. They are assumed to be Jonahs because they have been uncommonly unfortunate. Perhaps they are pitied as well as shunned for their misfortune, but have done something to deserve them, and then the superstitious fear of their fellows becomes cruel.

The worst of it is that a Jonah may himself share the superstition and may be unnerved by the thought that he is marked out for misfortune.

But even landsmen who believe themselves free of superstition are apt to be intimidated by a run of ill luck. It unnerves them, and the wisest of us, if unnerved, are prone to superstition.

If there were no such tale in the Bible, sailors would believe in Jonahs under another name or under no name at all. They would think that there was some reason for a run of ill luck and that it must continue unless by some means the curse, whatever it may be, is removed.

The worst of superstitious tales is that they are often true, that men do have extraordinary runs of ill luck in life as at cards. The superstition lies in the conclusions that are drawn from them. For in life as in cards a run of ill luck is against the average, and sooner or later the average will right itself.

Superstition always suggests that there is something wrong. That is the devilish cunning of our animal fears, and the only way to frustrate it is to be against superstition altogether, in small things as in great—in fact, to cultivate an almost irrational unbelief in all superstitious tales.

We need to be almost superstitious in our fear of superstition, as a reformed drunkard needs to avoid wine.

Romance of Modern Explosives.

To Sir Frederick Abel, then Mr. Abel, was due the solution of the problem which had so persistently baffled the efforts of his predecessors and contemporaries—that is, a process for the purification of gun-cotton. Indeed, its utility as a disruptive agent may be said to date from Sir Frederick's discovery in 1865, a discovery by which gun-cotton is thoroughly purified, and the material converted into thoroughly compact homogeneous masses.

Cordite is much more powerful than gun-cotton, and is composed of nitro-glycerine, gun-cotton, and vaseline, which are dissolved by so many parts of acetone. These, says Chambers' Journal, are mixed together until they form a soft, putty-like paste. It is then forced through holes in a metal plate, and emerges in long strings, whence its name "cordite" comes. A smokeless powder, cordite is commonly used in firing our big guns.

Lyddite is probably the most powerful explosive known to man. It is largely composed of one of the derivatives of coal-tar, namely, picric acid. To convert and develop the explosive properties of this new discovery to the purposes of war was only a matter of time and experiment for the expert chemists. They did not labor in vain, for they found that by melting the picric acid crystals until they turned into a fluid of the consistency of cream, and then combining this fluid with gun-cotton melted in alcohol, they got an explosive more terrifying and tremendous in its destructive powers than anything else known before or since.

More Boy Babies Born.

The proportion of boy babies born in England and Wales during 1915 was the largest since 1844, apparently confirming a popular belief that more males are born during war time. For the quarter consisting of July, August, and September, 1915, the proportion of male births to female was 1,055 to 1,000 in 1844, the ratio was 1,054 to 1,000.

The ratio of boy babies to girl has been increasing with every quarter. In the first quarter of 1915 the proportion was 1,032 males to 1,000 females, in the second quarter 1,043 to 1,000, and in the third quarter 1,056 to 1,000.

Science can give no explanation of this phenomenon, contenting itself with declaring that there probably is some natural law at present hidden from us which is responsible.

The best Royal pianist is probably Princess Victoria, who so often plays to her mother, Queen Alexandra. The piano used at Marlborough House by her Royal Highness is a magnificent instrument, bearing the inscription, "Victoria, from Papa and Mamma, 1895."

WOMEN AT WORK.

The Story of Their War Labors in England is Simply Amazing.

"The story of what women have done in this war through the Red Cross is simply amazing, said Mrs. Lloyd George, wife of the English Minister of Munitions, recently. Thirteen hundred trained nurses are working to-day in England and on the continent in connection with the British Red Cross. In addition, 1,500 women to serve under trained nurses. They are posted at hospitals both in England and in France.

"All have obtained certificates in first aid and home nursing, while many have certificates also in hygiene, sanitation and cookery.

"Many women are giving their services at the rest stations, which have been established at various railway stations. They meet the men as they come back from the trenches and supply them with food and comforts and clothing and generally refit them for the next move forward.

"Originally, the idea was that women not fully trained should act as temporary nurses to look after the wounded in improvised hospitals.

"It was thought that they would fill the gap left by the War Office, since the War Office machinery made no arrangements for rest stations or sorting hospitals for dealing with wounded or sick coming back from the dressing stations. A detachment consists of a commandant, a quartermaster, and a superintendent nurse with 20 nurses. The organization was put to a severe test when, at the fall of Antwerp, in October, the wounded Belgians had to evacuate hospitals in Belgium and be accommodated in England. Since then the War Office has thrown more and more work upon their shoulders, and the women have responded in a very remarkable fashion. The greater part of the work of the hospital is cooking, washing, or scrubbing. It is carried out by these women with wonderful self-abnegation. There are in England over 100 British Red Cross auxiliary home hospitals, and you can easily see how great a drain upon the women of this country the work of these hospitals must have entailed.

"The Women's Emergency Corps was started only two days after the declaration of war. This work originated with the women's suffrage societies and naturally it has swept into its ranks large numbers of women of independent means. I believe even in the first fortnight it received and classified 10,000 candidates, doctors, nurses, interpreters, motorists, and the untrained who desired training and were willing to do anything that was offered to them.

"Thousands of these women have been placed in situations in connection with trams, 'buses, and railways, thousands more are taken up by the big commercial undertakings, and a very large number are engaged in munition works. The Munition Workers' Auxiliary Committee also fulfils a useful function in relieving the ordinary women workers at arsenals and munition factories.

"English women have assisted in Holland with the Belgian refugees, and they have also done a very great deal for the Belgians in England. They met them at the stations and saw them safely to their various destinations, supplying them with clothes and food. There is a hospitality department which looks after both refugees and stranded English women. At one time they had a section of women engaged in toy-making. These are now nearly all on munition work. Some 20,000 applied for this kind of work, but I am not able to give figures as to how many of them were actually engaged. Many thousands applied for agricultural employment, and where the farmers are sufficiently enlightened they have been taken."

Camels and Dromedaries.

No matter to what extent the railway may be constructed in certain parts of the world, the camel will probably never cease to be the principal means of transportation in the desert, over the greater portion of Egypt and the Sudan.

The desert would, of course, be absolutely impossible without this animal. He was created for it and thrives in it better than anywhere else. His broad, soft foot enables him to traverse deep sands where the horse would sink to its knees and quickly perish.

The camel lives on almost nothing, the scanty herbage of the desert and the twigs of the thorny mimosa being his favorite food; but, as everyone knows, his most valuable quality in this relation is his ability to travel many days during the fiercest days of summer without drinking.

The African camel is a native of Arabia and has only one hump.

The camel and the dromedary differ only in breed, just as the draught horse differs from the racer. The burden camel, called gamal by the Arabs, never changes his regular walk of two and a half miles an hour under a load which never exceeds 300 pounds for a long journey, for his strength must be estimated by what he can carry when exhausted by hardsip and privation.

The dromedary, or riding camel, is much swifter. With no other load than his rider, a bag of bread, dates, and a skin of water, he can accomplish 100 miles a day in an emergency.

The Unseen Peril.

That the humor and cheerfulness of the Canadian soldier is proof against even the most extreme discomforts of life "somewhere in Flanders" is shown by the cabled story of the flooded trench. A private, splashing waist-deep through muddy, chilly water, was halted by the sentry's challenge: "Halt, who goes there?" "Submarine U-13," was his response.

GRAND TRUNK TRAINMEN MUST HAVE PERFECT VISION AND HEARING.

All men in train service on the Grand Trunk System have to undergo a strict and scientific examination as to their vision, color sense and hearing before being employed by the railway, and these already in service must pass satisfactorily a re-examination at least every two years.

Dr. H. B. Carmichael, M.D., Division Surgeon, Eastern Division of the Grand Trunk Railway System, in a paper contributed to the Canadian Medical Association Journal, tells of the results of these rigid examinations. Out of 1,275 men who applied for entrance to the railway service, 60 were rejected, having failed to pass the high standard demanded in vision, color sense, or hearing. Defective vision was responsible for keeping record of the dates that employees are due for re-examination, and by this means the Company is assured that each man employed in the handling of trains has the proper physical requirements to fulfil his duties safely and well.

SAYS GERMANY CAN NEVER REGAIN HER MERCANTILE POWER

But Runciman Sees Allies Feeling Neutral Competition After The War—Vessels Must be Secured Not Only to Meet Present Demands, But to Cope With Boom Later

LONDON, April 22.—Sir Walter Runciman, in an interview in the Daily Chronicle, predicts that the Allies will win the war, and says that Germany can never hope to regain her place as one of the leading mercantile powers of the world. At the same time, he says, the neutrals are advancing rapidly in commerce abroad, and they will be in a strong position after the war.

"There is no doubt," declared Sir Walter, "that we are winning the war, and when we have won we must see to it that Germany is no longer a menace from a naval, military or commercial point of view. But when the Allies have proved triumphant, serious discussion must arise in regard to the various mercantile fleets. There is no need for any serious regard to be paid to the strength of the German mercantile fleet. Germany can never again become one of the leading mercantile powers commercially.

"The Germans must in that respect be kept in the background, where they have been forced by the British navy. All their endeavors to revive trade and re-establish their mercantile service will be futile. Germany, no doubt, is preparing energetically at the present moment for the securing of a sea service. She is preparing to make a dash and rush into the world's markets at the earliest possible moment after peace is concluded. But her present affliction will continue to hamper and cripple all her resources.

"What is really giving concern to the British shipowners is that the neutral countries are reaping such a harvest just now that the force of their competitive power will be felt in the days to come. There are still good grounds for anxiety as to British mercantile supremacy. British owners have been and still are being soundly abused because they are reputed to be making piles of money out of the war.

"It is the neutrals, not so much the British, who are having the time of their lives. There will be a struggle for supremacy, and the neutrals, not drained by the cost of the war, have an advantage that cannot be passed over slightly."

Sir Walter suggests that Britain start building all the ships she possibly can during the rest of the war and that to aid the neutrals in getting more facilities while the war is on the interned ships in neutral ports be used. He concludes:

"Relief is necessary, for the maintenance of our sea power is imperative and vessels must be secured, not only for the present demands, but so as to ease matters when the boom in the construction of merchant vessels commences."

It was not until seventeen hours later that her cries were heard by a fisherman passing in a sampan and she was rescued, seriously but not mortally hurt.

GOOD WORK

Proper Food Makes Marvelous Changes.

Providence is sometimes credited with directing the footsteps by so simple a way as the reading of a food advertisement.

A lady writes. "I was compelled to retire from my school teaching because I was broken down with nervous prostration.

"I suffered agony in my back and was in a dreadfully nervous condition, irritable, with a dull, heavy headache, continually, had no appetite and could scarcely digest anything. I was unable to remember what I read and was, of course, unfit for my work.

One day, as if by providence, I read the testimonial of a lady whose symptoms were much the same as mine, and she told of how Grape-Nuts food had helped her, so I concluded to try it.

"I began with Grape-Nuts, a little fruit, and a cup of Postum. I steadily improved in both body and mind. Nuts has done more for me than all the medicine I have ever taken. I am now well again and able to do anything necessary in my work.

"My mind is clearer and my body stronger than ever before. "There's a Reason." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MR. FLINT'S CRITICISM

The name of the author, Mr. J. J. B. Regarding Mr. Flint's patriotic or unpatriotic proctivities, The Intelligencer has no comment to make, but must beg leave to repudiate the sentiments expressed in the letter as a whole. Patriotism is recognized in the respond to the appeal of the hour, and in granting the $40,000 the City Council is doing the right thing.

Regimental Funds

There has been considerable discussion as regards Regimental Funds for Overseas Battalion. Some time during the fall of 1915, a letter was published, signed by A.A.G. in which it was stated that these funds were unnecessary as the Government supplied everything needed by these battalions.

During the present session of the Dominion Parliament, in reply to a question asked on the floor of the House, the Minister of Militia stated that Band instruments were not supplied by the Government, but had to be purchased by the battalions themselves, or donated to the battalion by their friends.

The establishment of Overseas battalions provides for a band, yet no instruments are furnished by the Government.

In an official publication recently issued to Canadian Expeditionary Force units, entitled, 'Instructions Governing Organization and Administration (published by authority of the Hon. the Minister of Militia and Defence) Ottawa Government Printing Bureau 1916" appears the following on page 7 "An indispensible factor in successful recruiting is the hearty co-operation of civilians with the Military authorization. The leading representative of the men of both parties should be convened at a suitable centre for the purpose of organizing recruiting meetings, and soliciting financial aid; to solicit from County Councils, a money grant, also subscriptions from citizens. Such funds to defray incidental recruiting expenses, also needed equipment.

Some people are under the impression that all recruiting expenses are paid by the Government. As a matter of fact, such is not the case. It is true that the Government pay a considerable proportion of the expenses, but there are numerous expenses which they will not pay: as an instance may be mentioned that the 155 Battalion, now recruiting in Hastings and Prince Edward, have already spent in recruiting over $2,000.00 none of which amount will be repaid to them by the Government.

In addition to this sum, they have paid $1,800.00 for instruments for their band and there is a considerable amount yet to be expended for necessaries that the Government do not supply.

Some of the County Battalions have been fortunate in having had donated to them various articles of equipment; as for instance, the 109th Battalion of Lindsay. This battalion has been presented with a beautiful set of band instruments by Lady Eaton, and a full set of regimental badges by Lady Hughes.

Our own County battalion, the 155th, has been well received by the people of the two counties and we know that it will receive the same hearty financial support as all other county battalions in the third division are receiving.

Every cent of money which is given to the Regimental Fund of any Overseas battalion has to be strictly accounted for. An inspector is officiated in each division by the Militia Department one of whose duties is to frequently visit the Regimental headquarters of each battalion, and to carefully audit the regimental accounts so the public may be assured that none of the money subscribed to Regimental funds is misappropriated.

GERMANY AFTER THE WAR

There is one point which seems to us to have been overlooked in any discussion of the commercial conditions in Germany after the war. The effect of the blockade is to make of Germany an immense storehouse of accumulated manufactured goods which she is at present largely unable to dispose of. When peace comes there will be a dumping of cheap German goods all over the world such as has never been dreamt of in the past. It is useless to say that these will be refused by the Allies. There is no sentiment in business, and there is no revenge in business. If a man can get articles of value much below their normal price, he will accept shipment. Heavy tariffs alone will furnish some protection, and we have shown above how dangerous and difficult a tariff may easily become. As to the unpopularity of German-made articles, it will be an easy matter to destroy the evidence of manufacture. Indeed, we are assured that that very thing is being done daily here in department stores in Montreal.—Montreal Weekly Tattler.

The many admirers of Mary Pickford, the most beloved of all screen favorites, will be pleased to learn that she is to appear at Griffin's Opera House to-morrow and Wednesday evening in a beautiful domestic drama, entitled, "Home Folks." The king of comedy, Charlie Chaplin, also appears on the same programme in a 1 reel guaranteed gloom killer entitled "The Mix Up." The great 4 part spy menace, war photoday, "Fringe of War," which has proven one of the most thrilling and interesting war dramas ever exhibited in Canada, will also be exhibited. With such an excellent programme arranged no doubt the popular playhouse will be favored with unusually large patronage.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" THURSDAY.

Quite the most wonderful of the many scenes pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" is that showing Sherman's march to the sea and the burning of the City of Atlanta. Imagine if you can, a view of a long, fertile valley extending for miles, apparently between the hills; moving through the valley, in straggling formation, or look of formation, is the army of General Sherman. The view is so extensive that the soldiers appear but little larger than ants, yet the photograph is so clear that the form of each man is perfectly dilineated.

Now and then a puff of smoke indicates return fire upon snipers in farm buildings. Now and then a barn is fired in evident retaliation for a deadly bullet from its shelter, and the army of human ants is ever moving forward, wriggling its way like a huge serpent towards its goal—the sea.

It is a wonderful picture in very truth. Nothing like it has ever appeared on the screen, and it took a vast amount of labor and infinite patience to stage such a spectacle. A special musical score played by a symphony orchestra of 30 musicians, is also another feature with this wonderful production.

THE CASTIGATION OF CHOQUETTE

Rarely, indeed—probably never—has a man occupying a high position in the Councils of the Dominion lent himself to so foul a slander and been so promptly and so overwhelmingly rebuked in public as Senator Choquette. That he should take for granted the scurrilous lies of an irresponsible cur and give them publicity and apparently credence in the Senate, is a damning indictment of his own powers of discernment. It is true that Choquette has never enjoyed any great degree of intellectual regard even among his own party, but nevertheless, his position must carry weight, more especially with the enemies of the country, who will be overjoyed at this chance of disseminating a vile slander thus vouched for by a Canadian Senator. The man who can make or repeat such a statement is obviously shameless, and the proposal of a Montreal paper is clearly the proper way of meeting the case. Choquette should be kicked out of the Senate, where he has proved himself unfit to associate with gentlemen and Canadian patriots.

Wolfe's Birthplace.

Denial is made that the house in which Wolfe, hero of Quebec, was born at Westerham, Kent, England, was to be sold to an American by Mrs. J. B. Learmont, its owner.

A hitch has occurred in arrangements being made to turn the property over to the Dominion Government, it was said, but the property was not on the market.

Any public appeal made to save the property for the Empire was therefore unauthorized.

Easter Services in Belleville Churches

in the service by reading the first scripture lesson, reading Psalm 91.

The evening service was a baptismal one, and there was a large audience present. The choir, under the direction of Mrs. W. R. Deeton, sang "Gloria in Excelsis," and the quartette sang "Christ Arose," and the hymns were of an Easter character.

AT EMMANUEL CHURCH.

Bright and happy Easter services with appropriate hymns and anthems. The text of the morning sermon was I. Sam. xxv:29—"Thy soul shall be bound in the bundle of life with the Lord thy God." This declaration found an echo in the heart of Paul, who said: "Your life is hid with Christ in God. This life is the glorious life, and has its springs in the gospel of Jesus Christ, who died for our sins and rose again for our justification. A goodly number participated in the sacrament of the memorial feast. The total offerings for the day were $191.65.

During the service the Rector reminded the congregation that for a quarter of a century the building has been consecrated to the service of God, in the use of the scriptural episcopacy and liturgical form of worship, which meant the reincarnation of the spirit of the English Reformation of the sixteenth century. The congregation was organized in 1888, but occupied the present building for worship for the first time Easter 1891.

AT CHRIST CHURCH

Holy Communion was celebrated in the morning and many communicants were in attendance. The services of the day were in commemoration of Easter, and were impressive. Rev. Dr. Blagrave, rector of the church, preached two able and instructive discourses, and the music rendered by the choir was all that could have been desired. A unique and most appropriate portion of the services was a special floral offering of flowers, being potted Easter lilies, each of which represented a Belleville hero whose life had been sacrificed on the battle front. There were eight of them and the names were given out by the rector. During the evening service Miss Anna Ponton render a solo in a most acceptable manner.

AT JOHN ST. CHURCH.

The tendency to dampness did not lessen the interest in the Easter services at this church. A good musical programme was presented by the choir, drawing forth many expressions of commendation. The minister, Rev. E. C. Currie, preached in the morning on the Easter theme, dwelling particularly upon the Easter fact, the feeling of gratitude which it stirs, and the power of the fact in ordinary human life. In the evening the subject was the changed conditions effected by the fact of our Lord's resurrection, and what it implies: "We are possessed of a different feeling toward life."

The floral display was in keeping with the day.

HALLOWAY STREET CHURCH

Despite the inclement weather and counter attractions, good congregations were present at Holloway Street Methodist Church Easter services yesterday. At the morning service the Methodist pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf were in attendance. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Clarry, occupied the pulpit, preaching suitable discourses. The choir at both services rendered special selections and solos were given by Mr. Pimlot.

AT BRIDGE STREET

Owing to the memorial service in the morning for the late Sergt. Signaller Horace Yeomans, the Easter service was held in the evening. Under the able leadership of Prof. Cameron, the choir rendered a number of appropriate selections, and Mrs. Wilmot sang a solo in her usual sweet voice. The pastor, Rev. H. S. Osborne, preached, his subject being "The Immortal Hope." The regular service was followed by a special sacramental service in which a number of soldiers participated.

German Coins Superseded.

German coinage, amounting to about four and a half tons, was taken to Auckland, New Zealand, from Samoa recently. This consisted of what was in circulation when Samoa was taken possession of by the New Zealand Expeditionary Force, and it has since been replaced by British coinage.

An Accomplished Woman.

Mrs. Asquith is not only a clever musician, but also a skilled dancer, having taken lessons from Miss Letty Lind, the popular actress and dancer.

They Found Phosphates.

A valuable discovery, it is stated, has been made by certain New Zealand soldiers, who are farmers by profession, and whose attention has been drawn while serving in Egypt, to the immense natural supplies of phosphate. At Sofaja Bay, on the shores of the Red Sea, they have found what is claimed to be the richest phosphate field in the world. A trial shipment of 500 tons has been forwarded to New Zealand.

SLEPT ON MARCH.

Strange Sidelight Thrown on Famous Retreat From Mons.

A wonderful new sidelight is thrown on the glorious retreat of the British and the French from Mons to the Marne by Dr. George W. Crile, a distinguished doctor.

In a recently-published book he tells how the French and our original expeditionary force marched 180 miles in nine days and nights often fast asleep, continually fighting desperate rear-guard actions against seemingly overwhelming hordes of Germans.

"Only rarely were sufficiently long halts made for the men to snatch a few moments of rest," writes Dr. Crile. "Food and water were scarce, and were irregularly supplied.

"The point of paramount interest in that retreat is in the sleep phenomena experienced by these men."

"It has been shown that animals subjected to the most favorable conditions, kept from exertion or worry, supplied with plenty of food, and in good hygienic surroundings, do not survive longer than from five to eight days without sleep.

"In this retreat from Mons to the Marne we have an extraordinary human experiment, in which several hundred thousand men obtained little sleep during nine days, and in addition, made forced marches and fought one of the greatest battles in history.

"How did these men survive nine days apparently without opportunity to sleep? They did an extraordinary thing—they slept while they marched. Sheer fatigue slowed down their pace to a rate that would permit them to sleep while walking.

"The unvaried testimony of the soldiers was that everyone at times slept on the march. They passed through villages asleep. When sleep deepened and they began to reel they were wakend by their comrades.

"They slept in water, on stones, in brush, or in the middle of the road as if they had suddenly fallen in death. No man was safe who fell out of the ranks, for no matter on what pretext he fell out, sleep conquered him, and asleep many were captured. That the artillery men slept on horseback was evidenced by the fact that every man lost his cap.

"The complete exhaustion of the men is vividly told by Dr. Gros, of the American Ambulance, who, with others, went to the battlefield of the Marne to collect the wounded. When the ambulances arrived at Meaux at midnight they found the town in utter darkness. At last they succeeded in awaking the Mayor.

"'Can you tell in what village we shall find the wounded? We were told there were many here.'

"'My village is full of wounded. I will show you,' the mayor replied.

"They threaded their way through dark streets to a dilapidated school building. Not a sound! There was the stillness of death. They rapped louder; there was no response.

"Pushing open the door they found the building packed with wounded—more than 500. Some were dying; everyone was in a deep sleep. Bleeding, yet asleep; legs shattered, yet asleep. Not a groan, not a motion, not a complaint—only sleep.

"Surgical aid, the prospect of being taken to a good hospital, the thought of food and drink, of being removed from the range of the enemy's guns, awakened no interest. They had reached the stage of unconditional exhaustion, and desired only to be left alone. They slept on while their wounds were being dressed.

"After deep sleep for two or three days during which they wanted neither food nor drink, they began to be conscious of their surroundings; they asked questions, they experienced pain, they had discomforts and wants—they had returned from the abysmal oblivion of sleep."

A wonderful story—and a true one!—Pearson's Weekly.

Curious Nesting-places.

Every year some fresh discovery is made respecting the curious habits of British birds. The boldness shown by even our shy birds when domestic duties are concerned is surprising. Robins are especially noted for their boldness, and a pair have been known to build and rear their family on a beam in a school, entering by the window, which was left open. Swallows seldom build in odd places, but a pair have been known to build their nest against a pane of window-glass. A swallow's nest in a funnel is an exceptionally queer place for a bird of this species to choose.

Wrens are very ingenious, and their dome-shaped nests, which are so beautifully woven, are often found in old kettles and tins, and even in the pockets of old coats which have been left hanging about. A hedge-sparrow's nest in a kettle was found in a bunch of nettles close to a public footpath, where school-children passed every day, but the faithful bird, with no thought of danger, reared a family quite unmolested.

FERRETS ARE BOOMING.

And the War is Helping Many Half-forgotten Village Industries.

One curious result of the war has been to revive some of the ancient, half-forgotten English village industries.

Flint-knapping, for instance, which has been carried on at Brandon, in Suffolk, for many generations, and which almost received its death blow—but not quite—when the old flint-lock musket was superseded by the percussion-cap rifle, has recently been given a tremendous fillip owing to the demand for flints for tinder-boxes by the men at the front.

Charcoal-burning, again, which was a flourishing industry in the Sussex weald hundreds of years ago before coal was thought of, may now be seen in full swing there once again, the War Office having recently ordered large supplies for use in the trenches. Charcoal makes an ideal fuel for this purpose, being smokeless, and giving out an intense heat.

The charcoal-burner pursues his calling in the open air, and he works on an accepted formula handed down from earliest times through many generations. Green oak logs only must be used, and those are all cut to the same size, and stacked together in such a way as to form a low, conically-shaped heap.

This is then covered with freshly-cut turf, and set fire to; but it needs constant watching and attention, for if combustion proceeds too quickly the smouldering pile may burst into flame, when the resultant product will be, of course, not charcoal, but ashes. Ordinarily if proper care be exercised, the calcining process is complete in about twelve hours; after which the stack is left to cool for a few days before being opened.

The breeding of ferrets has been a village industry in England almost from time immemorial, but the demand for the little creatures had greatly fallen off during recent years. Now, however, owing to the insistent call for ferrets to kill the rats which swarm in the trenches in France and Flanders, the demand has jumped suddenly to far in excess of the supply, and prices have soared accordingly.

For a sadly sufficient reason, and one that will be at once apparent to everybody, the fashion for jet ornaments has been recently revived, more especially in the English border counties, with the result that a one-time flourishing Yorkshire village industry has been given a new lease of life. Amongst the Irish peasantry similar "mourning jewelry" is made from bog oak, the best varieties of which are nearly as black and lustrous, and equally as hard, as the best Whitby jet. This, too, is now being turned out in increasing quantities in hundreds of lonely cabins in those districts of Ireland where raw material is found.—Pearson's Weekly.

Zinc in War Time.

Zinc is so essential in war time that it has risen enormously in price in the past year. Costing originally only two-fifths as much as copper, it now costs decidedly more than copper, in spite of the fact that copper itself has sharply increased in value. Zinc is a constituent of cartridge brass and shell-fuses, and is used also as a covering for iron barbed-wire fencing. In 1913 the United States, Germany, and Belgium were the leading producers of zinc.

Of the three, only the United States smelted domestic ores. Belgium and Germany relied mainly on zinc concentrates that they imported from the Broken Hill mines in New South Wales, where, for one reason and another, it does not pay to do the smelting. France, Spain, and Great Britain also produce substantial quantities, but not enough to supply their own needs. Austria and Germany have considerable deposits of ore in Silesia, Hungary, Carinthia, and the Tyrol. As the zinc-smelting furnaces of Great Britain are not well adapted for dealing with the Broken Hill concentrates it buys the bulk of its supplies from the United States.

The Biter Bit.

A young R. E. officer, who is not unknown in the motor-cycle world, recently went home on five days' leave. Hearing that recruiting was very active in London, he slipped into mufti and promenaded the streets, hoping that some unsuspecting sergeant would recruit him. He planted himself under the nose of every sergeant who was wearing the national colors, but all to no effect.

The next morning he was determined to be told that his "King and Country" needed him, so he followed more or less the same route and the same procedure, but still had no luck.

Getting desperate (says the Motor Cycle), he walked down to the Central Recruiting Office in Whitehall and sauntered up and down before the sergeant outside. Still no luck.

Driven to desperation, he walked up to the sergeant and said, "Well, sergeant, and how's the recruiting?"

"Fine, sir," responded the sergeant; "we are hoping to send you out a very big draft shortly!"

ANOTHER CONTINGENT OF RUSSIANS ARRIVE IN FRANCE

LARGE GERMAN POWDER FACTORY BLOWN UP, MANY KILLED

Sir Roger Casement Now in Confinement—Will Be Put on Trial

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 25.—It is announced officially Sir Robert Casement who was arrested in connection with an abortive attempt to land arms in Ireland from a German vessel, was brought to London Sunday morning. He was met at Euston by officers from Scotland Yord, and is now detained in military custody. It is understood evidence of his proceedings in Germany since the outbreak of the war will be produced at his trial.

CHICAGO LIFE IS UNREAL TO HER

Bishop Anderson's Daughter Contrasts It with Sadness of London

A Chicago paper in a recent issue had the following item:

Chicago's cheerful, everyday life seems strange to Mrs. George F. Boyer, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Chas. P. Anderson, who was married a year ago to Dr. Boyer of Toronto, Ont. Mrs. Boyer told to-day of work done by the wives of soldiers and doctors who are away at the war. She is visiting her parents for a fortnight, having just come from England.

"My husband is with the British troops at Saloniki and expects to stay with them until the war is over," said Mrs. Boyer. "He went from Toronto, where we lived, as a member of the Toronto university unit of doctors and nurses. London is full of Canadians and the women devote their entire time to work for the wounded and the fighting.

"The darkness and sadness and quiet of London have come to seem the normal thing, not the cheerful peace and content of Chicago, which seems very strange in contrast. The English people are grateful for every bit of work done by the groups of American men and women who are helping the Allies in any way, through their relief stations or their sympathy."

Mrs. Boyer intends to return to Toronto for a visit with her husband's family and later to go to England.

The above has reference to a lady who has relatives in Belleville. Bishop Anderson will be remembered by many as curate of St. Thomas' church at one time, and Mrs. Anderson was Miss Janet Glass, a daughter of the late Mr. James Glass, and a sister of Mrs. R. J. Bell, who resides here.

ALLIES RETAIN STEADY CHECK ON THE ENEMY

Meet Advances at Every Point—Curtain Fire of Allied Forces Does Much Damage

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, April 25.—Afternoon statement—To the west of the River Meuse yesterday evening, the German forces, after violent bombardment, attacked on several different occasions our new position in the region of Dead Man's Hill. The first two assaults having failed completely, the enemy started their third attack with the employment of flaming liquids. Checked by our curtains of fire and fire of our infantry, the Germans were compelled to return to their lines after having suffered important losses.

There has been great activity on the part of the artillery in the region of Avocourt. Some time during the night the enemy endeavored, but without success, to occupy our advanced positions of Avocourt redoubt. To the west of the River Meuse there has been fairly spirited bombardment of our first and second lines. In the forest of Apremont, there has been fighting with hand grenades. In Lorraine we have dispersed a strong reconnoitering party of the enemy, which was endeavoring to occupy one of our smaller positions to the east of Neuville.

WARSHIPS OF BRITISH BOMBARD ENEMY COASTS

Damage Done at Zeebruge Said to be Enormous—Harbour and Docks Hit Several Times, While Aeroplanes Dropped Bombs on German Batteries

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 25.—An attack on German positions on the Belgian coast by British warships is reported in an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam. The bombardment is described as one of the heaviest in this region during the war. The despatch says the following message has been received in Amsterdam from Flushing: "Several British warships, accompanied by destroyers and other vessels, yesterday bombarded Zeebrugge, and the German batteries of Heyst, Blankenberghe and Knocke. The bombardment was one of the heaviest since the beginning of the war, and also of a long-time duration. The damage done at Zeebrugge is said to have been enormous. The harbour and docks were hit several times, and some ships were sunk. British aircraft also threw bombs on German batteries.

BIG GUNS ACTVIE IN VERDUN REGION

LONDON, April 5.—(Special.)—General Petain's forces continue to maintain the offensive in the fighting around Verdun. An infantry attack by the Crown Prince is likely, however, to follow the heavy artillery action of yesterday.

The French lines are being measurably strengthened in preparation for new assaults. At the same time it is not unlikely that the French will themselves attempt a thrust at the German positions, particularly at the line northeast of Verdun about Douaumont.

Russian reinforcements are already reported on the western fighting line. They were said to have passed through Chalons-sur-Marne on the southeastern end of the line yesterday.

LIQUOR ADS ALLOWED UNDER THE NEW ACT

Agents Will Be Permitted to Canvass Doctors and Druggists

TORONTO, April 21.—Liquor advertising, either in newspapers or by billboards, is not prohibited under the Ontario Temperance Act. Personal solicitation for beverage purpose, however, is barred, although agents will still be able to canvass for orders for mechanical purposes.

"There was never anything in the local option law to prevent advertising," said Mr Eudo Saunders, of the Provincial License Department. "There will be no change under the New Act. With regard to soliciting order, however, the prohibitory clause has been made to read for beverage purposes only. The effect of this will be that agents will be permitted to canvass orders from druggists, doctors and artizans for alcohol to be used for medicinal and mechanical purposes. The object of the clause is to prevent house-to-house solicitation."

SITUATION PRONOUNCED GRAVE IN IRELAND

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, April 4.—Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland announced in House today that grave disturbance broke out in Dublin yesterday. He added that troops had been sent to the Irish capital and that the situation was now well in hand. Mr. Birrell said twelve persons had been killed before the disturbances were quelled. Mr. Birrel made his announcement in reply to a question by Mr. Craig immediately after the assembling of the House. He said the postoffice had been forcibly taken possession of and telegraphic communication was cut. In the course of the day, however, said Mr. Birrell, soldiers arrived from the Curragh and the situation was now well in hand, although communication still was exceedingly difficult. He was not able to give any further particulars, but the House, he continued, might take it from him that the situation was well in hand.

He also announced that four or five soldiers had been killed. Speaking from the information he had received, he could say twelve lives had been lost. Communication with Dublin is still very difficult. At seven last night, Mr. Birrell said, four or five different parts of Dublin were in possession of the rebels, but he said they did not control the whole place.

BULGARIANS LOSE MANY SOLDIERS

Estimates Placed at 87,000 Killed and 50,000 Wounded Or Missing

Canadian Press Special.

ATHENS, April 25.—A despatch from Salonika says a large German powder factory at Dedagatch has been blown up, killing a large number of persons. Bulgarian newspapers received here estimate the Bulgarian army loss during the war at eighty-seven thousand killed and fifty thousand wounded or missing.

SECRETLY ACTIVE WITH JAPANESE

More Interesting Revelations in Papers Seized in Office of Von Papen's Secretary

NEW YORK, April 25.—Special—The work of secret agents of Germany in Japan was told in exhaustive detail in the papers seized in the office of Wolf von Igel at 60 Wall street, it was revealed to-day.

The former office of Capt. Franz von Papen was the clearing house, through which passed reports of agents in the Orient—particularly certain native Japanese in the employ of the German Government. A portfolio of these reports was impounded by Federal agents in the raid, it was learned officially. They reveal:

First, that Germany is prepared to enlist to her own purposes the present wave of anti-American sentiment in Japan.

Second, that in the event of a break with the United States high German officials in this country do not believe it all unlikely that Japan could be induced to make peace with Germany separate from the former's European allies.

Third, that Capt. von Papen and his associates considered as a future possibility an alliance between Germany and Japan.

The seizure of these and other important documents in the Wall street suite have convinced officials that the office was being manipulated to the serious embarrassment of the American Government.

That the name of Ambassador von Bernstoff has already been brought out in proceedings against von Igel before the Federal Grand Jury was strongly rumored today in the Federal building.

A private code book of von Bernstorff's used by the Ambassador to communicate with von Papen and von Igel was among the impounded papers, it was learned. This code made plain papers which otherwise would have remained a mystery.

Construing the seized documents by medium of the Ambassador's code makes it plain that von Bernstoff was acquainted with most of the activities of the men in the New York office.

Three files and two books were seized in the Wall street office. The memoranda refer, among other things, to the Welland Canal plots, passport frauds, explosions on ships carrying munitions, and the fomentations of rebellions in various colonies and dependencies in the hemisphere and in European countries.

Past Masters

Masonic representatives from Cobourg, Colborne, Ameliasburgh, Wellington, Stirling, Napanee, Madoc and Belleville met last night to transact business connected with the draft in the district, and to hear an eloquent and vivid address by R. W. Bro. Walter S. Herrington, K.C., of Napanee upon Masonry and the War, illustrated by over 100 beautiful and impressive pictures which brought home to all the frightfulness of the German capacity as the enemy of humanity, and the heroic efforts of the British and their allies to stem the Teuton torrent of destruction which threatened to sweep over Europe, and which had in view the direct object of the acquisition of the British colonies and especially Canada for the Hohenzollerns. Mr. Herrington went to the very heart of his subject—the violated brotherhood of man and our duty here and now. Colonel Lazier was elected President, Mayor Ketcheson, Gilbert Stafford, Chief Newton, Colonel Ponton and others spoke. Principal MacLaurin presided at the lantern.

Appeared Off Lowestcroft Coast, And Engaged By British Light Cruisers—After a Twenty Minute Fight The Enemy Retreated, When a Lively Chase Ensued—No Vessels Were Sunk

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 25. — A German battle cruiser appeared off Lowestoft to-day. Local naval forces and British light cruisers engaged the raiders which retreated in, twenty minutes. Official announcement says the German battle cruiser squadron accompanied by light cruisers and destroyers, appeared off Lowestoff at four-thirty this morning. They opened fire on the coast before departing, killing two men, one woman and a child. Two British light cruisers and a destroyer were hit, but none were sunk. HELEN KELLER "FEELS" ENRICO CARUSO SING

ATLANTA, Ga., April 25—(Special.)—Helen Keller, the world's most famous blind and deaf woman, placed her fingers on the lips and throat of Enrice Caruso, the Metropolitan tenor, in his rooms in the hotel yesterday, and "heard" him sing "The Lament of Samson," from Saint-Saens' opera, "Samson et Delila."

Through the medium of her marvelously sensitive fingers the matchless voice o fthe great tenor was transmitted to her soul, and as she sat and "listened," her lips apart, her sightless eyes wet with tears, she whispered over and over again, "Wonderful, wonderful."

Caruso sang the aria in the first scene of the last act of the opera, and sang with a power that brought tears in the eyes of other Metropolitan singers who were in the room. And as he sang his voice grew husky with the pathos of the song.

"Though I cannot see your face, I can feel the pathos of your song," said Miss Keller.

Will Not Believe Newton Is Guilty

ST. CATHARINES, April 25.—(Special.)—If Harry L. Newton, St. Catharines munitions foreman, who is being held in New York on charges of offering to kill J. P. Morgan, blow up the Welland Canal, munitions factories and public buildings, is found guilty, it would be hard to prove him such in the eyes of a number of St. Catharines church people, to whom he became well and favorably known in the few months he was here.

According to his boarding-house mistress, who made the statement today, he was of most exemplary habits, remained at home nights except when he went to church affairs, and was a regular Sunday attendant. He showed evidence of being well educated, and purchased heavily in books, always of good literature, and his presents to others were always articles of this kind.

Regarding the shell found in his trunk at Buffalo station, she states that it was offered to her, but she declined to accept. She further states that he was a heavy collector in postage stamps, and during his absence in New York all his letters but one have been from postage stamp collecting agencies.

U.S. Steamer Searched By Australian Cruiser

HAVANA, April 25—(Special.)—The United States steamer Chalmette, from New Orleans, reports that when 90 miles out from that port she was stopped by the Australian cruiser Sydney, when fired a shot across her bows.

The cruiser sent an officer on board the Chalmette, who examined the ship's papers and passengers and then permitted the steamer to proceed without offering any explanation for the search.

Canadian Press Special

PARIS, April 25.—A squadron of German aeroplanes has delivered another attack on the allies entrenched camp at Saloniki, approaching from all directions and dropping bombs at various points but doing little damage.

ALLISON MAKES HIS APPEARANCE AT CAPITAL

OTTAWA, April 25.—Special—Col. John Wesley Allison is in Ottawa with a bodyguard, consisting of G. F. Henderson, his Ottawa counsel, and Dr. Van Allen of New York. He sauntered into the Chateau Laurier at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, wrote his name on the register, went directly to his room, and has been closeted with his lawyers practically ever since.

Only a batch of newspapermen and a few politicians, who had remained in the capital over Easter, recognized Allison, who walked with just a hint of unsteadiness and leaned rather heavily upon the desk as he registered.

Dr. Van Allen, who, according to The New York Herald, is a close personal friend of Allison, never once left his patient's side, although Allison did not impress the casual observer as being in a critical condition.

Lawyer Henderson declined to let the reporters get near his celebrated client. "Col. Allison is a very sick man," he remonstrated, "and is very tired from his journey. Besides, I am anxious to discuss matters in connection with the coming investigation with him, and I would very much prefer that he say nothing for publication just now.

BIG C. P. R. DAM CARRIED AWAY

MOOSE JAW, April 25.—Special—The big C.P.R. reinforced concrete dam on the Moose Jaw River was carried away by floods at noon to-day, letting loose an immense volume of water towards Lumsden.

The loss to the C.P.R. is immense, as the great reservoir will practically be emptied.

People of Lumsden do not believe that there will be any serious damage to the town. They think it will take about 30 hours to reach them, and that when the tidal wave hits the large flooded area, which stretches for eight miles to the west of the town, it will be to a great extent dispersed.

KINGSTON

General Roques, Minister of War, in the French cabinet, has decided that some mark of distinction shall be worn by men who have served at the front. One chevron on the left sleeve will indicate a year's service at the front, and each additional six months will be designated by an additional chevron. For each wound received, a chevron will be worn on the right sleeve. A similar recognition of the services of Canadians who have and are serving, would be an excellent idea.

The Biter Bit.

A young R. E. officer, who is not unknown in the motor-cycle world, recently went home on five days' leave. Hearing that recruiting was very active in London, he slipped into mufti and promenaded the streets, hoping that some unsuspecting sergeant would recruit him. He planted himself under the nose of every sergeant who was wearing the national colors, but all to no effect.

The next morning he was determined to be told that his "King and Country" needed him, so he followed more or less the same route and the same procedure, but still had no luck.

Getting desperate (says the Motor Cycle), he walked down to the Central Recruiting Office in Whitehall and sauntered up and down before the sergeant outside. Still no luck.

Driven to desperation, he walked up to the sergeant and said, "Well, sergeant, and how's the recruiting?"

"Fine, sir," responded the sergeant; "we are hoping to send you out a very big draft shortly!"

Death of Well Known Priest

Rev. Father J. J. Meagher, at One Time of Madoc, Dies in Montreal Hospital

The death occurred on Saturday morning at 2.30, at the Montreal General Hospital, of one of the noblest priests of the achdiocese of Kingston when Rev. Father J. J. Meagher passed away. He was the parish priest of Kemptville. Father Meagher was known to the people of Brockville for his exceptional abilities when he was a curate at St. Francis Xavier church. Young as he was on coming here, and it was shortly after his ordination that he came as curate for the late Rev. Father Stanton, and he remained here until Very Rev. Dean Murray assumed charge of the parish in December, 1901, and was the first assistant to him. He remained here until 1902, when he was appointed parish priest of Madoc. He was in charge of that parish for about three years and was next promoted to Kemptville, where he was stationed until he passed away.

The Rev. J. J. Meagher was born 46 years ago in the parish of Reid, in the township of Tyendinaga, and studied at the Ottawa University, and afterwards at the Grand Seminary, Montreal. He was for a time professor of Regiopolis College, Kingston, and in 1897 was ordained a priest in St. Mary's Cathedral in that city, being the last on whom Holy Orders were conferred by that illustrious prelate, Archbishop Cleary.

In December of last year he took sick and in March came to St. Vincent de Paul Hospital here. He remained at the hospital until Friday morning last when he went to the Montreal General Hospital to receive the treatment at the hands of a specialist, Dr. Lafleur. He was suffering from pernicious anaemia, and it was thought that by a transfusion of blood from a relative he would survive. His cousins, Rev. Father Vincent Meagher, of Repiopolis College, Kingston, and Rev. Father J. T. Hanley, Toledo, voluntarily offered to submit to the necessary process. It was decided at Montreal that Father Vincent Meagher was the most able, and from him was taken the required amount, but it was of no avail and he died. From here he was accompanied by Dr. Macaulay and Miss McEachen, a graduate nurse of St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, in addition to the two priests mentioned.

The death of Father Meagher is deeply regretted here and also in the ranks of the clergy of the archdiocese of Kingston. He was a noted man in Catholic circles and the regret at his untimely death is poignant. The expressions of sorrow were manifested on all sides on Sunday when prayers were asked in St. Francis Xavier church for the repose of his soul.—Brockville Recorder.

Asking Leave.

Nobody is allowed to leave a warship without permission, even for an hour. Senior officers, "heads of departments," must obtain leave from the captain in person before going ashore, though usually a general dispensation from this obligation is given at the beginning of a commission. Young officers of branches other than the executive must first ascertain from their own immediate superiors whether they can be spared, so the process of obtaining leave sometimes becomes quite elaborate. The most junior engineer-officer, for example, may be observed to enter the wardroom, cap in hand. First he approaches the senior, and recites the appointed interrogation.

"Please" is returned in a quiet voice. But this is not enough. The youngster steps across to where the engineer-commander is sitting, and again asks, "May I go ashore, sir, please?" once more getting "Please" to encourage him. Yet once again he stands a suppliant, before the commander now, till a final "Please" sends him away rejoicing to "shift into plain clothes."

STORM AND WEATHER FORECASTS FOR MAY

(By Hicks)

A regular storm period is central on the 1st, extending from April 28th to May 3rd. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

As explained in the April forecasts, this storm period will be in progress as we pass from April into May. The barometer will reach its lowest reading, and the temperature will be highest on and touching the 1st, and from the 1st to the 23rd, inclusive, storms of rain, wind and thunder will reach their culminating stages. The chief causes of disturbance at this time will be "Vulcan," Venus and the conjunction of the Moon with Earth and Sun. We are also entering the time when special solar conditions, described further on, will bring their influences to bear on storms and weather. It will be well to anticipate some very forceful, if not dangerous storms on and about Monday the 1st, to Wednesday the 3rd. No such storms can be a surprise to any careful observer of local indication—the temperature, reading of the barometer, wind currents and cloud formations. The probabilities are that a rapid change to very cool will rush down from the northwest, with the high barometer that is sure to follow these storms. Any ordinary painstaking to protect tender things from frost, from about the 2nd to 5th, might prove a paying precaution, notwithstanding the fact that the Moon is at its greatest declination north on the 5th. There are other astronomic reasons why some very cool nights might follow the New Moon disturbances at this time.

A Reactionary Storm Period is central on the 5th, 6th, and 7th. Some words of warning, or general caution, will not be out of place at this time. We have many times explained the fact, that the "focal eye" of the Sun or the focal point of solar intensity, gradually shifts northward from the equator after the vernal equinox, and that it is at its crisis during the month of May, in a belt passing through the central parts of this country. We have long held that this concentration, or focus, of solar, energy is productive of abnormal magnetic and electrical conditions, in the Earth below, and the atmosphere above, and that peculiar storms are generated under the influence of these intensified solar emanations. At this season clouds of a peculiar character form, appearing first in the form of bluish, leaden strata along the western horizon, rising thence, topped with mountain-like, cumulus thunder-heads. As these great clouds advance, a great smooth nimbus is seen at the bottom, overarched by rushing, tumbling clouds, all moving eastward at an alarming speed; the smooth, watery nimbus under the black, fore-running clouds, is the real storm, out of which the rain and wind are to be expected. In case of tornadoes, the trunk, or whirling cloud extending downward to the Earth, always drops down from the edge of the black, overhanging clouds, outlined, in its roaring, twisting terror, on the face of the nimbus clouds below. It is a very common thing for these peculiar May storms to repeat themselves, at about the same hour of day or night, for several days in succession, or until the barometer rises decidedly and permanently, and the wind shifts strong and cool from the west. To the careful observer, possessed of patience and a good barometer, these hints may prove valuable beyond all calculation. These destructive May storms may begin to appear on and about the 5th, 6th and 7th, and be followed by much cooler weather and frosts.

A Regular Storm Period is central on the 12th, covering Wednesday the 10th, to Monday the 15th. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

The Moon is on the celestial equator on the 12th, the central day of this period, and at first quarter on the 10th. On the 10th, also, Uranus is in quadrature with Sun and Earth, and Mars is in quadrature on the 12th. The probabilities are that this period will bring disturbance of decided force, answering to those described in the foregoing. The general atmospheric conditions, as we enter this period will presage the kind of storms to apprehend. Warm, sultry, humid winds, with low and falling barometer, may be taken as almost positive evidence that storms of greater or less violence are brewing. We will predict that this period will reach its crisis, and that storms that will bear watching will culminate on and touching the 12th, 13th and 14th. Watch your barometer and the coming storm clouds—especially on the 12th. When the storm, or series of storms of this period come to an end, a very high barometer will rush in from the northwest, and the last probable danger of frosts for this season, will be progressively between the 12th and the 16th—first in the west, and spreading to the east and southward on successive nights.

A Reactionary Storm Period is central on the 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th. The full Moon falls on the 17th, being in perigee and at extreme south declination on the 19th. The Mercury period is central on the 20th, extending its perturbing power from the 16th to the 26th. As may be seen by this month's storm diagram, there are two storm periods within this Mercury brace. We are to understand by this that there is a partially disturbed condition, owing to the Mercury equinox, lasting from the 16th to the 26th—a distinct tendency to prolonged, stubborn cloudiness and drizzling rain; but the most marked results of the Mercury influence will be felt during the period, 17th to 20th, and the regular storm period, 22nd to 27th. Some meteorologists have contended that the Moon has a tendency to prevent, or dissipate clouds, and hence, in a measure, to prevent rain, but we do not so believe. The full Moon does illuminate the darkness, even through thick rainclouds, but the records will show that such clouds are none the less productive of rain and snow, other conditions being equal. Some of the hardest rain and snow storms are at the full Moon periods, and the most severe wind storms and changes in weather conditions are coincident with full Moon, or Moon's opposition with Earth and Sun. A case in proof may reasonably be expected at this reactionary storm period, Wednesday the 17th, to Saturday the 20th. Suppose you make it your special pleasure to watch this period—watch at home, and watch generally through newspapers and telegraphic channels. High barometer and change to much cooler will follow these storms.

A Regular Storm Period is central on the 24th, extending from the 22nd to the 27th. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

This period is at the culmination of the Mercury period, with the Moon at last quarter on the 23rd, and on the celestial equator on the 25th, on its way from south to north declination. About the 22nd, a falling barometer will develop in western sections, winds will shift to southerly, it will grow steadily warmer, and storms of wind, rain and thunder will organize and start on their eastward journey. By the 24th and 25th storm centers will reach central parts of the country, breaking into terrific electrical storms, on and next to the 25th. This is one of the periods in which a series of daily storms, for several successive days, is likely. At such times there is often a storm in the night, and another in the day, the night storm coming a little earlier each night and the day cycle a little later each day, until the two cycles come together in the late afternoon or early evening. At such times the storms are of great violence, often resulting in wild hurricanes and local tornadoes. The coming together of these two daily storm cycles, most frequently culminates about six to eight o'clock in the evening, at which times great and ominous storm clouds form on the western horizon, and sweep up the western sky, with alarming displays of lightning, terrific reverberations of thunder, followed by destructive downpours of rain. The blending of these two storm cycles into one great storm usually breaks up the stormy period, the barometer rises very high, the winds shift cool and steady to westerly, and the weather turns unseasonably cool. To a careful observer, a reliable barometer is of incalculable value at such times. The hygrometer is also indispensable in connection with these phenomenal storm periods. The barometer will always indicate whether dangerous tornadic storms are approaching, and the hygrometer will infallibly indicate whether much or little rain is coming with the storms. These scientific instruments have long ago passed the experimental age. Nothing known to the world of science is more clearly proven to be true—nothing is of more vital value—nothing on Earth can supplant them in the objects for which they are intended. These are propositions which they are intended. These are propositions which every man may and should prove for himself.

A Reactionary Storm Period covers the last three days of May. This period is intensified by the conjunction of the Moon with Earth and Sun on the 31st. This is the second new Moon this month. Falling barometer, warmer weather, with storms of thunder, rain and wind will pass over the country on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 29th, 30th and 31st.

Dark Cereals Most Healthful.

Dr. Harvey Wiley, the famous pure food authority, has repeatedly emphasized the fact that if people woould eat more of the coarse, dark cereals their health would be benefited. Certainly, those who have become regular users of Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal the coarsest and darkest cereal food known, have had their health materially benefited. Roman Meal is more nutritious than meat, and does not turn acid like oats. It prevents indigestion, and positively relieves constipation or money refunded. Try as porridge or in the ready-cooked form known as Roman Meal Nuggets. These are delicious if served with hot milk and cream.

Geography and Time as Allies.

Regarding Great Britain's share in the war, the Austrian Socialist organ, the Arbeiter Zeitung, says that British conscription, even if it does no more than secure the filling up of gaps caused by losses, is yet of the highest significance for the continuance of the war. It must be recognized that Great Britain is carrying on the war as a land power in a degree never before seen in any coalition wars in her history.

The insurmountable barrier of the seas surrounding the country saves her from spending strength in defending her own land. There is no threatening foe to compel her to rush forces to the frontier.

The British have time on their side. The sea, to which they owe so much, permits them to make good without any serious disadvantage the negligence in war preparations in the war itself. It even increases their power.

For wherever the strength of the enemy appears to be growing weak, there emerges at first a promise and then, in part at least, as a reality, some of the hundreds of thousands of Kitchener's recruits to renew the enthusiasm of the war in the veins of the Entente.

And so it is Great Britain which spins the threads, the endless threads of black misfortune which envelops the whole earth like a shroud, and it is due more to her favorable geographical situation than to her determined persistency that Great Britain is able to postpone the decision on the Continent.

Trench Torpedoes.

The term "air torpedo" has been indiscriminately applied to various kinds of German projectiles used in trench warfare. There is the large bomb, or mine, containing anything up to 100 pounds of high explosive, which is fired at short range; and there is the aerial torpedo, properly so called, which is driven through the air in the same way as a marine torpedo through water—that is to say by a motor, and not by the initial propulsion given by an explosive charge. The torpedo used by the German army is believed to be driven by compressed air. The explosion of the air torpedo is most destructive and demoralizing in its effect. At the fighting on the Yser in October, a whole section of a Belgian trench, with its occupants, was blown out of the bank of the Yser canal into the water by one of these projectiles.

Monthly Settlements.

"Am I as dear to you as I was during our courtship, darling?" queried the bride of six short months.

"Much dearer," briefly answered the worried freight payer of the combine as he proceeded to audit the latest crop of monthly bills

Nerves Were So Upset Could Not Endure Noise

Neuralgic Headaches and Extreme Nervousness Caused Keenest Suffering--Lasting Cure by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Once the nervous system gets run down everything seems to tend to make it worse. You worry over your condition, are unable to get the required rest and sleep, noises excite and irritate you and the future is most discouraging.

The nervous system does not get the proper nourishment from the food you eat, so you must have something also to lift you out of the run-down condition. You may find that your experience coincides with the writer of this letter and be encouraged to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

You will make no mistake in employing this food cure, for, acting as it does hand in hand with Nature, it is bound to do you good.

Mrs. Jas. Jensen, Gwynne, Alta., writes: "About ten years ago I was troubled with severe attacks of neuralgia and nervousness, and was for several months so bad that I could not get a night's rest. I used several medicines recommended by the druggist. My doctor also prescribed, but nothing he gave me brought any relief. Instead I got worse and worse until I could scarcely do anything or bear the least bit of noise. My nerves were all upset.

"My husband read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and got me some. Although I had no faith in it, I began its use, and after a few doses began to sleep well and the neuralgia left me entirely. I used six more boxes and have never had any troubles from neuralgia or the nerves since.

"This is to certify that I know Mrs. Jensen and believe this statement to be true and correct. Fred Freeman, J.P."

THIS IS THE 631ST DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

ADMITTING DEFEAT.

Apologists of Germany are hastening to point out that she cannot give up her submarine warfare because the submarine is her only effective weapon in naval conflict; that it is her last resource against England. If such be the position of Germany it is time for her to acknowledge defeat and make proposals for a peace conferenec. When a belligerent is in such desperate straits that it can continue war only by violating the laws of war and by carrying it on not only against its enemies but against neutrals, against non-combatants and women and children, in short, by raising its hand against the whole civiliizel world outside of itself, it is plain that the fighting is continued not for any legitimate ends of war but in desperation, in madness, and for the love of butchery. A belligerent in that position, if it be a once great nation like Germany, ought to have somewhere among its ruling class men with foresight enough to see that by persistence in bloody infamies it is preparing a dismal future for itself. The time in which Germany, after the war is over, will be able to resume her place in the respect of the civilized world will be shortened in proportion as she puts aside her methods of indiscriminate slaughter and carries on what remains of the war with some decent respect to the opinions of mankind. Her time for a reckoning with us has been unconscionably slow in coming, but it is now fully come. If she still desires to avoid a break with the United States, with all that that implies, she knows the price she must pay for the continuance of friendly relations.

The bilingual question still remains a Damocles' sword hanging over the head of Parliament, says an Ottawa correspondent of The Montreal Gazette. Sober statesmen on both sides deplore its introduction into the field of federal politics, and there is now no disposition on the part of the leaders of either Government or Opposition to bring it up. Rumour has it that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has during the past week read the riot act to some of his followers on the subject and there is every possibility that nothing may be heard of it, at least until after April 28, when the time for disallowance by this Parliament of the Ontario school legislation objected to will have expired. Neither Sir Wilfrid, nor most of his followers, would care to see the next general election run on the issue of, "Canada versus Quebec."

An important announcement was made in the House of Comons last week to the effect that the Government would now give consideration to, and take steps to prepare for, conditions as they would affect trade after the war. A member announced the projected establishment of a bureau of commercial information in Canada, a conference of business men representing commercial, transportation and industrial interests to be held shortly at Otawa to discuss future trade and the extension of the trade commissioner service by the appointment of special representatives in various parts of Europe with a view to developing foreign markets for Canadian goods.

Montreal Gazette: When the Minister of Militia sat down at the conclusion of his speech in the House of Commons, he was in the grip of strong emotion and the sympathy of all his hearers who were not blinded by partizan prejudice was with him. Not only the House but the galleries cheered, a rare spectacle in the Canadian Parliament, while congratulations came later from even some of the more moderate Liberals, one of the first to shake his hand being Dr Michael Clark. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose after the Minister had concluded and complained that he had covered too much ground in his reply, there is no doubt that the Liberal leader for once sounded the House of Commons have time rather small.

The Liberal press and Liberals in and again praised the work of the Australian Government in manufacturing shells for the Allies, while at the same time deprecating what Canada has done and attacking and belittling Canadian manufacturers. Australia has been held up as a shining example for Canada to follow. The facts are, though, that while Canada has filled shell orders aggregating hundreds of millions of dollars, has upwards of one hundred thousand skilled workers making munitions and has sent forward to France hundreds of thousands of shells, Australia has so far not sent a single completed shell.

RUSSIA'S ENLARGED SPHERE.

The enlarged sphere of Russia's participation in the European war is a matter of vast physical and political significance. Her soldiers are now holding more of the iron ring around Germany than all the rest of the Entente together, nearly two miles for one. They are holding one front of 700 miles in the east. That is their own. They are driving a wedge through the Turkish Empire, and may even penetrate Mesopotamia from the north and reach Kut-el-Amara before the English succeed in relieving their own besieged force at that place. And now they will take part in the great decision on the western front. If the war at last shall be decided there, as many hold must be the case.

The number of Russian troops landed in France is unknown. Naturally, for military reasons, no definite information on that point should be allowed to pass the censor. There was a "large flotilla." That might mean 40,000 men, or twice that number. But once the thing has been done it may be done again, and there is not present limit to the number of Russian troops that could be delivered in France. The questions are those of transportation, maintenance, and service equipment. The supply itself is enormous. Of men alone Russia could send several millions and still have all that she could employ herself on the eastern front. And, whereas at one stage of this war's experience the importance of man seemed diminished and that of means increased, recent events, especially at Verdun, have restored the relation to almost what it was before. Rifles and machine guns are ultimately the effective weapons and it becomes again a question of men. Obviously, by virtue of her ability to supply men in great numbers Russia will more affect the outcome than she was at first expected to do, and her influence in the peace councils will be correspondingly greater. There goes another German assumption, which was that in the terms of peace helpless Russia could be made to pay more than her share.

TURNING THE TABLES.

From present indications it would apear that Mr G. W. Kyte, rather than General Sir Sam Hughes, is on trial, before the Royal Commission. This was seen in the attitude of the Opposition itself, which, fearing for the time that Mr E. F. B. Johnston, whom Sir Wilfrid Laurier had selected to represent the Liberal party, would be required to assist the commission instead of performing the rather narrower duty of counsel for Mr Kyte, threatened to substitute Mr F. B. Carvell in that capacity. There is no doubt that unless Mr Kyte can prove his case his parliamentary position is precarious. Hon. Wm. Pugsley laid it down when making his series of alleged charges against the defunct Shell Committee a month ago that a member who made such allegations and could not prove them was in honour bound to resign. There is a possibility that the Royal Commission, which will sit morning, afternoon and night, beginning with Wednesday of this week, may conclude its sessions before Parliament adjourns and there is little doubt that if its report shows Mr Kyte's charges unproved, the Government will intimate not only to Mr Kyte but to Mr F. B. Carvell, that it expects them to take the course outlined by their own confrere, Mr Pugsley.

Current Comment

The first thing the Russians did, after landing in France, was to erect an orthodox church and attend services in it. An object lesson to the French that will not be without great meaning.—Kingston Whig.

"We have to long endured political interference in military matters. It is time politicians took a more modest place in our military affairs."—Halifax Chronicle. Which recalls to our mind the time when Hon. Sidney Fisher, Laurier's Minister of Agriculture, forced the resignation of Lord Dundonald because the latter desired to prepare for a time like the present.

The Toronto News, instead of urging on the Prime Minister his clear and obvious duty, is trying to make party quarrel out of the bilingual question. It cares nothing for that issue, or for any other public issue, or for the merits of any public question. Its sole aim is to flatter one political party and leader, and to abuse and vilify the other. It will take a hand in any kind of mischief, repeat any slander, in order to gratify its insane hatred of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.—Toronto Star. And all the Toronto News answers is GOSH!

It is said that since prohibition is to go into effect a Liberal leader for Ontario less antagonistic to the liquor interests than Mr Rowell may be appointed. Mr Rowell released for party service at Ottawa, and an endeavour made to secure the support of opponents of prohibition for Liberal candidates. One is not impressed by the story. It closely resembles the attempt of Liberal organs to prove that Mr Hearst and his colleagues were the slaves of the liquor interest. But Mr Rowell is likely to go to Ottawa when Sir Wilfrid Laurier resigns the Liberal leadership.—Toronto News.

"The fact of the matter is—and we challenge Sir Robert Borden to disprove it—that even if his proposal had been carried through the British Navy would not have been a whit stronger at the outbreak of the war."—Montreal Herald. At any rate the Canadian people would to-day have a $35,000,000 share in the British Navy. That is the main consideration. As it is, owing to Laurier's separatist and anti-British act in causing the Senate to kill the Borden Naval Aid Bill, Canada has no claim whatever to share in the glorious work being performed by the "Grand Fleet."

ZAM-BUK MAMA!

Mothers who have used Zam-Buk say it is so fine for the many little accidents of daily occurrence in the home—and especially where there are children—that they would not be without it. Not only so, but children who have had Zam-Buk applied to an injury or sore, when again injured, cry for Zam-Buk to be applied. They know that Zam-Buk stops pain. Nothing ends the pain of a cut, bruise, burn, or skin disease like Zam-Buk, and nothing soothes, draws out the soreness and heals so quickly.

Mrs. I. Wilson of Sarnia, Ont., says: "I could not do without Zam-Buk for my children. It is the best ointment we have ever used for burns, sores and cuts."

Mr. L. B. Andresen of 1407 E. 22nd St., Minneapolis, Minn., writes: "When any of the children, my wife or self meet with an accident, we immediately apply Zam-Buk. It has saved us many a doctor's bill."

Mrs. C. B. Ritcey of Riverport, N.S., writes: "My baby had sores on her face, caused by teething. Zam-Buk completely healed them."

A WOMAN'S WAY;

Or,

BEL RUBIA

By CAPT. FREDERICK WHITTAKER

Author of "The Love That Lives," "Transgressing the Law," "The Captive Bride," etc.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

To think that Seymour, or Seymour's son, should succeed him, was a thorn in the earl's side, and he groaned:

"Oh, my boy! my boy! The old house is gone at last! at last!"

Then, as he thought, he ground his teeth, and muttered to himself:

"No, by heavens! I'm not too old to marry again! And before he shall be earl after me, I'll marry—by heavens! I'll marry the housekeeper! I will! I will! I'll—"

What more he might have said is uncertain, for at that moment he heard a tap at the door, and he started, and asked sharply:

"Who's there?"

He did not say, "Come in!" as he usually did.

There was a short silence, as if the person outside was puzzled at the unusual answer, and the earl called, irritably:

"Who's there? Are you deaf and dumb?"

Then a soft voice outside said:

"It's only me, my lord—Hester."

The earl rose from his seat and threw the door open, revealing the figure of a trim little girl, of about twenty, whom he knew as Hester Shirley, the daughter of his steward, brought up in the house from babyhood, and a sort of half waiting-maid, half secretary to her father.

The sight softened him, for he had always liked Hester for her quiet ways, and the fact that she never presumed on her position in the castle, or on her good looks, which were undeniable.

"What do you want, child?" he asked, kindly enough, for Hester was to him like one of the family, where her father had lived since he was a boy with the earl.

Hester timidly raised her blue eyes to his.

"I beg your pardon, my lord," she said, softly. "I did not mean to disturb you; but father told me to tell you that some of the tenants are in the library, waiting for their leases."

The earl passed his hand over his brow in a bewildered way. He stared at Hester as if he had never seen her before, and did not seem to understand what she was saying.

The girl remarked the pallor of his face and the troubled look it wore, and stammered:

"You are ill, my lord?"

"No, no," he said, absently. "Not ill, not ill, but in trouble. Hetty, do you remember Guy?"

"My lord!" she stammered, more frightened than before. "Has anything happened to Lord Neville?"

"Yes, Hetty," he said slowly. "Something has happened. You will never see Lord Neville again. Tell your father I cannot attend to anything to-day. My son is dead!"

Hetty grew very pale, and stared at him with dilated eyes, as if she hardly understood.

"Lord Neville dead?" she stammered. "Oh, my lord, I am so—so sorry! I—I—"

And the tender-hearted little maid burst out into a flood of tears that did her master more good than anything else could have done. It gave him the first touch of human sympathy.

The tears came into his eyes for the first time, and he laid his hand on Hetty's shoulder, saying softly:

"Thank you, Hetty. God bless you, child. I think you do love the old house, after all."

"Love it?" said Hetty, sobbing. "Oh, my lord! I'd die for any of the Nevilles any day, and so would father."

The earl patted her head kindly.

"I think you would, Hetty," he said, gravely, "and I thank you for it. Go now, and don't let any one disturb me. Good-by, child."

Some instinct—he hardly knew what, for he was usually shy and distant in manner to his inferiors in station—came over the earl at that moment, and he stooped down and kissed Hetty as a father might have done.

A deep flush covered the girl's face and she hastily closed the door and fled, while the earl walked to the window thoughtfully and looked out on the landscape beneath him.

Long he stood there, buried in thought, and at last he said to himself, aloud:

"Why not? I can marry whom I please; and love is worth a great deal to a man all alone."

Then his meditations were broken in upon by a knock at the door, and the voice of Matthew said:

"It's me, my lord. There's a sailor from Lisbon wants to see you."

CHAPTER III.

The Sailor's Story.

"Send him up at once," cried Lord Warwick, all his thoughts vanishing at the news. "Send him up."

Then the door was opened, and he saw Matthew with a man in sailor dress behind him, whose face seemed to the earl strangely familiar.

"Come in," he said, hurriedly. "I ought to know your face, man. Who are you?"

The man came awkwardly into the room, with his hat in his hand, pulling his forelock and scraping one leg behind him, in sailor fashion.

"Please, my lord," he said, with an effort to appear at ease that was a decided failure, for he was not used to high life, "I'm Stephen Hodge."

The earl bent his brow thoughtfully.

"Stephen Hodge? I don't remember. Are you any relation to Hodge the gardener?"

Hodge colored slightly.

"I'm his son, your lordship," he said, in a low tone. "Your lordship don't remember. The old man ain't had much comfort out of me in the past; but please God, he won't be disgraced no more by me. I'm the boy, my lord, as run away to see when my young lord went out as a midshipmite; and the press-gang got me and took me aboard the same ship as his lordship; and that's why I come to tell you what I knows, my lord."

The earl looked at him steadily. He had a dim memory of the trouble in which the old gardener had been some years before, on account of a runaway son; for he took interest in the affairs of all his dependents in a patriarchal fashion, not quite in the middle of the last century.

"Well," he said, "and what have you got to tell me? Stop! Did you say you were in the Boadicea?"

Hodge looked ashamed of himself, and shifted awkwardly from one foot to the other.

"Well, your lordship, I was, as one might say—that is, I was rated as able seaman aboard, when we struck the harbor of Lisbon."

The earl uttered a deep groan. He had been convinced of it before; but the confirmation of the news struck him hard, for all that.

"Then she was in the harbor when the earthquake came?" he said, in a stifled way.

Hodge shifted still more uneasily as he glanced at the troubled face of the earl.

Then he seemed to make up his mind to tell his story quickly, for he broke out:

"Yes, my lord, she were; but I warn't on board of her all the time, or I wouldn't be here now. The fact of the matter's this. I were one of the wild ones, my lord, and I took what they calls a French leave, ye know, the night arter the ship got in the harbor. Me and another chap got overboard, and slipped down the cable, so we could swim ashore. I won't deny, my lord, as it were our intention to keep out arter we was out. I ain't sayin' but what, my lord, the cappen was a fine officer, and the ship a good one; but, ye see, they was payin' better wages in merchant ships, and we wanted to get out of that bloomin' holystonin' of decks every mornin', and scrubbin' up brasses. Well, my lord, the long and short of the matter is, we was ashore when the shake come; and when we thought it were a judgment on us for takin' a French, when we was both good Englishmen. We was a cruisin' all round the town as drunk as lords, savin' your presence, when we see the captain's wife and the babies out in the kerridge, a-takin' a airin' in the city, as large as life—"

Here the earl interrupted him sternly:

"What are you talking of? What do you mean? I don't understand you. What captain's wife?"

Hodge seemed, in his turn, to be astonished, for he stared at the old earl, and stammered:

"Why didn't your lordship know? I—I thought—"

"Speak out and tell me what you mean," asked the earl, impatiently. "You don't know what may hang on your story. Do you mean my son had been married? Was it his wife you saw?"

"Why to be sure, your lordship," said Hodge as if the question astonished him. "His lordship got spliced two years ago, when the frigate was at Gibraltar, to a French lady called Mamizelle—Mamizelle—I swear I can't say the name."

"Say it as near as you can," said the earl in a tone of great anxiety. "What did it sound like? Give it as near as you can, Hodge."

Hodge seemed to be collecting his memories of names, and finally said:

"It was something like 'long veal,' my lord; but there was a 'dee' at the front or the tail of it, blessed if I know which."

"Was it De Longueville?" asked the earl, anxiously. "That is a French name, and a good one, too."

The sailor nodded, eagerly.

"That were it, my lord; and as for bein' a good name the young lady were a reg'lar highflyer; and they did say her father was a dook, or something of the sort, among the Johnny Chaprauds. But that's neither here nor there. His lordship was spliced to her at Gibraltar, by the chaplain; fur he took me ashore, as a witness, and that's the way I know it, my lord. It seems his lordship wanted the thing kept a secret; so he got his wedding in the night, and nobody knowed it but me. His lordship said as how he took me fur a witness, 'cause I came from home. And a French gent, as was the lady's brother, he came in, under a flag of truce, to see the thing done, all proper, in the chapel."

India's Hoarded Gold.

For many years London has been steadily drained of her gold by India. In ten years India has absorbed from circulation 150,000,000 gold sovereigns and hoarded them away. The coolie has learned that silver rupees are a poor investment, especially if he melts them into anklets or a nose ring for his wife, as over 30 per cent of the silver is lost in the melting pot, while the gold sovereign preserves its value whether he keeps it as a coin or melts it. When a coolie collects 15 rupees which he finds to be temporarily surplus he buys a sovereign with it. He has come to understand the wisdom of hoarding away only the gold coin, which he knows he can always realize on at its original value.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

How They Help

ST. RAPHAEL, ONT.

Four years ago I had such pains in my back that I could not work. The pains extended to my arms, sides and shoulders. I used many kinds of medicine for over a year, none of which did me very much good. I read about Gin Pills and sent for a sample and used them, and found the pains were leaving me and that I was feeling better. So I bought one box and before I used them all, the pains were almost gone and I could keep at work. After I had taken six other boxes of Gin Pills, I felt as well and strong as I did at the age of 30. I am a farmer, now 61 years old." 25

SMASHED THINGS UP.

Exploits of a British Submarine in Sea of Marmora.

Daring exploits in the Sea of Marmora that threw the Turks into a first-class panic are breezily described in a letter from a member of the crew, who is now a prisoner in Constantinople.

He says: "It is hopeless to try and give you a detailed account of it in a letter, but you can take it from me it was a fine show. We broke all previous records. Cochrane (the commander) was simply splendid. He went round the Sea of Marmora, leaving a trail of sunken and burning ships. We fairly shook things to the core.

"We are the first submarine in history to bombard a place on shore under fire. I think we were under fire about three times a day on an average. We penetrated into all sorts of places, destroying shipping. We even shelled a railway and destroyed two troop trains. We shelled the embankment, blocked the line, and then caught the trains as they came along.

"It was the funniest thing you can imagine to see the trains trying to hide behind the trees, but we caught them and smashed them all to blazes. Three ammunition wagons blew up with a terrible explosion. The soldiers, of course, got out and took cover and fired tons of ammunition at us, but we were out of range. Altogether we sank:

"One gunboat.

"Five steamers (one of 3,000 tons.)

"Seventeen large sailing vessels.

"We destroyed two trains, one railway embankment, and a few who fired on us got it in the neck for doing so. We also dived up to Constantinople and fired a torpedo at the wharf and arsenal where there were a lot of ammunition lighters. There was a most terrific explosion which shook the boat, although we were one and a quarter miles away.

"We had a small duel with a gunboat one day on the surface, but drove her off, although she fired about 200 rounds from her two guns. Afterwards we were left alone, and everything ran like blazes when we appeared anywhere. The only drawback was that we all had dysentery.

"Two men nearly died, and Hallifax, the second officer, and a seaman got badly burnt setting fire to a steamer, and so Cochrane and I had to keep watch all the time, and by the time the twenty-four days were up we were absolutely done up. What Hallifax went through down below, suffering agonies for three weeks with his burnt feet, I don't know. It must have been hell.

"Poor fellow, we had no trouble going up, but when we came down we had an awful time, as the Turks had rigged up all sorts of nets and things to catch us, and we got mixed up in them, and also got foul of mines three times.

"The reception we got when we steamed into harbor, where the French and English fleets and the troopships were lying, was great. I was so affected that I nearly shed tears. Everyone manned the rails and cheered us madly. I have never heard anything so fine. Just imagine us all dirty and unshaven, and the flag with bullet-holes all over it, and the conning-tower all dents from bullets and rusty, steaming through the lines and thousands of men cheering like mad.

Battleships, cruisers, torpedo-boats and transports—everyone along the rails, with the captains leading the cheers. Oh, it was great. Poor old Cochraine's eyes were full of tears as he saluted in reply. Then the wild howls of 'Are we downhearted?' and 'Well done, E7!' It was wonderful. I have always said that if we only got the chance we would do something—and we did."

Why an Alias?

One afternoon when the Duke of Edinburgh and Sir Arthur Sullivan, having finished a duet, were sitting down to a homely "dish of tea" provided by Mrs. Sullivan, the composer's mother, it suddenly occurred to her to start the subject of family names and titles, which puzzled the good lady considerably.

"Sir," she said, "your family name is Guelph."

"My dear mother"—began Arthur.

"But it is, isn't it?" she persisted.

"Certainly," replied the duke, much amused. "What's the matter with it, Mrs. Sullivan?"

"Oh, nothing," returned the excellent old lady musingly. "Only I can't understand why you don't call yourself by your proper name."

Arthur wanted to explain to her, but the duke would not allow him to.

"There's nothing to be ashamed of in the name of Guelph, Mrs. Sullivan," he said gravely.

"That's exactly what I say," persisted Arthur's mother; "nothing whatever as far as I know, and, that being so, why you should not call yourself by it I can't understand."—F. C. Burnand's "Records and Reminiscences."

Work for 200,000 Refugees.

More than 200,000 Belgian refugees have found shelter in England since the invasion of their country by the Germans and have settled down. Many of them have been absorbed in British industries.

While the business of taking care of this great number of refugees proved a great puzzle to the authorities at the beginning of the war, it is now being dealt with in the most complete manner and the special homes which had been opened in various parts of the country for the fugitives from Belgium are being rapidly closed down.

Most difficult to fit into the scheme of things are the professional men—lawyers, artists, architects, etc. A certain proportion of these, however, have adapted themselves to the situation, and are occupied in cutting out soldiers' clothes and in various unskilled branches of munition work. So great is the demand for labor today in Great Britain that only those who really have not the capacity to "do their bit" are idle.

HAULED THE STONES.

Veteran Ottawa Man Recalls Building of Parliament House.

The destruction of the Canadian House of Parliament has awakened recollections of its building, in the mind of Peter Redmond, a retired locomotive engiener, who saw King Edward lay its foundation stone in 1860.

When construction work was first started Mr. Redmond was employed as a fireman on the Ottawa and St. Lawrence railroad, and he was promoted to engineer a few days before the first material for the structure was hauled to Ottawa. One train crew was employed for three summers, hauling sandstone and quarry rock from Prescott, where it was landed from the steamers on the St. Lawrence river.

The train made a round trip each day. The first stone used in the building came from quarries located where the main part of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, now stands. It was shipped by water to Prescott, where it was loaded from the boats onto the railway cars by large cranes.

Mr. Redmond's train did nothing else during three summers but haul the stone. "It required two cars and sometimes three for each piece of stone that was moved to Ottawa," Mr. Redmond said yesterday. "The smallest stone that was hauled by the railroad weighed three tons, and the average weight was about five tons. We moved two stones which weighed nine tons each. I believe they were the largest that were put into the building.

"Owing to the excessive weight on the cars, which were much lighter than the steel cars now in use on the railroads, it was necessary to run our engines slowly. We seldom went over eighteen miles an hour, and as a rule the fastest time we made was fifteen miles."

No iron or steel was used in those days for the springs on the cars. Solid rubber was used, for the most part, and the cars were loaded so heavy that at the end of each trip new springs had to be put in most of the cars.

"Our train was given the right-of-way over all other trains. This was principally because of the heavy train we hauled. We were permitted to stop only in case of necessity. The necessity came frequently and was caused mostly by the excessive weight on the trucks, which resulted in many hot boxes.

"My train brought out the first shipment of rock and stone and stone cutters' tools. The first part of the building erected was a massive wall, over 500 feet long. It was on the end of this wall that the Prince of Wales laid the cornerstone. Thousands of people witnessed the laying of the stone, and I had an opportunity to shake hands with the Prince, as did many of the workmen.

"The wall, when first built, was a crude affair, but after the workmen finished polishing it, and fixing it up, it was one of the finest pieces of work of that kind that I have ever seen. It was five feet high and several inches in thickness."

"The Prince of Wales at that time was about twenty years old. He was a fine looking fellow, much better looking than his brother, the Duke of Edinborough, who visited Canada a year later.

"There were no big functions for the duke. He visited about the country for a few months and he went away without any great fuss being made about him. He was not a very good looking man. Many of the farmer boys were much better.

"A few years ago I saw Barney Riley, the Irish ski rider from Bovey, Minn., who was born and raised here, and I thought that I was back in Ottawa at the time the duke was there. Barney and the duke were as much alike as any two men could be, in appearance, form, and looks."

Unhealthy to Oppose Canadians.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, Special Correspondent, writing from the British Field Headquarters, says:

"For a variety of reasons I fancy it must be nerve-racking to be on the opposite side of the way to the Canadians in Flanders. They are most quiet, they are most dangerous. They are not only inspired by a restless audacity, but they are cunning and so methodical that they will undertake what seems like a wildcat adventure with certain death at the end of it and get back with hardly a scratch. They have brought the spirit of the trapper to the trenches, and they are very patient in marking down their prey.

"So it was in a recent 'cutting-out' raid, when a party of them, all volunteers, went out one night with the astounding intention of getting through the barbed wire outside one of the strongest German positions. For a small party to get back again from a trench full of Germans and machine-guns is not so easy as escaping from a jungle of man-eating tigers, and was not considered part of the program of war before the Canadians gave their exhibition. It was so successful that General Joffre has circulated an account of the Canadians' exploits as a model to the French army. After taking some prisoners and killing about 20 men, they came home again with only two casualties, one caused by accident. To men who know the conditions of trench warfare this exploit still seems fantastic and incredible. It was possible only because these Canadians had made cunning of more importance than courage itself, and had adapted old lessons of Red Indian warfare to these new conditions of modern fighting."

Deluged With Applications.

While recruiting is going-on briskly throughout the country and the various units are being filled up in the regular way by applying to commanding officers of each battalion, the Department of Militia and Defence is deluged with direct applications for positions of paymaster, chaplain, or quartermaster in the Canadian expeditionary force. The number of applications is already far in excess of vacancies.

FOR BETTER WOOL.

Clip Last Year Was Just 4,410,935 Pounds Short of Needs.

During the fiscal year of 1914 Canada imported 7,252,119 lbs. of raw wool. Against this, the Canadian exports for the same period were 2,841,184 pounds. Thus, Canada imported 4,410,935 pounds of raw wool more than she exported. Or in other words the Canadian farmers' wool-clip was just that much short of what her manufacturers required, says a writer in The Family Herald.

Surely Canadian farmers can sell good quality wool to their manufacturers as cheaply as they can import it. And why not? The men who grew these four million pounds of foreign wool have no greater advantages than have the Canadian sheepman. For Canada is credited by all competent authorities as being an ideal sheep country. Added to the grower's price of foreign wool are the two great items of freight and middlemen's profits and expense.

Why then are Canadian manufacturers compelled to pay high prices for imported wool? There are a number of reasons advanced in reply to the above question. First Canadian farmers do not grow enough wool. Second, a large percentage of Canadian wool is of very poor quality. This is due to a number of causes. There are a vast number of scrub sheep kept on Canadian farms and the wool is not properly cared for either before or after shearing.

The sheep are allowed to lose flesh in winter, this causes a weak spot in the fibre of the wool. Again, during the period of winter feeding a large amount of dirt, dust, and straw is allowed to get into the wool. At shearing time the sheep are sheared on dirty platforms and the fleeces tied with twine or put into jute sacks, the fibre of which gets into the wool and lowers its value from the manufacturers' standpoint.

Can these conditions be remedied? Most certainly. It is true that there are a number of districts and a large number of individuals who handle their wool in the most modern way and receive a correspondingly higher price. But on the majority of farms there is room for improvement.

The first step in the direction of better wool and more of it is to improve the breeding stock. This can best be accomplished through the medium of the farmer's club and live stock associations. Just now the Dominion Government through the live stock branch of the Department of Agriculture will loan to any group of ten farmers in a district where there is no farmers' club, a male animal of any one of the more important breeds. This is a chance that should not be overlooked by any one who is desirous of improving his flock.

Australian and New Zealand farmers are notable as producers of wool and mutton. And these men have found it a paying proposition to give from $500 to $3,000 for a pure bred ram. In Argentina, another great sheep country, there are instances of $5,000 being paid for a pure bred male. Why then should Canadian farmers hesitate to give a few dollars more than the butcher would give for a pure bred ram.

The breeds found most suitable for Canadian farmers, according to local conditions and the character of the land includes the following: For hilly and rolling sections the Cheviot and Cotswold. For level and intervale land the Shropshire, Oxford, Suffolk, Southdown, and Dorsets. For lowlands, the Leicester, Lincoln and Border-Lincoln. Classed according to their wools, the British breeders, and they are most suitable to Canadian conditions, are as follows: Longwooled-Lincoln, Cotswold, Leicester, and Border-Leicester, Medium-wooled-Cheviot. Down-wools-Shropshire, Oxford, Hampshire, Suffolk, Southdown, and Dorsets.

Indian Time.

Certain of the reservation Indians still cling to the calendar of their ancestors. The Indian method was to compute time by sleeps and moons. A sleep is twenty-four hours, and a moon is a month. There is also a midmoon, where the sun is at twelve o'clock, meridian. This hour is indicated by pointing overhead.

When an Indian pointed quarter way up the sky, he meant nine o'clock; when he pointed quarter way down, he meant three o'clock. Sunrise was the eastern horizon and sunset the western. Night was indicated by holding the hands together, palms downward, stretching out the arms, and holding the body and head bent forward.

When there was a moon, the time was indicated in the same way as by the sun. Were an Indian asked the distance to a certain place, or how far he had come, he would say so many sleeps or days' travel. A sleep, as describing distance, was about thirty-five miles when walking deliberately; or from fifty to seventy-five miles if going in haste with a message.

SMASHING THE PROHIBITION FALLACY

The Editor of The Iconoclast Furnishes Startling Facts and Figures in Answer to Some of Billy Sunday's Attacks on Liquor and Defense of Prohibition

Mr. Chas. A. Windle, editor of the "Iconoclast," and well known as an orator in the States, spoke the other day in Baltimore in answer to Billy Sunday's Drink Sermon. Some of the more salient points in his speech are worth repeating for the information of our readers.

Two Prohibition States.

Taking the case of Kentucky, Billy Sunday said there were 100 "dry" counties that cannot support themselves, the poorest, most Godforsaken, where poverty is rife and distress great, they have Prohibition.

Also take Georgia. Georgia is Prohibition by legislative enactment. The people have never had a chance to vote on the question, but the Georgia Prohibition law that Billy Sunday praises so highly permits each citizen of Georgia to import 72 gallons of alcoholic liquor for his personal use. Think of it. Each person can import 72 gallons for his own use. Now, we consume 22 gallons per capita throughout the United States. How can 72 gallons save the people of Georgia under Prohibition if 22 gallons is damning the rest of the people?

It is said that that law was passed to kill off the blind pig and make Prohibition more effective. It certainly would kill off the blind pig, because the old man could order 72 gallons, his eldest son could order 72 gallons, the next boy could order 72 gallons, and then they could start in with the eldest girl and come right down the line, and they have large families in Georgia. A "Blind Pig" would not stand a ghost of a show against competition like that.

Prohibition And Religion

Does Prohibition promote religion? Let us see. Kansas is Prohibition; Maine is Prohibition. The Federal Census Records show that Maine has next to the lowest percentage of church membership of any State in the Union and Kansas has the very lowest. Less than 29 per cent. of the people of Kansas belong to the church, while in "wet" Rhode Island 54 per cent. of the people belong to the church. So Prohibition does not seem to be helping religion much in Kansas and Maine. The saloons are doing more for religion in States where they are regulated than Prohibition is doing in States where saloons are prohibited. That is the record. The trouble is too many chruches are suffering from "dry rot."

Drink And Crime.

The relation between drink and crime is often insisted upon by prohibitionists. Abolish the saloons, they say, and you will empty the jails. Now what are the facts as given by indisputable statistics?

The United States census reports the number of empty jails on January 1st, 1910. Prohibition Kansas had 41 empty jails on that day. "Wet" Nebraska had 54. "Wet" Illinois had 61, and Prohibition Maine did not have a single empty jail in the State. The inference logically is that the longer you have Prohibition the worse it gets—the more use you have for your jail room.

Police records show that in Memphis, Tennessee, they had 63 murders for each 100,000 of the population in the year, 1915. Drink is stated to be the direct cause of 90 per cent, of crime. Yet in Memphis they abolished the saloon, they destroyed the brewery and the distillery, and yet that was the proportion of murders. In Milwaukee, which is wet, they had less than four murderers for each 100,000 of the population. Draw your own conclusions.

Drink And Poverty.

Now, let us take the relation of drink and poverty. Billy Sunday says that 80 per cent. of poverty was due to drink. The census records contradict this fully. The Statistical Abstract of the United States Census, No. 37, for 1915, says that Kansas has in savings banks $183.99 to each depositor. Maryland, which Sunday says is the worst whisky-soaked State in the Union, has $378.69, more than double the amount they have in Prohibition Kansas. In California, where they make wine and have no Prohibition, it is $522.63, and in wet Nevada the amount due each depositor is $824.59. The average for the whole of the United States is $444.35. In dry Kansas it is only $183.99.

Again turning to the Census Bulletin of the United States, you will find that deaths from alcoholism taken over a twenty-year period increased in dry territory 53 per cent. and decreased in wet territory 34 per cent. during the same period. That shows that Prohibition is harder on the people than any other form of drinking in the world. The number of deaths from alcoholism is given by Billy Sunday at 600,000 annually; the Census returns show them to be under 6,000 annually. Sunday kills more men than the Crown Prince.

You close a legitimate saloon and where a man bought his liquor retail, you force him to buy it wholesale. He bought it in 5 and 10 cent drinks under license, but under Prohibition, he buys it by the case or the barrel. When you have licenses, a man buys a drink; when you have Prohibition, he buys a drunk.

What Liquor Employs.

The liquor industry employs only 43,354 people, according to Billy Sunday. The census returns shows that there are on the payrolls of the liquor industry and allied trades 1,235,000 people. They are made up of 65,000 clerks, 60,000 carpenters, 42,000 stenographers, 35,000 truckmen, and so on. If you listen to a Prohibition speaker, or to Billy Sunday, you would think a beer barrel had feet and legs, that it got up early in the morning, left the brewery, walked up the street, kicked in the front door of the saloon asked the bartender where it could stand.

It takes 35,000 truckers to handle that end of the business. In the above list there should be included some 30,000 glass-workers. To hear Billy Sunday you would think bottles grew on trees, and if you go out there in the bush where Prohibition prevails you would think it true.

But Temperance is a different matter. Everyone believes in Temperance. Temperance is born of reason. Prohibition is born of hysteria. Temperance is a Christian virtue. Prohibition is Mohammedanism. Temperance is self-imposed and self-enforced. Prohibition is imposed by people like Billy Sunday without your consent and enforced with the policeman's club. Temperance permits; Prohibition forbids. If Temperance is right, Prohibition is wrong.

EARLY DAWN IN IRELAND.

Kate Douglas Wiggin Describes a Beautiful Scene.

In her "Penelope's Experiences in Ireland," Kate Douglas Wiggin writes a delightful description of early dawn on the "Emerald Isle."

"And such a dawn!" she says. "Such softness of air, such dew-drenched verdure. It is backward spring, they say, but to me the woods are even lovelier than in their summer wealth of foliage, when one can hardly distinguish the beauty of the single tree from that of its neighbors since the colors are blended in one universal green. Now we see the feathery tassels of the beech bursting out of their brown husks, the russet hues of the young oak leaves, and the countless emerald gleams that break from the ruby-budded lime. The greenest trees are the larch, the horse-chestnut, and the sycamore, three naturalized citizens who apparently still keep to their native fashions, and put out their foliage as they used to do in their own homes. The young alders and the hawthorn hedges are greening, but it will be a fortnight before we can realize the beauty of that . . . white bloom, with its bitter-sweet fragrance. The cuckoo-flower came this year before instead of after the bird, they tell us, showing that Nature . . . is capable of taking liberties with her own laws. There is a fragrance of freshly turned earth in the air, and the rooks are streaming out from the elms by the little church and resting for a bit in a group of plume-like yews. The last few days of warmth have inspired the birds; and as Francesca and I sit at our windows breathing in the sweetness and freshness of the morning, there is a concert of thrushes and blackbirds in the shrubberies. The little birds furnish the chorus or the undertone of song, the hedge-sparrows, redbreasts, and chaffinches, but the meistersingers 'call the tune' and lead the feathered orchestra with clear and certain notes. It is a golden time for the minstrels, for nest-building is finished, and the feeding of the younglings a good time yet in the future. We can see one little brown lady hovering warm eggs under her breast, her bright eyes peeping through a screen of leaves as she glances up at her singing lord, pouring out his thanks for the morning sun. There is only a hint of breeze, it might almost be the whisper of uncurling fern fronds, but soft as it is, it stirs the branches here and there, and I know that it is rocking hundreds of tiny cradles in the forest."

Cut Off by Gales.

The Skerryvore Lighthouse, on a rock in the Atlantic off Argyllshire, Scotland, has been isolated since December 21, owing to continuous stormy weather. To keep up communications the head light-keeper, Allinson, put a letter in a bottle on January 10. This was placed in a wooden frame to which was attached a leaden keel as ballast and a small tin sail. The winds carried the frame to the small island of Erraid, on the south-west side of Mull, which it reached on January 15.

Learning Spanish.

Spanish is the simplest language to learn in the world and commercially it is one of the most valuable. Six months' tuition should enable the average person to acquire a sufficient knowledge of Spanish for business purposes. It is quite simple, too, to compose an ordinary business letter in this language at the end of that period. One fact that makes the language so easy to English speaking people is that Spanish is pronounced exactly as it is spelt, there are no accents to trouble about, and the letter "h" is always silent. It is far easier to learn than French, and a knowledge of Latin helps one considerably.—London Globe.

Girl Soldier Sent Home.

A girl stowaway was found on one of the transports bringing Australian troops to the front, when she was two days out from Australia. The girl was dressed in khaki. She was sent back by another transport to Melbourne. She is eighteen years of age. She disguised herself as a soldier, and managed to get on board a troopship outward bound from Sydney. Her explanation was an overpowering desire to see her brother, who is in Egypt on active service. Knowing that she would not be allowed to land in Egypt if her sex were known, she formed the plan of disguising herself as a soldier.

Appearances.

It is the appearances that fill the scene, and we pause not to ask of what realities they are the proxies. When the actor of Athens moved all hearts as he clasped the burial urn and burst into broken sobs how few then knew that it held the ashes of his son!—Bulwer-Lytton.

Paying Calls In Russia.

Town life in Russia is as different as can be from life in the country districts. One curious custom is the after dinner call. People call on their friends after dinner at night or even after the theater, paying calls at midnight being quite the thing to do. The Russian dinner always begins with a sideboard course of cold meats, hors d'oeuvres, etc.—that is to say, the dishes are laid out on the sideboard and the guests help themselves before sitting down to partake of the regular meal. It is from this custom that we derive the term "service a la Russe" as applied to dinners at which the carving is done from the sideboard.—London Answers.

Conservation.

"And," continued the lecturer, "I warrant you that there is not a man in this entire audience who has ever lifted his finger or in any way attempted to stop this awful waste of our forests and our lumber supply. If there is I want that man to stand up."

There was a slight commotion in the rear of the room, and a nervous little man rose to the occasion—and his feet.

"And now, my friend, will you explain in just what way you have conserved the forests of our nation?"

And with the utmost gravity and sincerity the little man said, "I have used the same toothpick twice."

African Fashion Notes.

The prettiest dress of the Mpongwe woman is a cloth drawn up under the arms, a scarf on the shoulders and a handkerchief folded over the coiled hair in a high stiff fold set well up on the head, rather like a child's idea of a crown. There is a great fancy for purples and lavenders set off with shades of rose and red and a sudden keen note of gilt. With black there will be a touch of most delicious bright green. A cloth and a scarf worn by a woman of beautiful gesture—and a Gabonnaise is always that—have a certain mutable charm; the movements of the body, the wind that blows from the sea—these renew and display the folds of the garment so that the eye is intrigued.—Atlantic.

But None For Him.

"Any letters for me?"

"What name?"

"Jason Howlet."

"Um-m-m. Nope."

"That's strange."

"Expecting any?"

"No, but Israel Pubbleton was reading the other day thet there was enough letters sent through the postoffice last year to give every man, woman and child twenty-three each, an' I thought I'd come in for my share."

An Oversight.

"What do you think of his nerve?" exclaimed the old man, who was notoriously tricky in business. "He called me a barefaced robber!"

"Oh, well," replied the man who knew him, "probably in his excitement he didn't notice your mustache."

Another Reason.

"They call her the human graphophone."

"Just because she buzzes a bit?"

"It's on account of the airs she puts on."

THACKERAY'S LIBRARY.

It Was Full of Delightful Surprises for Visitors.

In "Punch Notes" by Sir Francis Burnand, which appeared in The Pall Mall magazine a number of years ago, he gives his impressions of Thackeray. "I remember the occasion so well," he says. "The Punch dinner was, on that particular Wednesday, at Dulwich. It was a full gathering. Thackeray drove down. I arrived alone; and found my way to the hotel, or inn as I think it was. . . But Thackeray—shall I ever forget his personality? How kind, how encouraging! I remember he left early, and as he was quitting the room I stood up, so that as he went towards the door I might have the chance of shaking his hand; but before I could do so he placed it on my shoulder, faced me round to the company, and said, 'Gentlemen, let me introduce "the new boy."' Whereupon Mark (Lemon) and his merry men rapped the table and cried 'hear, hear.'"

"Once I remember, the Punch dinner was held at Thackeray's house, Prince's Gate," the writer continues. "After dinner Thackeray left us for our discussion; and afterwards, the cartoon having been settled, we joined him in his study. Here I stayed on till quite the last, detained by Thackeray, who said he wanted to have a chat with me. I remember the subject of our conversation, or a part of it, very well. It was about the Rev. Dr. Rock—who was a friend of his—and of something he had told him as concerning an incident in the life of some saint. Thackeray easily contrived to make me thoroughly interested in the matter, and disputed the correctness of my memory as to some event mentioned in Allan Butler's 'Hagiology.' 'However,' said Thackeray, 'we'll soon see who is right. Just get down for me that book up there on the third shelf from the top. You'll have to mount the steps.' Obediently I ascended the library ladder, and endeavored to pull the book in question out of its place. It stuck; it would not come out. 'Try again,' said Thackeray, who was standing on the hearth-rug watching my proceedings with considerable interest. I did try again; and again; and was about to make a third and violent effort, when Thackeray roared with laughter. 'They're all dummies!' he cried. I felt considerably 'sold.' 'But,' he added pleasantly, 'I do not think the book is in this room. If you will go into the room you've just left—out of here—you'll find it, I fancy, on the side table.'

"'Certainly,' I said, eager to show my readiness, and to put myself on the best possible terms with the great man. So I turned to go to the door in the direction he had indicated. No door; all books. Then on looking round, it seemed to me that there was no door; books everywhere. Yet we must have entered by some door out of the dining room; and here we were! and others had gone out by another door; but where? Were we in a room without doors?

"'I'll show you,' he said; and then, intensely enjoying my puzzlement, he put his hands in among the books in the case—all dummies, every one—and turning a handle, opened the door leading in the dining room."

Ye Gentlemen of England.

This old English song, written by Martin Parker, was a great favorite with British tars years ago.

Ye gentlemen of England
That live at home at ease,
Ah! little do ye think upon
The dangers of the seas.
Give ear unto the mariners,
And they will plainly show
All the cares and all the fears
When the stormy winds do blow.
When the stormy winds do blow.

If enemies oppose us,
When England is at war
With any foreign nation,
We fear not wound or scar;
Our roaring guns shall teach 'em
Our valor well to know,
Whilst they reel on the keel,
And the stormy winds do blow.
And the stormy winds do blow.

Then courage, all brave mariners,
And never be dismayed;
While we have bold adventurers,
We ne'er shall want a trade;
Our merchants will employ us
To fetch them wealth, we know;
Then be bold—work for gold,
When the stormy winds do blow.

Mare's Fate in Question.

The question whether a mare on which a Belgian circus proprietor escaped from the Germans should be destroyed came before the Recorder at Reading recently. When the Germans blew up the circus, near Namur, and killed or captured more than sixty of the horses, the owner escaped on his favorite mare. He came to England and gave performances at Reading, where he was convicted of cruelty to this mare, and fined 10s, an order being made for the animal to be destroyed. He appealed against that conviction. Expert witnesses were called on each side, and eventually the Recorder upheld the magistrate's decision with regard to cruelty, but adjourned the question whether the mare should be destroyed to the next quarter sessions. Meanwhile sympathizers will look after the animal.

Is It Merely Indigestion?

It's queer about life. We like to talk about its large issues. But most of them, when reduced to their lowest terms, are extremely simple.

An old minister's wife never used to hear her husband preach an especially accusing or intolerant sermon without wondering what she had been giving him to eat that did not agree with him. For she had learned by experience that even the color of his theology was affected by his digestion.

A prominent citizen admits that for years life looked like a dreary desert and a barren waste to him until one day a doctor exclaimed, "Why, man, do you realize that you are going about this earth without a particle of hydrochloric acid in your system?"

The full significance of this highly important fact had never before pierced the outer rim of his consciousness, but he learned then that to most humans a certain proportion of this acid is essential to digestion. "And," he went on to say, "after a few weeks I felt like going around preaching the gospel of ten drops of dilute hydrochloric acid in a glass of water after meals to all of suffering humanity." It was all so perfectly simple and so almost ridiculous to know that so much of the value of life itself could turn on so small a matter as ten little drops of fluid with your food.

It's the old story of the horseshoe nail. For the want of a nail a kingdom was lost, and there are more trifling little nails missing in every day life than we imagine. And this is not by way of urging us to brood over our ills, but to examine them sufficiently to find out how simple some of them are.

Perhaps it isn't a matter of ten drops of anything that will make this world a fairer place for you. Perhaps it is a simple little pair of reading glasses that will remove your eye strain and eliminate your headaches and sweeten your disposition. Perhaps it is nothing but a foolish little corn that is pressing on a nerve and making you think you are going to be laid up for life with rheumatism or paralysis or what not. But if it is a small thing on which much of comfort and health depends, how foolish not to take the trouble to set it right.

For, after all, it takes more than sentiment to live well and happily. It takes common sense and as much decent interest in the care of the machine you live with, which is your own body, as you would bestow upon your dollar watch or your typewriter, not to mention your sewing machine or your automobile.

The Brown Thrasher.

The brown thrasher is one of our most useful birds. He measures eleven and one-half inches in length. Perched upon the very top of a tree, which usually is not a very tall one, with head up and tail down, he pours out a flood of music—high notes and low notes, smooth notes and rough notes, all jumbled together as if the singer were really beside himself.

Following are a few marks by which he can be distinguished from all the other thrushlike birds: The two white wing bars, the extraordinarily long tail, which is a bright reddish brown, and the long continued, bright and cheerful carol which is heard in the morning (his favorite time for singing), consisting of all sorts of musical sounds. While the farmer is planting the seed he cries, "Drop it, drop it—cover it up, cover it up—pull it up, pull it up, pull it up." His call is a clear whistled "wheuu."

Game of Cities.

In this game the players sit in a circle around a table, and each one is provided with a piece of paper and a pencil. The leader asks them to write at the head of the paper the name of a city, each being different. They are allowed five minutes to make up a sentence, each word of which must begin with the letters composing the name of the city. For example:

City—Chicago.

Sentence—Came home in carriage after going out.

If any one fails to have a correct sentence at the end of five minutes he must pay a forfeit.

Jumping Letters.

1. Jump a piece of marsh land and find part of Great Britain.
2. Jump able to endure hardship and find yourself held in moral obligation.
3. Jump to clean with a brush and find yourself in tears.
4. Jump articles of household furniture and find the most competent of men.
5. Jump a marsh plant and find borders.

Answers.—1, Swale—Wales; 2, tough—ought; 3, sweep—weeps; 4, tables—ablest; 5, sedge—edges.

Ideas About the Sun.

In ancient times the philosophers held very erroneous notions concerning the size of the sun. Anaximander thought that it might be nearly as large as the then known earth, including southern Europe, northern Africa and western Asia. Anaxagoras declared it could be no larger than Greece and her islands. Heraclitus convinced his hearers that it was about the size of a man's head.

I'll bind myself to that which, once being right, will not be less right when I shrink from it.—Kingsley.

GERMAN INHUMANITY.

Authorities Confiscated Serum Sent Home by German Doctor.

Recent events have revealed a remarkable fact about a German scientist now interned at the Alexandra Palace, London, Eng.

The scientist is Frederick Mehnarto, a pupil of Koch and a Harley street consultant who came into prominence three years ago in connection with experiments in the treatment of tuberculosis conducted in London at the Margaret street hospital, Greenwich. Dr. Mehnarto claimed to have discovered a serum for consumption.

On the outbreak of war he was interned at the Alexandra Palace. His house in Harley street and his home and laboratory at Notting Hill were closed. A few months ago a well-known diplomatist was suffering from the disease for which the interned German's serum was considered a possible cure. Representations were made to the authorities, and it was agreed to allow Mehnarto to return to his laboratory at Notting Hill, as he alone could manufacture the serum. The secret he refused to impart to anyone.

The German left the palace each day under escort. But an initial difficulty had to be overcome. For his experiments he had kept a number of vipers. These were now dead. He was given facilities for obtaining what he required from the Zoological Gardens.

Thus supplied he worked for months in his laboratory, producing the serum under the official eye of a Scotland Yard officer.

He also continued experiments for the perfecting of a serum to take the place of "606," and claimed to have arrived at a satisfactory result while working as a prisoner of war.

While thus engaged news was sent him from Germany that his mother (who had visited him in England just before the war) had been stricken with tuberculosis, contracted, it was feared, through a too venturesome visit to his laboratory. There was a request that a phial of her son's serum should be sent her.

By the courtesy of the British authorities a messenger was despatched with the elixir and with a letter in code to Dr. Mehnarto's only sister giving the secret of the cure. The messenger was seized on entering Germany, the letter and phial were confiscated, and the sister to whom the letter was addressed was arrested, and, as far as is known, she is still held prisoner.

Meanwhile the illness of the diplomatist for the treatment of whom Dr. Mehnarto had been allowed to return to his laboratory did not yield to treatment. Eventually the permit to leave Alexandra Palace was revoked, and the scientist now spends his days behind the barbed wire at Wood Green along with other Germans who hold high places in science, art, and medicine.

At the time of his interment Dr. Mehnarto is said to have been in negotiation with the physicians of a crowned head for a supply of his serum.

Mr. John Ross Robertson, owner of The Toronto Telegram, is an old-time reporter, and as such has his eye open for good stories. He nailed one on the street car the other day. A soldier in kilts was sitting opposite a man in civilian attire, who observed that his knees must be very cold in the keen weather prevailing. "Not half so cold as your feet," was the sharp rejoinder.

MEXICO CITY POLICE.

Always Ready at Night to Answer a Clap of the Hands.

In Mexico City each of the 5,000 police who won for it the reputation of the most thoroughly patrolled city in the world carries a lantern underneath his cape. After a certain hour, when traffic has virtually ceased, the policemen put their lanterns in the middle of the roadways at the intersections of the streets.

Then they go into the nearest doorway, sit down and prepare to spend the rest of the night at their ease. If you want a policeman you simply step out on the sidewalk and clap your hands. Immediately with the suddenness of genii one appears from either side. Handclapping, by the way, is the universal method of attracting attention in Mexico. To insure wakefulness on the part of the police any one who brings a lantern or a policeman's cap to the nearest police station gets $5, which is deducted from the negligent patrolman's monthly pay.

In some cities the system of "keeping tab" on policemen is different. Every hour the sergeant at the station goes to the door and blows his whistle. The man on the nearest beat immediately responds. Number two follows, and so the whistle passes through the entire force and comes back to the station. If one whistle is missing the man who has the preceding beat investigates and reports at headquarters. The speed with which the hour can be blown and the watchfulness of the force determined is astonishing.

A Cabin From a Redwood Log.

There is a cabin in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, which is constructed of a single log of redwood. It is about twelve feet long and rests upon a heavy platform of timbers which support the weight of the hollowed log. A doorway about five feet high and eighteen inches wide admits visitors to the interior, which forms a fair sized room. The appearance of the cabin is striking because the front presents a cross section of a large redwood tree with the bark intact.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Generous Host.

Parvenu took his wife and two other women to lunch at a fashionable hotel. As they seated themselves in the lofty, oval dining room Mrs. Parvenu whispered to her husband:

"Ask for a menu, Jack."

Parvenu puffed out his chest and chuckled.

"One menu only?" he said. "One menu for four No, no; I'll do the thing well now I've started it. Here, waiter, four menus—fresh ones, mind, and see that they're not overdone."

Many Military Matters

In all probability the Wood estate at Barriefield which lies at the extreme north of the village on the Kingston Mills road will be taken into use this year and used as an hospital for the soldiers at Barriefield camp. Lieut.-Col. R. J. Gardiner A.D.M.S., announces that he expects an average of 240 men sick a day. Last year with an average population of 2,400 men there was an average sick-list of about sixty patients.

The camp of over 10,000 soldiers will mean that every hospital available will be crowded to capacity from the first to the last of the camp. The Kingston General Hospital can take seventy-five, the Hotel Dieu forty, Cunningham Hospital sixty, Military Hospital on Queen street, thirty. The remainder, which will likely amount to seventy-five, will have to be taken care of by using the Wood home. The Royal Military college has extended the use of the building and there is equipment complete for sanitary and other needs.

The field hospital at Barriefield camp will be strictly for handling patients of not more than twenty-four hours treatment. This was the practice last year.

The School of Cookery at Barriefield camp will be run continuously through the six months that the camp is in operation. It is the idea of Lieut.-Col. W. J. Brown, G.S.O., that every man who goes into the camp for training shall be able to cook his own meals. By using the School of Cookery for the instruction of the N.C.O.'s he intends to have this information spread to every man in the ranks in the form of lectures to each company.

The total of recruits from Military District No. 3 up to April 15th was 31,325. This means that as soon as 9,05 more men come forward and don the khaki this military district, that extends—from Lindsay to the Quebec border, will have supplied its quota of the 500,000 asked for by Premier Borden on New Year's Day.

When the representatives of the Recruiting League made their recent visit to Ottawa, headquarters gave them the following statistics.

Canada's male population based on the last census shows a total of 3,821,967. The Premier virtually asked for 13 per cent. when he said 500,000. The male population of Military District No. 3 on the same basis is 310,235 and 13 per cent. of this number is 40,330. When half a million men were called from Canada of that number 40,330 were asked for from this military district. Of that number 31,325 have already responded. This is a splendid record.

There were 1,390 recruits secured in Military District No. 12 in the two weeks up to April 15th. This number divides up according to the official figures as follows:

Canadians	806
English	414
Scotch	88
Irish	63

He was a gay young man, and kept very late hours, but had now joined the recruits and been ordered to the front. In bidding farewell to his beloved, he said:

"Darling, when I am far away, will you gaze at yon star every night and think of me?"

"I will, indeed, dearest," she replied, "if I needed anything to remind me of you I would choose that very star."

"Why?" he asked, curiously.

"Because it is out so very late at night and looks so pale in the morning.

IN & ABOUT THE CITY

STILL MISSING

Although every effort has been made by relatives and friends and the police of the city to ascertain the whereabouts of Mr. Jeremiah West, of Hungerford township, who disappeared in this city on Thursday last, the same has proved futile. No trace whatever has been found of the missing man, and the general impression is that he has met in some manner an untimely end.

SPOKE AT THEATRE

In the Russel Theatre at Ottawa on Sunday, the heroic actions of Canadians at St. Julien a year ago, was fittingly commemorated. There was a fine musical programme given, and a feature were the addresses given. Amongst the speakers were Col. Pine de Salaberry, commander of the 230th the French Canadian Voltiquers, and Major R. D. Ponton. The latter, who is a veteran of the second battle of Ypres, Festubert and Givenchy, told the audience that Ottawa had occasion to feel proud of the boys from that city, who had fought under him. The Canadians a year ago had held back six attacks by the flower of the German army. He said that if he could transplant five square miles of Belgium in Canada it would make the men of Canada realize what was on in Europe. A year ago 4,000 Canadians held back 80,000 Germans for three days in a fight for liberty and home.

MEN OF ST. JULIEN HOLD A REUNION

FIREMEN AND ENGINEMEN HOLD ENJOYABLE DANCE

The members of Challenge Lodge No. 66 Brotherhood of G. T. R. Locomotive and Enginemen last evening held their 34th annual dance, and it proved to be one of the most successful in the history of the Lodge. There were upwards of 150 couples present, and in addition to those in attendance from Belleville there were guests from Trenton, Picton, Napanee, Brockville and Deseronto. The assembly was held in the Ramsay Academy, East Front street. The spacious dancing hall was most appropriately decorated for the occasion, with flags and bunting, and a head light from an engine with side lamps was an attraction. To appropriate music furnished by the Sills orchestra, dancing was commenced at 9 o'clock and continued until an early hour this morning. At midnight a dainty lunch, provided by the ladies, was partaken. All present thoroughly enjoyed the delightful function. The committee in charge did everything possible for the comfort and enjoyment of all who attended.

The committee was as follows:

George Naylor, chairman; N. M. Kerr, treasurer; T. H. Norton, secretary; Geo. A. Darrah, floor manager, and A. Moon, H. Leamon, M. J. Boyd and W. Adams.

KILLED BY A FALL

News comes to Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Dracutt of this city from Fort Pit, Saskatchewan, announcing the accidental death of their grandson, William Dracutt, 14 years of age. The young lad was riding on horseback, when the animal stumbled throwing the rider, causing injuries that proved fatal. The deceased was the second son of Mr. C. F. Dracutt, Jr., of Fort Pit.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM C. H. CARSON

On board H.M.S. Valdivia.
March 27, 1916.

Dear Dad, Eunice and Edna:—This is Sunday, and as you will note by the above address we are on the briny once again, the Mediterranean Sea, bound for Sicily, where we expect to transfer our hospital equipment to the largest British steamer afloat, the "Brittanic," and then proceed to England.

The weather is simply grand, and one could hardly believe they were on boat, until they look around and see nothing but water on every side, but we expect to be in Sicily to-morrow, so may probably see land to-night.

The meals on this boat are fine. We had lamb chops, potatoes, bread and butter, tea and porridge for breakfast, and for dinner we had, soup, roast beef, potatoes, green peas, bread and plum pudding, all we could eat; so you see we are not doing so badly. Our sleeping quarters are nice and clean and a separate bed for each soldier; and now, dad, as I want to use the rest of space to tell you what I can about Sicily and the remainder of our trip, will close for now.

Friday, March 31st.

We arrived at Port Augusta, Sicily, on Monday the 28th, 8.30 a.m., and a very pretty sight awaited us. We could look inland and see the green fields and hills and large orange and lemon orchards. It sure looked good to me and reminded me of old Canada. The tree were all in leaves, and I believe the oranges and lemons were being picked, as the natives came out in their boats and sold us oranges, four for a penny, or two for a cent, in our money, and they were great; the best I think I ever had, and the lemons great big large ones, two for a penny. We were not permitted to go ashore. We awaited in the harbor the arrival of the Brittanic, which steamed in on the morning of the 29th. We transferred our hospital equipment, and after taking on twenty-five hundred patients, steamed out of the harbor at 2.30 p.m. on the thirtieth, and proceeded on our way to England.

This sure is one swell boat. I wish you could see it. It is 900 feet long, 90 feet wide, 90 feet under the water, and sixty-two feet above, with a tonnage of 50,000 tons, and has all the latest modern improvements. It has swimming tanks, gymnasiums, tennis courts, and all kind of places for amusements; they even have electric elevators. The boat can travel twenty-six knots an hour.

The weather has changed and is cool and windy, and we have now a very heavy sea, but this boat cuts right through, regardless of the large rolling waves. We can now see the northern coast of Africa, and expect to pass Gibraltar some time tomorrow.

April 1st.

April fools' day, and I got mine. I went away up to the stern of the boat this morning to have a look around, and while up there met a patient who was in my ward at Lemnos, an Australian, and coming back we got lost, there are so many twists and turns. We wandered into a ward and asked two sisters to direct us to our quarters. They told us to keep to our right; we went a little farther and a patient says, "keep to your right," a little farther another patient says, "keep to your right," and the first thing we knew we were back to the sisters again. They laughed at us, and made us acquainted with the fact that this was the first of April, and we lost no time in getting out of there, and soon wandered back to our own quarters. We passed Gibraltar about nine-thirty, and then I retired to my quarters and had a good night's rest.

April 2nd.

We are now through the Straits of Gibraltar, into the Atlantic, and can now see the shores of Spain. We had church service this a.m. on main deck, and at 11.30 life boat drill. Every one had life belts on and went to the boats. I had a good rabbit dinner, and am now in the writing room writing this young book.

April 3rd.

Weather fine. I am just loafing around and cutting some of the boy's hair.

April 4th.

Arrived in the English Channel 9 a.m., and docked at Southampton at 12.30 p.m. There is a rumor that we are going to transfer to another boat and go right over to France, and everything looks that way. So I am going to get this posted if possible. Now do not start worrying, for we will be better off in France than we were at the Dardanelles. I will write at first opportunity. Best love and prayer to all, bye, bye.

Your loving son,
Chas. H. Carson.

$50.00 REWARD

Fifty Dollars Reward is offered for information that will lead to the discovery of the whereabouts of Jeremiah West of Thomasburg, who disappeared in the City of Belleville on Thursday evening, April 20th.

Anyone having information will please notify T. E. Wilson, Superintendent County House of Refuge.

West was a man about 65 years of age, bald, light mustache, 6 feet tall, slightly stooped, blue eyes, rather prominent nose, weight about 165 lbs., wore brown tweed suit and soft felt hat 25.2t

Dear Wife:—Just a few lines to let you know I am well and enjoying myself under the circumstances. I hope you are all well at home. I haven't very much to talk about as there is a limit to what we say. I saw our first Hun prisoners the other day, April 3rd. There were 92 of them. They were sure a tough looking bunch, all young, and looked very weak. Some say they gave themselves up, but they were captured in a crater, starving to death. Where we are they are coming in every day with very few casualties on our side. Some of them could talk broken English. I was talking to one of them and told him he would be taken on a trip to England. He said, "Oh, no! for there is no England." So he must have been made to believe that England had been blown up. He said it was horrible how the Allies were throwing over shells. I don't know how the people in Canada think about the war but the feeling over here is it will be over before the snow falls again, and indeed I won't be sorry. The City of the Bay for mine. I have a dandy horse to drive now, and also a Ross rifle. Well, Nellie, that was some battle at Verdun. The French more than mowed them down. There were one hundred thousand dead Germans left on the battle field. It took the heart out of them for fighting at Verdun. We are waiting for them.

France is a fine country. The people are great workers; they are ploughing and putting in their spring crops. Women and girls turn out to help. The machinery they use is one thousand years old. I will have a lot to talk about when I get home.

It was a great shock to me to read in your letter of Mrs. Jim Ketcheson's death. We hardly ever see a paper here but we get news from other sources. The Russians are certainly coming right along. They captured 2 line trenches last night. Remember me to Nellie and Delacey. Tell them when I come home I will tell them all the news. I suppose Billie and Margaret are well again. Remember me to all the Belleville friends.

I will close as my time is taken up so much with everything. With my best love to you and the children, I am ever

Your soldier boy,
A. J. Stewart.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

AT THE PALACE THEATRE LAST NIGHT

A fine programme was given to a large audience in the Palace Theatre last night, the chief attraction being the featuring of Hobart Bosworth in "Two Men of Sandy Bar," a five-reel photoplay of exceptional merit. It took one back to the days of '49, when "things happened" in such places as Sandy Bar and Red Gulch. The gambling den, with Bosworth as "Jack Oakhurst," the notorious gambler, who was finally compelled to leave town was vividly portrayed while his partner, "Sandy Morton," a drunken rake, but the son of a wealthy man, who had been sent adrift by his father when young, played a prominent part. How Oakhurst impersonated his partner, and became associated with Sandy's father, figuring in high financial circles, followed by the return of the rightful heir, and the final justice dealt out to each, made up an evening of great interest. The programme will be repeated this evening.

Without doubt the finest array of varied photoplays offered to local photoplay lovers in many months will be presented at Griffin's Opera House, tonight and Wednesday evening when the world's most popular photoplay star, Mary Pickford appearing in "Home Folks," a beautiful domestic drama of engrossing interest. Dough and dynamite was conceded by many as the greatest laughing vehicle that Charlie Chaplin has ever appeared in but, "The Mix Up," the great 4-reel Chaplin comedy which will be presented on the sam program tonight is said to register one solid hour's continuous laughter without a dull moment throughout the entire 4-reels. Belleville has had many war dramas but for thrilling action, gripping story and a cast of unusual excellence the 4-reel, "Spy Menace," photodrama, Fringe of War, is said to excell anything heretofore attempted in war stories, and will be exhibited on the same program with the above special features tonight.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION," THURSDAY.

David W. Griffith's most extraordinary achievement with his new photo-spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," coming to Griffin's Opera House next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Friday and Saturday only, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history, the introduction of Slavery, the War of Secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of Reconstruction, and the restoration of the South to its own. Within 12,000 feet of celluloid film he has successfully combined a thrilling, plausible and dignified presentment of national upgrowth with a real and human love story based on Thomas Dixon's book-romance, "The Clansman." Mr. Griffith employed 18,000 people in taking these historical pictures. The battle scenes were actual duplicates of several of the Civil War conflicts, and so were the facsimiles of important events. We see Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for volunteers, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appamattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the Freedmen's Bureau, the carpet-baggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the Ku Klux. The realism is almost uncanny. The labor involved in this newest sort of picture-making is enormous. There are 5,000 separate and individually posed scenes involving about 200,000 interesting details. The musical score played by a symphony orchestra of 30 musicians is as complex and elaborate as that of any grand opera. Although no a word is spoken on the stage, the musical and mechanical effects employ a hundred flesh-and-blood helpers nightly. In brief, the magnitude of the stupendous film dwarfs the average stage play into insignificance.

IN THE CITY

Harry Gilmore and Gerald Brooks, Chief Electrician and Carpenter for, "The Birth of a Nation," photo spectacle, are in the City, completing arrangements for its exhibition at Griffin's Opera House, next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Armenian History.

The history of the later years of the Armenian kingdom is bound up in the history of Am. The stronghold city became the capital of the Bagratid kings of Armenia in 961. The Byzantine emperor captured it in 1046, and it was then a hive of many scores of thousands, a wealthy city and an inviting one. The Seljuk Turks carried fire and sword throughout its confines eighteen years later. The warlike Georgians took it five times between 1125 and 1209. The Mongols overran it in 1239, and an earthquake in 1319 completed the work of ruin. The great cathedral, the most perfect survival, was founded in 1010, just at the beginning of the city's long chain of misfortune.

THE LIGHTHOUSE POST.

How News and Relief Are Carried to the Keepers of the Tower.

The shores of England are plentifully studded with lighthouses, not a few of which are built upon small islands, or else isolated rocks, situated more or less near to the mainland.

Stress of weather often cuts off these lonely watch-towers from the rest of the world, in order to communicate with which the lighthouse-keepers have to exercise their wits. It is then that what is known to watchful shore-dwellers as lighthouse post comes into play, by means of which communication is established through even the roughest sea.

The head lightkeeper encloses a letter, or letters, in a bottle, and fixes the bottle securely in a wooden case. A leaden keel is attached to serve as ballast, and a small tin sail is added to catch the breeze. This tiny craft is then launched upon the waves, the keepers watch it out of sight, and then go back to their lonely waiting for the relief-boat.

Skerryvore Lighthouse last year had been isolated since December 21, when, on January 10th the head lightkeeper resolved to resort to lighthouse post, and sent off one of these messages by bottle. Favorable winds carried the frail craft to the small island of Erraid, on the south-west side of Mull, which it reached on January 15th. Four days later a similar tiny boat from Erraid carried the message to Bunessan, in Mull, a distance altogether of thirty miles.

Although it is near to the shore, the lighthouse at the Needles can only be approached from the sea in fine weather. So, even there, lighthouse post has sometimes been resorted to, though nowadays the coastguards, in their station on the cliff above, talk to the keepers and read them extracts from the newspapers over the telephone.

The Wolf and Smalls Lighthouses are situated on lonely rocks far out at sea, and their lighthouse post, when resorted to, is very uncertain. The Wolf Rock stands eight miles off Land's End; the Smalls light is erected on one of a group of islands twenty miles south-west of St. David's Head, in Pembrokeshire.

Wolf Rock, the most isolated station in the British Isles, is not connected with the mainland by wire; but the Smalls, which is also an important Lloyd's Signalling Station, has a submarine-cable for communications. For all that the keepers like to cheer their wives with a letter per lighthouse post when, owing to heavy weather, relief does not arrive.

Lighthouses have a crew of six men, three of whom are on duty for a month while the other three are ashore.

Lighthouse relief in rough weather is effected by means of a boat having strong booms projecting from its sides which support stout nets. In most instances the sea is too violent to allow of a landing actually upon the rock itself, and the men have to be hauled up from and lowered down into the boat by means of the hoisting tackle with which the lighthouse is provided.

The nets around the boat have saved many a keeper from being drowned in the boiling surf that beats on the lighthouse rock during the performance of this feat.

Carlyle's Temper.

Carlyle bad tempered? Not at all, if we are to place any belief in the testimony of the maid behind the broom. One of Carlyle's servants, Jessie, who on marrying became Mrs. Broadfoot, has left a very favorable impression of her old master, said The London Standard.

"I could have lived with him all my days," she says, "and it always makes me angry when I read, as I sometimes do, that he was bad tempered. He was the very reverse, in my opinion. I never would have left him when I did if I had not been going to get married, and I took great pride in attending on him and studying all his wants and wishes.

"It was one of my duties to rush out and move on all street organs and things of that kind. Many a time in the morning before he arose I used to fill his pipe, the short clay he used in his bedroom, for him and strike the match to light it. I always cut up his tobacco (he bought it in flat cakes), and kept his tin box regularly supplied. He was always so grateful for these little services."

So much for popular belief and the dictum of the democratic servant biographer.

Last Zulu Elephant Dies.

There is not a single elephant left in Zululand, once a paradise of these great animals. The last survivor was found dead the other day on a farm on the banks of the Unfolozi River, where he had lived since the early part of the reign of the great chief, Cetewayo.

An immense herd once roamed the Dugugugu forest and along the Unfolozi, but it was diminished by incessant hunting, until Cetewayo one day finally drove it away forever. The Chief used to make medicine of certain portions of their bodies. On the occasion referred to he organized a mighty drive, in which two elephants were killed and many wounded. One of the later turned and trampled one of his pursuers to pulp. It was this animal which was captured, and whose death is now reported. The remainder of the herd broke away, and thereafter none was seen in Zululand.

Hanging Them Up?

London children certainly get some quaint views of life. An instance of this recently occurred in an East-end Sunday school, where the teacher was talking to her class about Solomon and his wisdom.

"When the Queen of Sheba came and laid jewels and fine raiment before Solomon, what did he say?" she asked, presently.

One small girl, who had evidently had experience in such matters, promptly replied:

"'ow much d'yer want for the lot?"

When we get poetry in which the culprit endeavors to make "history" rhyme with "pastry," is it any wonder Sir George Foster has to warn people not to waste paper?

HISTORIAN OF NOVA SCOTIA.

The Late Rev. E. M. Saunders Was a Talented Writer.

Rev. Edward Manning Saunders, D.D., whose death recently at the home of his son, John C., in Ottawa, after a two years' residence in Toronto, was chronicled in all the papers, was a prominent theologian well known in the Maritime Provinces and especially in Halifax, N.S., where he officiated as a Baptist Church pastor for fourteen years, and where his remains were buried. In addition to being a deep student of theology all his life the late Rev. Mr. Saunders was exceedingly well versed in subjects relating to philosophy, history, and literature, and his retentive memory, which was with him until he was well in his eighties, was one reason why he was so much sought after and beloved by students of such matters. His broad understanding of the so-called new theology did not lose him friends, for he was intensely loyal to the evangelical creed and believed sincerely the Scriptures relating to the life of Christ. Sometimes he was not too tolerant with those who held views opposite to his own, but underlying all his arguments and in his writing, for at one time he was joint proprietor and editor of the Christian Visitor and a prolific author, there was always a reverence for things Christ-like which made him stand prominently among his brethren.

As a student of Canadian history the late Mr. Saunders was noted, but his knowledge of the religious history of the Maritime Province placed him on a high plane by himself, and it was little matter for wonder that with such learning that he should prove the foremost Baptist leader in these provinces.

The late Dr. Saunders was recognized as one of the most brilliant and industrious biographers the Maritime Provinces have produced. He was particularly well versed in the history of those fair valleys by the sea in the midst of which he was brought up. His busy pen loved to trace for his own and future generations the story of the invasion of the wilderness by the stout-hearted loyalists of the last quarter of the eighteenth century and their descendants —his well-informed brain was ever gleaning and chronicling new records of the struggle with man and nature whereby one of the fairest regions in all creation was won by toil and suffering for British ideals and for Canada and Empire.

Among the best-known works of Dr. Saunders are: "The Life of the Rev. John Wiswell, a Loyalist Church of England Clergyman;" a "History of the Baptist Churches of the Maritime Provinces;" "Three Premiers of Nova Scotia," in which he wrote of the Hon. James William Johnstone, Joseph Howe, and Charles Tupper. This book is one of the standard histories of the struggle for responsible Government in Nova Scotia. His last ambitious literary effort was the "Life of Sir Charles Tupper, Bart," which was ready for the press when that grand historic figure, the last of the Fathers of Confederation, passed to the Valhalla of Canadian greatness.

A son of the deceased pastor and litterateur, is Mr. Edmund M. Saunders, treasurer of the Canada Life Assurance Company, Toronto.

Willie the Troublemaker.

An elderly night watchman at the Montreal docks, who holds strong temperance views and believes in tracing effects to their primary causes, was approached one night by a police reporter who was endeavoring to ascertain the facts about a disturbance among the dock workers in which two or three men had received painful injuries.

"What started the trouble?"

"Willie Dow started the trouble," declared the guardian of the docks, in a high-pitched, quavering voice. "Willie Dow has started a lot of trouble around these sheds."

"How did Dow start the trouble?" pursued the reporter, meanwhile wondering inwardly that his long experience in police circles had not made him acquainted sooner with so redoubtable a troublemaker as Willie Dow appeared to be from the statement of the old man.

"He started all the trouble when he began making beer in Montreal in 1809," was the watchman's unexpected answer.

To Teach Toy-Making.

The Military Hospitals Commission is encouraging a movement started by a number of Quebec ladies for teaching soldiers in the Savard Park Convalescent Home in Quebec the art of toy-making. This is one of the industries which the defeat of Germany will bring into prominence in Canada, and it is particularly adapted for lamed soldiers who still have the use of their hands. The Quebec ladies have secured from the Lord Roberts Memorial workshops in London a large collection of models of toys. There are at present about 1,300 inmates and out-patients of the convalescent homes and hospitals now under control of the Commission. The majority of these men were wounded in the battles of last spring.

PIONEER FURNITURE.

Early Household Effects in Ontario Were Very Primitive.

The hardy pioneers who first peopled Ontario had little to boast of in the way of furniture. A chest of drawers, a favorite chair, perhaps a table formed their entire stock when they entered the virgin forest. Everything else was of home manufacture. For a bedstead, there was a platform of poles across one end of the room, about two feet above the floor, supported by inserting the ends between the logs in the wall. Rough benches with four legs served as seats, and a table was similarly constructed on a larger scale. Later on, when lumber was obtainable, these articles of furniture were replaced by more serviceable ones. The deal table, the board bench, and the old-fashioned chair with the elm bark bottom and back, woven as in a basket, were one step in advance. It not infrequently happened that in large families there were not enough seats to accommodate all, and the younger members stood up at the table during the meal-time or contented themselves with a seat upon the floor. If a bedstead could be afforded it was sure to be a four-poster with tester and side curtains. "What was a tester?" do I hear someone enquire? It was a cloth canopy supported by the four tall bed-posts. Bunks were built against the walls, which served as seats in the day-time; but when opened out, served as beds at night. Mattresses were made of boughs, corn husks, straw, or feathers, and rested upon wooden slats, or more frequently cords laced from side to side and end to end of the framework of the bedstead. A trundle bed for the children was stowed away under the bedstead during the daytime and hauled out at night.

The kitchen arrangements were also of the most primitive sort. At first the only cooking device was a bake kettle which hung over the embers. Later on the bake-kettle was superseded by the reflector, which was an oblong box of bright tin, enclosed on all sides but one. It was placed on the hearth with the open side next a bed of glowing coals. In it were placed the tins of dough raised a few inches from the bottom, so that the heat could circulate freely about the loaves. The upper part of the reflector was removable, to enable the housewife to inspect the contents.

The reflectors in time gave way to the bake-oven, which was built in the wall next the fire-place, so that one chimney would serve for both, or the oven was built outdoors under the same roof as the smoke-house. The latter was a comparatively airtight brick or stone chamber used for smoking beef, and the hams and shoulders of the pigs. Before the advent of the smoke-house, strips of beef required for summer use were smoked in the chimney.

Expedition is Safe.

News of the expedition headed by Inspector la Nauze, R.N.W.M.P., which left Regina in May last for the Arctic coast to investigate the reported murder of Father Rouvier and Father Leroux, has been received at headquarters in Regina, but gives no information of the fate of the two priests, who were devoting their lives to the Eskimo tribes in the frozen north. There is little doubt they both are dead.

The last news to arrive from Inspector la Nauze is contained in a letter dated December 15 and was written from a point at the far northwest corner of Great Bear Lake, where he made his winter camp. One of Inspector Bates' party carried the letters five hundred miles by dogsled to Fort Norman, where it was again relayed on its way to Regina. The inspector reached his winter quarters September 8. From there he was to leave for the Arctic coast on the 15th of the present month, according to the letter.

With Inspector la Nauze are two members of the Mounted Police, a guide, an Eskimo interpreter, and Father Lastrance, a friend of the missing missionaries. The tribe with which the priests are known to have been is far west, on the north Arctic coast. The last word to come from them was in October, 1914. It is expected that many months will elapse before their fate is known.

Pinched Him Financially.

An esteemed citizen went into a shoe store in a metropolitan town and asked to see some leather goods. Another minute and an obliging salesman was hauling out some boxes.

"That is a nice looking shoe," remarked the customer as the salesman pushed his foot into a shiny right and started to lace it. "What is the price?"

"This pair is $8," responded the salesman as he finished the lacing and ran his hands across the vamp.

"Does it pinch you any?"

"Well, I should say it does!" was the prompt rejoinder of the customer. "Give me something about $3 cheaper."

THE WEATHER.

Moderate west to northwest winds; unsettled with occasional light showers to-day and on Thursday. Not much change in temperature.

OTTAWA, April 26.—Sir Wm. Meredith's and Mr. Justice Duff's Royal Commission, formed to investigate charges laid in Commons by G. W. J. F. Hellmuth represents the Dominion Government; Mr. F. B. Johnston, F. H. Markey, S. W. Jacobs and F. B. Carvell, M.P., the Liberal party; J. S. Ewart, Wallace Nesbitt and Eugene Lafleur, General Sam Hughes; George F. Henderson, Col. Wesley Allison, N. K. Laflamme, the Shell Committee, which let the contracts, and A. W. Mr. J. W. Flavelle was the first witness called.

ONE VIEW OF AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CITY COUNCIL

To the Editor,
Dear Sir:

The public are indebted to "Citizen" for again calling attention to the enormous cost to our townsmen, as well as to the rest of the nation, of the prolonged effort which has become necessary to protect our families and our freedom, our lives and property, and our standard of civilization, from the Prussian deluge of rapine, murder and destruction.

There is some regret that "Citizen's" able pen did not take the opportunity to point out suitable details of the only honest means for paying these just debts which we are being forced to become liable for (and which must not be shirked) through strict self-denial and rigid economy.

Those of us who do not enlist, whether with good and sufficient reasons or otherwise, should be very ready to submit to an extra financial burden in order to make sure that the families of the men who are doing our share of the fighting for us (and are thereby saving our skins and rescuing our property) should have the reasonable comforts of life.

The pay of a soldier of any rank, including the separation allowance paid by the Militia Department each month to their wives, very rarely equals their earnings in civil life if they have steady employment, and no allowance is made in the pay for an extra "hazardous occupation" as is recognized in civilian wages for railway, or tunnel or diver's jobs, etc. There are, no doubt, some whose military pay is larger than the amounts they usually earn, but these are the men who were frequently out of work, and most of whom are unmarried and do not receive any allowance either from the "separation" or "Patriotic Fund." The average private is certainly not getting more money than he ever did before. It is the sense of obligation that brings the average man to enlist. No doubt in very many cases he would much perfer it had duty not called him from civilian life (the self sacrificing loyalty of the average man should not be overlooked.) If the pay and allowances are thought to be "easy money" the opportunity to participate is open to all who can pass the medical examination, for it is announced that the recruiting officers have not yet finally closed their lists.

Humanly speaking, through lack of preparedness by nations who had been well warned for years of the impending explosions, the Hun's lust for plunder, cruelty and bloodshed, has been allowed to burst from its containing barrier and still threatens to overwhelm the world, as Pompei was overwhelmed by the erruption of Vesuvious. Part of the money cost of the endeavors to compel these modern Goths to submit to the laws of civilization and leave their neighbors (and the rest of the world) unmolested, is $2,000,000 every hour as Britain's share. In Britain the income tax alone takes 25 per cent. of all rents, of all interest from investments and of all salaries over $2,000 per annum. The very large fortunes are taxed one-third of their total income, for there is a sliding scale of taxation so that also those receiving rents, dividends, interest, etc. of less than $2,000 a year, and the smaller salaries and wages are all assessed for their proper share, though at a somewhat lower rate.

The pay of her soldiers is costing Canada $12,000,00 per month (say $20,000 every hour), and we must take our share cheerfully both in men and dollars, not forgetting that a complete German victory (if Providence so wills it) would confiscate every thing we own, whether lands houses or securities of every description. (An experience like that would make any of our self-imposed taxation look very small indeed.

It is the duty of every one to do all in his or her power to help our forces make sure of victory. Many believe that the only real danger to the Allied armies now, is the tendency of so many to leave all fighting and paying for "the other fellow" to do. We are not free from that tendency in Belleville, though many of our citizens are nobly doing what they can, and by their efforts the city had made a good showing when compared with some other places of similar size and conditions.

If "Citizen" and others had taken a more active interest in Patriotic work, and had been present at the last meeting of the City Council, they would have learned how unequally the patriotic burden (or privilege) was distributed when left to voluntary subscribers. Of Belleville's 12,000 population, less than 1,000 subscribed anything at all. There are 2,500 householders and nearly as many boarders who earn their living here, all of whom could spare at least one cent per day for the Patriotic Fund as long as the war lasts. A number of them did contribute generously many times that figure. Had every one contributed with reasonable liberality, according to their means, last year Belleville would have raised $80,000 instead of $35,000. There is no intention to disparage the smaller contributions that were sent in, for it is recognized that a 10c or a 50c gift that can ill be spared shows a more generous and loyal spirit than perhaps was exhibited when much more substantial sums were contributed by some who did not feel that they had given as much as they might reasonably have done.

The subscription list discloses that 74 citizens subscribed $100 and upwards each; 70 citizens subscribed 50c and up to $99 each; 140 citizens subscribed 25c. and up to $49 each; 99 citizens subscribed 15c and up to $24 each; 512 citizens subscribed from 10c. up to $14 each.

This is 393 citizens among them promised $36,000 and 502 other citizens together promised $4,000. It is in the latter list that the bulk of the unpaid balances are still being waited for

When the aldermen took into consideration the proposal to provide $30,000 (not $40,000) for the Patriotic Fund this year, by taxing property and incomes, it was agreed that a thorough canvass of the city would be made with the object of bringing Belleville's contribution up to $60,000 or $70,000, so those whose taxes were moderate in comparison with their zeal could still voluntarily contribute to swell the fund to the figure likely to be required for soldiers' families residing in the city. (Over $3,500 was needed this month and the list grows rapidly). As the interests of well-to-do citizens will receive more protection from British success than their less well-off neighbors, they should be and are, in most cases, very willing to pay in proportion to their means, through the taxes, for the larger amount of protection or insurance received by them. After all, the patriotic money is all spent in the city for rents, food, etc., so the larger property interests are indirectly helped in proportion to their local investments, through the distribution to the families who receive cheques from the fund.

If this proposed special Patriotic grant is spread over ten years as intended, the extra tax will be less than 50c per $1,000 of assessment each year; leaving ample room for the well disposed to supplement the fund voluntarily. The share of those residents referred to in "Citizen's" letter as having difficulty in making both ends meet would work out at about from 1c to 2c per week, to which they would scarcely care to make objection.

If a general economy and thriftiness can be brought about, the taxation will be very easily met. The object of the prohibition of the traffic in alcoholic beverages was approved by many as a war measure with the expectation of cultivating and making easier the saving habit in this Province, and in this way to accumulate money to be available for loaning to the Government for the war. If these savings are frittered away on luxuries, and foolishly indulging to excess in amusements, the heped-for saving may not result in much. But if savings are put into the war loan, or into a bank till enough is accumulated to buy a war bond, these moneys in the mean time enable bankers, to that extent, to assist in the war by lending that much more to the Government or to the necessary producing and shipping interests.

It is not by suggesting repudiation of our repeated promises to provide moderate comfort for the families whose bread-winners are enlisted for our protection, that extra taxation should be avoided by the non-combatant citizens and practically forced on those least able to provide themselves with reasonable comforts. Such a course would surely be contrary to "Citizen's" text, "Be just before you are generous."

Yours faithfully,
"R. TANNAHILL."

ZEPPELIN RAID ON ENGLAND

Drops Bombs from Great Height, but Caught by Search Light and Driven Off

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, April 26. — Zeppelins which made a raid over the east coast last night remained at great height, probably because they were subjected to violent fire from anti air craft guns. The raiders were favored by the darkness of a moonless night and lightness of wind, but were forced to flee after a short time.

A correspondent in the town of Essex county says the Zeppelin was picked up by a searchlight at the outskirts of the county, as it was sailing in a southerly direction.

In a few minutes it was outlined against the sky by other searchlights. Then shrapnels began to burst around it from many directions. The Zeppelin climbed very high and hovered about for ten minutes. Then it sailed eastward. No bombs were dropped after searchlights found it.

The number of casualties and extent of damage caused by the raid has not yet been ascertained.

HOW DRUGS HAVE GONE UP

Rising Prices Hard on the Hospital Treasuries.

LONDON, April 25. — The higher cost of drugs means a heavy drain on hospital treasuries. The annual reoprt of a London hospital gives four examples of remarkable increases in prices in drugs which are in common use there: Bromides, pre-war, 38 cents pound, now $6.25 pound; aspirin, pre-war, $1.60 pound, now $11.25 pound.

FRENCH AND HUN IN DUEL

PARIS, April 26.—A French aeroplane and Zeppelin fought a duel at an altitude of four thousand metres off Zeebrugge today. The aeroplane fired nine incendiary shells at the Zeppelin, which appears to have been damaged. The engagement occurred more than two miles from the surface of the earth, and was fought at three o'clock this morning.

At the same time another French aeroplane, armed with cannon, fired numerous projectiles on a German torpedo boat off Ostend. A German aeroplane of Fokker type was brought down in an aerial combat near Luneville, France.

ALLIES CAPTURE POSITIONS ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, April 26.—Afternoon statement. During an attack yesterday north of Aisne, which enabled us to capture the small woods south of the Woods of Buttes, we took 72 unwounded prisoners, of whom one was an officer and seven petty officers. Several enemy reconnaissances which were attempted during the night toward our trenches in sectors of Paissy and Troyon, were dispersed by our fire. West of the Meuse there was an intense bombardment of our positions in the woods of Avocourt, and upon our first lines north of Hill No. 304. East of Meuse there was moderate artillery activity. In the Woevre the enemy bombarded our positions at Haudiomont and Ronvaux with big guns. Our artillery energetically replied. There was no infantry action in this region during the night. In Lorraine the enemy attempted coup de main upon our small posts north of Embermenil. It was repulsed with losses. In the Vosges reconnaissances of our positions at Chappelotte cost the enemy very important losses.

MUTTON'S DEATH RESULTED FROM CARBOLIC POISONING

Such Was The Verdict Rendered by Coroner's Jury in Session Last Night—Post Mortem Revealed Acid in Stomach, Administered By His Own Hand

> We find that Charles Mutton came to his death on the night of the 17th or the morning of the 18th of April, 1916, as the result of a poisonous dose of carbolic acid, administered by himself, as shown by the post mortem.
>
> We recommend that greater care be exercised in the giving out of poisonous acids.

The above was the verdict rendered last night by the coroner's jury in the case of Charles Mutton, a Bell Company telephone construction foreman, who was found dead in his bed at the Albion Hotel in this city on Tuesday afternoon last, the 18th inst.

Dr Boyce, coroner, presided over the enquiry and Mr Wm. Carnew, County Attorney, represented the Crown.

The evidence of Dr Yeomans, who conducted the post mortem, left no doubt in the minds of the jury and those present as to the cause of death.

Sergt. Naphin testified he made a search of the deceased's room at the Albion Hotel. Amongst the effects were four ten-dollar bills, one two-dollar bill and two one-dollar bills and some small change. In addition there was clothing belonging to the deceased. The deceased had his night clothes on when witness saw the body in his bed. The two small bottles produced were found in the room, one contained a cough syrup and the other carbolic acid.

Albert White testified that he was

BELLEVILLE MAN HONORED BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Ex-Mayor J. F. Wills, K. C., Received Notification of Appointment to Position of Junior Judge of County of Hastings and Local Judge of Supreme Court

Department of the Secretary of State.

Ottawa, 25th April, 1916.

Sir:

I have the honour to inform you that His Royal Highness the Governor General has been pleased to appoint you Junior Judge of the County Court of the County of Hastings and also a Local Judge of the High Court Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Your commissions are now being prepared and will be forwarded to you as soon as completed.

I have the honour to be
SIR.
Your obedient servant.
"THOMAS MULVEY".
Under-Secretary of State.

J. Franklin Wills, Esq., K.C.,
Belleville.
Ont.

The above is a copy of the official telegram received by Mr. Wills this morning from the Secretary of State advising him of his appointment as the Junior County Judge and Local Judge of the Supreme Court.

We congratulate Mr. Wills upon his appointment, as he is eminently fitted for the positions.

Mr. Wills has been identified so much with the life, business and social, of the city of Belleville and County of Hastings that it is hardly necessary to refer to his many activitles.

John Franklin Wills is the second youngest son of the lat Lt.-Col. Thomas Wills, J.P., who for fifty-three years was respectively Clerk and Treasurer of the County of Hastings, and occupied many positions of trust and responsibility in the community, among others as member of the Ontario Legislature from 1874 to 1878, and of Anna Maria, youngest daughter of the late Captain Henry LeVesconte, R. N. He was born in the city of Belleville on the 15th September, 1864. His education was obtained in private schools, the Public and High schools of Belleville and Albert College. He served as a law student in the offices of The Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, Geo. D. Dickson, Q.C., of Belleville and Wells, Gordon & Sampson, Toronto. His final examinations for the Bar and solicitor were passed in May, 1888, Mr. Wills then opened a law office in Belleville and has practiced here ever since. The last sixteen years being in partnership with Mr. Malcolm Wright.

He was a member of the Board of Education for twenty years, and occupied the Chairmanship of the Board for two years and important committee for many years. He took a great interest in the building of the new schools. Mr. Wills served in the City Council as an Alderman for a number of years, commencing in 1893. And finally occupied the Mayor's chair for the years of 1913 and 1914, in which term Front street was paved, new lights installed and many other improvements to the city in which he took an active hand with his fellow-councillors. For a number of years Mr. Wills sat on the Court of Revision of the city, but resigned in 1912 in order to offer himself as candidate of the mayrralty.

In military matters he served in the 15th Regt. for 15 years, and was in command of No. 2 Co. Since 1895 until last year he was not actively on the force. At present he is Major in Command of the 15th Reserve.

Mr. Wills married in 1895 Miss Edith H. Yarwood, second daughter of the late C. St. George Yarwood, Esq., Collector of Customs, and granddaughter of the late Judge Dougall, Co. Judge of Hastings, and has two children, Thomas G., aged 15 years, and Helen St. George, aged 11 years, both living at home and going to the High school and St. Agnes school respectively. Mr. Wills is a member of St. Thomas Anglican Church. Mr. Wills is a member of the A.F. and A.M. I. O. O. F., L. O. L and P. A. P. B. societies.

FOR TIRED SCHOOL CHILDREN

S. McKeown, and give such children Vinol because it is a non-secret preparation which contains the three oldest tonics known, and is guaranteed to strengthen and restore health to weak, overworked, run-down people, and to cure chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis, or you can get your money back.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mrs. A. D. Watts and son, Gerald, are spending some time with Mr. Watts, at the Albion Hotel.

Mrs. John Newton of 165 Ann street, has returned home after visiting her son and daughter in Toronto.

Mrs. (Lieut.) C. R. Abbott and daughter, Edna, of Toronto, have joined Lieut. Abbott in this city.

Within the Military Circle

BELLEVILLE

Capt. Hyman of the 155th Battalion, is in Ottawa to-day.

Recruits are coming in every day for the 155th Battalion.

Lieut. Young of the 155th Battalion, is in the city today. He has been transferred from Stirling to Napanee.

Lt.-Col Adams and Major Wallbridge, left for Wellington this afternoon to inspect the 155th platoon stationed there.

KINGSTON

With reference to militia order No. 72 and divisional order No. 253, of 1916, commanding officers will persuade all suitable men to avail themselves of the offer of furlough for the purpose of engaging in the cultivation and seeding of the land in order that agricultural work may be carried on effectively and adequate agricultural production ensured.

Col. Hemming went to Perth yesterday morning to inspect the 136th Battalion.

Maj. Wilson, D.A.A., and Q.M.G., left for Perth yesterday afternoon.

Capt. Wilson, A.D.D.S., passed through the city yesterday on his way to Perth.

Capt. P. K. Ketcheson, 80th Battalion, C.E.F., was promoted to the rank of major in the C.E.F., from the 18th inst.

Tobacco, cigaretts, cigars or any other article, on which the customs or excise duties have been remitted, and which is offered for sale in regimental institutes, is not to be sold to any civilian as the concession is intended for the exclusive benefit of members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Soldiers are forbidden to purchase any such articles for civilians.

Many Military Matters

The authorities of Queen's University have applied to the Department of Militia and Defence for permis- to recruit the personnel of a field ambulance for overseas service. If accepted this will form another distinctive Queen's unit as the officers will all be Queen's graduates. Captain Ralph Filson has been nominated to command the unit during recruiting and mobilization.

Major Hamilton, A. D. of S. and T., announced on Monday that in making up the estimates of what Barriefield camp would need in the way of supplies he found that six tons of bread, six tons of beef, six tons of potatoes and three tons of vegetable per day would be needed without including many other articles on the soldiers' menu.

There were several Germans in a trench which had been occupied by the British a short time before.

The Germans were seated comfortably when a British Tommy put his head over the trench and cried.

"Any of you Blighters seen my blooming pipe?"

Three quarters of a million dollars every thirty days is the conservative estimate made of the cost of Barriefield camp this year. This immense amount, however, will be treated, as all large items of military work, in a systematic and methodical way that will keep the headquarters pay office as much in the back ground as if only a few hundred of dollars were needed.

Few people stop to realize what the actual work is in the management of such a lot of Government money. Directly under the captain is Sergt. Mayer, thirteen clerks and one stenographer. Every item involved in the distribution is checked over and submitted to Ottawa in such a manner that this military district has the reputation all over Canada as being the most prompt and most accurate in the sending in of returns. It is a compliment worth while and justly deserved.

In connection with the headquarters pay system, there is the educational work for probationary and appointed paymasters. Every battalion paymaster has the handling of approximately $15,000 a month, and to avoid putting this big responsibility on an inexperienced person, a course in the work is necessary. There are two probationary paymasters taking this course now. Lieut. Brown was a bank manager at Inglewood, and Lieut. McAdam was in the Assigned Pay Department at Ottawa. Both are experienced in similar work and have been very proficient in their duties. Capt. Turner it is expected will soon recommend them for appointment to any vacancy that might occur.

As soon as these two men leave, two others will come in and this course will be followed until every paymaster of every overseas unit in this district is fully qualified for this very important post. The pay office is also an information bureau for every paymaster of a unit in the district.

A WILD DRUNK

Frederick Pitts was this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with no less than three offences, namely, being drunk and disorderly, assault, and resisting the police in the discharge of his duties. He pleaded guilty to the charges and was remanded to jail for a week. Pitts is evidently a wild man when intoxicated. He was arrested last night by Constable Ellis, who experienced considerable difficulty in taking the man to the station, owing to resistance offered. In the melee the officer's tunic was torn to a considerable extent, and Pitt will also have to pay for the damaged tunic. The Magistrate intimated to the accused that the fines and cost would be a considerable amount and advised him in the meantime to communicate with relatives as to the payment of same. After being locked up the man used grossly abusive language.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Anson Dennison of Deseronto, was yesterday before Police Magistrate Belford of that town charged with neglecting to provide his wife with the necessaries of life, as provided by section 242 of the criminal code. The result of the investigation was that the accused was committed for trial at the June sessions. Mr. Carnew, County Attorney, represented the Crown.

Reducing Expenses

THE war has increased the cost of living. The housewife must, therefore, make her money go farther. By using a tea, like Red Rose, which is largely composed of Assam Indian teas, she can reduce her tea bills considerably. The rich Indian strength requires less tea in the tea pot.

In sealed packages only. Try it.

"Here is the Nerve Food I know that will help you."

Malnutrition Failure to get the good of the food you eat.

It is not what you eat, but what you eat, digest and absorb, that counts in keeping up the health and vigor of the human body. If you are not getting the benefit of the food you eat you should suspect the nervous system, for the nerves control the flow of the gastric juices of the stomach and the other chemical fluids of the digestive system which effect the digestion of starches, fats, etc.

Especially at this season of the year digestion lags, appetite fails, you do not get the good of the food you eat and vitality is consequently lowered. You feel the effects in loss of energy and ambition, feelings of fatigue come over you and you lack in courage and good cheer.

Eating more will not help you, for you must have nourishment in an easily assimilated condition so that it may be taken up by the blood stream without effort. In short, you need such assistance as is best afforded by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

By using this food cure you enrich the blood and supply nourishment directly to the starved nervous system. The nerves which control the process of digestion are invigorated, digestion is improved, appetite sharpened, and gradually you are restored to health and vigor.

This is Nature's way. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies the elements and the processes of Nature convert these elements into new, rich blood and new nerve force. You cannot fail to be benefited by such treatment, and the results obtained are lasting.

THIS IS THE 632ND DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

A PECULIAR ATTITUDE.

The case of Sir Roger Casement is one of the most curious the war has produced. He entered the Consular Service in 1895, and won steady promotion till in 1909 he was given the important post of Consul-General of Great Britain at Rio de Janiero, Brazil. While on service in South America he conducted an enquiry into the manner in which the Peruvian ruber trade was managed on the upper waters of the Amazon. The report contained some startling facts, which, indirectly at least, reflected on commercial firms in Europe, and directly on the men entrusted with the management of the business where the rubber was gathered. There is reason to think the report had a good effect on the Government most directly concerned and that the cruelties practised on the Indians were reduced if not stopped. He was given a C.M.G. in 1905 after completing a term of service in the Congo State. In 1911, says the Montreal Gazette, while on service in Para, he was made a knight. When the war broke out he created surprise by his attitude. He espoused the German cause, made his home in Germany, and was reported as having tried to enlist Irish prisoners of war in the German service. Some thought his mind had become affected, and the number will be increased where knowledge of his latest escapade is spread. Anything more foolish than raising a rebellion in any part of the United Kingdom at this time would be hard to imagine. Yet he conceived and sought to execute the insane project. He invited whatever fate is in store for him.

THE PRESIDENTIAL OUTLOOK.

If straws are a perspective, then Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt will be pitted against each other in the race for presidential honours in the United States. Mr Wilson is looked upon as the only man in the Democratic party who can win the contest. He has therefore no rival. Mr Roosevelt has opponents innumerable in the Republican party, many of the old timers looking upon him with a suspicion akin to hostility, in that he was a bolter to the Progressives, and in 1912 destroyed whatever hope of success the Republicans had. They would like to nominate another candidate if they could find a probable winner. They would gladly take Justice Hughes, of the Supreme Court, if he would authorize the use of his name. There is a revival of the movement to nominate Mr Root, but it is not likely to make much progress. There is no other candidate who looms up largely. A little while ago it seemed that all that the old line Republicans need do was to select a candidate who was not particularly obnoxious to Mr Roosevelt. The idea then was that Roosevelt would recognize his own inability to win and would be content to exercise something like a veto power in the Republican nomination. Now the indications are that a concession of that kind to Mr Roosevelt will not be enough for his purpose. It begins to be clear that the only candidate who would not meet Roosevelt hostility is the Colonel himself. The old liners are awakening to the fact that unless they accept Roosevelt there can be no Republican unity, and that without such unity there can be no hope of success in a contest against President Wilson. Reluctantly many of the old guard are accepting this situation and coming out for Roosevelt. The recent declaration of the New York Tribune, the staunchest of Republican papers, in favour of Roosevelt, is significant.

A GERMAN NIGHTMARE.

The fact that Russia possesses unlimited power so far as resourcefulness in providing men is concerned, fills the German mind with abject terror. It even takes the form of a nightmare. There is a belief that if the Russian army had been well supplied with efficient officers, nothing—not even Von Hindenburg — could have stopped the Russian invasion of Prussia at the beginning of the war. The present eastern front, running from the Gulf of Riga south to the Roumanian frontier, has been thought of from the German side as a mighty dam to be held against a Russian flood which, if it knew its own power and could but utilize it, would overcome even a Pussian barrier. Instead of breaking the dam, the Russians have gone round it at both ends. They descended first through the Caucasus into Asia Minor, where they are violently beating the Turk. Now, unexpectedly, they appear in France. Germany, therefore, faces Russia on three sides. Besides, there are more than a million Russian prisoners in Germany. Of what avail to slaughter or capture Russians? Their number is unlimited.

The man power of Russia in Europe, calculated at only 8 per cent, of her population, is greater than that of Austria-Hungary and Germany, combined, calculated at 10 and 12 per cent., respectively, of their population. It is greater than that of France, England and Italy combined. This is nothing new. It has been statistically apparent from the beginning. The new fact is that it is becoming increasingly available against Germany. That was inevitable with the lapse of time. Germany hoped to win the war before the power of Russia could be made effective. The longer the war lasts, the more effective it will be.

Mail and Empire: The settlement effected by the British Government with the Chicago packers whose cargoes of meats, consigned to Scandinavian countries but suspected to be ultimately destined for Germany, was on a cash basis. So well satisfied were the packers with the terms agreed to by the British Government that they have given a bond to abstain from such shipments in future. This incident ought to convince our neighbours that Britain has no desire to use her sea-power tyrannically or unjustly.

Montreal Star: "It was hoped thus to terrify Canada, preventing the Dominion from aiding the Mother Country," says the spy Von Goltz, narrating plans for German depredations in this country. The "terror" which would have followed the destruction of the Welland Canal, for example, would have expressed itself in an unprecedented rush to the recruiting offices. All of which confirms the opinion, already expressed, that in some respects Wilhelm II. of Germany was the worst served monarch in Europe.

Although Sir Sam has quite properly handed his portfolio to a colleague pending the investigation, he is still the man who brought Canada's army into existence, and he still ranks as senior Canadian General. To have denied him the pleasure of saluting his soldiers on the anniversary of the battle which his battalions did so much to make historic would have been petty.

GLIMPSES INTO THE PAST

(From The Daily Intelligencer,)

April 26, 1868.

An explosion took place in Montreal yesterday killing one man instantly and injuring six or seven more.

Prince Alfred, who is visiting Sidney, Australia, was shot and dangerously wounded by an unknown person yesterday.

During a Fenian meeting in Chicago last night the flooring gave way killing one person and seriously injuring several others.

A GOOD RETORT.

Dr James L. Hughes tells a good story on himself. He recently made a trip to New York and at the border was interrogated as customary by the United States Imigration Agent, a thorough Irishman

"Are you an American?" he was asked.

"Yes, and a Canadian, thank God," replied the Doctor.

"Are you remaining in the States long?" was the next query.

"No," was the reply.

"Thank God," said the Immigration Agent.

PAINFUL SWOLLEN VEINS
Quickly Relieved and Reduced

Mrs. R. M. Remler of Federal, Kansas writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact one had broken), for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks and, to quote from her letter, "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since."

Absorbine, Jr., is an antiseptic liniment—healing cooling and soothing. Safe and pleasant to use. $1.00 and $2.00 at your druggist's or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c. in stamps. W. F. Young, P.D.F., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

Remarkable Delusions.

Remarkable delusions of a French-Canadian private were related during the trial at the Old Bailey police court in London, Eng., recently of Dominique Brunet, who was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment on a charge of misdemeanor. Expressing the conviction that the man was utterly mad and subject to homicidal mania, Major Calder declared that one of Brunet's delusions was that the King had appointed him chief medical officer of the British army, because he had invented a system of bringing the dead to life. The prisoner had admitted having been in a Paris prison for the criminally insane. He either escaped or was discharged from there, and although French born he joined the Canadians last August, being passed as fit for active service.

Sixty-three Legislators in Army.

No fewer than sixty-three members of Canadian Legislatures are doing military service, according to a return brought down in the House recently. A considerable proportion of the number are serving in Canada, the list including numerous honorary colonels, but a fair sprinkling represents men actually overseas or in training for overseas service. The list includes twenty-two members of the House of Commons, the rest being members of Provincial Legislatures as follows: Ontario, 14; British Columbia, 4; Saskatchewan, 4; Alberta, 7; Manitoba, 3; New Brunswick, 2; Nova Scotia, 4; Prince Edward Island, 3.

What Is Uric Acid?
THE CAUSE OF BACKACHE, RHEUMATISM, GRAVEL AND SUDDEN DEATH.

Ever since the discovery of uric acid in the blood by Scheele, in 1775, and the bad effect it had upon the body, scientists and physicians have striven to rid the tissues and the blood of this poison. Because of its overabundance in the system it causes backache, pains here and there, rheumatism, gout, gravel, neuralgia and sciatica. It was Dr. Pierce who discovered a new agent, called "Anuric," which will throw out and completely eradicate this uric acid from the system. "Anuric" has proved to be 37 times more potent than lithia, and consequently you need no longer fear muscular or articular rheumatism or gout, or many other diseases which are dependent on an accumulation of uric acid within the body. Send to Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., for a pamphlet on "Anuric," or send 10 cents for a trial package of "Anuric Tablets."

If you feel that tired, worn-out feeling, backache, neuralgia, or if your sleep is disturbed by too frequent urination, go to your best drug store and ask for Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. They are put up in 50-cent packages.

Doctor Pierce's reputation is back of this medicine and you know that his "Golden Medical Discovery" for the blood and his "Favorite Prescription" for the ills of women have had a splendid reputation for the past fifty years.

Doctor Pierce's Pellets are unequaled as a Liver Pill. One tiny Sugar-coated Pellet a Dose. Cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

CHAPTER III.—Continued

The earl had listened to this story with mingled emotions. It was one which, but for the calamity that had just befallen him would have roused him to fierce anger against his son for presuming to marry without his consent. Now it set his heart beating with anxiety to know if any harm had come to "the babbies" the sailor had spoken of.

"Hodge," he said, "go on with your story. Tell me the whole thing, as quick as possible. First, was my son carried down when the earthquake struck the pier at Lisbon?"

Hodge's face grew grave as he said:

"My lord, I won't lie. The old Boadishey went down, and the French frigate Tree-onfe—whatever that might mean—went with her, and all on board. No one won't never see them no more."

"And what was the Triomphe doing there, by an English ship?" asked the earl, curiously.

Hodge shifted his trousers with a hitch.

Well, my lord, ye see. Lisbon's what they calls a nootral port, and even the frog-eaters and us can't fight there; so we has to keep civil; and then that ere Leftenant Long-veal he was on board the Tree-onfe; and I allers thought it were got up between the two gents to have a meetin' there, so as to give 'em a chance to see their wives."

"Their wives?" the earl asked, puzzled. "Why? I don't understand you."

Hodge grinned furtively as he answered:

"I don't understand it myself, my lord; but it's true all the same, that the admiralty won't let no captain of a ship have his wife aboard, and the admiral on that 'ere station were as strict as a man could be. And then it happened that the Long-veal gent had married a English lady at Gibraltar, and they were married the same night as the captain and his lady; so arter the ships got where the admiral was like to hear about what was aboard, they had to change ladies. My Lady Neville she went aboard her brother's ship, and Madam Long-veal she went aboard the Boadishey, with a Portugee nuss, to make things proper, you know, my lord. And, while he was in a gale of wind, off the Indees, my lord, I'm blessed if there warn't a French baby born aboard the Boadishey, and when we came in port at Malta, nigh a year arter that, I'm blessed if I didn't hear the captain say he'd got a letter to tell him as how a good British boy had been borned aboard the Tree-onfe to his good lady, a'most the same day."

The earl interrupted here.

"One moment, my good fellow. Are you sure of this, that my son's wife had a child Can you swear to it?"

Hodge appeared surprised at the question.

"In course I can swear to it, my lord. Didn't I see 'em spliced, and didn't the lady stay aboard the Boadishey fur six good months arter that, till the noo admiral came on the station; and they said he were a Tartar? Warn't the ladies changed from one ship to the other, under a flag of truce, and didn't I see both the babbies at Malta? Malta's a nootral port, too, your honor, where they has a lot of blessed old muffs they calls knights, that fights the Turks, and don't have no wives. Yes, my lord, I seed both babbies, and a fine pair they was. My Lady Neville, she had a boy, and my Lady Long-veal, she had a gal, and they was both born the same day, as might be, so the nusses told me; for bein' from the same place as the cappen, and he bein' werry kind to me, on thet account, I seed a good deal more than the rest of the hands, my lord. I can swear that the two looked for all the world like twins. All the men remarked it, my lord."

Here the earl cut in, nervously:

"Yes, yes, my good fellow, that is all right; but the thing is, now, are either of those children alive, or rather, is my grandson alive? You say you saw the children on shore. What were they doing there?"

"Well, my lord, arter they got to Lisbon, the cappen he had business to do with the consul, and the French leftenant he warn't cappen of his own ship, so he couldn't get out when he wanted. But the ladies wanted to see the sights—leastwise, I suppose that's the way it was. Anyhow, me and Jack Adams, we seed 'em as we was goin' through the big square, and they a-sittin' in a carriage, with two Portugee nusses a holdin' of the babbies. They must have been nigh a year old, my lord, and they set up pretty, and cooed to each other, so the people in the street was p'intin' to 'em, an' larfin' to see their prity ways. Jack kep' out of sight, for fear the ladies might set the perleese on us for takin' a French. And jest as we seed 'em, come the shakes; and arter that it were awful. Jack blundered into a hole; but I stuck nigh the ladies. I seed both nusses run and leave the babbies, like mad things, when the fright begun. Then the ladies ketched up the babbies, as the nusses left 'em, and run, and I arter 'em. I warn't a-goin' to see 'em trod on, if I could help it. Well, my lord, to make a long story short, they runs to that blessed pier where all the damage was done, and the fust thing I seed was Leftenant Long-veal. He got to the ladies on the pier, and I seed him a cuttin' open a bale of cork, a-lyin' there, ye know—fur that's the place where the cork comes from. And then I run the other way; fir I knowed if any one could save 'em, he could. He was good stuff, that man, if he were a Frencher, my lord. Then the place begun to rock again, and the water went back, jest as the paper says it did; and up went the whole pier, and all the folks on it, as if the world was a-comin' to an end. And then I seed the two ladies, and the leftenant a-runnin' over the bottom of the bay, lookin' like they was all gone wild, and then back come the big wave, my lord, and cotched 'em as they was a-runnin', and swep' 'em away like chips. And then, down went the pier, and all hands on it; and there stood I, my lord, like a stuck pig, and couldn't do a thing to help 'em. That's all I've got to tell, my lord; and I hope your lordship's mind's easier."

The honest sailor looked as if he meant what he said, in his simplicity; but Lord Warwick answered, with a groan:

"Easier! My God, man! Then they were all lost, after all!"

"Hodge's face fell, as he replied:

"I'm afeard they was, my lord. I couldn't sewar I seed 'em dead; but nothink ever come up, after the pier went down."

Lord Warwick got up, and began to pace the room in an agitated way. Presently he said, hoarsely:

"You meant well. Thank you for coming. But—but I cannot talk coolly now. Go and see your old father. Come here again to-morrow, when I send for you. I want to ask you more. Go now, and send Shirley to me. Go."

He wanted to be alone with his grief; and Hodge, with a scared face, disappeared, leaving the earl pacing the floor like a caged tiger, where the

CHAPTER IV.

Marrying In Haste

Shirley's face was full of the grave and respectful gravity that befitted a faithful retainer of the house of Neville, as he waited to know the pleasure of his master.

"Shirley," said the earl, wheeling round abruptly, as the steward came in, "have you heard the news?"

"Yes, my lord," said Shirley, quietly. "I read it just now, and Stephen Hodge told me what he knew, as well as he could."

The earl twitched and frowned thoughtfully.

"Hem!" he said. "I hope he hasn't done too much talking. But it makes no difference now. All the world knows it."

Then he walked up and down the room several times, Shirley waiting patiently till it should please his master to speak.

At last the earl broke out:

"Shirley, the castle shall not go to that confounded dry-salter of a cousin of mine. I'll be hanged if it shall."

Shirley compressed his lips, but made no answer; and the earl seemed to be irritated at his silence, for he broke out:

"Why don't you say something man. Confound it! I say he shall not have it. The title has been in the Neville for four hundred years, and, by heavens, no Seymour shall ever live in Guy's Towers, if I can help it."

Shirley still remaining silent, the old nobleman said, almost defiantly, "Shirley, I am going to marry again and at once."

This time the steward opened his eyes, and stared at his master in surprise.

The look seemed to irritate the earl still more; for he went on snappishly:

"Yes, I know what you're thinking of—that I am too old to get married, but there's one thing that even you can't gainsay, that I am Earl of Warwick, and that any woman in England would have me for that. Yes, I know what you mean, old grumbler, that they would lead me a life after it which would make me sorry. That is the very reason I'm going to marry some one I can depend on to love me, and give me no trouble. Ah, you may sneer, you old rascal; but I mean it. Confound it, Shirley, you are the most aggravating man I ever saw, always putting obstacles in the way."

"Here the steward found courage to say deprecatingly:

"I haven't said a word, my lord."

"I know it," retorted Lord Warwick, irritably. "That's the confounded part of it! You won't say anything. Come, what do you think of it It will not do to let Oliver Seymour come to the castle, lording it over the tenants, and bringing in his trading ways, where gentlemen have ruled for four centuries, would it, Shirley?"

MEDIAEVAL FIGHTING.

Montreal Instructors Are Making a Specialty of Bayonet Work.

Methods used by the pikemen of the middle ages have been revived in the use of the bayonet, to meet conditions that have arisen in the present war, which have revolutionized all former precedents in former wars, and never has there been a war where the physical condition of the soldier counted more as a decisive factor in battles than in the present one. Trench fighting which has developed terrific encounters between man and man has brought the use of the bayonet and trench knife, two bladed and strapped to the officer's wrist, into a prominence never dreamt of before the war, and so well is this realized in the training of overseas Canadian battalions that the Militia Department has created in the Eastern and Western Districts of Canada a staff for instruction in the new way of using the bayonet.

At present the Headquarters Gymnasium of Eastern Canada is at the Drummond street Y.M.C.A. in Montreal, and is under the direction of Captain P. E. Nobbs, an expert in the new bayonet training who has already the efficiency in bayonet work in the recently formed battalions going overseas. The Headquarters Bayonet Fighting and Physical Training Staff, will soon consist of twenty-five officers and non-commissioned officers whose duty it is to train in the new bayonet exercise a team of instructors for each battalion, who will in turn train the entire strength of their units.

The Canadian forces now going overseas will have the advantage of being trained in the use of their arms, and being put in good physical condition while recruiting. The Canadian soldier when ready for active service must be a trained fighter, a boxer and wrestler as well as a good digger and a good shot, and capable of meeting all contingencies in a war that developes new situations hourly.

Captain Nobbs places the utmost emphasis upon the use of boxing gloves in the training of bayonet fighters, and condemns those well-intentioned but ill-informed reformers whose influence in the years before the war was directed against the "manly art."

This factor in training the men is of an importance not yet fully realized. One of the best patriotic gifts to a battalion going overseas is a few sets of boxing gloves.

The bayonet exercise of to-day is an entirely different system from that of the old school, when "bayonet drill," and the triangular bayonet were in use. The manner in which bayonet fighting can be taught is limited in certain ways. In actual fighting in the rush and terrific action of a bayonet charge to drive the enemy out of his trenches, the soldier must be quick of eye and sure of hand in aiming at his opponent with his bayonet. About 90 per cent. of the foe's body is really invulnerable from straps, belts, and buckles, and if the soldier's bayonet strikes a shoulder strap obliquely for instance, it glances over the enemy's shoulder and leaves him at his adversary's mercy.

The soldier may in rifle shooting miss his aim, but can aim and usually fire again, but in aiming and pointing with the bayonet he has too often only one chance, which if he misses, his life may too often be the forfeit. One of the principal lessons of the new bayonet exercise is pointing at dummy figures.

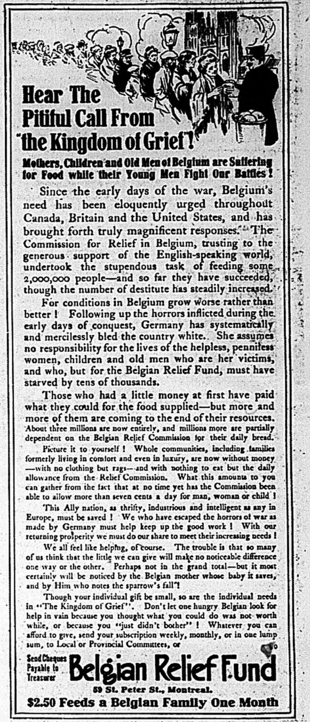
To attack with the bayonet effectively requires good direction, strength, and quickness during a state of wild excitement and physical exhaustion after the charge. The limit of the range of a bayonet is about five feet, measured by the attacker's eye, but more often the fighting is at close quarters, at a range of two feet or less when troops are struggling corps a corps in trenches or darkness.

Revenue is Increased.

An increase in revenue of $39,550,000 for the fiscal year ending March 31st is shown by the financial statement for the month of March and the twelve months ending then, which has just been published. The total revenue was $171,248,668; expenditures showed a decrease, those on consolidated fund account being $9,500,000 less and capital expenditures about $3,500,000 less.

The year's revenue was not only nearly forty millions more than the previous twelve months, but it was over a million dollars more than the estimate of the Finance Minister in his budget speech over a month ago. The increase in revenue was contributed to by $22,480,000 of an advance in Customs receipts; $1,000,000 in excise revenue, and $5,576,000 in post-office receipts. For March the Customs revenue totalled $9,978,138, or over two millions more than the same month last year, when it was $7,066,479.

War expenditures are, of course, increasing, and totalled $24,032,296 last month and $134,650,000 for the fiscal year as far as has been estimated. During the year there has been an increase of about $147,000,000 in the net debt.



Hear The Pitiful Call From "the Kingdom of Grief"!

Mothers, Children and Old Men of Belgium are Suffering for Food while their Young Men Fight Our Battles!

Since the early days of the war, Belgium's need has been eloquently urged throughout Canada, Britain and the United States, and has brought forth truly magnificent responses. The Commission for Relief in Belgium, trusting to the generous support of the English-speaking world, undertook the stupendous task of feeding some 2,000,000 people—and so far they have succeeded, though the number of destitute has steadily increased.

For conditions in Belgium grow worse rather than better! Following up the horrors inflicted during the early days of conquest, Germany has systematically and mercilessly bled the country white. She assumes no responsibility for the lives of the helpless, penniless women, children and old men who are her victims, and who, but for the Belgian Relief Fund, must have starved by tens of thousands.

Those who had a little money at first have paid what they could for the food supplied—but more and more of them are coming to the end of their resources. About three millions are now entirely, and millions more are partially dependent on the Belgian Relief Commission for their daily bread.

Picture it to yourself! Whole communities, including families formerly living in comfort and even in luxury, are now without money—with no clothing but rags—and with nothing to eat but the daily allowance from the Relief Commission. What this amounts to you can gather from the fact that at no time yet has the Commission been able to allow more than seven cents a day for man, woman or child!

This Ally nation, as thrifty, industrious and intelligent as any in Europe, must be saved! We who have escaped the horrors of war as made by Germany must help keep up the good work! With our returning prosperity we must do our share to meet their increasing needs!

We all feel like helping, of course. The trouble is that so many of us think that the little we can give will make no noticeable difference one way or the other. Perhaps not in the grand total—but it most certainly will be noticed by the Belgian mother whose baby it saves, and by Him who notes the sparrow's fall"!

Though your individual gift be small, so are the individual needs in "The Kingdom of Grief." Don't let one hungry Belgian look for help in vain because you thought what you could do was not worth while, or because you "just didn't bother"! Good Advice on Hair Culture

How to Stop Falling Hair and Drive Away Dandruff

Once a day, if only for one minute, every woman and every man, too, for that matter, ought to rub the scalp vigorously with the tips of the fingers.

The blood supplies nourishment to the hair, just as it does to the skin, and frequent massaging gently stimulates the scalp and causes the blood to flow more freely.

Both men and women should be careful in the choice of a hair dressing. A good one used regularly, not only destroys dandruff germs, but keeps the hair from falling, and causes it to grow profusely and lustrous.

Parisian Sage is the hair dressing, grower and beautifier most in demand by discriminating people. So certain is its tonic action on the scalp and hair, satisfaction that the manufacturers guarantee Parisian Sage to abolish dandruff, to stop falling hair and itching scalp, or refund your money.

Parisian Sage is free from grease and stickiness and once used will never be displaced by any of the ordinary commercial hair tonics.

A large bottle costs but 50 cents at your druggists.

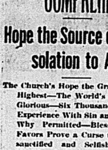
"I have used Parisian Sage for some time, and think it has no equal as a hair beautifier and scalp cleaner."—Mrs. William Hoglund, Sault Ste. Marie.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices, or hot applications,

THE BIBLE HOPE COMPREHENSIVE

Hope the Source of Consolation to All.

The Church's Hope the Grandest and Highest—The World's Hope Also Glorious—Six Thousand Years of Experience With Sin and Death—Why Permitted—Blessings and Favors Prove a Curse to the Unsanctified and Selfish—Present World-wide Trouble the Forerunner of a Better Day—Deliverance of Both Church and World at Hand.



Wilmington, Del., April 23.—Pastor Russell addressed the public here today in his usual impressive manner. His text was from Hebrews 6: 18, 19: "That by two immutable things [His word and His oath], in which it was impossible for God to lie; we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil." He said in part:

The Apostle's words here intimate that there is but one hope set before the Church—the hope presented in the Gospel of Christ. It is very important, then, that as Christians we understand what that hope is. Once we had such confused ideas respecting our Heavenly Father and His glorious Plan that we could not understand what constituted our hope. Many supposed that it was a hope set before a few and a threat set before everybody else—the threat of endless torment. How we misunderstood "the God of All Grace and the Father of Mercies!" Now we can see that there is a glorious hope for all who will come to love righteousness and hate iniquity, although the world's hope is not the Christian's hope.

The hope set before the Church is the hope of reigning with Christ, as His joint-heirs, His Bride. (Romans 8:17; 1 John 3:2; 2 Peter 1:4.) It is the hope of attaining the Divine nature. This hope has been held out in advance of the blessings which will be proffered to the world later. The Church has no part in the hope of the world. But we have the admonition of our Lord and of His Apostles that we "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." We are enjoined to put off the works of darkness—anger, malice, hatred, strife, and all other works of the flesh and of the Devil—and to put on meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love—the fruits of the Spirit of Christ, the Holy Spirit.—Hebrews 12:14; Galatians 5:19-23.

First Intimation of Church's Hope.

The first intimation that God would raise up a class who would roll away the curse from Adam's race was given to Abraham. God said, "Abraham, I will call you My friend because of your faith." He could not call Abraham His son; for there could be no sons of God amongst the fallen race, because all were condemned to death in Adam. Not until the death sentence should be lifted from Adam's posterity could any of them become sons of God. Therefore there were no human sons of God after Adam. But since the time when our Lord died a Sacrifice for human sin, a special class of humanity have been given the great privilege of becoming sons of God, as St. John tells us.—John 1:12.

But God said to Abraham His friend, "I have a Plan by which to bless the world." The Almighty was the very One who had placed the condemnation of death upon the world. The Great Judge had determined that man was not worthy of everlasting life. Two thousand years after He had pronounced that curse, the Eternal One declared that it should be rolled away; for when He promised that a blessing should come to mankind, He implied that the death penalty should be removed.

It required great faith on Abraham's part to believe God in this matter. But he felt that in some manner God would roll away the curse. Put yourself into Abraham's place and you will realize how remarkable this was. He knew that the death penalty was upon the race. After God had said that mankind should die, it was not easy to see how He could reverse His own sentence and declare that man should live. Would He say one thing at one time, and then two thousand years later say another? For a time there must have been great perplexity in Abraham's mind. But he appreciated God's Promise.—Genesis 12:3; Romans 4:3.

And now, four thousand years after Abraham's time, we are proclaiming that same great Promise; for it has never yet been fulfilled. God promised to bless the whole world through Abraham's Seed. That Seed, the Apostle Paul assures us, is Christ and His Church. (Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.) The hope of being this Seed is the great hope to which St. Paul referred in our text and its context.

Abraham's Two Seed.

This hope is based upon a comprehensive Promise. First, that the world was to be blessed; second, that this blessing was to come through Abraham's Seed. God showed that there would be two different seeds of Abraham; for He said, "Thy seed shall be as the stars of heaven, and as the sand of the seashore"—a Heavenly and an earthly seed, though the Heavenly was to be the Seed of blessing.—Genesis 22: 15-18.

Four hundred and thirty years later, God said to the children of Israel, in substance, "You know that I promised your father Abraham that through his Seed I would bless the world. As his natural seed, are you ready to have that Promise fulfilled in you? If I bring you up out of Egypt, will you appreciate My will and do it?" And they replied, "We will." Then the Lord said, "I will give you My Law. If you cannot keep My Law, you cannot be proper teachers and blessers of the world. I have promised to bless all mankind, and I will do it. As the children of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, are you ready to be heirs of that Abrahamic Promise?"

You remember that Moses read the Lord's message of the Law to the people; and that they heard the blessing that should come upon them if they would keep the Law, and the condemnation that should come upon them if they failed to do so. Then the people said, "All these things will we do."—Exodus 19: 1-8.

God designed that the whole world should come to a knowledge of the fact that no fallen human being could possibly keep the letter of the Divine Law; for it is the measure of a perfect man's ability. But He dealt with the Israelites just as though they could do it. They had typical sacrifices. For sixteen hundred years they tried to keep that Law; yet year after year they failed to do so; and hence they failed to be the Seed of Abraham which was to bless the world. As St. Paul showed us, "By the deeds of the Law shall no flesh be justified in God's sight." (Romans 3:20.) God was merely teaching them, and through them all of His intelligent creatures, that it is impossible for sinners to justify themselves in His sight. Therefore it was impossible for any of them to bless the world.

Then, in due time, God sent forth His First-Begotten Son, the Logos, His great Mouthpiece. To Him the Father had made the proposition that if He would become a man, live a while on earth amongst sinners, and accomplish a great work for mankind, He would afterwards be received back to greater glory than He had before He undertook this mission.

The Son knew that if the Father had anything to make known in His Plan, it must be for good. So we read that "the Logos was made flesh," and "for the joy set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame." (John 1:14; Hebrews 12: 2; Philippians 2: 8-11.) Jesus was born a descendant of Abraham, through the Virgin Mary. He kept the Jewish Law inviolate, and thus proved Himself worthy to be that Seed who would bless the world. He died to redeem the race—"the Just for the unjust." He rose again, qualified for the great work of the world's deliverance. To Him is given all power in Heaven and in earth.—Matthew 28:18.

The Bible tells us that the salvation of the world is waiting until our Lord shall take unto Himself His great power and reign. God has been holding this salvation in reservation for over 1,800 years, during the selection of the Church, the Bride of Christ—the work of the Gospel Age. Before the Church He has set this great hope of being associated with our Lord Jesus, of constituting with Him this Spiritual Seed of Abraham, which is to bless all the families of the earth. For this reason our Lord is first delivering the Church class. This hope of being of the Seed of Abraham is "the hope set before us in the Gospel," of which our text speaks. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the Promise."

God has still in reservation the work of blessing the world, this great work of a thousand years. But it is now almost due to begin. The promised Spiritual Seed is about completed. Under them the earthly seed—the faithful Worthies of previous ages, who will be raised from the dead, and Natural Israel, who will be restored to Divine favor—will ere long be ready to co-operate; and then the world's uplift will begin.

Our Anchor Sure and Steadfast.

In the dream which God gave to Nebuchadnezzar, there was a stone taken out of the mountain without hands, and it became a great mountain that filled the whole earth. (Daniel 2:31-45.) This stone represented Christ's Kingdom. The power which has taken this spiritual Stone out of the mountain—the world—is simply the hope inspired by God's Promise to Abraham. Some of us have heard the Call to follow Christ, and have responded. (Matthew 5:6; 11:28; 16:24.) The Word of God has entered into our hearts. Our minds, our aims, our ambitions—everything—are being transformed, are being set on Heavenly things.—Romans 12:1,2; Colossians 3:1-3.

How precious is this hope! It is indeed "an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast." By this expression St. Paul suggests the picture of a ship at anchor during a storm. So in the storms of life the child of God has a firm anchorage. This anchor of hope takes hold even upon the things within the veil.

The basis of our hope is the Word of God. If we let go of our hope, we are letting go of everything. The "hour of temptation" is now upon the whole world; and a still greater stress is coming. (Revelation 2:10.) All the more, therefore, shall we need our anchor of hope, of faith. Through the Prophet the Lord points out that He is about to "do His work, His strange work, and to bring to pass His act, His strange act." (Isaiah 28: 20-22.) The world will not be able to understand it. As they see the trouble extending everywhere—to all governments and institutions—and realize that it will terminate in anarchy, they will cry, "Where is God? What is coming to this Great Babylon that we thought was about to bless the world? What is about to happen to us?"

The Unsanctified Heart Selfish.

We are now living in the day when the light is shining more brightly than ever before, and when the darkness is gradually disappearing. We whose eyes of understanding have been opened see the hope for mankind, see that blessings are soon to be showered upon the world during the Messianic Kingdom.

More and more it is impressed upon my mind that the numbers of humanity who love righteousness and who prefer it to unrighteousness are very considerable. The major part of the world would rather do right than wrong, provided that it did not cost sacrifice to do right. If the world were in a healthy, normal condition, it would not cost sacrifice to do right. It should be easier to do right than wrong, and it would be if things were as they were originally. When God created our first parents, it was easier for them to obey than to disobey; and when the Divine Kingdom shall introduce the New Order, it will become easier to do right than to do wrong.

As the days go by, we see still more clearly the glorious hope of the groaning creation, groaning now in weakness, sin, and bondage to death. After the Church is delivered, the creation is also to be delivered, set free from the bondage of sin and death into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. (Romans 8:19-22.) Mankind will have the same opportunity for life that Adam had at first. But they will have the advantage of Adam in that they have had six thousand years' experience under the degradation of the fall, during which the world has been learning the exceeding sinfulness of sin and their need of Divine assistance.

The Present Outlook.

Yet with all the experience of six thousand years behind us, the world to-day is plunged into the most terrible war ever known. Each nation imagines that God is with it. The spirit of anger, bitterness, and hate is spreading everywhere. Yet there are blessings, comforts, and conveniences to-day such as the world never even dreamed of before. These blessings are coming because we are living in the dawn of the New Dispensation. But the fact is apparent that people are being injured by the wealth and other favors of our day. We have an increase of education far above any previous time. And what is the result? It is being used to defraud and overreached fellowmen. It is being utilized to destroy men's lives. In another century, if present conditions were permitted to continue, it would be worse.

Light and knowledge entering the heart that is unsanctified, unconsecrated to God, merely increase the power to do evil. Through sharpened intellectual perceptions the increase of ability operates along the lines of selfishness. The only ones ready to receive aright God's favors and to profit by them are those who have yielded themselves to God, who have renounced their own wills and have accepted His will. Upon these the blessings of God have a sanctifying effect. Increased knowledge adds to their power for good.

We are glad that we have given our hearts to God, and that our eyes of understanding have been opened to see more and more the lengths, breadths, heights, and depths of God's Justice, Wisdom, Power, and Love. How refreshing this is to our hearts. It is good to be so near to the ushering in of the New Dispensation; for our anchor of hope is grounded firmly in God. Soon He will deliver Zion—"when Morning appeareth."

Trouble Precurser of Coming Glory.

Thank the Lord that He has given His people to know what is to follow this dark night of trouble. What a blessing He has granted in the knowledge that there is a golden lining to the black clouds now gathering thick around humanity! Let us not dwell too much on the coming trouble, however. Rather let us point men to the time beyond. Let us tell them that God has a great blessing in store for all the families of the earth. Let us show them how comprehensive is the Bible hope. It will be a sad day for the world when the plowshare of trouble shall go in deep; and yet the experience will prove to be a blessing. When mankind see everything beginning to collapse, then they will begin to realize that there is no hope except in God, then they will be willing to be taught. Then they will say, "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for Him, and He will save us!"—Isaiah 25: 6-9.

Then unto our Master "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess." Then "the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea." (Isaiah 11:9.) Let us rejoice, then, even though "clouds and darkness are around us." Let us realize that we have set before us a glorious hope, and not some theory of man—not the theory that there is no death; not the theory that if you have a pain you have no pain—none of these nonsensical hopes! Let us accept what the Bible says. Let our hope be in God, and our faith grounded in His Word. Thus abiding in Christ, we shall stand unshaken, "Though the earth [society as now organized] be removed, and though the mountains [kingdoms, strong governments] be carried into the midst of the sea [the enraged and turbulent masses of mankind]." God is in the midst of Zion. She shall not be moved. He will help her "early in the Morning" of the New Dispensation.—Psalm 46.

If the fashion plates are looking more like human beings, it must be admitted it is because the girls are looking more like fashion plates.

By the way, has the United States no criminal extradition treaty with Holland, where the fugitive Von Papen is now?

A Lucky Find.

The roof of an old house in Augher, Co. Tyrone, collapsed the other day, and when the owner was clearing off the debris he was lucky enough to find a roll of bank notes, which had evidently been hidden in the thatch of the dwelling. A number of gold coins were found secreted in the same house on a previous occasion.

The United States might offer to exchange Von Papen's papers which Germany claims for Von Papen against whom a criminal indictment has been returned.

Part of the Orchestra, in the great photo Spectacle, "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" to be presented at Griffin's Opera House, Tomorrow, Friday, and Saturday, With a Matinee Friday and Saturday Only

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO-MORROW

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's massive spectacle, coming to Griffin's Opera House tomorrow, Tuesday and Saturday, with a matinee Friday and Saturday only, is the largest and most important production of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the performance of nearly three hours. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects and realism, whilst the wizard of the cerden, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the war between the States and the Reconstruction of the Southland. Some idea of its magnitude may be had from the facts that 18,000 actors and 3000 horses took part and that the staging of this great "out-door" drama cost half a million dollars.

Several of the actors are of Southern lineage. Henry Walthall, who plays the heroic role of the little Confederate colonel, is a member of the well-known Walthall family of Alabama. Miriam Cooper, who appears as Margaret Cameron, is a direct descendent of Charles Carroll, the Maryland singer of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Griffith is the son of a Brigadier General of the Confederate Army.

The musical score synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes and played by a symphony orchestra of 30 musicians; which together with the large staff of flesh-and-blood helpers employed nightly to supply the necessary effect to the smallest detail, makes the realism almost uncanny.

CLEAN POLITICS V.S. GRAFT

Maybe you have read in the papers and have never understood how the poor little bodies of child workers are ground into bloody dollars for the grafting textile concerns of America. No sorrier but all too true story was ever revealed on any moving picture screen that this one, which forms the 5th two part episode of the great Graft series which is to be exhibited at the Palace Theatre, to-night and Thursday, matinee and night. You will see how the young attorney, Tom Larnigan, crushes these grafters; you will see examples taken from real life and portrayed before your eyes on the screen; examples that offer the swiftest, most dramatic, true-to-life action, which together with a beautiful story of love which runs through the serial, making it one of the most absorbing and unique serials ever offered to local photoplay lovers. The scream of the screen, Billie Ritchie, also appears on the same programme, in a rip-roaring 2 part L. Ko comedy entitled, "Room and Board $1.50." This 2 part comedy, which is announced as an excellent tonic for blues, is being offered in addition to 2 other quality pictures.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM H. H. DILLNUTT

Belgium, April 9th, 1916.

Dear Emily:—I have some very bad news to tell you, as Ernie was wounded on Tuesday last. I have purposely waited before writing so as to obtain full particulars, and have found out that he was with a party of five that went on in advance when we pulled into a new position. Three of the party, including Lieut. Goodwin, were killed instantly, but poor Ernie was lucky in a way, as he was only wounded, being hit in the chest, right arm, right leg, right ankle and in the abdomen. He was sent to the base and was doing fine when I heard from his O. C. yesterday.

He was hit by a high explosive shell, and as soon as I hear anything further I will let you know.

Now you must not let this worry you, as he is getting the very best of attention, and will very soon recover, for if he was very bad he would not have been sent on to the base, as a railway journey of some miles, must be very trying.

I was fortunate in being able to see him and was speaking to him only the day before, and he was joking me about my promotion, for you must know that I was made acting Corporal about a month ago. I am in the best of health and spirits, and will get a little back on the Germans as I have now an exceptional grudge against them. Do not get downhearted, as I do not think we shall be away much longer.

I had a parcel from the Argyle Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, that was packed by Marion Ketcheson, and believe me, I sure did enjoy the goodies it contained. I am writing a letter of thanks, after I finish this, and must ask you to excuse me not writing you quite as often lately, as I have been very busy acting as Quarter Master Sergeant for the past ten days.

I must close with lots of love to everyone and hoping that I shall soon be bringing home poor Ernie fully recovered.

Your loving husband,

Harry.

FROM IVY ALEXANDER

Mrs. Everett Sills, Thurlow.

Dear Madam:—Many thanks for the warm and comfortable socks in which I found a slip conveying your blessing to us. Your kindness in sacrificing your time and money for our comfort is greatly appreciated by all the boys out here. We are at present out of the trenches for a few days in "Army Corps Reserve", about six miles behind the firing line. We have been having very cold and stormy weather over here for the last three or four weeks with quite a lot of snow, which, of course, has not added to the comforts of life in the trenches. So that the many welcome little surprises we get from the "Dear Homeland" in the shape of warm "woollies" and "delicacies", are all the more appreciated, and we are all aware of the debt of gratitude we owe to the "good ladies" who send them. With best wishes and deepest gratitude to yourself and friends.

Yours sincerely,

Ivy Alexander.

FROM DRIVER FRANK SHELDON

Flanders, April 7, 1916.

William Rawlingson, Esq.

Dear Old Bill:—Just a few lines to let you know that I am still well and kicking. I was glad to hear you were at the house cooking. Do you cook mulligan, etc., for the boarders and serve it in mess tins? Well, how are you getting along. I am feeling fine. We lost poor Bert Green the other day and another Belleville boy badly wounded. We are on the go day and night. The quality of the mud at present is very sticky in places, though it is drying up wonderfully these last few weeks. I had a great old time while on leave. Well, cheer up, Bill, we will try and finsh this war soon; there is only one more German left (so they say) so we stand a pretty good chance. Well, so long for the present. Will be glad to hear from you. Good luck old scout.

Frank.

Tea, Coffee and Children

It would be difficult for any parent in the Dominion to find a physician of modern education who would contend that tea and coffee are not harmful, especially to growing children

The fact remains, however that many parents give these beverages to their little folks, and allow their use in older children at a time when physical and mental development is the most rapid

The drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee retards growth and interferes with school progress. Disturbances of eyesight, headaches, nervousness, irritability, indigestion and other ills appear in many, seemingly without cause, and the damage often occurs at the most impressionable period of life.

No parent should permit the use of tea and coffee in the growing young; for the men and women of tomorrow will be what the parent of today make the children by wise upbringing

Children as well as adults need an invigorating, warm drink, and in a growing number of Canadian homes it has been found that the most wholesome table beverage is

INSTANT POSTUM

This pure food-drink, made of prime wheat and a bit of wholesome molasses is readily prepared at the table, a cup at a time.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in a cup of hot water, with cream and sugar added, makes an attractive, healthful drink, and its pleasant flavour wins children and usually the parents.

THIEVES AND ROBBERS IN THE REGINA CASE

Royal Commission and Police Court Busily Sifting The Scandals—Ontario Men are Among The Principal Witnesses—Money for Cigars and Other Luxuries Figure In The Features

REGINA, April 2.—All this week Royal Commissions and Police Court will be investigating at as phases of Saskatchewan's rapidly developing political scandals, with criminal court proceedings still to come. The charges against Messrs E. L. H. Smith, J. P. Brown and E. H. Devline, M.P.P., will be heard in the local Police Court some time during the week, while, at Yorkton, will be tried Robert Godfrey, a merchant, who is also charged with frauds in connection with road contracts. A road inspector in the northern part of the province is awaiting trial, and a warrant is out for another men who left the country several months ago. All these are in regard to the road work frauds only.

Clayton Peterson, who is expected back to-day to give evidence before the Brown Elwood Commission, will be arrested on a perjury charge and probably arraigned in the Police Court early this week. He is awaiting trial in the Supreme Court on a charge of conspiring to bribe members of the Legislature, along with four other members of the Licensed Victuallers' Executive in December, 1923. Four members of the House have been committed on the charge of receiving bribes.

MONEY TO BUY CIGARS.

The Brown Elwood Commission sits to-day, and Clayton Peterson, who owns the Clayton Hotel here, and whose home is at Guelph, Ont., will be the principal witness. Peterson is alleged by other witnesses to have been the chief paymaster in the 1913 bribery. Before the Sutherland Committee of the House he denied that he received any money from the Licensed Victuallers in 1913 other than two or three hundred dollars, for the purpose of, as he expressed it, "buying cigars for the boys and making a good fellow of myself," in order to create a favourable sentiment for the Licensed Victuallers. Other witnesses have sworn that Peterson received nine thousand dollars, and these include E. L. H. Smith, the bank manager, who claims he paid him the money on cheques issued by the Licensed Victuallers' Association.

Peterson's appearance on the stand will cause a great deal of interest. If he sticks to his story, as told before the Sutherland Committee, it is stated the perjury charge will be pressed.

MANY WITNESSES HEARD.

The Brown-Elwood Commission has now heard more than a hundred and twenty witnesses, with about ten more to come. In the latter part of last week it dealt largely with the Government's charge that a conspiracy existed in 1915 to defeat the Government on its temperance legislation. The evidence on this was contradictory. H. C. Pierce, M.P.P., on whose previous evidence the charge was based, said that the Licensed Victuallers were endeavouring to get him to bribe members to oppose the bill, and offered him twenty-five thousand dollars and his own vote and influence. On the other hand, several witnesses swore that Pierce was chasing around and endeavouring to get money to defeat the bill, saying that he had the members lined up. They said a proposition was made to Pierce to supply money for candidates in the next election who opposed the bill, and to see that they were returned, but that Pierce would were returned, but that Pierce would not accept it.

WETMORE COMMISSION.

Before the Wetmore Commission Job Parsons Brown was on the stand for three days last week, and by appearances will be there for several days this week. It resumes to-morrow morning. A peculiar situation exists with regard to this commission. Contrary to the practice in other commissions, the counsel for Mr J. E. Bradshaw, M.P.P., who laid the charges, are not prosecuting them. Mr P. E. Mackenzie, K.C., and Mr J. N. Fish, K.C., appear as counsel for the Commission, and they are prosecuting the charges, while counsel for Mr Bradshaw have the opportunity of cross-examination. Though the general understanding was that Messrs. Mackenzie and Fish were representing the Government, Hon. E. L. Wetmore, chairman of the Commission, has taken pains to explain that they assist the Commission. Brown has given evidence on a number of the fraudulent contracts for road work so far. He assumes entire responsibility for them, so far as the Highway Department is concerned, and says in some instances the money was split with Devline, and in others with the late J. F. Lindsay, of Swift Current. Some cheques he cashed himself, and kept the entire proceeds, instead of sending them to Lindsay or to Devline to cash. There are nineteen fraudulent contracts altogether, according to Brown's admissions, and the total proceeds were over $50,000. These contracts were drawn up by Brown, in the name of non-existent contractors; the inspectors' reports were fabricated by Brown, entries in the books made by him, and he sent out the cheques for them.

BUILDING SCANDALS.

Before the Haultain Commission

Before the Haultain Commission the Battleford Asylum probe will be continued this week. Mr J. F. Bryant, counsel for Mr Bradshaw, has produced three expert witnesses who have testified that contractors had not a proper opportunity to tender on the Asylum building. He also produced the man who actually drew the plan who testified he was told two or three months before the tenders were called for by the head of the firm of architects that "Bishop and Robinson," that is, the Saskatchewan Building Construction Company, was to get the contract. He has shown that the successful tenderer asked another contractor to put in a bogus tender at a higher price to make sure that his own would receive consideration. He has shown that the successful tender was just $900 higher than the original estimate by the architects of the cost of the building, although the actual cost was greater by over $200,000. That is as far as the evidence has gone thus far.

The Haultain and Wetmore Commissions resume on Tuesday morning and will sit throughout the week. The Brown-Elwood Commission started this morning, and expects to complete its work to-morrow or Wednesday.

Russian Consul-General For Canada Receives Decoration

MONTREAL, April 25.—Commander Serge de Likatscheff, Consul General for Russia in Canada, was notified yesterday from Petrograd that His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of all the Russias, has conferred upon his Canadian representative the Cross of Chevalier de St Vladimir, fourth class. The Consul General, who was at the Ritz Carlton last evening receiving the congratulations of his friends, said that while he did not expect the decoration he was proud to have earned this mark of appreciation coming as it did from the Emperor and is given for special services rendered the Russian cause in this country during the war. He also explained that the decoration in question follows those of St Stanislas and St Ann, both of which had already been given to the Consul-General.

NOVEL POINT IN PROPERTY TAXATION

Westminster Claims Taxes on Canadian Record Offices

LONDON, April 25.—A novel point with regard to a demand for property rates is being discussed between the Borough of Westminster and the Canadian military authorities. The former claims over $10,000 in taxes upon the assessment of the Canadian Pay and Record Offices, which occupy various buildings spread over valuable sites in Westminster. An English barrister and Major Maurice Alexander appeared before the Borough Council and argued that the Canadian contingent, being on active service, should be exempt, not being occupiers in a civilian sense. The War Office declines to take any responsibility to contingent, and the Borough Council sees no reason why it should lose h occupied by the military, but the council members have conceded a postponement of the claim for further argument.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations, I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

[illegible] and W. H. Lattimer fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will glady fill yours.

Mutton's Death Resulted From Carbolic Poisoning

a boarder at the Albion Hotel and knew the deceased Charles Mutton. Witness saw the deceased alive about 11.15 on the night of the 17th inst. He was then apparently in his usual health. Witness at this hour went to get a pitcher of water and deceased also procured a pitcher of water. This was the last he saw of the deceased alive. A companion was with deceased but who he was witness could not say. Mutton was then apparently enjoying his health. Mutton never complained to witness of being ill.

William Smith testified that he was proprietor of the Albion Hotel in Belleville, and the deceased Charles Mutton boarded with him. He knew deceased for some time previous to boarding at the hotel. Deceased was not t despondent man. He occupied room No. 7. On the evening of the 17th inst the deceased was in his room making out some reports. At about 9.30 that evening Mutton came downstairs with a companion and that was the last time witness saw him alive. At about 2 o'clock the next afternoon a maid about the house asked witness if he had seen Mutton as he had not arose. Witness then made an investigation, and being unable to get response from the room looked over the transom, when it was found that Mutton was dead in bed. Dr Platt was called and ascertained that Mutton was dead. The evening previous Mutton was apparently in good health. Deceased had been partaking of intoxicants to some extent, but not to any excess.

To a juryman—Deceased never made a request to be called in the morning.

Dr Platt being sworn testified that he answered a call on Tuesday afternoon, the 17th inst., at about 2.30. Witness went upstairs and entered room No. 7 and found the deceased lying in bed. He had evidently been dead for some time as the limbs were somewhat rigid. Witness made an examination of the deceased, but could find no trace that he had taken anything to cause his death. His limbs were exposed and he had apparently retired for the night. Death had resulted some hours before witness was called. A bottle containing some cough medicine was on a chair beside the bed. A small bottle produced contained carbolic acid, but there was no evidence that deceased had taken anything of a poisonous nature. Witness did not then see the bottle produced at the time he (witness) was in the room. He saw some papers deceased had made out, also a letter he had written.

Dr Yeomans being sworn said he was a practioner in the city of Belleville and made the post mortem on the body of deceased. His age was about 28 years. On his lips were burns of a whitish colour and the tongue was slightly burned. His organs were all in good, normal and healthy condition. His stomach contained a quantity of food together with an overdose of carbolic acid to which death was due.

Ridley Cole testified that he was an undertaker for Tickell & Son and about 3 p.m. on Tuesday 18th inst went to the Albion Hotel and took the body of Charles Mutton to Tickell & Son's morgue. The evening of the next night the body was shipped to his late home in Coburg. Witness noticed marks of burning on the lips when he was preparing it for burial.

Mr Mooney, testified that he made a search with an officer when a small bottle was found. It was wrapped up in a shirt which was in a valise. The valise was on the foot of the bed. Other articles of apparel were in the valise. As far as could be ascertained the deceased was but slightly if any in arrears of his account. He had three men under him and paid them. The book and papers of the deceased were in the room. Witness understood the deceased had a sister named Kit.

Kenneth Cummings testified he was an employee of the Bell Telephone Company and was working under Mutton. Witness was always working with Mutton, who was always at his work. He never heard the deceased make any threat to take his life. Herman Spafford, a mechanic, was with Mutton on Monday evening the 17th inst. To the Coroner—Witness could assign no reason why Mutton would have carbolic acid in his possession.

Walter Potts testified he was a lineman for the Bell Telephone Company and knew the deceased for some years. Mutton's home was in Cobourg. His father, Wm Mutton, and three sisters were living, one of whom was single. Deceased was never a despondent person. On one occasion the deceased made a remark that he wished he could stop drinking. This was the week before he was found dead.

This concluded the evidence and Dr Boyce briefly summed up the evidence given. He said it was apparent that Mutton's death resulted from his own hand. Every man who takes his own life and is in his right mind has some motive for doing so. But in this case there was apparently no motive for him committing such an act.

The jury were not long in rendering their verdict after retiring.

Wants Birth of Nation Banished

Colored Gentleman Appeals to Press To Intercede In Behalf of Insulted Dignity

A colored gentleman, in an interviewed with an Intelligencer representative, this morning, made an appeal for the banishment of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," on the ground that the scenes and explanations are not in accord with history, belittles the colored race, and therefore an insult to recognized African intelligence. He has communicated with Premier Hearst in the hopes of interesting Provincial power, but as yet no response has been received. The dignity of our visitor was materially damaged because of the altitude—or total ignorance—of the author and in view of misrepresentations, leading to prejudice against his kindred, the films should be barred from the screen, as unfit for exhibition. Having never witnessed the play our representative could give no opinion, but will endeavor to render a decision on Friday—or immediately following the production, Thursday evening.

Music And Drama

FINE PROGRAMME AT GRIFFIN'S LAST NIGHT

Attracted by the announcement that Mary Pickford was to be seen on the screen, Griffin's Opera House was well filled with our representative people last night, and all pronounced the programme one of the best yet witnessed. The first to be presented was a four-reel spectacular play entitled "Spy Menace," a photodrama, of the treachery of German representatives in foreign countries. The scene opened in diplomatic circles, and ended on the field of battle, with all its accompanied horrors, the thrilling incidents following each other in rapid succession. A pretty love thread runs through the production, lending a softening interest to the play.

Then came the famous Mary Pickford in "Home Folks," representing the straight laced religious propensities of a father, a disobedient son, and a pretty but sedate daughter, beautifully portrayed by Mary Pickford; the mother, fearful of the easily aroused ire of the stiff handed husband keeping her place as a faithful housewife. The quaint attitude of Miss Pickford toward conditions, her assistance to the brother, her quiet, unruffled acceptance of an offer of marriage, and final success in uniting father and son, were all so real and in order that one marvelled at the sweet influence brought to bear. One scarcely recognized in the quiet little actress the famous film star, but the power of attraction prevailed—the spirit of the real Mary Pickford.

Lastly, Charlie Chaplin, in a four-reel scream, which for funny situations went the limit. Many imitations are cropping up, but from last night's production one readily decided there is but one Charlie Chaplin. The programme, which will be repeated this evening, should show a capacity house.

Farmer of St. Luc. Que., Shot By Man Whom He Had Sheltered

Canadian Press Special.

MONTREAL, April 27. — W. L. Weng, farmer, 57 years of age, was shot dead in his home at St Luc, near St John's, Que., at two o'clock this morning. Mrs Weng was dangerously wounded by the bullet which killed her husband, and a son and daughter had a narrow escape. A man who says his name is Jacques Renaud, of Montreal, nineteen years of age, is under arrest for the crime.

Renaud, it is said, called at Weng's house and asked for a night's lodging. At two this morning the farmer found him rifling his clothes. In the mix-up the shooting occurred, the farmer being killed instantly. The son and daughter called for help, and neighbours with rifles rushed to the scene. They held Renaud until he was taken into custody. Three shots were fired at Mrs Weng. The son gave the alarm by jumping through a window.

Germans Blamed For Irish Trouble

LONDON, April 27.—Premier Asquith told the Commons that drastic action to suppress the movement in Ireland was being taken. Outside of Dublin, he said, the country was tranquil. IRISH CAPITAL CENTRES OCCUPIED BY REGULARS

London Daily News Says Total Casualties So Far Are 42 Killed and 46 Wounded—Nationalist Volunteers Assisting Authorities to Restore Order—Outside of Dublin Country Is Tranquil

LONDON, April 27.—Special—British regulars from Belfast and England are now in Dublin, and have recaptured from the rebellious faction several important centres which the members of the Sinn Fein party and their adherents had occupied. These include St. Stephen's Green and Liberty Hall.

As a measure of precaution martial-law has been proclaimed in the city and county of Dublin, and the official announcement is made that drastic steps are being taken to suppress the movement in Ireland and arrest all those responsible for it.

That the Government intends to deal with the offenders with a heavy hand is indicated by the publication of a proclamation in the official Gazette to-night suspending in Ireland section 1 of the defence of the realm amendment act of 1915, which gives to a British subject charged with an offence under the act the right to be tried by a civil court.

The proclamation recites that "the present state of affairs in Ireland is such as to constitute a special military emergency," as specified in subsection 7 of the act, which enacts that in the event of an invasion or other special military emergency arising out of the present war the operation or section 1 may be suspended either generally or in a specified area.

Premier Asquith in the House of Commons and Lord Lansdowne in the House of Lords made reassuring statements this afternoon respecting the situation in Ireland.

Outside of Dublin, said the Premier, the country was tranquil.

It was the case that the rebels had machine guns.

Nationalist Volunteers, he said, had turned out to assist the authorities, while many local persons had offered their aid.

Lord Lansdowne declared that there was now a complete cordon of troops around the centre of Dublin. He added the information that "a half-hearted attack" was made by the rebels on Dublin Castle Monday. The casualties at Dublin, according to his statement, were nineteen killed and 27 wounded.

Baron Wimborne, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, forwarded advices from Dublin to the effect that the situation was satisfactory, and that the news from the provinces was reassuring. He placed the number of insurgents killed at eleven.

A despatch from Tralee, county of Kerry, says that a sensation has been caused there by the arrest of a prominent member of the Tralee Irish Volunteers, Austin Stack. An accountant in the general postoffice at Dublin, Cornelius Collins, has also been taken into custody. Both are charged with conspiracy in aiding the importation of arms from an enemy.

Another man of unknown nationality has been arrested. His identity has not been disclosed, but he was conveyed to Dublin under a strong escort.

The men connected with the filibustering exaedition now in the hands of the Government include Sir Roger Casement, two Irish confederates and twenty-two Germans comprising the crew. The chief importance of the capture lies in the revelations made of an extensive plot having ramifications in Germany, Ireland and America. Irish-Americans are said to have been largely instrumental in financing the revolutionary movement.

Berlin Ont. To Vote On Name

City Council Decides to Submit The Question on 19th of May

BERLIN, Ont., April 26.—The City Council last evening at a special meeting unanimously decided to submit the question of changing the name of the city to the electors, as was provided for in the special Act passed by the Legislature last week. The date agreed upon was Friday, May 19.

The Council received a petition signed by a number of the manufacturers and business men of the city, asking the council to defer taking a vote, but the majority of the Council thought the delay would only increase the agitation, not only in the city, but throughout the Dominion.

CARSON AND REDMOND STAND BY GOVERNMENT

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 27. — Premier Asquith announced in the Commons today the rebels continue to hold important public buildings in Dublin and that street encounters were still in progress. Mr Asquith said it was obviously necessary to exercise military censorship while martial law prevailed in Ireland. This censorship, however, would be directed merely with regard to essential military requirements of the situation.

The Premier announced that Major-General Sir John Maxwell, who formerly commanded the British forces in Egypt, was leaving this afternoon for Ireland. The General has been given plenary powers, under martial law, over the whole country. The troops in Ireland have been and are being strongly reinforced, Asquith added, and the Government was satisfied that the force despatched was adequate to deal with the situation. Irish authorities will place themselves at the disposal of General Maxwell.

Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond expressed in the Commons today their abhorence of the uprising in their desire to support the Government.

More Russians Are In France

Repetition of Last Week's Enthusiastic Scenes as Contingent Debarks at Marseilles

MARSEILLES, France, April 26.—Another contingent of Russian troops arrived here this morning. The Russians were received with all military honours, and debarked amid enthusiastic cheers.

The contingent arived at 10 o'clock, its coming being greeted by the flying of flags and blowing of whistles from the craft of many nations in the harbour and by a large crowd massed on the quay, which was especially prepared for the arrival of the troops, all merchandise having been removed. A regiment of Hussars provided a military guard of honour.

General Minissier, the governor of Marseilles, accompanied by his staff, welcomed the commander of the Russians. The Russian troops assembled on the decks replied to the greetings from the shore and harbour with hearty cheers. The debarkation was immediately begun, the crowd continually manifesting its enthusiasm during the landing.

The Russians marched through the streets on their way to Camp Mirabeau, amid a tumultuous welcome from the crowds on the pavements, and in balconies and on house-tops along the way. They made a fine appearance, being of the same class of sturdy young soldiers as the previous contingents. The newly arrived troops occupy the same quarters at Camp Mirabeau as did the Russians who arrived last week. They have now gone forward to Camp Mailly, near Troyes, on the Seine, 90 miles southeast of Paris, the second detachment having reached there yesterday. The Russian and French troops are mingling at this camp in a general spirit of good will.

KAISER IS CONSULTED ON CRISIS

Chancellor and Head of The Navy Are Off To Headquarters At Front

BERLIN, April 26.—Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and Admiral von Holtzendroff, chief of the naval General Staff, left for Headquarters last night to consult with Emperor William in regard to the reply to the American note.

The Chancellor's conference with Ambassador Gerard yesterday afternoon lasted for half an hour.

President Wilson's demand that German submarines warn freighters, as well as passenger liners, constitutes the most serious obstacle in the way of a satisfactory settlement of German-American relations, the United Press learned authoritatively to-day.

Other points of the controversy can be settled without any danger of a diplomatic rupture, but strong opposition exists here to safeguarding the crews of freighters, since it is held that every enemy freighter is engaged almost solely in carrying munitions or other war supplies to the Allies.

There is a growing feeling, however, that there will be no diplomatic break. It is entirely too early to say that the crisis has passed. The situation apparently depends upon the firmness of President Wilson's stand.

Youth Was Given Freedom

Took Part in Daring Attempt At Escape From The Jail At London

KINGSTON, April 26. — Gordon Lamott, a Strathroy young man, who was sentenced to seven years, in the Portsmouth penitentiary, for burglary in his home town, two years ago, has been released on parole, and according to reports is now living in London.

Lamott, along with Patrick O'Brien, alias Maloney, who in reality was a brother of the famous "Shorty Billy" Doyle, of Chicago, who was killed in a revolver battle with Detectives Nickle and Egelton at London twelve years ago, were the ringleaders in a daring attempt at jail breaking at the county jail in London, when both were waiting trial.

The men knocked down Turnkey Sproule, threw pepper in his eyes and were in a fair way to scaling the wall when the police arrived on the scene.

Lamott's conduct at the Portsmouth penitentiary is said to have been exemplary

SOLDIER STRUNG UP?

Rumor of Gruel Punishment Aired In Commons

OTTAWA, April 26.—A complaint that mediaeval methods of punishment were being resorted to by the officer commanding a western regiment in dealing with his men, was made at to-day's sitting of the House of Commons by Mr Knowles, of Moose Jaw.

Mr Knowles said it was currently reported in Moose Jaw that the colonel of the 28th Battalion had punished a young private by suspending by the arms for an hour and a half till he had fainted. He was also said to have resorted to the same method in other cases. Mr Knowles thought the report, if untrue, should be denied, for its effect on recruiting was bad.

Sir Robert Borden scarcely thought it possible that the report could be accurate, but promised immediate investigation.

FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND FOR SINKING A SHIP

German Government Was Prepared To Pay That Sum—"Knew What They Did" Was Response To Warning Against Killing Innocent People

NEW YORK, April 27.—(Special.)—The German Government was prepared to pay $500,000 each for the destruction of ships loaded with war supplies for the entente allies, Lieut. Robert Fay of the German army, on trial in the United States court for conspiracy, was quoted to-day as having informed Carl L. Wittig, a witness for the prosecution.

"I asked him," testified Wittig, a chemical engineer, "if he knew what $500,000 was, and he replied that money was no object in this thing."

Wittig, who declared his sympathies in the war were with France, told of informing the French embassy of his conversations with Fay. The embassy in turn notified the New York police.

On trial with Fay are his brother-in-law, Walter Scholtz, and Paul Daeche. Wittig said he told Fay and Scholtz that in placing bombs on ships with which they were unfamiliar they "were placing innocent people in jeopardy."

"Scholtz declared," added the witness, "that they knew what they were dong; that Max Breitung was telling them on which ships ammunition was being shipped."

Breitung also is under indictment for alleged conspiracy.

Shoots His Stepdaughter

John Gent, Member of Eighty-Third Battalion, Held By Police

TORONTO, April 26.—With the remark, "This is the way we shoot Germans," John Gent, of the 83rd Battalion, stationed at the old General Hospital, pointed an automatic pistol he had picked up from an officer's holster, pulled the trigger and accidently shot his stepdaughter, Dorothy Rumble, 15 years of age, dead, last night.

Gent was orderly to Capt. Cotton, and had invited his wife and stepdaughter to spend the evening at the barracks, the 83rd being on the eve of departure for overseas. While showing them the officer's quarters at the west-end of the building, he picked up the pistol, first pointing at the window and pulling the trigger to see if it was loaded. Assured by this that it was unloaded he then pointed it at his daughter and fired. The body of the girl was removed to the morgue after the 83rd had left the barracks, and Gent was lodged in No. 4, Wilton Avenue, police station. He will be charged with criminal negligence.

Prior to enlisting Gent lived at 166A West Queen Street.

Inquest will be opened to-day.

Flowers Strewn in Path of Troops Just Arrived in France

MARSEILLES, April 26.—The Russian troops which arrived here yesterday held dress parade this morning in the presence of a vast crowd, which cheered them wildly. The troops were reviewed by Col. Verstakosky, their commander; Gen. Menassier, Governor of Marseilles, and M. Schrameck, Prefect of Marseilles. While the review was in progress, bands on French warships played the Russian and French National Anthems.

The Russian troops then paraded through the city, preceded by little girls, who strewed flowers in their path.

Father Kills His Baby Son For Disturbing Rest

CORNWALL, April 26. — Mike Evanisk, a Russian Pole, who went to Massena recently to work in the aluminum works, has been lodged in jail to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of extreme cruelty to his four-months-old son. The story told by the other occupants of the house, also Russians, was that Evanisk became angered at the child disturbing his slumbers by crying, and, after shaking the infant violently, threw it on the bed, its head striking the wooden side rail of the bed, which was a rough affair made in bunk style. The baby died soon afterwards. Its skull was broken.

Toronto Starts Campaign For Overseas Y. M. C. A.

TORONTO, April 26.—For the purpose of launching a campaign to raise $75,000 in Toronto towards the Y.M.C.A. work among the Canadian troops overseas about two hundred prominent Toronto business men met to-night at Government House. It is estimated that the cost of this work from now until July 1917 will amount to at least $300,000. Of this amount Montreal has already subscribed over $82,000, while Quebec, Ottawa, St John and Halifax have done proportionately well.

During the next three days a committee of business men will canvass the city in an effort to raise Toronto's share, which has been set at $75,000.

Spies Enter British Consulate

Attempt to Get Away With Documents From New York Office Frustrated

NEW YORK, April 26.—Three men, believed to be German spies, made an attempt last Friday night to steal from the British consulate in State Street some important mail which was laid out on the clerk's desk ready to be placed in the Foreign Office bags for London to go on the American liner Philadelphia next morning.

Consul-General Clive Bayley, the vice-consul, and the staff of clerks have all been working late at night recently to get through the immense mass of business connected with the Trade Department. Shortly after nine o'clock on Friday night two men entered the long office of the consulate, where the passport and other business is carried on. This department has four doors and is nearer to the elevators leading to the street than any other office in the suite. A third man opened the end door, nearest the desk on which the mail was placed, and held it open while one of his accomplices rushed down the office and seized several letters containing important despatches written by Consul-General Bayley.

At the time the men entered the consulate one of the clerks was in a telephone booth at the rear and did not hear them. Another clerk came to look for some reference papers and saw the man dashing out of the door with the letters in his hand.

Realizing what had happened, the clerk vaulted the counter and grabbed the man in the corridor as he was running for the staircase leading to Pearl Street. The other two had got away, and, seeing himself left alone, the captive dropped the letters to the floor and wrenched himself from the grip of the clerk. While the clerk was stooping to pick up the mail all three men got away.

Consul-General Bayley said that an attempt had been made to steal letters from the consulate. Since Friday night extra precautions have been taken and guards have been placed to prevent another attempt.

Macannish's Style.

"Publicity is the most pleasing thing in life," says Mr. A. S. Neill in "A Dominie's Log" (Herbert Jenkins), "and that's why patent medicines retain their popularity. At present the village cobbler is figuring in the local paper as a 'Cured by Bunkum's Bilious Backache Bunion Beans" example, and beneath his photograph (taken at the age of nineteen; he is fifty-four now) is a glowing testimonial which begins with these words: 'For over a decade I have suffered from an excess of Uric Acid, from Neurotic Dyspepsia, and from Optical Derangements. Until I discovered that marvellous panacea ——'

"I marvel at his improved literary style. It is only a month since he wrote me as follows: 'Sir, I will be oblidged if you will let peter away at three oclock tonight hoping that you well as this leaves me I am your obict servant peter Macannish.'"

A Mere Mushroom.

Sir Watkin Williams-Wynn, talking to a friend about the antiquity of his family, was told roughly that he was "a mere mushroom."

"How is that?" he asked, indignantly.

"Why," said the other, "when I was in Wales a pedigree of a particular family was shown to me which filled more than five large parchment skins, and near the middle of it was a note in the margin: 'About this time the world was created.'"

He Joined Up.

A Liverpool contemporary vouches for this story. Religious instruction was in progress at a Liverpool school, and the master asked:

"What did St. Paul do at Derbe?"

The reply given at any rate showed an appreciation of the present national situation, if not exactly an intimate acquaintance with St. Paul's achievements, for the answer was:

"He joined up under the 'Derbe' scheme, sir."

Sleeping to Order.

The late Lord Alverstone could go to sleep at any time and wake up at a predetermined hour. This exceptional capacity has also been attributed to the great Duke of Wellington and to Lord Roberts.

Queen's Favorite Name.

Maurice is Queen Mary's favorite boys' name. Her Majesty considers Maurice the masculine of May. The Duchess of Teck, the Queen's Mother, named all her godsons Maurice.

War has worked a great hardship on all of London's clubs except those connected with the army and navy. Resignations pour into the miscellaneous clubs by members whose incomes have been curtailed, others who used to dine at their clubs now dine at home by reason of war economy and the no-treat and early-closing orders have seriously shortened the bar receipts. Moreover, the cost of food and service is steadily advancing.

CALLED BY DEATH

MRS. ANTHONY HERITY

Mrs. Anthony Herity, a well known and much respected lady, passed away last evening at the family residence, Moira, West Huntingdon, as the result of a stroke she was the victim of a few days ago. Mrs. Herity was a middle aged lady and all her life was spent in this county. For many years deceased had been a member of the Methodist church. In addition to the husband, three sons and one daughter survive. Deceased was a sister-in-law of Mr. J. O. Herity of the Ontario Office of this city, and has several relatives residing here.

WESTERN IMMIGRATION AND ITS CASH VALUE

An interesting phase of recent immigration into Western Canada from the United States during the past five months has been the very material increase in settlers' efforts for a period of three months, the cash value of which shows an increase of $480,000 during the week ending April 18th. The C.P.R. report the immigration of 473 persons into Western Canada from the United States as compared to 394 last year. Of these 137 were farmers and 135 laborers. During the same week there were 525 homesteaders entered as compared to 460 last year.

Within the Military Circle

BELLEVILLE

The 156th Battalion with headquarters at Brockville is to make a trek through the various stations in Grenville county. The main object of the trek is to help in the way of recruiting. The battalion will leave Brockville, May 2nd.

Col. Adams and Col. Potman of the 155th Battalion, are on a tour of inspection of the following stations: Stirling, Madoc, Tweed and Marmora.

Major McCullough of the 155th Battalion, Bancroft, is in the city to-day.

Major Ponton, Instructional Cadre of Kingston, is inspecting the different centres of the 155th Battalion. He inspected the Belleville detachment yesterday.

The sergeants of the 155th Battalion, are holding a dance at Johnstone's Academy on Friday night.

Lieut. Elliott of the 155th Battalion, is attached to the board of examiners of the I.S.I. at Perth.

KINGSTON

The following is the strength of the various units in the 3rd Military District as reported to the G.S.O. to date:

93rd Battalion, Peterboro', total strength, 927.

109th Battalion, Lindsay, total strength, 1,029.

130th Battalion, Perth, total strength, 976.

136th Battalion, Port Hope, total strength, 725.

139th Battalion, Colourg, total strength, 956.

146th Battalion, Kingston, total strength, 917.

154th Battalion, Cornwall, total strength, 1,051.

155th Battalion, Belleville, total strength 1,070.

156th Battalion, Brockville, total strength, 1,089.

All these battalions are coming to Barriefield camp, including the 77th Battalion, Ottawa, which has been recruited to strength.

The Machine Gun School session, now in progress at the Armouries, is doing good work, and the attendants are getting instruction in both the Colt and Lewis guns.

Examinations for the school of signalling started yesterday. The first work covers the use of the buzzer.

An order has been issued to every officer commanding an overseas battalion in the 3rd Military District to contribute 17 men to the 4th Pioneer Battalion, now in formation at Ottawa under Lt.-Col. Weatherbie. It is a real hardship for commanding officers to spend time and effort, and much money in securing recruits, and then have them taken in bunches by another battalion, that should recruit in the way others have been compelled to recruit.

Captain Muckleston of the 4th Pioneer Battalion, left for Belleville last night.

Major Ponton left the city last night to inspect the various stations of the 155th Battalion. He will be away until next Monday.

Yesterday a portion of the Army Service Corps went into camp at Barriefield. Major Hamilton believes in early beginnings. This is the third corps to enter camp already, and it may be said that the camp has really begun. The C.O.C., No. 5 F.C.C.E., and the A.S.C are in camp, and soon the 12,000 or more, allotted for the and will all be under canvas.

WHAT PRICE DO YOU PAY FOR TEA?

This is Very Important on Account of Changed Conditions.

Conditions in the tea markets of the world have changed considerably since the war. On account of Russia prohibiting the sale of Vodka and France putting the ban on Absinthe, these countries have become larger consumers of tea. In fact, France and other countries have followed the English custom of serving tea to the troops instead of coffee, and this takes an enormous supply of tea.

The largely increased demands for tea would be sufficient in themselves to have caused a rise in tea values. But, in addition, ocean freight rates are three times normal and insurance rates are very high, and over eighteen million pounds of tea has been lost on vessels which were sunk by German cruisers and submarines since war began.

The foregoing facts explain why tea is higher in price than before the war. If you are still paying the same price for tea as you were eight months or so ago you are getting a lower grade than the tea you formerly used. For example, if you are paying 40 cents a pound you are getting the quality that sold at 30 cents a year ago. The old 40-cent quality is now selling at 50 cents—in fact, has been selling at this price for months. If anyone has not been enjoying their tea lately they will no doubt find that they have not been getting the same grade or blend, consequently it has not tasted so good. The flavor wasn't so full or so rich.

But tea at 50, 60 and 70 cents a pound is not dear. In fact, it is the cheapest hot drink obtainable when you consider the great number of cups of tea a pound will make. At 50 cents a pound the cost per cup is only 1/5 of a cent, so small that it is hardly worth considering.

THIS IS THE 633RD DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

CONDITIONS IN IRELAND.

The disturbances in Ireland, lamentable in the extreme, comes at a time that would indicate the work of an outside element. It is asserted by high authority that the uprising is associated with the raid of the enemy on the coast, through the failure of which Sir Roger Casement was arrested, and with minor disturbances in various parts of the country. There have been quite a number of awkward incidents in Ireland since the war began. Papers and editions of papers have been suppressed, letters have been seized and extra police vigilance shown. One or two clashes between the police and the extreme opponents of Ireland's participation in the war have been reported. The Government seems to have regarded the situation as of secondary consequence, and its course may have been justified. It failed, however, to get knowledge beforehand of the somewhat extensive preparations that preceded the seizure by the mob of the Dublin post office, with the telephone and telegraph connections there installed. The police appear to have been unable to cope with the situation and soldiers had to be brought to the city to do the needed work. The city is now understood to be quiet, and may be expected so to remain. The incidents are unfortunate and occurred at a most unfortunate time. Mr John Redmond and others of the Nationalist parliamentary leaders have seen where Ireland's duty and Ireland's opportunity were concerned, and have both spoken and acted in a way to disarm those politically hostile to Ireland's being given power to govern itself in local affairs. Their course had its effect on recruiting as well as upon public opinion outside of Ireland. The old divisions between the people of Irish birth or descent and other English-speaking people, which small-minded men tried to keep up for selfish purposes, had been dying out for years. When repeated calls for men for the service of the Empire came, and true men of all races and creeds stepped forward, sacrificing business and time and personal ease for the sake of a great cause, men began to wonder what they had differed about in the past and to resolve that in the future there would be a better order. This better appreciation should not be lost because of what has happened. A few hundred or a few thousand irreconcilable foolish men, led by a few score of wicked men, may make a lot of noise and cause considerable trouble to the authorities without winning a right to speak for more than themselves. The law will deal with the offenders in due course.

"SECOND-HAND SCANDAL."

The Ottawa Free Press, the Liberal organ published in Ottawa, must have Carvell in its mind when it penned the following. It fits him admirably and the Free Press knows it: "Fraud, graft and incompetency at the expense of the public should be exposed," says our contemporary. "Unfortunately, however, there are many people who hear at second hand stories of graft and fraud and then pass them on to others as proven truths. This kind of person is always ready to believe the worst of others. In consequence, conditions that are bad enough in reality are made to appear much worse, and the reputation of the country suffers. It is little wonder that Sir Charles Davidson expressed disgust at the whole sorry mess of allegations. Men in public life and holding positions of trust for the nation sometimes are dishonest. But that is no reason why every public servant should be considered a grafter. There are too many people who fail to realize that others besides themselves are honest."

◆

Toronto Globe: In the midst of a great war, with the enemy fighting on the soil of France, the French people turn their thoughts to the serious task of reconstruction that awaits Europe when the war drums cease to beat. With this object in view the General Association of France and French-speaking countries is organizing a great technical and industrial exhibition in the city of Paris, to be opened next month. Particular stress is laid in the official programme on the materials and tools necessary for the rebuilding of the ruined towns and cities in the war zone. An opportunity is thus presented to Canadian manufacturers to show what can be done by Canadians in this great work that will follow on the heels of the retiring enemy in France and Flanders.

Hamilton Herald: Sir Sam Hughes having explained that the reason fuse contracts were given to American manufacturers was because no Canadian manufacturers could be induced to make them, the London Advertiser comments thus: "So we are to have the spectacle of Canada's Tory minister of militia defending American manufacturers and assailing Canadian manufacturers." But suppose what Sir Sam said is true? Is a plain statement of fact made in explanation either a defence of anybody or an assault against anybody?

Ottawa Free Press: As to Casement, he is one of three or four of all the millions of Britishers who have betrayed their Empire. He takes his place alongside of the two or three men of Prussian nationality who, after enjoying the trust of the British nation, joined the enemy of Britain. His treason only makes the unity of the Empire stand out more strikingly.

Current Comment

Washington's negotiations with Berlin over the submarine question have reached the stage where Berlin is quite ready to present Washington with another promise.—Montreal Herald.

Of the 263,111 men who had enlisted in the Canadian army for overseas service by February 29 last, 170,369 were manual workers. The man who labours with his hands is surely well represented in the ranks of the war volunteers.

Maximilian Harden says that if Germany and the United States go to war, the former would have to provision Belgium. Germany would be under no greater obligation with regard to Belgium then than she has been for the last year and a half, and that obligation seems to have bothered her little enough.

Montreal faces a civic deficit of two millions, and with the city's borrowing powers exhausted. But the majority of the Montreal people would rather have their city governed by French-speaking grafters than by honest and capable English-speaking citizens.—Hamilton Herald.

German submarines have abandoned the periscope in most instances and are shooting without looking, according to reports current in Berne. Torpedoes are now fired by sound alone. During the past twenty sinkings in British waters, no one has seen a submarine and in but few cases has the wake of the torpedo been observed.

Navigation has commenced on the Great Lakes and the buoys are being placed in the St Lawrence below Montreal. In a very short time the first ocean liner should make this port. The steamship is a welcome harbinger of summer in this neighbourhood.—Montreal Gazette.

On the subject of conscription the Winnipeg Free Press, a Liberal paper, speaks forcibly. When recruiting is brisk, it says, and, where compulsion is not needed, public opinion is in favour of compulsory service, but in the large areas where the slackers predominate there is practically solid sentiment against compulsion.

The New York Times hears that the German-American vote is being organized against any presidential candidate the hyphenated may consider not acceptable. As present appearances indicate that the "American" vote will carry all before it on polling day, the professed hyphenates are likely to have their trouble for nothing.

The Poets' Corner

THE ROSEBUSH.

When I behold it from the snows emerge
Into the glorious light of spring again,
I said: Now, verily hath the winter slain
The garden's pride; it cannot feel the urge
Of the great vernal tides that sweep and surge
Thro' earth and sky, nor wind, or sun, or rain,
Or April' magic touch can stir one vein
In this dead rosebush at the garden's verge.
Vain fear it was, for I this morning saw
The first thin streaks of silvery greenness run
From the branch-tips to the black stem and close
At the earth's touch; and then did fancy draw
That glory whose birth comes with the high June sun,
The burning beauty of the full-blown rose.

—J. C. M. Duncan.

Only One Athens Now.

There is and has been for many centuries only one Athens. But antiquity knew no fewer than nine cities or towns of that name in various parts of Greece, and even in the time of Plautus it was sometimes felt necessary to distinguish the great one as "Attic Athens." It was natural that Greek cities should take their name from Athena, the goddess of wisdom, warlike prowess and skill in the arts of life, who, according to some legends, herself founded the City of the Violet Crown. Others ascribed the naming of the city to Theseus or other mythical kings. The "s" of the termination is a real plural, for the city was given a plural name (Athenai), as being made up of several constitutent parts.—London Chronicle.

Courting In Spain.

In sunny Spain etiquette is so very restrictive in the matter of courtship that it is a wonder that young people ever manage to get married at all. Even when, after many difficulties, the engagement is accomplished, the parents have a deciding voice in fixing the date, and, as they prefer long engagements, the wedding day is usually fixed somewhere in the dim future.

The best man and maid of honor are expected not only to fulfill the usual duties, but to contribute—sometimes very substantially—to the expenses of the wedding feast. Wedding cake is unknown, but instead packets of sugared almonds are distributed among the guests and sent by post to those who are unable to be present.

A Tiger Story.

There is a story current at Kuloang, central China, about a tiger which gave trouble in that quarter. A missionary and his wife had been worried by the tiger prowling nightly around their home. They determined to be rid of it and one night tied a cow up in the back yard and a dog at the front of the house. Then they armed themselves with guns and kept watch. The tiger appeared. The missionary fired and killed the cow. The wife rushed to see what had happened, and in her absence the tiger ate the dog.—Exchange.

Lazy Idleness.

Beware of lazy idleness. It will have its effect on your whole system. It brings on degeneration of the muscles and the internal organs, sometimes resulting in an unhealthy accumulation of fat and sometimes in internal adhesion. In some constitutions it results in shrinkage and premature old age.

White Mountain Cake, Orange Filling.

One-half cupful butter, two cupfuls sugar, one cupful milk, three eggs (whites), three and one-half cupfuls flour and two rounded teaspoonfuls baking powder. Cream butter and sugar together until light. Add the milk very slowly and keep beating all the time. Sift flour and baking powder together, add half, then the whites of eggs which have been beaten light and the rest of flour. Bake in two jelly tins on paper in moderate hot oven twenty to twenty-five minutes.

You Can

cure that old sore or ulcer from which you have been suffering for so long, if you will only use an ointment that is capable of reaching the seat of the trouble. Zam-Buk can do this because of its unusual penetrating power. Also, Zam-Buk is a strong germicide—germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied, so that the germs are destroyed not only on the surface, but in all the diseased underlying tissue. Then healing commences; new tissue replacing the old and diseased, until the sore is thoroughly and permanently cured.

The case of Miss Frances Daudin, of Somerset, Man., verifies the above statement. She writes: "I suffered for over twenty years with an ulcer on my leg, and all the remedies tried during that time proved ineffective. Several doctors treated me, but I got no benefit. Finally I tried Zam-Buk, and I am thankful to say that after perseverance with this ointment I am now completely cured."

Zam-Buk is also splendid for eczema, abscesses, boils, pimples, ringworm, piles, blood-poisoning, cuts, burns, and all skin injuries and diseases. Best balm for baby's sores. All druggists, 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territory, the North-West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal subdivisions of sections and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Unhealthy to Oppose Canadians.

Mr. Philip Gibbs, Special Correspondent, writing from the British Field Headquarters, says:

"For a variety of reasons I fancy it must be nerve-racking to be on the opposite side of the way to the Canadians in Flanders. They are most quiet, they are most dangerous. They are not only inspired by a restless audacity, but they are cunning and so methodical that they will undertake what seems like a wild-cat adventure with certain death at the end of it and get back with hardly a scratch. They have brought the spirit of the trapper to the trenches, and they are very patient in marking down their prey.

"So it was in a recent 'cutting-out' raid, when a party of them, all volunteers, went out one night with the astounding intention of getting through the barbed wire outside one of the strongest German positions. For a small party to get back again from a trench full of Germans and machine-guns is not so easy as escaping from a jungle of man-eating tigers, and was not considered part of the program of war before the Canadians gave their exhibition. It was so successful that General Joffre has circulated an account of the Canadians' exploits as a model to the French army. After taking some prisoners and killing about 30 men, they came home again with only two casualties, one caused by accident. To men who know the conditions of trench warfare this exploit still seems fantastic and incredible. It was possible only because these Canadians had made cunning of more importance than courage itself, and had adapted old lessons of Red Indian warfare to these new conditions of modern fighting."

Baked Crab With Cheese.

Remove the meat from one or two crabs, crack the claws and take out the meat also. Flake the crab meat. Butter a baking dish and spread the bottom with a layer of white sauce, then put in a layer of crab meat and season with salt and pepper. Next sprinkle over with fresh breadcrumbs, grated cheese and more sauce. Continue this until the crab meat is used up. Cover the surface with white sauce, then sprinkle over with breadcrumbs and grated cheese. Put here and there a few tiny bits of butter and bake in a fairly hot oven for about twenty minutes.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued

"No, my lord, but I don't see how it can be helped," said Shirley, in a low tone.

"I'll tell you how it can be helped," said the earl sharply. "I'll marry again, and the first child that is born will make Master Oliver laugh on the other side of his mouth. I don't doubt that he's congratulating himself, long ere this, on the fact that he is now heir presumptive, and, gad! I shouldn't wonder if the man didn't have the impudence to come down here and offer his condolences on the bad news—"

The sound of a horn interrupted him while he was speaking, and he started, with a still more nervous irritation.

"What's that?" he asked, angrily. "Don't the men know that I am in trouble, and are they not satisfied without their confounded caterwauling and tooting of horns? Tell them I'll discharge the first man that blows another."

"Please, my lord," said Shirley, "that's not one of the huntsmen or whips. I know the tone of the horn well enough. It's the coach from London."

The earl strode to the window and looked down to see the coach, with its six horses, dashing by, and the guard on top, making the echoes ring with his horn as he went.

He turned away impatiently, muttering:

"Nobody cares—nobody cares. Well, well, it's the way of the world, I suppose."

Then he went on to Shirley:

"I tell you I am going to marry; and you can never guess whom."

Shirley stared, and gave an almost imperceptible shrug of the shoulders.

"I suppose your lordship can marry anybody your lordship pleases," was all his reply.

"That's exactly the state of the case," replied Lord Warwick, triumphantly. "The man who would refuse me his daughter is not to be found in England—hey, Shirley?"

"I should hope not, my lord," said the steward, heartily. "Not but what there's fools in England as well as anywhere else. But the woman that wouldn't be honored by being made Countess of Warwick isn't to be found out of the royal family, my lord."

The earl listened to him like a man in deep thought, and when the steward had finished, rejoined slowly:

"Then you think that any man I ask for his daughter ought to say 'yes' to me?"

There was something so singular in his tone that Shirley hesitated, and stammered, as he replied:

"Why, of course—that is, my lord——"

"Oh, say what you mean, and never go back on it. The fact is, I've made up my mind to marry, and this very night, too."

Tap, tap, came at the door.

The earl stamped his foot irritably.

"Will they never let me alone? Who's there?"

The door opened, and a smooth, oily voice said:

"Blood is thicker than water, cousin. I heard of your calamity, and I could not but come to give you what poor comfort was in my power as a servant of the Lord. This is a terrible bereavement; but there may be a blessing hidden behind it is disguise, like the silver lining of the cloud, or the bow of promise that comes after the storm."

The earl knew who it was, from the first tone of that voice. It was his detested cousin, come to condole with him, at the heels of the news from Lisbon. No one else would have been able to overawe Matthew Blake and force his way into the sacred presence of the earl.

Yes, there he stood, Oliver Seymour; tall and portly; not by any means a bad-looking man, but for the hard lines wrought in his face by the eager pursuit of gain; and he wore the plain dark garments and used the peculiar phraseology which marked the infant sect of Methodists, "Church-and-State-man."

If Oliver Seymour had designed to irritate his cousin beyond endurance—and there is no proof whether he did or not—he could have taken no better means than he had to effect such a purpose. For a moment it seemed as if the earl was going to break into a volley of oaths and order his relative out of the room.

He remembered himself in time, however, and bowed slightly as he replied:

"You are very kind, Cousin Oliver. I suppose you think the bow of promise is very apparent on your side of the house; for it makes you, for a little while, the heir-presumptive. But, for the new fangled jargon you people stuff into every word you say, I don't favor it. I am not so desolate as you might think. The bow of promise is pretty small, but it will grow; in short, Cousin Oliver, to make sure that a Neville succeeds a Neville in the old castle, I have resolved to marry. If you choose to stay you shall attend the wedding this very evening."

Oliver Seymour could not prevent a slight pallor from crossing his cheek as he repeated:

"Married! This evening!"

"Yes, married this evening!" said the earl, with ironical emphasis. "Have you any objection, Cousin Oliver?"

"I? Oh, none in the world," replied the other, in his smoothest tones, rubbing his hands as if he were washing them, a trick he had which he knew annoyed the earl greatly. "Why should I have any objection? I presume you have a right to amuse yourself for the rest of your life. But you were born to fortune."

The earl coughed slightly, for the coolness of the other confused him in spite of himself.

"Yes," he answered, "I know that; and that is exactly why I am going to marry. There is not much time to lose, at my age, if I want to see my son grow up under my own eye."

Oliver Seymour screwed up his face into a curious expression as he said, softly:

"Oh, exactly. I didn't understand, cousin. You expect to have an heir born to you even now. I see, I see. Well, well, the experiment will be interesting. I should take great pleasure in being present at the ceremony, but for the fact that I came up in the coach, and have engaged a return for this evening. I would not have come had I not expected to find you in trouble, but if you are thinking of wedding festivities, at your time of life, for the mere purpose of making my succession more distant, I should be out of place. Good-bye, my cousin. The Lord be gracious to you, and grant you the blessing of an' 'umble and contrite heart."

And Oliver Seymour bowed stiffly and left the room, ignoring the muttered oath of the choleric old earl, which he heard quite plainly, for all that, and which made him smile to himself.

The earl said nothing audible till the steps of his cousin had died away on the stairs, and then he turned to Shirley, who had remained in the background during the whole conversation.

"Shirley," he said abruptly, "if, I had not made up my mind before, what that fellow said just now would have decided me. Amusing myself! At my time of life! Did you hear him?"

"Yes, my lord," said Shirley, in a low tone; "but I wouldn't think much of it, my lord. It's natural for the gentleman to be disappointed, and—"

"Yes; confound him! And he'll be more disappointed before he's done," cried Lord Warwick, angrily. "He thinks I'm too old to have any more children; but I'll show him. Tell your daughter Hester to be ready in the chapel at eight o'clock this evening, and I'll make her Countess of Warwick."

Had a bomb-shell exploded in the room, Shirley could not have given a more violent start. He turned red and pale, and gasped:

"My Lord! Hester?"

"Yes, Hester," said Lord Warwick, sharply. "Don't I talk plain English, man, or are you getting stupid? I tell you I have made up my mind to have a christening in this castle before another year goes over us; and I know of no girl who will make a more honest and a better wife than this same Hester."

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why Demanded

"Gin Pills did for my husband and me what no other remedy could. I have advised two other parties to use them, one of them being my mother who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years, and one box cured her, so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many a year. The doctors told her they could not cure her, but could relieve her by an operation for a floating kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it advisable for her to go. Upon my advice she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."

GRIFFIN, THE TOY MAN.

Organizer of Exhibition Has Been a Journalist for Many Years.

The great success of the Toy Exhibition, which has been held recently in Toronto under the auspices of the Department of Trade and Commerce, has been due, in no small measure, to Mr. Watson Griffin, of that department, who acted as Sir George Foster's representative in arranging the Exhibition. The motive of the exhibition was to encourage in Canada the manufacture of toys hitherto mainly supplied by enemy countries. And the support it has received, alike from Canadian manufacturers, wholesalers and department stores, and retailers generally, as well as the very general evidences of appreciation of its aims shown by them all, and the general public as well, have been most gratifying, and must have made Mr. Watson Griffin feel assured that his indefatigable efforts have been well repaid. It is not the smallest tribute to his work that he has been able to imbue all concerned with the spirit of harmony which has been so marked a feature of the Exhibition.

Mr. Watson Griffin has been connected with the Department of Trade and Commerce since September, 1913. At the time of his becoming associated with it he was the industrial commissioner of Brandon, Manitoba, and so far back as 1902 he had proved his ability as an organizer by managing the first "Made-in-Canada" campaign in that year. Mr. Watson Griffin was formerly, for many years, managing editor of The Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star, and subsequently chief editorial writer on The Montreal Daily Star. Shortly after his association with Sir George Foster's department he was appointed special commissioner of the Canadian Government to the British West Indies to investigate the working of the trade agreement with the British Indies, and he presented a report on that subject which has been published.

The idea of the Toy Exhibition was to show the toys most generally made in Germany, and hitherto sold in this country, and also to show what Canadians can do in competition along the same lines. Altogether Mr. Watson Griffin was able to get together some forty-three exhibits from native manufacturers. Further, he has been able to interest influential women's associations in the subject. And if, as seems likely, the children's playthings in vogue in this country will in future be made not in Germany or elsewhere, but in Canada, this desirable result will be largely due to his tact and trouble. Mr. Griffin, who was born at Hamilton, Ont., some fifty-five years ago, is the author of numerous books, including a novel, which he published in 1886. He has also been a prolific contributor to British and American magazines.

Reindeer in Canada.

Efforts of the Dominion Government to propagate reindeer in the Peace River and the Great Slave Lake district in north-western Canada, have proved unsuccessful, according to a recent report on the subject. Of the original herd of 50 which were sent from Labrador in 1911, there is now but one survivor. The chief difficulty was the bull flies of the north which drove the reindeer frantic in the summer. The result was that they stampeded through the strongest enclosures their keepers could build, and were lost, or shot by the Indians. Reindeer have thrived in Alaska, but apparently the Peace River country and the Valley of the Mackenzie were not suitable for them. Later an effort may be made to introduce them in the Yukon, where there seems to be no reason why they should not succeed.

Dental Corps Provided For.

It is announced that the army dental corps of the Canadian expeditionary force will be under a director-general, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and there will be a lieutenant-colonel and a major in charge of the work of each division. There will be seven officers on the headquarters staff of the army dental corps and 14 dental surgeons. In each division there will be 30 dental surgeons with 32 orderlies and 32 batmen.

The organization for service in Canada in the various military divisions includes 111 surgeons and corps officers and 212 orderlies and batmen.

Letter Accepted as Will.

Pierre Jean Marie Charles, a French reservist, who left Montreal for the front shortly after the war began, and died from wounds received in France on May 24, 1915, wrote a letter shortly before his death to Mr. P. Beauvais, Manager of the City & District Savings Bank, Montreal, asking Mr. Beauvais, in case of the death of the writer, to hand over to a cousin, Marcelle Charles, money he had on deposit in the bank in question. This letter was accepted a few days ago by the court as a valid holograph will.

REPAIR SHOP FOR KIDDIES.

Montreal Parks and Playgrounds Association Doing Good Work.

If the stars came out only once a year, we would all go out to see them. This thought was suggested by reading the annual statement of the Montreal Parks and Playgrounds Association, and the realization of how little it is known to the general public, considering the splendid work it is doing and has accomplished.

By the iron grip of custom and its accompanying staleness many of us fail to appreciate men and institutions living at our very doors, from day to day and their greatness is accentuated often by their silence.

How many laymen know of the organization, its fine aims, its needs, its ambitions, and its helpers? This story will detail some of these interesting points.

Now that the first robin has been seen by some old timer, that is, provided it was not mistaken for the bronze-breasted grossbeak, the mind needs no stimulus to recall away back in the vistas of memory the season when parks and playgrounds are so attractive to everyone.

The organization means just what its name precisely states, and it was created in a simple manner about fourteen years ago, with a view to giving playgrounds to children whose home did not afford them or whose homes were practically devoid of any such enjoyment opportunities. It has prospered but much more might be done if more contributions were available.

Gay groups of happy-faced children who played last season at the Hibernia road grounds, at the Dyke, or the Royal Arthur fields, are eagerly awaiting the "Good old summer time." These youngsters know no trouble, and if they do it falls off at the playgrounds, like a cloak. Their joys have a multiplication by a division of their delights. One can almost hear the click of a lawn mower, feel the cooling sound of a fountain or a murmuring stream, and the sight of heat waves radiating straight from a stone pavement, just by reading this same report published by Miss Edith I. Watt, honorary secretary of the association.

If giving is gaining, the magnificent work of these splendid people who help this association shows well for the efforts of last summer. In addition to the summer work, however, Miss Pinkerton reported that a rink had been successfully operated and a good attendance of children given. The total attendance of children during the session of summer was 43,303, and in her report Miss Watt stated especially that a great debt is owed to their supervisors, and particularly Miss Pinkerton, who undertook the general supervision, and to Mr. McCann for their unfailing interest and enthusiasm.

The workers are all of the best families of the city and are powerful and influential. They have given of their plenteousness in spirit and material effort so that they have increased the meaning and richness of life to so many thousands of poor and middle-class families.

It has been well said by the Duke of Wellington that the battlefields of England were won on the grassy floors of playgrounds." Just now such a remark is ominous when the awful war is causing such stress and terror. In fact, Miss Watt referred to it in her report, stating that they could hardly realize there was a war when on their peaceful and happy playgrounds. Then was suggested the beautiful lines—

O Father, while the kings and captains lift their swords to signal:
Turn Thou to stroke the hearts that bleed in little homes made bare;
Bend low to calm the children who are crying for their fathers,
And soothe the lonely women who are weeping everywhere.

A prominent clergyman stated that the sky was darkened by a reel ascending from a thousand camps, and armed men seek the destruction of their fellows.

R. M. C.'s Share.

Since August 4, 1914, when war was declared between Great Britain and Germany, the Royal Military College of Kingston has contributed six hundred men towards the cause of the Allies. Of that number more than half graduated from the college previous to the declaration of war.

At the present time the officers at the Royal Military College are spending practically all their time in preparing the men for the front. As soon as one class leaves a new one arrives to take its place.

In no other institution is a superficial or purely theoretical knowledge more guarded against than at the Royal Military College of Canada. It is ever the practical application of principles that is aimed at, with a view to the future life of an officer. Even mathematics, French and English are subjects which he studies only for their military value, as soon as he has become familiar with the rules, principles, or laws of those subjects. Likewise the gymnasium, work, drills, games, riding, field work are all designed to develop men, whilst giving relief from mental strain at the most desirable time in the day. This admixture of intellectual and bodily work, in just the right proportions, makes the cadets the splendid and well-disciplined beings of brains and physique they have proved to be in this war.

To Save Horned Antelope.

A Dominion order-in-Council has been passed setting apart a large area of land in the West for the use of the prong-horned antelope and to preserve this animal from extinction. Some of the lands included in the reservation have been taken up by settlers and provision is made for granting these settlers new selections in the canceled stock watering reserve. An extra half-section in addition to the acre for acre allowance in the new location is to be granted in lieu of buildings and improvements.

THE MEANEST MAN.

Montreal Social Workers Have at Last Struck the Limit.

Robert C. Dexter, General Secretary of the Charity Organization Society, told The Montreal Standard recently of the meanest man in Montreal, appropos of the man on Upper Esplanade avenue, whose two little girls were recently found hungry and half-frozen and who received ten cents a day from their father for their keep. The man Mr. Dexter refers to owns several houses, his wife is in delicate health, and he has three small children. He beats his wife often, and gives her twenty-five cents a week for household expenses.

"We tried to argue him into treating his family better," said Mr. Dexter, "but we simply could not move him, and so as a last resort we had him arrested quietly. He is being examined at the present time as to his sanity, while we are taking care of the wife and children, but I am doubtful in my mind about his mental condition, and really believe his action is caused by pure meanness on his part."

While there has been very little lack of employment this winter as compared with the last two winters, or poverty and misery due to that, Mr. Dexter's records show that there has been much more insanity, consumption, and wife desertion.

The insanity he ascribes to the general unrest that is prevailing on account of the war, which seems to have thrown the majority of people, and particularly young women into a state of intense nervous excitement. It is, in fact, amongst young women, and particularly those from the United States coming here for positions, that this has been noticed mostly.

What makes the thing worse is that the cases are not so violent that immediate action by the authorities can be urged, and much red tape which is necessary to send the girls that come here from the United States and suddenly become deranged, back to where they come from.

Wife desertion is due to somewhat similar influences.

There are hundreds of men who want to go where the fighting is and who are turned down at the medical examination of the army doctors.

They then try to obtain positions as helpers on transports and ships carrying horses and other war material so as to get to France, and the wives are left.

As to tuberculosis, that is mostly due to la grippe.

"Well-to-do people," says Mr. Dexter, "take care of themselves when they have la grippe, but working men and women, unable to stand reduction in their wages, keep on working, get pneumonia, and through the same inability to fight the grippe properly, allow the pneumonia to degenerate into consumption.

"We have looked after several cases, and amongst these we found one, where the father was very far gone, and where the only support of himself and three children was the mother, while the children looked after the father. We guaranteed the mother as much money as she was earning if she would stay home and look after the husband, following whatever instructions our doctors might give her, and let the children be cared for in such a manner that they would be safe from being impregnated with the disease.

"She agreed to do so, and whatever can be done to save the man is now being done.

"But in many cases the people refuse to do as we ask them to do.

"There was one case not long ago of a woman with children who was destitute and sick, but refused to go to the hospital although she was compelled by whatever illness she was suffering from, to stay in bed.

"Finally our visitor told her that unless she would do as she was told and have herself examined, she could not receive any help whatever, and after considerable arguing, she finally gave in.

"That insistence on the part of our visitor saved her life. At the hospital it was found that she was suffering from an aggravated case of appendicitis and that the appendix would surely have burst in another twenty-four hours.

Red Cross Work.

Mrs. Sternes Hicks, Convener of the Red Cross supplies at the Toronto Women's Patriotic League, shipped between September and March 2,196,965 articles, of which 1,744,262 were surgical supplies, 1,328 pillows, 24,399 pillow cases, 11,500 sheets, 23,132 towels, 27,822 hospital nightshirts, pyjamas, dressing-gowns, combined, 7,768 shirts (flannel), 34,458 pairs socks, 54,743 cigars and cigarettes, 2,304 pounds tobacco, 15,821 canned fruit and vegetables, 6,447 Christmas stockings, 242,981 miscellaneous articles. This work was contributed by the 270 Toronto Red Cross circles, the two Red Cross rooms at the League, as well as that of individuals. In addition this department has sent out 17,900 postcards of acknowledgment and numerous letters.

Big Prices for Sheep.

Over $3,000 was realized from the sale of 100 sheep at the farm of Lloyd Jones, Burford, Ont., recently. Buyers were present from all over the United States and Canada. Prices ran high. The champion ram of Canada was sold to Bailey, of Brantford, for $105, and C. W. Chandler, of Kellestone, Iowa, paid $115 for a two-year-old Shropshire ram; Larkin and Company, of Queenston, paid $1,000 for 31 head.

Cross Has Arrived.

The Chevalier's Cross of the Legion of Honor bestowed on the late Captain George T. Richardson has arrived in Kingston. The cross is a most beautiful piece of work. Beside the cross and a picture of the late captain, a card bearing the following words is shown: "Presented to the late Captain George T. Richardson by the French Republic, 1916, for his country's sake, not for his own."

C.P.R. TO MOBILIZE SCIENTISTS FOR RESEARCH WORK

Arranges With Arthur D. Little to Establish Central Organization at Montreal

CO. LOOKING FORWARD

Dominion-Wide Organization for the Scientific Research of the Country's Vast Resources

Although the potential wealth of Canada's natural resources is known to be marvellous, only a small portion of these have been exploited, and apart from the work done by the Government Geological Survey, the scientific investigation of Canada's resources with a view to practical development has been fragmentary and almost immaterial.

The lesson of the titanic conflict now raging in Europe has brought home how much the Dominion has to learn from some of the European countries with which she is at war, as for instance, the pre-eminence of Germany in manufacturing, metallurgical and electrical development, due pre-eminently to the thoroughness with which chemical research was pursued in that country, a pre-eminence which resulted in a large and profitable market for her manufacturers, not only at home but all over the world.

The wealth and prosperity of the nations and empires of the future will be gauged by their mineral and chemical activities and production.

When peace is restored there will be a strong effort to provide the requirements of the British Empire and her Allies from friendly sources, and if the war were, unhappily, to be long drawn out, the production of Canadian resources might become more essential to success in peace and war than armies of heroes.

The Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. has technical schools attached to its great shops, and at Trail the company has developed a great chemical and metallurgical laboratory and hydro-electric equipment equal to anything on the continent. These are, however, local activities, and the time has come, in the opinion of Lord Shaughnessy, when a Dominion-wide organization should be formed for the scientific research of Canada's vast mineral, metal, hydro-electric and chemical resources, which will result in the practical application to industry of many minerals heretofore neglected or exported for manufacture to other countries, of by-products in existing industries and of other natural resources which were neglected or insufficiently exploited. The waste of straw, for instance, in our wheat fields, of flax fibre, of lumber, seventy-five per cent. of the product of which has been wasted in the forest or at the mill, while in tungsten, molybdenite, graphite, oil shale, mica, manganese, magnetite, talc, felspar and other minerals there is a field for the profitable investment of much larger capital than at present.

The Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. aims to secure the mobilization of the ablest and most scientific and chemical brains of the Dominion, and to associate them with a central organization to direct the activities of all the scientists and experts engaged in research work in all parts of the Dominion. The discoveries and information gleaned by the central organization, while supplies for the special information of the Canadian Pacific, will be disseminated from time to time by bulletins which should be of great value to merchants and manufacturers as well as to students and prospectors.

To carry out these views arrangements have been made with Mr. Arthur D. Little for the establishment of a central organization at Montreal for research work. Mr. Little has been President of the American Chemical Society and is a member of the Institute of Chemical Engineers, and a director of the Chemical and Engineer Department of the Institute of Technology. Indeed, Mr. Little's fame as a chemist and a chemical engineer is world-wide, and, as an organizer and investigator he has no superior. His activities have extended to every branch of industrial and chemical research work, having seventy practical chemists associated with him. Lord Shaughnessy is confident that Mr. Little will build up an organization in Canada which will confer immense benefits on the Dominion.

A Dominion charter has been obtained and the Canadian Research Bureau will begin operations in Montreal on May 1st, when they will be in a position to co-operate with science professors and others of the Dominion already engaged in research work.

TREE PLEADS FOR NATIONAL THEATRE

Distinguished Actor Says Every Country Needs One.

WELL RECEIVED ON VISIT

Dean of the British Actor Managers Has Been Outspoken in His Comments on the War, and Has Had a Splendid Reception on This Continent—Duty of Theatre.

AS EARNEST of the strong pro-ally feeling which now prevails in America is the cordial reception given across the border within the past few months to Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the dean of English actors. He has been lionized wherever he has gone, and has not hesitated to speak vigorously and fearlessly regarding the war.

Sir Herbert's chief activity, however, in addition to his artistic work, has been his propoganda for his pet desire in life, the furtherance of the national theatre movement in all English-speaking countries. In a recent interview he said:

SIR HERBERT TREE.

"It is strange, by the way, that the English-speaking nations are the only people who do not recognize the necessity of a national theatre. It is to be hoped that the state may turn its attention to this aspect of education, and I notice already a tendency in the universities to devote their consideration to the drama.

"I hope that every English-speaking country will some day have its national theatre. The necessity of a people's theatre will probably not make itself felt to the full extent until the supply shall have created the demand.

"I think that the powers that sway the destinies of the English nations have not realized yet how important to the state is the health and well being of the theatre. They have not yet recognized how potent a factor is the playhouse in shaping the minds of the people and, above all, how greatly influenced young men and women are by what they see when sitting at a play. It is their social education. In the theatre they learn how to behave and sometimes now not to [illegible]. [illegible] spite of this neglect by the state the influence of the theatre for good or evil is to-day no less great than that of religion itself. After all, the teaching of Shakespeare is the religion of humanity.

"It is this religion of humanity and of truth that is demanded by most of us to-day.

"There is in the education of to-day, I am glad to say, a tendency to look at life and death fearlessly by the light of truth. Truth is the most important thing in science and in everyday life."

A Big Business.

Two million and a quarter dollars are spent in the Toronto Military District every month on the maintenance of the organization under the command of Brig.-General Logie. This estimate includes the payment of all overseas troops, officers, and the up-keep of all military organizations in the 2nd Military District for the prosecution of the war. The man who handles this money is Lieut.-Col. J. R. Forbes, paymaster-in-chief of the district. He has a staff of thirty-five officers and men immediately under him, and his department is the clearing house for all the financial affairs of the units and details, which at the present time aggregate about fifty thousand men. This forms the most extensive business concern in Canada, but no money is being made, it is all out-goings. Lieut.-Colonel Forbes is a paymaster of old standing, and the business of war has grown upon his hands enormously during the last two years.

Another "General."

They are telling a "good one" on Colonel Frederic Nicholls, of the Canadian General Electric Co. of Peterborough. One of the Colonel's friends passed him one day and said in the most natural way in the world, "Good day, General," and passed on. Colonel Nicholls stopped him and said: "Look here, I'm not a General, I'm only a Colonel." "Oh, I beg your pardon, Colonel. I was thinking of General Electric."

Long Trip to See Sons.

Bishop Lucas of Mackenzie River Diocese came all the way to Kingston from the far north to see his two sons, who are members of the 53rd (Queen's) Battery, which is leaving for overseas service. Part of his long trip was made in dog sledge, and he slept in the open with the thermometer 63 degrees below zero.

Fled From the Indians.

Mrs. Adeline M. Byam, daughter of the late Jonathan McCurdy, a prominent United Empire Loyalist and a pioneer of Belleville, and granddaughter of Stuart Barrey, a former Governor of Pennsylvania, who died in Toronto recently, numbered among her experiences that of being forced to flee for her life from a band of marauding Indians. It was at her early home in Minnesota that she had to flee with her four small children to Buffalo on account of Indian risings. Her husband was at that time serving in the American Civil war. After the American Civil war was over she went to Toronto with her husband, as their home had been destroyed.

What Can He Do?

An interesting point regarding a Canadian munition worker has arisen at Manchester. He came over with a guarantee of six months' work, and now wishes to seek work elsewhere. The firm decline to release him, arguing that the worker's contract was originally with the Government and he is bound to remain where the Government sent him. The local Munitions Tribunal have granted the workman a certificate authorizing him to leave, but the firm are appealing to the Ministry of Munitions.

EX-OFFICE BOY NOW RECEIVES $250,000 ANNUAL SALARY

Thomas E. Wilson, Head of Sulzberger&Sons, to Get $125,000 a Year and Equal Bonus—Was Born in Canada

NEW YORK, April 24.—From office boy to the job of President of a New York and Chicago meat packing corporation, at a salary which considerably exceeds that received by the President of the United States, are three contrasting features in the successful business career of Thomas E. Wilson, who is believed to be the highest paid employe in the world identified with the active management of a purely private commercial organization.

When the firm of Sulzberger & Sons Company of America was recently in progress of reorganization its stockholders and Directors determined to place at the head of the business an expert in their line who was excelled by no other person in the world, regardless of what the services of such a man might cost, and their first choice for the job was Thomas Edward Wilson. He was then the President of the meat-packing industries of Morris & Co. of Chicago, with which he had been connected from early youth.

The request for his services was not based solely on a money consideration, for Mr. Wilson had plenty of that— report has it that he has saved a couple of millions and has added to this from time to time, so that he was in a position to retire and enjoy life if he so wished; but what appealed to him most in taking the new office was the opportunity offered him to make of the concern, known as one of the "Big Four," one of the leading industries of the world.

"It isn't a question of money with Tom Wilson," said a friend of his yesterday. "He likes the hard work of managing big enterprises, of being able to seize upon or create opportunities for developing of putting his original ideas to practical test, in which vocation he has been uniformly and eminently successful. These considerations, and the further fact that the business of his former company was succeeded to by the sons of the head of that firm, are the principal reasons, I think, for his acceptance of his new work.

"How much Thomas E. Wilson was appreciated by his former business associate and life long friend, Edward Morris, Sr., late President of Morris & Company, may be judged by the fact that when Morris built his new residence he made a gift of his old home to Wilson. This house and grounds, on Woodlawn Avenue, Chicago, are said to be valued at $250,000.

"I have heard that Wilson was to receive a salary of about $250000 in the new position. I do not believe either the firm or himself yet know the exact amount his services will return to him yearly for his work with Sulzberger & Sons Company, because my understanding is that there are certain contingencies which depend upon the development of the business, and thereby increase his income."

Mr. Wilson's office is in Chicago, and the question as to the amount of the salary he is receiving was asked of Vice President James A. Howard, head and sales departments of the company, with offices at Forty-fifth Street and First Avenue.

"Mr. Wilson will receive $125,000 a year for his services," replied Mr. Howard. "He has certain other interests in the firm in connection with his position as President which will greatly add to his income, it is expected, but of these details I would prefer that Mr. Wilson be consulted. I do not feel at liberty to say anything as to what his yearly income may be, aside from the fixed amount of the salary agreed upon."

"What does a man do to earn $125,000 or more a year in a business corporation?" one of the Directors was asked.

"Well, for one thing, he establishes the policy of the company and organizes the various department, so that the policy of its business may be carried out to the best advantage, and has general supervision of the men he designates to do this part of the work. Of course, Mr. Wilson cannot attend to find any detail of the business when need may arise. Then, too, he is an able financier and an expert in the meat-packing business. You must remember that it has been a life work and study with him. He is being paid for what he knows as well as for what he may do in active or advisory capacity."

As President of the Sulzberger & Sons Company Mr. Wilson will have jurisdiction over some 12,000 employes, who are connected with the firm here and in branch establishments in Argentine, and European countries. Vice President Howard, who was one of the factors in the settlement of the meat packers' claims in the prize court in London recently, said of Mr. Wilson:

"He is a man of most delightful personality, democratic to a degree, and is known for his generous friendship with every employe who has worked with him, from the humblest to the highest."

Mr. Wilson is 47 years old. He was born at London, Canada, and was taken when a boy to Chicago, where his parents made their home. He entered the meat packing business after attending the public schools in Chicago, and advanced from one position to another until he became Vice President of Morris & Co., in 1906. He was elected President in 1913. He is also President of the St. Louis National Stock Yards, Oklahoma National Stock Yards, and is interested in other corporations.

Gasoline Engines Used in Prince Edward County

It is doubtful if any county in the Province equals Prince Edward in use of gasoline engines. Mr. A. P. MacVannell, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture for the county, estimates that one farmer out of three in Prince Edward has a gas engine. The power is used for all sorts of purposes pumping water, cutting wood, crushing grain, and operating milking machines, separators, etc.

Saves $500 to $600 a Year.

Mr. W. Ireland of Prince Edward county has a herd of 34 cows and a milking machine. The machinery is operated by a three horse power gasoline engine, and the cost of the entire outfit was $175.

"Last year," said Mr. Ireland, "we milked 27 cows, and it took two men and the machine about an hour and fifteen minutes to do the work. One man handled the machine and the other stripped the cows. The machine, as I figure it, saves me the wages of a man and team for the year, or between $500 and $600. All it cost us for repairs in the first year was $7 or $8, and the cows like the machine better than hand-milking. The first milking machine came into the county two years ago, and there are eight or ten of them there now. We expect to have Hydro power in another six months and then the mechanical milkers will come in with a rush."

Platforms for Cherry-picking.

Mr. Pettingill, who has a plantation of 350 cherry trees in Prince Edward county, has a handy device for use in picking. This is a platform some five feet in height standing on four legs. It is light enough to be moved about easily and still large enough for two pickers to stand upon it. Partly because of the use made of this convenience, and partly because of the size and abundance of the cherries produced, Mr. Pettingill gets his picking done for ten cents a box, and even at that pickers make $1 to $1.75 per day.

What a Small Stream May Do

A tiny stream, you could step over it at any point without wetting your feet, crosses one corner of the farm of Mr. John Tamblyn, in the township of Clarke. The original course of the stream was around the foot of a rather steep slope. Mr. Tamblyn diverted the stream at the beginning of this slope and carried it through a new channel, almost on the level, to a concrete reservoir built for the purpose. By this diversion a head of some ten or twelve feet was obtained at the outlet of the reservoir, and a turbine wheel was installed below it. Wire cables on pulleys connect with the barn about a hundred feet away. By using all the water stored in the reservoir at a time twenty to twenty-five horsepower can be produced for half an hour; less power can be produced for a proportionately longer period. The reservoir is filled again in a short time after being emptied. The power is utilized for cutting green corn in the autumn, crushing grain for feed, sawing wood, running an emery wheel, lathe, separator, etc. The cost of installation was only some $300, and the service has paid for itself several times over. There are hundreds of similar streams, all over Ontario that might be turned to useful account in a like manner.

The Racking Pains of Sciatic Rheumatism

Were Well-nigh Unbearable—After Five Years of Suffering Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Medicines.

For downright excruciating pain few ailments can be compared to sciatic rheumatism. Since this condition of the sciatic nerve denotes exhaustion of the nervous system, the logical cure is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to nourish the starved nerves back to health and vigor.

Reports are continually coming in to us regarding the splendid results obtained in the treatment of sciatic rheumatism by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after each meal and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally as a means of arousing the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby keeping the system freed of pain causing poisonous impurities.

Mr. W. J. Talbot, Edenwold, Sask., writes:—"It is a great pleasure for me to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food as a cure for Sciatic Rheumatism. The pain I have suffered has been well-nigh unbearable. It would start in the hips and run down the legs to the toes, gradually getting worse. The nerves contract until one is practically useless. My doctor tried many different treatments, but could only afford relief for a time.

"For about five years I was subject to this trouble with severe attacks which would last about two months. The last attack I had was shortened to two weeks by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. This treatment was continued until I was satisfied that the cure was lasting."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. H. E. Wooley, J.P.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six for $2.50. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

THE WEARER WAS MODEST

It has arrived.

It sauntered leisurely along Notre Dame street, and, as if somewhat to regularize its anachronistic appearance, it wended its peaceful way into the Court House, where after divers meanderings it took up a commanding position in the Practice Court.

It was made the butt of many a jest, but down deep in the heart of the jesters it was accorded a warm welcome, memories of the past few months serving to cause it to be regarded as the harbinger of better and more agreeable days.

"It" was the first straw hat. The hero who thus broke the ice was neither a lawyer nor a litigant, nor was he a court official. When pressed for his name, his modesty overcame his heroism and he declined to give it.—Montreal Star.

SOLDIER BOYS HEARD FROM

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Day of this city received a letter April 25th from their son, Frank, who is in France with the First Contingent, stating that he is well, is still holding his position as bombadier, and wants to be remembered to all his friends. They also received a letter on 26th of April from their nephew, William Storings, of the 155th Battalion of Madoc, stating that his brother had been killed in action in France.

SOMETHING OF A RUBE

According to the Shelby, (Ky.) Record, a citizen of Anderson county walked into the post office at Sparrow the other day and asked the postmaster if he had such a thing as a two cent stamp. If he had, the visitor rather guessed he'd have one. He wanted to mail a letter, and had been told that it was customary on such an occasion to buy a stamp. He was thirty-two years old and had never mailed a letter before.

DIG UP BRITISH CAMP ON UPPER BROADWAY

Reginald P. Bolton Unearths 45 Huts Used by Soldiers in the Revolutionary War—Relics Found in Them Show Hessians, as Well as English, Occupied Barracks Now 140 Years Old

NEW YORK, April 26.—Forty-five huts built and occupied during the Revolutionary War by American and British troops have been dug up at Broadway and 203d Street by Reginald Pelham Bolton during a search to find materials to decorate the ground of the old Dyckman Mansion, which shortly will be turned over to the city as a historical park.

The huts, which stood in three rows, were erected and tenanted in the Fall of 1776 by the American army under General William Heath, and, after the American reverse at the battle of Fort Washington, by the British and Hessians. They contain many relics. According to Mr. Bolton, the Colonial and Dutch bricks used in their construction were taken from several of the Dyckman dwellings and outhouses which were burned by the Hessians. A great many English and several Hessian coins were recovered. Buttons and belt buckles of the Seventeenth Leicestershire Foot, Fourteenth Buckinghamshire, Coldstream Guards, Twenty-third Welsh Fusiliers, (Prince of Wales's Own,) Twenty-eighth and Forty-second Black Watch Regiments, Inniskilling Regiment, and the Seventy-first Fraser Highlanders were found in the huts, indicating that the British had frequently changed the garrison at that point during the Winter of 1776-7.

Among other curious things dug up were a set of dice fashioned from a musket ball, a penknife with one blade open, a great quantity of quartz arrow heads, a silver vest button from the dress uniform of a Hessian officer, and bridle bits.

In the opinion of Mr. Bolton, the forty-five huts thus far uncovered are part of approximately 120 which were put up. He based this upon the number of soldiers usually quartered in a hut, determined that two regiments, about 1,200 men, had always been quartered in the barracks which the huts composed.

In one of the huts, Mr. Bolton came upon a big brick fireplace about eight feet high and built in proportion, which was so well preserved that it could have been used after 140 years of burial. This fireplace has been removed in parts, with each brick numbered, so that when it is reconstructed in the Dyckman house, would be, in every respect, historically correct. The building will be about ten feet high, approximately twelve feet long, with a low door in the front and small windows on either side of the entrance. The chimney, built outside the hut, will be of brick taken from the huts just excavated. An interesting feature of the bricks found in the huts, is that they were all hand made and composed of a finer quality of clay than of the modern manufacture. They also differed from the present day brick in being of a deeper red, breaking cleaner, and, apparently, being proof against damp.

When Mr. Bolton was asked to aid in the work of restoring the Dyckman house he consulted an old man and located the camps of the Revolutionary armies. He found that at 203rd street and Broadway a large camp had been pitched. Accompanied by W. L. Calver, John Ward Dunscombe, the artist; Oscar I Barck, and Charles Thurston, he excavated the old camp ground and at a depth of eight feet came upon the first of the huts. In the second hut, presumably used by officers, a great deal of broken china was found. All of this was removed to Mr. Bolton's home at 638 West 158th Street, where it was pieced together, making Mr. Bolton the owner of several blue Sheffield cups and plates.

SPANIARDS DID TRICK

THEY PUT IN LONG-AWAITED CABLEWAY AT NIAGARA.

Aerial Structure Eighteen Hundred Feet Long Across the Whirlpool for Passengers Has Been Financed Entirely From Spain—It is Modelled on One Now in Use in San Sebastian—Runs on Ontario Side.

SPANISH engineers have recently completed at Niagara Falls, Ontario, a task which American engineers have been thinking of doing for years. They have quietly constructed an aerial cableway, 1,800 feet long, across the Whirlpool for the exclusive transportation of passengers. It is the longest, and probably the safest, aerial scenic tramway in the world.

The Spanish engineers broke ground on July 12, 1915, for the Niagara project. For six years they have been successfully operating a cableway at San Sebastian, Spain, for transporting tourists across a gorge, from a trolley terminus to an otherwise inaccessible view place and casino overlooking the Bay of Biscay. They have carried as many as 26,000 passengers in a single season, and the popularity as well as prosperity of the system led them to seek out Niagara. The span of the cableway at San Sebastian is 919 feet, whereas the span at Niagara is nearly twice as great.

The design of the cableway, which includes points of engineering interest, is based upon Spanish patents, and the enterprise has been financed entirely by capitalists in Spain. Torres y Quevedo, an engineer who has gained considerable European fame in aeronautics, is the inventor of the system.

For labor and materials alone, not considering the engineering and other expenses, and exclusive also of the loading platforms and car, both of which were built in Spain, the cost of the Niagara project has been put at $60,000. The engineers readily admit that the enterprise could be duplicated for $45,000.

Situated about three miles below the Falls, the Whirlpool is almost entirely within the Province of Ontario.

The cliff that encloses it is a part of the river bank on the Canadian side, so that both ends or terminals of the cableway—one at Thompson's Point, the other at Colt's Point—are in Ontario. It is interesting to note, however, that the boundary line between New York State and Ontario forms an acute angle, which is intersected by the cableway some sixty feet within the apex. Thus the cableway crosses a small portion of New York State—that portion being thirteen feet under water—but the property of the State nevertheless. For this reason the promoters had to secure permission from Albany, since New York owns the bed of the Niagara River at that particular spot, and from Washington, as the Federal Government owns the water. After this they had to get the sanction of the Province of Ontario and of the Victoria Park Commission of Niagara Falls before they could begin work.

There are six parallel carrying or track cables in the Niagara installation. Each is fastened securely at Colt's Point and at Thompson's Point, the other terminus; each cable passes over a grooved sheave and is fastened to a counter-weight or stretcher. The passenger car is suspended from a running gear which travels on these cables. There are six counterweights, one to each cable, and each contains four cast iron pieces of 195 pounds and 200 pieces of 90 pounds each, making a total load of 18,780 pounds, which, with the weight of the container, makes a ten-ton counterweight.

At Colt's Point the track cables are fastened to rods which are bent around a concrete block weighing 741 tons, built into the face of the cliff. Since the cables are attached to counterweights at one terminal and anchored securely at the other, the breaking of any one of them would not be serious, as the other cables would support all the weight of the car without any increase in their tension. The engineers have prepared for just such an emergency, and have determined that, in the event of a cable snapping, the car, filled to capacity, would drop several feet suddenly, and, after a few vertical oscillations, would settle gently to rest in a new position of equilibrium.

The car in use at the only previous installation of this system, at San Sebastian, holds only fourteen passengers, all standing, but the car built for Niagara provides seats for twenty-four passengers, and standing room, in a raised aisle in the centre, for twenty-one more, besides the conductor.

The weight of the car empty is three and a half tons; fully loaded seven tons. Recently it successfully met a severe test made by the Ontario Department of Public Works. The test consisted in laying a number of cast iron pieces evenly distributed on floor surface on the car, the weight totalling 39,019 pounds, or three times the working load of the car when carrying forty to forty-five passengers.

Canadian Falcons.

Locating the Peregrine falcon was interestingly described by Dr. C. K. Clarke, Vice-President of the Canadian Society for the Protection of Birds, in his lecture recently in Toronto. This bird breeds in almost inaccessible places, and has rarely been found in Ontario, but Dr. Clarke cited three instances where he had come across it. Although not a very large bird, it has been known to carry away a duck much larger than itself without serious effort, the lecturer stated.

Deluged With Applications.

While recruiting is going on briskly throughout the country and the various units are being filled up in the regular way by applying to commanding officers of each battalion, the Department of Militia and Defence is deluged with direct applications for positions of paymaster, chaplain, or quartermaster in the Canadian expeditionary force. The number of applications is already far in excess of vacancies.

B H ENGLISH PAINT
CONCORD GREY

B. B. Genuine White Lead links up B. H. "ENGLISH" PAINT with a supremacy record of nearly two centuries.

LINKS IN THE B.B. AND B.H. CHAIN

1729 saw the founding of the firm of Brandram Bros., the inventors of the Brandram Process of corroding White Lead,—a process that produces a lead that has been the standard White Lead of the world ever since.

In 1906 after handling Brandram's White Lead for many years, in the Canadian market, the firm of Brandram-Henderson purchased the Brandram Bros. formulae and exclusive rights to manufacture it in Canada.

In 1909 the final link was forged when the firm decided to use B. B. Genuine White Lead in the manufacture of their B. H. "ENGLISH PAINT and after practical tests and most careful research arrived at an exact formula guaranteed on every can under the President's signature. Thus was the chain completed.

The B. H. "ENGLISH" PAINT formula of 70 units of Brandram's B. B. Genuine White Lead and 30 units of pure White Zinc, in all tints and white with its ironclad guarantee, makes B. H. "ENGLISH" PAINT the Quality-Service-Paint of Canada.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO-NIGHT

Many of the critics who have been sternest in their exactions of American dramatists announce their belief that D. W. Griffith has "put over" the great American play at last. Mr. Griffith's wonderful photo spectacle-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," is referred to the unique offering at Griffin's Opera House, to-night, Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Friday and Saturday only. For many years American dramatists wrote able plays of particular States, cities or localities, ranging from "Alabama" to "The Henrietta" and from "Way Down East" to "The Great Divide." But no one man seemed to grasp the whole spirit and genius of America until David Wark Griffith picked a suggestion for his theme out of Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots" and "The Clansman" and started to develop it.

The result of Mr. Griffith's efforts is a new and stupendous art for which no adequate name has yet been found. "The Birth of a Nation", combines spectacle, romance, domestic drama, comedy, tragedy, music, and mechanical efforts into a harmonious ensemble that captivates equally the eye and the ear. Among the distinguished actors in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gay, George Saigman, Walter Long, Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron. Eighteen thousand people, 3,000 horses and no less than 5,000 scenes went to the making of the big spectacle.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

"The Battle Cry of Peace," which is to be exhibited at Griffin's Opera House, next Wednesday and Thursday evening is more than a wonderful motion picture it is a great national propaganda dealing with the most important problem that has ever confronted the nation prepared. This famous photo spectacle, which is accompanied by a special musical score, played by a large augumented orchestra, created a sensation when is was presented for two solid weeks at the Strand Theatre, its popularity being recognized when it is known that H. S. Marvin the manager of the Strand Theatre, has rented Massey Hall with its 4,000 seats for its exhibition there the entire week of May 1st. As a sermon it ranks with the most touching and most tragic. As a sermon on the necessity for military preparedness, it stands alone. The United States is shown in the position of Belgium. At the mercy of a power which declares unprovoked war. The U.S. navy is defeated, and a hostile, "Hun-like" army landed, which advances on New York. Finally the United States beaten to her knees, is forced to sue for peace on any terms. That is the film in barest outline. It is in the details that the tradgedy and terror of the catastrophe are displayed with terrible realism.

ARRAH NA POGUE SCORES HIT IN DESERONTO LAST NIGHT

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the performance of Arrah Na Pogue, or the Wicklow Wedding, at Naylor's Theatre, Deseronto, last night. The play went with a dash from start to finish, and the rounds of enthusiastic applause which greeted each number and act, was indicative of the enjoyment felt by all present. The dramatic and comic situations were handled with a finish which showed careful training and long study.

The play will be presented next Monday evening, May 1st, at Griffin's Opera House, for the benefit of our own 155th Quinte Batalion. So the citizens of Belleville will have an opportunity to see one of the very best amateur shows ever given in Belleville, as well as to patronize our boys in khaki. The prices will be 25, 50 and 75c only, and the plan will open at Doyle's Drug Store Friday morning.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE BIRTH OF A NATION AND THE COLOURED RACE.

Editor The Intelligencer,

Dear Sir:—I note in your paper of last evening a protest registered by a local colored gentleman against the exhibition of the photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is to be exhibited in Belleville tonight and the balance of the week. While I admit that its exhibition in Chatham was cancelled on account of the large colored population there, and the many threatening letters received by the local Griffin Theatre Management, it is not apparent what are the grounds of the objections urged against it, nor what is the animus of those who are scheming to have the exhibition in Canada prohibited by court proceedings. The National Board of Censorship has approved it and when assault was made convened again and reaffirmed their approval. The popular endorsement, which the photodrama has since received by the thousands who are seeing it daily will require more than small prejudice to disturb. The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him, and when he was rioting in the deliciousness of a liberty, so new and untried, that he had not yet learned to understand it, and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it. It is in this respect true to history, and if it reflects upon the negro as he was then it is a compliment to the black man of to-day. An exhibition of lawlessness might not have been proper thirty or forty years ago. Such proprieties change with the passing of time. Thanking you for your valuable space, I am,

Respectfully yours,
GEO. J. FORHAN

ALLEGED THEFT OF MONEY

Last evening the police answered a call to the New York Cafe, which is conducted by a celestial. The latter claimed that whilst he and his staff were busily engaged in preparing lunches for parties who were in the premises a soldier went to the cash register and extracted $17 in money, namely three five-dollar bills and a two-dollar bill. The police answered the call and the suspect was searched but no trace of the missing money could be found.

WOUNDED IN ACTION

In the list of casualties today appears the name of Edgar Ketcheson of Frankford, Ont., who is reported as wounded. The party referred to is a son of Mr. Albert Ketcheson of Frankford, and he enlisted and went overseas with a Toronto Battalion. He is a young man, unmarried, and a relative of Col. Ketcheson, commanding officer of the 80th Battalion, and Mayor Ketcheson of this city.

Arrested on Serious Charge

Dushan Pakato and his wife, Algae Pakato of Point Ann, were yesterday afternoon by Sergt. Naphin of the local police force, placed under arrest on the following charge: That they did on the 25th of April, unlawful and with unlawful authority and with a view to compel fellow-workmen from abstaining from working for the Canada Cement company limited in the Township of Thurlow, where they were regularly employed as day laborers by intimidating them by threats by using violent language, and threatening to stab stab them with a knife if they returned to work for the said company. What The Local Y.M.C.A. Is Doing

Whilst we are hearing so much of what the Y.M.C.A.'s all over are doing amongst the soldiers, we want the citizens of Belleville to know that we too are doing our share. It may also interest the public to know that about 104 of our members have enlisted and gone forth to do their share for King and country, and whilst we feel the loss of so many of our men leaving us, we are proud of them all and it will certainly be our earnest endeavor to convey to those who do return a very hearty welcome back to our Y. Many Military Matters

Certificates of military qualification with the grade of captain have been issued to the following lieutenants who qualified at the school of Army Medical Corps at Kingston, H. G. Murray, W. Capt. Everett Birdsall, son of Lieut.-Col. Birdsall, of Birdsall Station, who is a former commander of the 40th (Northumberland) Regiment has returned from the front on a three months' furlough. He was terribly wounded in the head. His mother, who went to England to visit him in the hospital, accompanied him home.

A certain drill sergeant, whose severity had made him unpopular with his troops, was putting a party of recruits through the funeral service. Opening the ranks so as to admit the passage of the supposed cortege between them, the instructor, by way of practical explanation, walked slowly down the lane formed by the two ranks, saying as he did so:

"Now, I'am the corpse. Pay attention."

Having reached the end of the path, he turned round, regarded them steadily with a scrutinizing eye for a moment or two, then exclaimed:

"Your, 'ands is right, and your 'eads, is right, but you 'aven't got that look of regret you ought to 'ave.'

LEGENDS OR LIES?

No Black Hole of Calcutta, and No William Tell.

Wars are fruitful breeders of legends, and always have been. Nor is the present war any exception to the rule.

Everybody, to cite but two, instances, will be able to recall the story of the Mons angels, and that other one about the Russian soldiers who came through England from Archangel.

Possibly these yarns, and other similar ones, will be incorporated in the history-books of the future. It is a fact that stories equally without foundation are taught in our schools to-day.

Take, for example, the one about the Black Hole of Calcutta. Every schoolboy and nearly every grown-up person is familiar with the details of that ghastly story. It relates how the Nabob Suraja Dowlah shut up 146 Britons, captured by him in Calcutta Fort, in a small, unventilated dungeon, and how, after a night of agony from heat, thirst, and lack of air, only twenty-three were found alive next morning.

For more than one hundred and fifty years the story has been implicitly believed. Yet now along comes Mr. Little, and proves, in his "Bengal, Past and Present," not only that it is not true, but that it could not possibly be true.

Nine persons only were, it appears from contemporary records, confined in the "black hole," which was really the common prison, and none of these suffered any very great inconvenience. The remainder of the garrison, numbering some 120, were either killed or wounded in the fighting, and the latter were treated by their conquerors with every consideration.

Similarly, Wellington never said, 'Up, Guards, and at 'em!' at Waterloo; nor did Blucher exclaim, on first seeing London, "What a place to sack!"; while the phrase, "Providence favors the big battalions," which is usually attributed to Napoleon, is found in the writings of Cicero.

There never was a person named William Tell, and consequently he never shot an apple from his son's head at the bidding of the Austrian tyrant, Gessler.

The story of Queen Eleanor sucking the poison from her husband's wound during one of the Crusades is another war myth. She did not accompany her husband on the expedition in question; and, besides, the Saracens did not use poisoned arrows.

At Waterloo the commander of Napoleon's Old Guard is said to have replied to the challenge of surrender pompously: "The Old Guard dies, but it does not surrender!" In the French army, however, it is a tradition that his answer consisted of but one word, not at all fitted for ears polite.

Similarly, the Girondins had no last supper together. Columbus could not have foretold an eclipse of the moon in order to frighten the natives of Jamaica into submission, as has been asserted, for the simple reason that the moon was not in eclipse during the time the famous explorer was on that island.

Alfred the Great never went into hiding in a goat-herd's cottage while the Danes were ravaging his kingdom; on the contrary, he "got on with the war."

"Ships of Fate."

As nuts are plentiful at this time of the year, the following game can easily be played:

Prepare as many half shells of walnuts as there are guests. In each fasten a small candle with a drop of wax.

Fill a tub with water, and before sailing the boats the water should be agitated, so as to have it wavy. Two at a time may sail their boats, lighting their candles as they do so. The life of the owner is prophesied by the seaworthy qualities of his ship.

If the storm overcomes the ship the owner will be wrecked by adversity. The ship sailing across the tub signifies a long sea voyage, while those remaining by the side show that the person loves home better.

If the two ships stay together throughout the trip the couple owning them will have a happy marriage. If they bump together that signifies a quarrel, and if they sail in opposite directions each person will lead a single life.

A FISH CALLED "MAGGIE."

Emmanuel Devlin, M. P., Rouses Merriment in the Commons.

A fish said to bear the name of Margaret, but referred to by Mr. Emmanuel Devlin by the more familiar abbreviation of "Maggie," was discovered recently in the House of Commons at Ottawa.

The part played by this fish in connection with the European war was brought to the attention of the Acting Minister of Militia by the member for Wright, being the most important matter raised in the House by Mr. Devlin in many years.

Mr. Devlin produced and sent across the floor to Hon. A. E. Kemp a copy of The London Star, in which was a cut depicting Major Hughie Green in uniform and the fish in a glass jar. Major Green is the officer sent to England by Sir Sam Hughes to superintend the shipment and distribution of Canadian fish for consumption by the Canadian troops as a wholesome variation in the menu of bully beef.

The cut is from a photograph. It shows Major Green holding up the glass jar and smiling into the eyes of Margaret, who has paused midway in a half gallon or so of liquid believed to be water. She is gazing with an expression of shy interest at Major Green, while the faint suggestion of an answering smile plays about the corners of her mouth.

Mr. Devlin described the picture to the House. "Maggie, he said, was a trained fish: He wished to know if Major Green and the fish were in the employ of the Government, and if the publication of the group had been paid for.

"I have no information," said Mr. Kemp, "regarding a fish called 'Maggie'." He added that owing to the high price of fish in England it had been thought wise to try whether or not Canadian fish could be supplied in good condition to the Canadian soldiers in England.

Major Green, who was an expert in the handling of fish, was employed to make the experiment, which had so far worked out satisfactorily. Mr. Kemp did not think the publication of the picture had been paid for by the Government.

At this stage the picture itself reached the Minister from the custody of Mr. Devlin. It was headed, "The Fishmonger-General," and the letter press read, "Major Hughie Green, who has come over from Canada on a special mission to organize the supply of fish to the Canadian troops." The fish was not identified in the picture as Margaret, much less as "Maggie," but the latter name had been written over it in lead pencil. Mr. Kemp called attention to this curious circumstance.

Mr. Devlin thereupon admitted that he himself had been responsible for revealing the identity of the fish. He had written the name on the paper in order to keep it in mind. Whether or not the fish had a surname or went among her acquaintances by her given name of "Maggie" only he did not say.

"Does the Minister," he asked, "see the vase in the picture? Does he see the fish in the vase? Well, I will tell the Minister the fish's name is 'Maggie'." (Laughter.) The incident closed without the House learning from the member for Wright under what circumstances he was enabled to recognize the fish, what her antecedents had been, or what was her social standing in the piscatorial world. It is believed that she is a cod.

New Editor of Debates.

Mr. T. P. Owens—the Canadian "Tay-Pay"—for many years one of the best-known newspaper correspondents, and latterly Associate Editor of Hansard, will shortly assume his new duties as Parliamentary Editor of the debates, sharing with Mr. Albert Horton responsibility for the entire Hansard staff. Mr. Speaker Sevigny submitted to the House of Commons the report of Dr. Thos. B. Flint, Clerk of the House, on the appointment, reinforcing it with his personal recommendation. It is anticipated Mr. Owens will assume his new responsibilities immediately.

The appointment will be viewed with favor in Parliament and out of it. Mr. Owens has a continental reputation as one of the most efficient shorthand men on this side of the Atlantic. He has served with ability and distinction on many important commissions and investigations, and is highly regarded for his uniform courtesy, fairness, integrity, and efficiency.

Trying to Save Cemetery.

Rollers from Lake Erie are causing erosion along the Canadian shore to such an extent that part of the cemetery of Christ Church, Colchester Township, near Amherstburg, Ont., has been washed into the lake. Several graves are now under water, and the farmers are fighting desperately to save the historic graveyard, where are buried their forefathers and the soldiers who fought in the war of 1812. Threes, brush, and stone are being hauled into position, in an effort to prevent further damage. The church is also in danger, being only a few feet from the brink, which is rapidly disappearing. The situation is so serious that the Government has been asked to lend assistance.

Watches for Heroes.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield sent to United States Shipping Commissioner Grant at Boston one gold and six silver watches awarded by the Canadian Government to Captain Lawrence Norris and the crew of the fishing schooner Josie, for "gallant and humane service" in the rescue of the captain and crew of the Canadian schooner Harry on May 28, 1915. British Ambassador Spring-Rice received the testimonials from the Canadian Government and presented them at the State Department. Secretary Redfield immediately forwarded them. The gold watch was given to Captain Norris and the silver watches to John Kenney, Thomas Powers, Patrick Gibbons, Ramie Moulouson, Everett Moulouson, and George Hubbard, the rescuing crew.

HAULED THE STONES.

Veteran Ottawa Man Recalls Building of Parliament House.

The destruction of the Canadian House of Parliament has awakened recollections of its building, in the mind of Peter Redmond, a retired locomotive engiener, who saw King Edward lay its foundation stone in 1860.

When construction work was first started Mr. Redmond was employed as a fireman on the Ottawa and St. Lawrence railroad, and he was promoted to engineer a few days before the first material for the structure was hauled to Ottawa. One train crew was employed for three summers, hauling sandstone and quarry rock from Prescott, where it was landed from the steamers on the St. Lawrence river.

The train made a round trip each day. The first stone used in the building came from quarries located where the main part of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, now stands. It was shipped by water to Prescott, where it was loaded from the boats onto the railway cars by large cranes.

Mr. Redmond's train did nothing else during three summers but haul the stone. "It required two cars and sometimes three for each piece of stone that was moved to Ottawa," Mr. Redmond said yesterday. "The smallest stone that was hauled by the railroad weighed three tons, and the average weight was about five tons. We moved two stones which weighed nine tons each. I believe they were the largest that were put into the building.

"Owing to the excessive weight on the cars, which were much lighter than the steel cars now in use on the railroads, it was necessary to run our engines slowly. We seldom went over eighteen miles an hour, and as a rule the fastest time we made was fifteen miles."

No iron or steel was used in those days for the springs on the cars. Solid rubber was used, for the most part, and the cars were loaded so heavy that at the end of each trip new springs had to be put in most of the cars.

"Our train was given the right-of-way over all other trains. This was principally because of the heavy train we hauled. We were permitted to stop only in case of necessity. The necessity came frequently and was caused mostly by the excessive weight on the trucks, which resulted in many hot boxes.

"My train brought out the first shipment of rock and stone and stone cutters' tools. The first part of the building erected was a massive wall, over 500 feet long. It was on the end of this wall that the Prince of Wales laid the cornerstone. Thousands of people witnessed the laying of the stone, and I had an opportunity to shake hands with the Prince, as did many of the workmen.

"The wall, when first built, was a crude affair, but after the workmen finished polishing it, and fixing it up, it was one of the finest pieces of work of that kind that I have ever seen. It was five feet high and several inches in thickness."

"The Prince of Wales at that time was about twenty years old. He was a fine looking fellow, much better looking than his brother, the Duke of Edinborough, who visited Canada a year later.

"There were no big functions for the duke. He visited about the country for a few months and he went away without any great fuss being made about him. He was not a very good looking man. Many of the farmer boys were much better.

"A few years ago I saw Barney Riley, the Irish ski rider from Bovey, Minn., who was born and raised here, and I thought that I was back in Ottawa at the time the duke was there. Barney and the duke were as much alike as any two men could be, in appearance, form, and looks."

A Costly Dinner.

Emperor Charles V. in the sixteenth century borrowed 2,000,000 florins from a rich resident of Ghent, and after giving his promissory note dined with the burgher, who tore up the note in recognition of that great honor and had it presented to Charles on a plate. Present day Flanders is serving few 2,000,000 florin dinners.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26.—One thousand South Sea Islanders, the pick of Polynesian young manhood, are on their way to Europe to join the forces of the Entente Allies, according to a statement made here to-day by H. Richards, British consul at Papeete, Tahiti, who has arrived from the South Seas on his way to London.

The dusky recruits, according to Mr. Richards, were enlisted in the Society Island, where the French authorities have aroused great military enthusiasm among the natives.

IRISH TROOPS SWEEP ENEMY BACK IN MIGHTY ATTACK

FRENCH AIRSHIPS ARE ACTIVE

Aeroplane of The Enemy Brought To Earth, and Others Are Damaged

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, April 28.—Afternoon statement—Last night witnessed no event of importance, with the exception of intermittent bombardment in the regions of Avocourt and Esnes, and certain activity on the part of our trench guns in the sector of Regneville, to the west of Pont-a-Mousson. During the day of Thursday French aviators delivered numerous aerial attacks. An aeroplane of the enemy was brought down in the region of Aromezey. Two other German machines attacked by French airmen were compelled to land, seriously injured, one near Douaumont and the other in the wood of Montfaucon. In the region of Nebles Chaulnes a German fokker plane, reached by French fire, was seen to fall head first within German lines. During yesterday the French air squadron in the Woëvre bombarded the railroad station at Lamarche, throwing down eighteen shells.

BOMB LADEN CAMELS BLOWN UP BY TURKS

Hard-Pressed By British in Egypt, They Destroy Animals In Defeat

CAIRO, Egypt, April 28.—Special—Camels laden with bombs and petrol were blown to pieces by the Turks so that these living carriers of ammunition would not fall into possession of the attacking British, during the sensational dash of the Duke of Westminster's armoured motor car battery through the Libyan desert.

This British expedition, consisting of thirty-two men, nine armoured machines and one open car containing a mounted machine gun, began its pursuit at Sollum, in north-western Egypt. Dashing at racing speed along the Tabruk road over which the Turks had retreated, the British, after covering twenty-three miles, came unexpectedly upon the enemy, whose troops were on the move.

The Turks opened fire with their only artillery in position — one ten-pounder and two machine guns. The British battery swung into line, silencing the Turkish guns and then capturing them after shooting down the defenders almost to a man.

The Turks were scattering in every direction. The attacking batteries dashed here and there, killing all Turks who offered resistance. Those who chose the alternative of flight paused long enough to fire upon their camels, which one by one disappeared as their packs exploded with terrific force.

RUSSIANS VICTORIOUS IN FIGHT FOR VILLAGE

Chromiakoua, Neal Rovno-Kovel Railway, Captured From Germans—Many Flights Taken By German Machines Over Russian Lines

LONDON, April 28.—(Special.)—In fighting with the Germans in the region of the Rovno-Kovel Railway, the Russians captured the Village of Chromiakoua, an official communique issued at Petrograd tonight reports.

In addition the Russians repulsed an attack of the Germans launched against Vlassy Kroshin, northeast of Baranovichi. The attempt was made after a bombardment lasting two hours and it was checked by the fire of outposts and scouts. A fresh massing of German troops against this sector was also dispersed.

On the Dwina front the Germans continued the bombardment of the Illskull bridgehead and their artillery is keeping up a brisk bombardment in the region of the Oginski canal and the Jasiolda river.

German aeroplanes continue flying over the Russian lines in the north, dropping bombs at many points. One which was noticed bore the distinguished mark of a Russian aeroplane. Twenty bombs were dropped by Russian aeroplanes on two railway stations southeast of Friedrichstadt, starting fires.

SENATOR COMPLAINS OF CONSPIRACY

Choquette Declares That, Like Hazelton, He Has Back To Wall

OTTAWA, April 28.—(Special.)—Robert M. Hazelton of Todmorden found a champion today in the person of Senator Choquette. The senator complained that he, like Hazelton, had his back to the wall facing the mob. Canadian newspapers had refused to publish his letters correcting their garbled and distorted reports of his speeches. He denied ever having abused the soldiers, and claimed that there was a general conspiracy on foot to misrepresent him.

Trawler Sinks German Sub.

British Craft Destroyed Big Undersea Boat With Two Shots

LONDON, April 28.—(Special.) — The destruction of a German submarine by a British trawler off the north coast of Scotland is described by Dutch steamers, when a trawler appeared and killed with its first shot four men who were standing on the deck of the submarine. The trawler then sank the submarine with a second shot. The entire action lasted less than ten minutes.

The papers say the submarine was of the latest and largest type and carried a crew of 60, all of whom were lost.

CASEMENT'S HOPE OF IRISH REVOLT ENDED

Some Further Details of the Fiasco That Attended His Attempted Landing

LONDON, April 28—Special—Sir Roger Casement confided his fears to the authorities to-day that with his capture all hope of success of the revolt against British rule in Ireland has vanished. He regarded himself as the one man, he said, who would have been able to accomplish the overthrow of British government in Ireland. The time to strike, he insisted, was during the war, as there was no hope afterwards. His capture at the outset and his attempt to land on Irish soil, together with the sinking of the German steamer loaded with arms and ammunition, had upset all the finely laid schemes, and the Irish revolutionists could hope for nothing more.

The company has been deeded a site of twenty acres and a new plant will be erected to cost near a quarter of a million dollars, giving employment to about 700 men.

Mr. Carvell Was Checked

Attempted to Interrupt Col. Carnegie, and Was Told He Must Address The Commission

OTTAWA, April 27.—A surprise was sprung on the Royal Commission to investigate the Kyte fuse and shell charges which opened here Wednesday before Sir William Meredith and Mr. Justice Duff when it was stated by Lieut.-Colonel David Carnegie, ordnance adviser to the Shell Committee, that on May 13th of last year, while at New York, he had received a letter from the British consul, Sir Courtney Bennett, asking that no contracts for time fuses be signed until the representatives of the Shell Committee had consulted him, adding "this is very important in the interests of Canada." Just what this letter meant has not yet been shown, as it only came out late during the afternoon session, and explanations regarding it were held over. Another rather striking feature of a day devoted to detail work was furnished by Mr. Cavell, M.P., who took a leading part in making the charges against Sir Sam Hughes and is acting as assistant counsel, in support of them. Lieut.-Colonel Carnegie was describing his visit to New York, and showing that he had had a very anxious time there with regard to these contracts.

Mr. Carvell apparently did not like the manner in which the witness was giving his evidence, and jumped up to interrupt. He was at once checked by Sir William Meredith, who said: "Mr. Carvell, do not interrupt the witness. If you have any objection to make to his evidence you must address the commission, not the witness."

This ended the interruption, and from that time on Mr. Carvell did not attempt to interfere with the witness.

Prisoners Taken By Germans

Canadian Press Special.

BERLIN, April 28. — An official statement issued to-day at the German army headquarters: Western theatre—As the result of fights in the region east of Vermelles forty-six English prisoners, including one captain, were taken, and two machine guns and one mine thrower were captured. In the Meuse region there was no change in the situation. Regular shelling of places behind our front, namely, Lens and its suburbs, and also numerous villages south of Somme and the town of Roye, has increased during the last week.

CANADIANS REPULSE A GERMAN ASSAULT

Foe's Attempt Against Positions at St. Eloi Completely Fails—Heavy Fire From Dominion Troops Drives Off Attacking Party

LONDON, April 28.—Special—Considerable fighting in Flanders, including the defeat of a German attack on the Canadians, is reported in despatches from Sir Douglas Haig tonight. At St. Eloi the Germans came up in considerable force against the positions held by the Dominion troops, after they had paved the way by the unusual heavy local bombardment, but they were met with a heavy fire and did not get into any of the Canadian positions. Something of the same result attended an attack on Hill 60, which is near St. Eloi, the Germans being repulsed. At Frelinghein they succeeded in entering some British trenches, but they were at once thrown out.

The Bedfordshire regiment carried out a successful raid on the German positions near Carnoy.

The bulk of the fighting continued to be artillery actions. These were particularly violent at La Boiselle, Hebuterne, Monchy-au-Bois, Neuville, St. Vaast, Armentieres, and Frelinghein.

WOULD COMPEL MEN TO SERVE

Strong Opposition Forces Withdrawal of Compromise Bill

LONDON, April 28.—Special—Severe criticism greeted a bill which was introduced in the British House of Commons by Walter Hume Long today, providing for the extension of military service, and on account of the opposition it was announced that the government would not press the measure. Mr. Long said in introducing the bill that one month would be allowed for volunteering after the passage of the measure before putting it in force.

It was announced later that the government had withdrawn the military service bill owing to the strong opposition in the house. It was understood that the bill, embodying certain aspects of the proposals outlined in the report of the secret session at which recruiting was taken up, had been approved by the ministry and the army council.

The withdrawal of Mr. Long's bill, which provided for bringing into service every unmarried man between 18 and 45 and prolonging for the duration of the war the service of all time-expired men and territorials, left the question of unattested married men to be dealt with later. The discussion that followed the introduction of the bill showed that the measure was opposed by all parties as unfair, several members urging that nothing but all-round compulsion would prove satisfactory. Particular objection was raised to the extension of the service period of time-expired men.

VICTORY FOR THE CZAR OVER TURKS

Turks Dislodged From Whole of Mountain Positions Below Lake Van

LONDON, April 28.—(Special.)—An important Russian victory has been won over the Turks in the region southwest of Bitlis, according, to an official announcement at Petrograd tonight. The Russian official statement says:

"Southwards of Bitlis our troops have dislodged the Turks from their whole series of positions in the mountains." This success, say the experts, clears the way for a descent into the plains to the south.

Engagements between outposts are reported from the adjoining districts of Mamukhatun and Mush.

The Standing Committee Chairmen were chosen as follows: Foreign Missions, Dr. J. Fraser Smith; Home Missions and Social Service, Rev. J. Geo. Miller, St. Mary's; Sunday School and Young Peoples' Societies, Rev. Dr. Dickie, Chatham; Systematic Giving, Mr. M. A. WORKMEN'S CONVENTION

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April, 28.—Special—At this afternoon's session of the industrial convention of Workmen's Compensation Boards, which is being held here this week in the senate chamber of the state capitol, Commissioner George A. Kingston of the Ontario Compensation Board presented a paper, showing by way of comparison the treatment of permanent partial disability cases under the various jurisdictions where workmen's compensation laws are in force.

The convention, which has been presided over by Hon. Wallace D. Yaple, chairman of the Ohio Board, has been one of exceptional interest. It will conclude it session tomorrow night. The place of meeting next year, which will be decided to-morrow afternoon, will probably be Boston.

BATTLESHIP RUSSELL HITS MINE

One Hundred and Twenty-Four Men Missing—700 Are Saved—Submarine Sunk

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 28. — The British battleship Russell has been sunk by a mine. Admiral Fremantle, the captain of the Russell, 21 officers and 676 men were saved. The Russell usually carried between seven and eight hundred men. She was one of the older battleships, of fourteen thousand tons, and armed with twelve-inch guns.

About 124 men from the Russell are missing. The warship was sunk in the Mediterranean. The sinking of the Russell and of a German submarine was announced as follows: H. M. S. Russell, Capt. Wm. Bowden Smith, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Fremantle, struck a mine in the Mediterranean yesterday and sank. Admiral, captain, twenty-four officers and 676 men were saved. There are about 124 officers and men missing. A German submarine was sunk off the east coast yesterday. One officer and 17 of the crew surrendered and were made prisoners.

Pope Refuses to Aid Casement

No Step Planned to Avert Imposition of Death Penalty

NEW YORK, April 27—A Rome despatch to The Sun says:

An Irish prelate, an intimate friend of Sir Roger Casement, has sounded the Vatican with the object of ascertaining whether in the case, inevitable in the prelate's opinion, of Sir Roger's conviction on a charge of treason, the Pope would intervene to avert the imposition of the death penalty. The prelate was informed that the Pope was powerless to intervene, since Sir Roger is a British subject.

The Pope strongly deplores the disorder in Dublin, and he solicited full particulars from Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, whom he has requested to inform the Irish clergy that the Pope expects them to set an example of loyalty to the constituted authorities.

IRISH AND BEDFORDSHIRES SWEEP ENEMY BACK

LONDON, April 28.—Special—The British communication issued tonight is the longest sent out from British Headquarters since the early days of the war. To the extent of nearly five hundred words, it describes the great increase of activity on the British front, where many observers have been predicting that the Germans were about to launch an attack as determined as that against Verdun.

The new German activity has shown itself at more than a score of points, with the principal fighting apparently around Hulluch and Loos.

mention for bravery in a counter-attack which drove the Germans out of a section of trenches where they had gained a footing with the help of gas and an artillery curtain of fire. Hot fighting also took place at many points along the front, including St. Eloi, where the Canadians were recently engaged.

The communication closes with an account of the aeroplane activity, including a description of a fight between a German "two-seater" and a British "one-seater," resulting in the death of both Germans aviators and the destruction of the machine, which

9—Reels—9

If you have a drop of red blood in your veins, you will experience in witnessing this production a thrill never known before. you will see the enemy approaching the powerlessness of New York, the weakness of its forts and defences. You will see the havoc wrought by the enemy's howitzers, submarines, airships, shells, shrapnels and bombs. You will see New York in flames; and the desecration that follows exactly as it happened in Belgium.

TWO ABSENTEES ARE SENT TO REFORMATORY

A Sentence of Two And One Years Was Imposed—Both Have Caused Trouble

Private Emery Landers, aged 22 years, was this morning arraigned before Magistrate Masson on a charge of absenting himself for 2 weeks without leave. The accused admitted the offence and a sentence of 2 years less one day in the Provincial Reformatory was imposed. Landers not only absented himself but was insolent to superior officers, hence the sentence meted out to him.

Wm. Snider a member of the 80th Battalion was this morning before Magistrate Masson on a charge of absenting himself for some days without leave of absence, and also with endeavoring to desert. He was convicted of the offence, and was sentenced to serve one year in the Provincial Reformatory. He is a young man about 22 years of age.

NEW S. A. OFFICER

Capt. Leader, a lady who has been for some time the commanding officer of the Salvation Army Corps at Gananoque, arrived here yesterday to take charge of the Belleville corps in place of Capt. Ruston, who has been appointed agent of the Children's Aid Society.

CALL FOR INTOXICANT

Last night shortly before 11 o'clock the police were called to a residence in West Belleville, with the result that an intoxicant was taken in charge and locked up.

ATTENDING THE OBSEQUIES

A number of Methodist ministers from this section of the country were today in the city to attend the obsequies of the late Rev. Amos Campbell, which were conducted in the Tabernacle Methodist Church this afternoon.

OFFICERS ELECTED

At a meeting of the Parish Guild of Christ Church held yesterday afternoon in the Parish Hall the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mrs. R. A. Backus; Vice-President, Mrs. J. T. Boyer; Secretary, Mrs. W. Trump; Treasurer, Miss M. Hall.

FIRE IN A GRATE

At a few minutes before 10 o'clock last night some papers were found on fire beneath a grate in front of Messrs. Ketcheson & Earle's store on Front street. The incipient blaze was extinguished by a pail of water without doing any damage.

DEATH OF A CHILD

The sympathy of citizens will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Wallbridge of this city, owing to the death of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, which sad event took place at an early hour this morning. Deceased was in her thirteenth year, and was beloved by her many companions.

A SUCCESSFUL DANCE

Under the auspices of the Iroquois Club of Belleville, a most successful dance was held last night in Ramsay's Academy on Front street. There were upwards of 65 couples present and a most enjoyable time was indulged in by all who attended. An excellent programme of music was furnished.

FIRE AT ROSSMORE

At about 9 o'clock last night a frame dwelling in the Village of Rossmore, Ameliasburg Township, was with its contents destroyed by fire. The building was occupied by Mr. George Thompson and was owned by Mr. L. Gerow. At the time of the outbreak of the fire Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were away and none of the contents were saved. How the fire originated is not known. Loss to the building and contents is partially covered by insurance.

MRS. ESTHER WHITE.

At Roslin yesterday, many relatives and friends gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to the late Mrs. Esther White, relict of the late Mr. John White M. P. for East Hastings. Services at the house were conducted by Rev. Mr. Rattray, Presbyterian Minister of Tweed. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket by relatives and friends. Interment took place at the Roslin cemetery. The bearers were, Messrs. Ed. Lslie, Joe. Wilson, Hugh Campbell, Jeremiah Chisholm, Wm. Shellebear and Wm. Elliott.

ADMITTED HIS GUILT.

John Schell, who was arrested here a few days ago on a charge of theft of clothing from a room at the Kyle House today before Magistrate Masson pleaded guilty, and was remanded to jail for a week for sentence. Schell at the time of the theft was clothed in khaki, and after he stole the clothing discarded the military outfit leaving it on the bank of the river near the G. T. R. bridge on East Moria street, in this city. He was a member of the 224 Forester's Battalion, and it is surmised that he deserted. When apprehended here he gave the name of Smith. The prisoner is a stranger in Belleville.

CHARGED WITH HORSE STEALING

Edward Snider, a comparatively young man, was arrested here last evening on a warrant charging him with horse stealing. It is alleged that Snider in company with another party, hired a horse and buggy from Mr. Alexander Turcott, liveryman of Tweed, and drove to Toronto, where the outfit was placed in a sale stable, and finally disposed of. The accused was this morning arraigned before Police Magistrate Masson charged with the offence, but in the absence of the Crown Attorney, Mr. Carnew, he was remanded to jail for a week. Mr. W. D. M. Shorey appeared for the accused, and will endeavor to have Snider liberated on bail.

CALLED BY DEATH

CATHERINE HELENA BARRETT

Many friends in this city will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Catherine Helena, wife of Mr. Frank Barrett, which occurred at the family home, Reid street, early this (Friday) morning. Mrs. Barrett was born in this city twenty-five years ago, and has always resided here. Besides her husband, the deceased is survived by one child, one sister, Mrs. W. T. Peterson, of Minneapolis, and two brothers, Charles Sheehan of Chicago, and Ernest Sheehan of Scriver. She was a member of St. Michael's church.

Macannish's Style.

"Publicity is the most pleasing thing in life," says Mr. A. S. Neill in "A Dominie's Log" (Herbert Jenkins), "and that's why patent medicines retain their popularity. At present the village cobbler is figuring in the local paper as a 'Cured by Bunkum's Bilious Backache Bunion Beans" example, and beneath his photograph (taken at the age of nineteen; he is fifty-four now) is a glowing testimonial which begins with these words: 'For over a decade I have suffered from an excess of Uric Acid, from Neurotic Dyspepsia, and from Optical Derangements. Until I discovered that marvellous panacea ——'

"I marvel at his improved literary style. It is only a month since he wrote me as follows: 'Sir, I will be oblidged if you will let peter away at three oclock tonight hoping that you well as this leaves me i am your obidt servant peter Macannish.'"

A Mere Mushroom.

Sir Watkin Williams-Wynn, talking to a friend about the antiquity of his family, was told roughly that he was "a mere mushroom."

"How is that?" he asked, indignantly.

"Why," said the other, "when I was in Wales a pedigree of a particular family was shown to me which filled more than five large parchment skins, and near the middle of it was a note in the margin: "About this time the world was created.'"

Lazy Idleness.

Beware of lazy idleness. It will have its effect on your whole system. It brings on degeneration of the muscles and the internal organs, sometimes resulting in an unhealthy accumulation of fat and sometimes in internal adhesion. In some constitutions it results in shrinkage and premature old age.

SUFFERED FROM BACKACHE RHEUMATISM, DROPSY.

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish to tell you of a recent experience I had when suffering from backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, and congestion of the kidneys. I tried a new medicine called "Anuric," which has recently been discovered by Dr. Pierce, of whose medicines and Surgical Institution in Buffalo, N. Y., you have no doubt heard for years. This medicine acted upon me in a wonderful manner. I never have taken any medicine so helpful in such quick time. I do wish anyone in need of such a remedy would give it a trial.
(Signed) G. H. HERR.

NOTE: Folks in town and adjoining counties are delighted with the results they have obtained by using "ANURIC," the newest discovery of Dr. Pierce, who is head of the INVALIDS' HOTEL and SURGICAL INSTITUTE, in Buffalo, N. Y. Those who started the day with a backache, stiff legs, arms and muscles, and an aching head (worn out before the day began because they were in and out of bed half a dozen times at night) are appreciating the perfect rest, comfort and new strength they obtained from Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets. To prove that this is a certain uric acid solvent and conquers headache, kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism, if you've never used the "Anuric," cut this out and send ten cents to Doctor Pierce for a large sample package. This will prove to you that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid—and the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector. If you are a sufferer, go to your best druggist and ask for a 50-cent box of "Anuric." You run no risk for Dr. Pierce's good name stands behind this wonderful new discovery as it has for the past half century for his "Golden Medical Discovery" which makes the blood pure, his "Favorite Prescription" for weak women and "Pleasant Pellets" for liver ills.

H. A. Faulkner, president; M. Van Allen, secretary.

This month the ladies have not only done their sewing and knitting but have collected $190.00 to help buy supplies. For the next month they are placing red cross bags in every home in Thurlow, and hope to have good collections.

Beside the calendar money, the following subscriptions were received:

Richard Clarke, $1.00; Mrs. Males, $1.00; The Silk Poppers of Tyendinaga and Thurlow, $30.00; Women's Inst. of Halston, $10.00.

The ladies wish to thank Mr. Gounsell for the privilege of packing in his hall. This is in use all the time, and it is a very great convenience.

All the boxes have been received by the Queens Medical Faculty at Kingston, and a great many have reached Col. J. T. Clarke of No. 2, Canadian Stationary Hospital, Boulogne, France. This is just to show how much they appreciate them.

Boulogne, March 19, 1916.
Dear Mrs. Faulkner,—

The Thurlow people are certainly doing wonderful work. I cannot tell you the pleasure and comfort that the fruit brought. It makes such a fine relish to give the poor fellows with their food. It had all kept perfectly, and of course you know what excellent quality it was. We have over 100 Canadians in now, besides, lots of Lt.-Col. Commanding No. 2 Hospital like home. The evaporated apples in which the jars were packed will make barrels of good apple sauce and pie.

You should have seen the smile on Sergt. Cook's face when I handed them over to him to distribute to the different kitchens.

The field comforts arrived in good condition from the school children of Thurlow, and were certainly appreciated. Please express to all the members of this society the very sincere thanks of the management of this Hospital for these very handsome gifts. Especially the socks and shirts as they are constantly wearing out.

Yours Sincerely,
I. G. CLARKE
Lt.-Col. Commanding No. 2 Hospital.

P.S.—Looking over the socks, and shirts. I find they are of very superior quality, but of course we always expect the best from the Township of Thurlow.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM PTE. J. FAUX

Bordon, England, April 13, 1916.
Dear wife and children,—

Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and hope you are the same. We arrived here safe, and we had dandy weather for our voyage, and certainly enjoyed it. We came across in the biggest boat that floats; it is 1,150 feet around a deck, and to take it all around the boat, it would be a ½ a mile. There were 7,000 of troops and 800 of a crew, and I was not the least bit sea sick. I tell you, England is a grand country; the scenery is very pretty, especially when you are travelling by water. We landed at Liverpool, and it is a nice place, but I do not think we will stop at Bordon very long, for I think we will go to Bramshott, that is near London. Well, Essie, I will bring my letter to a close by saying good bye.

Your loving husband,
JOE.

P. S.—I will write more the next time.

Note:—The above letter would indicate that the report of Mr. Faux's desertion is without foundation. He left with the 59th, from Brockville, and ranked among the best men.

Nervous and Almost Crazy With Pains In the Head

Clergyman Certifies to This Cure of Nervous Prostration by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

No ailment is more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. You may feel better for a day or two, only to find the next day that you have lost ground and are worse than ever. The headaches are worse, languid feelings are terribly depressing. As you lose strength you lose hope and courage and look to the future with fear and trembling.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the sufferer from nervous exhaustion. It is not narcotic in its influence. It does not deaden the trembling, irritated nerves, but through the medium of the blood nourishes them back to health as nothing else can.

Mrs. Alonzo B. Eisner, Billtown, King's county, N.S., writes:—"I was very low with nervous prostration and was about discouraged, as I could not sleep nights and was almost crazy with the pain in my head. I had tried many doctors, but seemed to get little benefit from their treatments.

"A friend handed me Dr. Chase's Almanac, so that I might read about the Nerve Food. A single box of this treatment convinced me of its value, for I was better. I cannot tell how many boxes I used, but the results were so highly satisfactory that I cannot praise it too much. My health and strength have been restored so that I can do all my own work and I recommend the Nerve Food to all who suffer from nervous prostration."

"This is to certify that I am acquainted with Mrs. A. B. Eisner and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be true and correct."—Rev. Arthur A. Whitman.

Some patience is required in the treatment of nervous prostration, but you will not be using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food long before you begin to find your strength and good cheer returning. You will then be encouraged to continue the use of the food cure until cured. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

BELLEVILLE

Captain A. C. McFee and Captain P. W. Wills arrived in Bancroft on Thursday last. They are in charge of "D" Company, of which Bancroft forms one or perhaps two platoons. These gentlemen come to us highly recommended, being officers of wide experience. Captain McFee served in the 15th Regiment, A.L.I. for twenty-two years. He is collector of Inland Revenue in Belleville, and sat in the Belleville council for the past three years, last year being chairman of Public Works of the city. Captain Wills was in the 49th Hastings Rifles for three years, and 15th Argyle Light Infantry, Belleville, for fifteen years. He was superintendent of the Winnipeg & Steep Rock Cement Mills in Manitoba with the Canada Cement Company at the time of his enlistment, resigning his charges there to respond to the call of the motherland, which he has visited several times. His father is at present in Switzerland doing a great work for the Canadian boys who are in prison in Germany. Both of these officers speak very highly of the gallant boys of the north and are very proud of their charge.

Major McCullough, who has been in charge of the Bancroft platoon rfo several months, has been tranferred to Belleville. The major was popular both with the soldiers and civilians, and all were sorry to see him go. He was given a hearty send-off at the station by the boys.—Bancroft Times.

Lt.-Col. Gillespie of Kingston, is in the city today inspecting the equipment of the 80th Battalion. This morning a march-past was held by the men of the 80th Battalion, the saluting base being the steps of the Hotel Quinte.

Pte. Joseph Burns, has been transferred from the 156th Battalion, Brockville, to 80th Battalion.

Capt. Harper, M. O., of 155th Battalion, is in the city today, examining recruits.

The undermentioned certificates were granted on the termination of the Provincial School of Infantry at Kingston, Ont., on the 4th March.

For Sergeant.

KINGSTON

The I.S.I. has received 21 new probationers for the course at the local school. The new system is working out in the most satisfactory manner. Probationers know that there is no time limit to their course, and that the course can be shortened by energy, study, and good hard work. This they are all doing day and night.

Under present conditions and regulations, commissions are no longer obtainable in overseas battalions. All must enter the ranks of an overseas unit in the humble capacity of a private, and their promotion depends upon their own ability, diligence, and energy, with which they must have the endorsement of their commanding officer.

The R.C.H.A. expect to leave the city for Petawawa camp about May 20th.

The following are some facts and figures on the cost of organizing a battalion for overseas service. Every dollar of which must be raised by the commanding officer, and none of which is supplied by the Government:

Roman Meal a Cooling Food.

Because Roman Meal cannot ferment and become acid it cannot "heat the blood" or "irritate the skin." On the other hand, on account of the tasteless and odorless flax seed it contains, it is the very best natural aid to a soft, clear, unblemished skin. There is nothing that will give a gloss to the skin or sparkle to the eye of a horse or other domestic animal like flax seed. It will do the same for the human. In Roman Meal it has been rendered tasteless by Dr. Robt. G. Jackson. Roman Meal can be baked into everything but pastry. It makes the most delightful pancakes and gems known. It is positively the most healthful summer food sold.

Some Crooks Stories.

An English journalist congratulated Mr. Will Crooks on being a "Right Honorable," and asked him how it felt. "I don't feel any difference yet," he said, "but I feel very proud of the honor the King has done me. I hope it won't turn my head, and that I shall always be the same Will Crooks as ever. My motto has always been 'Be Useful,' and I hope I have lived up to it. I feel that every advance in life lays fresh responsibilities on me."

The fact that Mr. Crooks is a Privy Councillor did not prevent him telling an amusing story of his early days, when Parliament was as wild a dream as the Privy Council. Mr. Crooks saved a sum of money by working overtime. "It burnt a hole in my pocket," he said. "We didn't know what to do with it, so one Saturday evening my wife and I sallied out and bought a beautiful brass bedstead, for which we had no use, but which 'blew' the money splendidly.

In the course of conversation "slackers" were mentioned, and Mr. Will Crooks told me a story about a certain "out of work" who went to the foreman at a big factory and asked for a situation. "I am afraid I cannot give you anything," he was told, "for there is scarcely enough doing to keep the regular hands employed." "Oh, that's all right, guv'nor," answered the applicant, cheerfully; "anything I would do wouldn't make very much difference."

Fled From the Indians.

Mrs. Adeline M. Byam, daughter of the late Jonathan McCurdy, a prominent United Empire Loyalist and a pioneer of Belleville, and granddaughter of Stuart Barrey, a former Governor of Pennsylvania, who died in Toronto recently, numbered among her experiences that of being forced to flee for her life from a band of marauding Indians. It was at her early home in Minnesota that she had to flee with her four small children to Buffalo on account of Indian risings. Her husband was at that time serving in the American Civil war. After the American Civil war was over she went to Toronto with her husband, as their home had been destroyed.

GRIFFIN, THE TOY MAN.

Organizer of Exhibition Has Been a Journalist for Many Years.

The great success of the Toy Exhibition, which has been held recently in Toronto under the auspices of the Department of Trade and Commerce, has been due, in no small measure, to Mr. Watson Griffin, of that department, who acted as Sir George Foster's representative in arranging the Exhibition. The motive of the exhibition was to encourage in Canada the manufacture of toys hitherto mainly supplied by enemy countries. And the support it has received, alike from Canadian manufacturers, wholesalers and department stores, and retailers generally, as well as the very general evidences of appreciation of its aims shown by them all, and the general public as well, have been most gratifying, and must have made Mr. Watson Griffin feel assured that his indefatigable efforts have been well repaid. It is not the smallest tribute to his work that he has been able to imbue all concerned with the spirit of harmony which has been so marked a feature of the Exhibition.

Mr. Watson Griffin has been connected with the Department of Trade and Commerce since September, 1913. At the time of his becoming associated with it he was the industrial commissioner of Brandon, Manitoba, and so far back as 1902 he had proved his ability as an organizer by managing the first "Made-in-Canada" campaign in that year. Mr. Watson Griffin was formerly, for many years, managing editor of The Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star, and subsequently chief editorial writer on The Montreal Daily Star. Shortly after his association with Sir George Foster's department he was appointed special commissioner of the Canadian Government to the British West Indies to investigate the working of the trade agreement with the British Indies, and he presented a report on that subject which has been published.

The idea of the Toy Exhibition was to show the toys most generally made in Germany, and hitherto sold in this country, and also to show what Canadians can do in competition along the same lines. Altogether Mr. Watson Griffin was able to get together some forty-three exhibits from native manufacturers. Further, he has been able to interest influential women's associations in the subject. And if, as seems likely, the children's playthings in vogue in this country will in future be made not in Germany or elsewhere, but in Canada, this desirable result will be largely due to his tact and trouble. Mr. Griffin, who was born at Hamilton, Ont., some fifty-five years ago, is the author of numerous books, including a novel, which he published in 1886. He has also been a prolific contributer to British and American magazines.

THIS IS THE 634TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

THE WESTERN GRAIN DIFFICULTY.

No argument is too ridiculous for the Western Liberals of Parliament when in the pose of champions for the Western farmer. An illustration of this was exhibited in Hon. Frank Oliver's complaint, echoed by Messrs Turriff and Knowles, that the National Transcontinental was not being sufficiently used to relieve the grain congestion in the West. The theme of their refrain was that special winter rates, equalling through summer rates via lake and rail, should have been made to allow quicker marketing and shipping of grain. Their thoughts did not travel beyond the railway tracks of course, because these had to do with the Government. The fact that there was plenty of grain in the Eastern ports for all the ocean tonnage that appeared did not count, says the Mail and Empire. If it had been stored in the East it would not have got out any faster. Storage in the West, at the head of the lakes, is cheaper, if anything, than at the seaboard, and the capacity is vastly larger. Since the real question is one of ocean tonnage, how would hurrying grain to the Canadian Atlantic ports have bettered conditions? As a matter of fact, the official statistics show that only a comparatively small part of last year's extraordinary crop remains in the farmers' hands. Of 376,000,000 bushels of wheat, the farmers hold only 86,000,000 bushels, or 23 per cent. About 70,000,000 bushels is in elevator or transit. In 1912 at the same date 27 per cent. of the crop remained in the farmers' hands, and the crop then was only about 200,000,000 bushels. Considering the shortage of ocean tonnage, the grain has gone out surprisingly well, and practically all of last year's surplus for export will have been shipped by the end of the summer.

Some farmers have figured on an end to the war this year, and have feared to be left with a large stock of products on hand. They need have no such fears. The war may end this year, but it is just as likely to continue for two years more, and the best judges can see no end to it for another year at least. So the farmer has everything to gain and nothing to lose by going in for an active campaign of crop-raising this spring. It is not too late, with the heavy rains that have fallen, to make headway in this direction yet. And if there should be no direct market for grain, the most profitable market for it in the world lies through the slaughter house.

Toronto Star: There is not the slightest reason why the bilingual question should lead to any quarrel among sensible Canadians, and we are not surprised that the Duke of Connaught, as an impartial spectator, should take the view that the dispute should be settled by conciliatory methods. Another Governor-General of Canada, Lord Dufferin, warned us of the terrible influences of religious feuds, taking his text from some murderous riots in Belfast, where there was some kind of dispute between Protestants and Catholics. We are tired of these racial and religious rows. They have produced an excitement that is far beyond their real, practical importance. In this new country we want to give every man, woman and child a chance, without any regard to race, descent, or sect. Of course, everybody in Ontario must know English. To deprive any child of the knowledge of English would be like depriving it of the use of its eyes or its legs or its arms. That is a practical question. Why muddle it up with a lot of racial, sectarian and constitutional rubbish?

Were it not for such trifling incidents as the present outbreak in Ireland we would not realize the strength of British unity. It is not surprising that there should be some little trouble in Ireland. The surprising feature of the situation is that there has been such an absence of it. The Home Rule dispute was at its height when war broke out. Immediately the domestic difference was dropped, and Ireland joined with the rest of the Empire in combatting the common enemy. Is it surprising that a few hot-heads, encouraged by the traitor, Casement, should have nourished their grievance, and have lost control of themselves eventually?

Montreal Gazette: Irish Nationalists characterize the abortive rebellion in Ireland as an act of folly by political lunatics. The description seems fitting. There was no chance of the scheme succeeding, and even the crazy plotters themselves must have had an intelligent suspicion that their efforts would be suppressed easily and immediately. Their folly should be further brought home to them when they find that they cannot look for aid in their trouble to the enemy agents who used them as dupes.

Current Comment

General Tasker H. Bliss, acting chief of staff, announces from Washington that a renewed dash by Villa and his followers is in progress in Mexico. For a dead man with one leg, Villa seems to be the liveliest bandit imaginable.

There has plainly been tremendous activity since last summer's campaign closed and the Russians now in France and the others to follow them are good evidences of its effectiveness. The struggle might go on for years without Russia being brought near the point of exhaustion as regards men.

The Boston Transcript points out that the distance from Archangel to Marseilles, presumably travelled by the Russian troops, is about twice that from Hamburg to New York. Which should finally put an end to the argument that the latter city is safe from European molestation because of the breadth of the Atlantic Ocean.

The Florida Times-Union says that the German submarine campaign was adopted almost as much in the interests of the United States as of Germany herself. No wonder the Times-Union is approvingly referred to by the Milwaukee Free Press, itself a "neutral" of the same kind, as "one of the few neutral newspapers in this country."—Mail and Empire.

Massachusetts will be represented in the Republican convention by an unpledged delegation if the outcome of this week's primaries may be judged from slightly more than one-half of the total vote so far tabulated. The returns leave little doubt that the unpledged group of candidates headed by Governor McCall has defeated the ticket which declared for Col. Roosevelt.

The Toronto Globe makes the curious remark that "the attempt to sidetrack public interest in the war scandals by working up an agitation on bilingualism will fail. The war and business arising out of it must be given the right of way." This agitation is the work of the Liberals; are they getting afraid of the "war scandals" which they have started?—Kingston Standard.

There is not the slightest doubt that politics have a great deal to do with the reluctance of the British authorities to introduce conscription. The measure is held up, according to various authorities, by the labour men, by the liberals, by the radicals and by the church parties. Were there forcible leadership which would unite the nation as one body for the proper conduct of the war, none of these suggestions would have any weight.—Toronto World.

The Poets' Corner

NEW HEAVEN.

(Katharine Tynan.)

Paradise now has many a knight,
Many a lordkin, many lord;
Glimmer of armor, dinted and bright,
The young knights have put on new swords.

Some have barely the down on the lip,
Smiling yet from the new-won spurs,
Their wounds are rubies, glowing and deep,
Their scars amethyst—glorious scars.

Michael's army hath many new men,
Gravest knights that may sit in stall,
Kings and captains, a shining train,
But the little young knights are dearest of all.

Paradise now is the soldier's land,
Their own country its shining sod,
Comrades all in a merry band;
And the young knight's laughter pleaseth God.

ENGLAND A WORKSHOP,

What the Ministry of Munitions Has Accomplished.

Carping critics tell us that we do not make enough use of the business men of the nation, which merely emphasizes their ignorance of the work of the Ministry of Munitions, which has organized the labor of the country in such a marvellous manner for the purpose of turning out munitions of war—work which will be the deciding factor in this great struggle. For Mr. Lloyd George has enlisted under his banner the best business brains in the country. The greatest engineers, contractors, managers, railway, and shipping magnates, mining authorities, scientists, and chemists have welded themselves into a body which has transformed Britain into one huge arsenal.

We have already told in Tit-Bits how the whole of the United Kingdom has been mapped out into huge munition areas; how nearly 17,000 munition factories are working night and day, turning out material for our men in the fighting line—material which we so woefully lacked at the beginning of the war. And if further proof were wanted of our extraordinary resources in this direction, it can be found in a striking article which Dr. A. Shadwell contributes to The Edinburgh Review.

As Dr. Shadwell says, the Munitions Office is staffed with practical men of the highest standing and capacity. "None of the knowing critics could suggest so good a list; they do not know enough. There is, for instance, the Bombay and Burma Trading Company. It is said to be the largest trading concern in existence, and the reader will perhaps be inclined to believe it when he learns that one of the assets of that company is £4,000,000 worth of trained elephants alone. Yet the manager of this immense business is content to occupy an assistant's seat in a sub-office of the Supply Department."

This is but one example of the business geniuses who have made great sacrifices in order that their services might be utilized for munition work. At the head of the Munitions Supply Department is Sir Frederick Black, a man who for three years was Director of Naval Stores. Every source has been tapped, "the country," to quote Dr. Shadwell, "having been raked with a toothcomb for all the spare units available. It is not confined to industrial districts. It penetrates into remote regions, associated only with agriculture or pleasure resorts.

"Wherever two or three lathes are gathered together, there some help is being given. There is a house in London—West Central District—where a man and his wife have given up two rooms—a bedroom and a sitting-room—and have installed four lathes. They are making caps for some form of ammunition, and since there was not room enough for the metal rod from which the caps are made to be fed into the machine, they knocked a hole in the wall to give it play. The case illustrates the spirit which the munitions net is able to catch, and the small forces enrolled thereby in the service."

The State arsenals have been taken over by the Ministry of Munitions, while it may be mentioned that the head of the machine-tool department is the head of the most enterprising firm of makers we have; and he has working under him experts representing each of the principal machine tool making districts in the country. Wherever there has been expert labor, expert labor has been organized for munition work, so that when the right time comes, the Allies will be able to batter in the German lines and go on battering for weeks and perhaps for months.

Would Cut Boats in Two.

The suggestion that lake grain carriers be cut in two and sent through the canals to be used on the ocean during the late fall and the winter has attracted much attention along the lakes. Robert Carrs, the agent for Lloyd's at Port Arthur, says the plan is perfectly feasible for a ship of 43-foot beam and under. These boats are strong enough for ocean service, and the changes required would be comparatively inexpensive. St. Lawrence navigation is open after the upper lakes season has closed, and there would be time to prepare the lake vessels for the trip through the canals.

John Muir's Great Wealth.

John Muir, who has left a rich legacy to his countrymen, like so many thousands of writers and American idealists, was poor. He was a close friend of Mr. E. H. Harriman, the multimillionaire railroad king. One day Mr. Muir surprised his wealthy friend by saying, "Harriman, you know I am a richer man than you are?"

"Yes?" said Harriman, with a question in his tone.

"Because," continued Muir, "I have all the money I want, and you haven't."—From "American Ideals," by Clayton Sedgwick Cooper.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the Yukon Territories, the North West Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Applications for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections or legal subdivisions of sections and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available, but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year.

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10.00 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

N.B. Unauthorized publication of this advertisement will not be paid for.—3909.

Reindeer in Canada.

Efforts of the Dominion Government to propagate reindeer in the Peace River and the Great Slave Lake district in north-western Canada, have proved unsuccessful, according to a recent report on the subject. Of the original herd of 50 which were sent from Labrador in 1911, there is now but one survivor. The chief difficulty was the bull flies of the north which drove the reindeer frantic in the summer. The result was that they stampeded through the strongest enclosures their keepers could build, and were lost, or shot by the Indians. Reindeer have thrived in Alaska, but apparently the Peace River country and the Valley of the Mackenzie were not suitable for them. Later an effort may be made to introduce them in the Yukon, where there seems to be no reason why they should not succeed.

Dental Corps Provided For.

It is announced that the army dental corps of the Canadian expeditionary force will be under a director-general, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and there will be a lieutenant colonel and a major in charge of the work of each division. There will be seven officers on the headquarters staff of the army dental corps and 44 dental surgeons. In each division there will be 30 dental surgeons with 32 orderlies and 32 batmen.

The organization for service in Canada in the various military divisions includes 111 surgeons and corps officers and 212 orderlies and batmen.

Letter Accepted as Will.

Pierre Jean Marie Charles, a French reservist, who left Montreal for the front shortly after the war began, and died from wounds received in France on May 24, 1915, wrote a letter shortly before his death to Mr. P. Beauvais, Manager of the City & District Savings Bank, Montreal, asking Mr. Beauvais, in case of the death of the writer, to hand over to a cousin, Marcelle Charles, money he had on deposit in the bank in question. This letter was accepted a few days ago by the court as a valid holograph will.

A WOMAN'S WAY;

Or,

BEL RUBIA

By CAPT. FREDERICK WHITTAKER

Author of "The Love That Lives," "Transgressing the Law," "The Captive-Bride," etc.

The steward was beginning to recover from his stupor of astonishment, and his tone was that of quiet respect, as he said:

"My lord, I don't deny what you've said, but Hester is my only child. She is all I have, my lord; and if I though that your lordship would get tired of her, I would say, 'for God's sake, my lord, don't do anything you will be sorry for after it's too late to turn back.'"

The steward's voice broke as he spoke; and the earl answered him in a manner that showed he, too, was affected by the situation in which they found themselves.

"Shirley," he said, "you and I were boys together, and you have always been one of our great family. Thank God, the old stock is not all gone yet. My ancestors and yours fought side by side, for hundreds of years; and when a Neville weds a Shirley, he means to stick to his bargain. As God is my witness I will do right by Hester."

The steward bowed low and his voice shook as he replied:

"My lord, God bless the old house! If Hester's the girl I think her, she won't be puffed up by the luck that comes to her on the heels of such a blow as your lordship has just suffered. I'll go and tell her, my lord, and see what she says to it."

And the steward left the room, while the earl threw himself into a chair, and sat there, frowning and twiching nervously, as he thought of the way his cousin had come to him.

He did not seem conscious of the lapse of time; thought Shirley kept him waiting for nearly an hour; but just as he began to realize this, and fume, in his habitual impatient way, like a man who has his will all his life the door opened and the steward entered, much graver than usual in manner.

"Well, Shirley," he asked, rather uneasily, "what does the child say? Is she willing to save the old house?"

Shirley hesitated and reddened.

"Well, my lord—the fact is—well, my lord—"

"Great heavens!" exclaimed Lord Warwick, jumping up from his chair, "you don't mean to say the child said 'no'?"

He seemed to be thunderstruck at the bare idea, and his consternation was ludicrous.

Shirley saw the effect produced on the mind of his master, and the steward almost trembled as he rejoined:

"No, my lord, not exactly that, but Hester says, my lord, that you must not be offended, my lord, but girls are queer creatures, you know—she says that—"

"Well, what, what, what?"

The earl's tone was haughty and imperative, and Shirley blurted out, desperately, the message Hester had sent.

CHAPTER V.

A Woman's Way.

"Hester says, my lord," said the steward, rapidly, "that if she's worth marrying she's worth asking for; and that if your lordship wants to marry her, she wants to be dealt with like other girls. She says people can't be married in church without putting up the banns and she wants to know how your lordship gets over that. She is in the library, my lord, crying over it; and I swear I don't see what there is to cry about. But girls are getting beyond me."

The earl listened attentively, and Shirley was agreeably surprised when Lord Warwick burst into a laugh, and cried emphatically:

"Shirley, by heaven! the child is right. We two old fools don't know half as much as she does. Tell her to come here. No, by Jove. She's right, and I'm wrong. The Countess of Warwick must be treated with proper respect. I'll go to her!"

Away went the impetuous old nobleman, and found Hester, as her father had said, in the library, all alone, weeping as if her heart would break at the slight put to her pride as a woman by the careless way in which Lord Warwick had thrown the handkerchief to her, like a sultan to a slave.

The difference in her feelings was marked by the fact that she did not move, though she heard Lord Warwick enter the room, but remained with her face buried in her handkerchief till he had closed the door softly and come near her.

Lord Warwick, being an old man of the world, had the advantage over her that he was perfectly cool and watchful, and he noticed that the girl was trembling, though she tried to conceal it, as she sat by the table and pretended not to know he was in the room.

He came beside her, and said softly:

"Hetty, child!"

Then she started and looked up at him, coloring deeply, but with an expression he had never seen there.

Hester, the shy, timid child who had fled from him a little while before, had gone forever, and in her place, to his surprise, the earl saw a woman who had a soul as proud as his own, and who could not be treated like a child.

He saw this at once, and with the quick intuition of a man of the world, dropped his parental air, and took another course, which he had always found effectual.

"Hester," he said gravely, "I thought, till a few minutes ago, that when a Neville asked a Shirley to stand by the old house, the appeal could not be made in vain."

Hester blushed deeper than before, and clasped her hands, murmuring brokenly:

"Oh, my lord, it is not that! It is not that! You know if it were that, I would die for the Nevilles any time. You know it, my lord, don't you?"

The earl drew himself up slightly.

"I did think, so, Hester; but, from what your father tells me, it seems that it was reserved for a Shirley to inflict on a Neville the keenest humiliation a man can receive. You think I am a useless old man, and that it is presumption on my part to think of marrying a young and beautiful girl like you. Perhaps you are right, but I did not expect to hear it from you first, of all in the world. You have hurt my feelings deeply, Hetty—deeply."

The girl's eyes had been dilating while he spoke, as if she was very much surprised; and when he finished, in his saddest tones, she said, hastily and earnestly:

"Oh, my lord, you know—you must know—that I had no such thoughts in my mind. That is not it. Oh, no, my lord. If that were all, I should be the proudest girl in England today. Oh, no! That is not it, my lord, at all."

"Then what is this 'it' which is of such tremendous importance, Hetty?" the earl asked, in a more playful tone with a slight smile on his face, as he looked down at the girl.

Hester was quick to notice the change, and glanced up at his face.

Her own assumed an expression of pride, and something very like resentment, as she said:

"It is this, my lord. Even a Shirley ought not to be made a plaything for a Neville. You can never have any love for a poor girl like me, brought up as I have been—the daughter of your steward. I know that well enough. But I have too much love for the old house to let the head make himself miserable for life by marrying a wife of whom he might be ashamed after it was too late."

The earl's face lost its playful expression. He walked away to the window, and a deep silence prevailed in the room till he came back to the place where she was seated, and laid his hand on her shoulder, saying gravely:

"Hester Shirley, I have known you ever since you were a child in short frocks; but I have never known what you really were till now. When I was in trouble you comforted me, I tempted you, and you have resisted temptation. You are a woman any man in England might be proud to wed, Hetty, I know well that, if you marry me, an early widowhood must be ever before you. Still, if you can make up your mind to undertake the care of a man of my age, there is one thing I can promise you. No young man could love you as I shall love the woman who consents to be my wife, with her eyes open, as yours are. I ask you, for the second time—Hester Shirley, will you be my wife, or am I too old?"

Hetty looked up timidly at the noble face; the gray hair and fine features, the tall and commanding form, the air of high breeding which marked the descendant of twenty earls. Her eyes filled with tears as she answered:

"My lord, if I thought you meant it—if I could only believe I could make you happy for the rest of your life—"

"Hetty, you can. If I did not know it, I should not have asked you what I have to-day."

"Then, my lord," said Hetty, with a certain gentle dignity that became her well, "if it will do you any service to know it, I am a very proud girl to-day. I will do my best, all my life, to make you as proud of your wife as she must be of the Earl of Warwick."

* * * *

That was the wooing of the earl for the woman who was to save the old house from the rule of a stranger. A week later Hester Shirley was the Countess of Warwick. A year later Oliver Seymour ground his teeth when he read that the castle had a new heir, who had been christened "George Charles Edward Neville."

Many Have Given Services for Relief

Time, Energy And Talent For Belgian Belief Represents Much Money

MONTREAL, April 28. — A Montrealer who is interested in looking at the statistical side of every question, provided there is a possibility of such a thing, has been considering the work that has been done for the Belgian Relief Committee by Canadians and those visiting this country in their interests. While he has not yet reduced his deduction to actual figures he has discovered that hundreds of people all over the Dominion have spent many hours and given the equivalent of many dollars for the cause of the millions of the hungry in Belgium.

In summing this up the layman can appreciate what this means. Scores of musicians, many of them of the rank that receive several hundred dollars for a single concert, have given their services to the cause. On the whole the movement has been second only to that for the national patriotic fund.

If these highly paid artistes are willing to give of their talents, energy and money the committee believes that the average Canadian is willing to do his share. That is why such an urgent appeal is being made for funds.

While the winter has gone and the most bitter season has passed the fact remains that the Belgians must be fed and there are three millions of them absolutely dependent upon the generosity of Canada the States and Australia for the three slices of bread and pint of soup that comprise their food for each day. Not only are these three million people—the wives and children of our hetoic Allies—destitute, but there are four million more who are almost wholly relying on Canada for food.

A dollar given to the Belgian Relief Committee, 58 St Peter Street, Montreal, means sustenance for a Belgian for nearly a month. When this is considered, it is within the opportunity and reach of nearly every Canadian to help. A small sacrifice will help a big cause if the money is directed through the proper channel and that channel is the Belgian Relief Committee.

HETTY GREEN IS DYING

Stroke of Paralysis Renders Her Condition Critical

NEW York, April 27.—Mrs Hetty Green, often described as the wealthiest woman in the world, is reported to be dangerously ill in the home of her son, Edward H. R. Green, at 5 West Ninetieth Street. Her attendants said she was stricken quite suddenly three days ago, had been unconscious since then and was only semi-conscious at midnight. Two nurses were at her bedside constantly and physicians were coming and going. The apartment on the second floor was alive with excitement. All rooms excepting that in which the aged invalid lay were lighted, as were the servants' quarters on the top floor.

If Mr Green was in his home he refused to see callers or to make a statement. An effort was made to prevent the fact of Mrs Green's illness from becoming public, but persons not attached to the household who had been in attendance upon Mrs Green said her condition was critical following a stroke of paralysis.

The fact that she is in her eightieth year militates against the chance of her recovery, it was explained, aside from the fact that the attack of paralysis severely affected her nervous system.

A WAY TO QUIT WORRYING.

That worry is a curse no intelligent observer of life will deny. It has hindered millions from progressing, and never benefited a soul. It occupies the mind with that which is injurious and thus keeps out the things that might benefit and bless. It is an active and real manifestation of the fable of the man who placed the frozen asp in his bosoin. As he warmed it back to life the reptile turned and fatally bit its benefactor.

Are you cursed by the demon of worry? Has it got a death grip on your throat? Do you want to be freed from its throttling assaults? If so, get a hobby, the more mentally occupying the better, and ride it earnestly, sincerely, furiously. Let it be what it will, it will far more than pay in the end, when you find yourself free from the nightmare of worry that has so relentlessly ridden you for so long.

Collect bugs, old china, Indian baskets, Indian blankets, pipes, domestic implements, war paraphernalia, photographs, butterflies; make an herbarium of the flowers of your state; collect postage stamps, old books, first editions; go in for extra illustrating books, pick up and classify all the stray phrases you hear; do anything that will occupy your mind to the exclusion of worry.

Woman Killed By Automobile

Stepped In Front of Car and Front Wheels Passed Over Her Body

MONTREAL, April 27.—Another automobile fatality, the second in as many days, occurred yesterday afternoon at Mansfield and St. Catherine street, where a woman, as yet unidentified, was struck and almost instantly killed by an automobile owned and driven by Mr. Gustave Champagne, of 598 Park Lafontaine.

The accident occurred at 5.30 p.m. at the northeast corner of the street intersection. Mr. Champagne, driving up Mansfield street, had been stopped at the south side of St. Catherine street, to allow the passing of east and west-bound traffic. He started his motor on the first speed when the street was clear, and crossed St. Catherine. The woman, walking along St. Catherine street, stepped in front of the machine, and before the driver could stop, the car had knocked her down and the front wheel had passed over her body.

ST. ANDREWS BY-THE-SEA

BY-THE-SEA St. Andrews certainly is: for a tongue of land, stretching for miles into the ocean and consequently bordered on three sides by the waters of a bay and a river, makes it a by-the-sea region.

And any spot that is by the sea always attires me. The union of land and water, the tang of the sea, the delicious color of kelp on the beach, the whiff of the brine wafted inland on the crested waves, and the bulwarks of rock that receive the surge of the storm—all these combined make the allurement.

But it does not explain all. St. Andrews has what might be called atmospheric attractions. There is a weird beauty about the wreaths of mist chased ashore from the open waters, though when on a deck it is plain fog, and plain fog is rarely attractive to a sea dog. But when one stands on Chamcook Mountain and the eye takes in the superb sweep of Passamaquoddy Bay swept by a wall of mist, and watches it scatter over the land in silvery detachments as if on an invasion, the effect is both dramatic and beautiful. A region of hills and valleys, of sea-indented shores and forested depths, is suddenly transformed into a ghost land until a vagrant breeze rolls up the clouds like a scroll and the face of nature is again revealed.

And there are lots to see in this tongue of land. There is that cross-country drive from St. Croix River to the bay waters on the east, a matter of only half a score of miles.

Most unique is the low tide highway to Minister's Island, where the late Sir William Van Horne had his summer residence, a road that is only usable when it is twenty feet below high watermark at low tide, the same kind of way one finds at Jersey that leads to a detached castle stronghold. Safely crossing the narrow arm of the sea, the drive over and around Minister's Island is worth going all the way to St. Andrews to see, for it includes not only superb pictures of land and seascapes, but the welter of color in the flower gardens of the estate and the smiling fields of grain that make so many fields of cloth of gold at the harvest time.

I like a resort where I may patter along the shore digging up shells, picking wild berries from the nearest bushes, puddling with my bare feet in the Diana pools left by the receding tide; and it is great fun to dig ones toes into the yielding sand, or to help a child to make a tunnel or dig a fort. Just to lie prone on a stretch of dry sand and let the untainted wind blow its health into you, or to stretch on a flat rock beneath the smiling sun is a wonderful joy that can better be experienced than described.

It is a fact worth recording that all the great men of the past have loved the ocean, and written beautifully about it. Describing the beauty of the sea Lord Byron wrote:

Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow.

You can go a-swimming, of course, for which there is a bountiful supply of water, fresh and salt, warm and cold. Surf or deep sea bathing is for all who come. You can play golf on the excellent course.

Patrols Repulsed With Grenades

Enemy Attacks Stopped by Curtain Fire—Artillery Bombardment Continues

PARIS, April 27—(Afternoon statement.) North of the Aisne, several German patrols were repulsed with hand grenades. In the region of Verdun, there was an intense bombardment of the redoubt of Avocourt, and of our organizations on the Cote du Poivre. A small enemy attack directed upon an element of our trenches to the north of Vaux was immediately stopped by our curtains of fire. In Lorraine we dispersed German reconnoitering parties which attempted to reach our position to the east of Le Mesnil. On the rest of the front there was no event of importance to report beyond the usual cannonading.

FARM AND GARDEN

NOTES.

Get after the weeds early.

Leave an extra acre or two for corn.

It may be that you are killing your young chicks with too much feed.

Make up for a late seeding and a smaller acreage by putting it in better.

Imitation is no crime, provided you imitate the best farmer in your community.

Plan to grow your own root seed for 1917. A few roots planted now will do the trick.

More land is going down to pasture. This means more stock. Careful selection is necessary.

Do not condemn the cow until she has had a fair test; but if she fails in a fair test, she should go.

Potato diseases were prevalent last year, which makes it imperative that growers exercise care with their seed this spring.

If the hens have not produced eggs for Easter, you had better change the breed, the strain of the breed, the feed, or the date of hatching.

Technical education should get a big boost at the end of the war. Returned soldiers should be taught to do that which they prefer to do and which they can best accomplish.

It might be as well to consult returned soldiers as to what they want to do when the war is over, rather than attempt to make farmers of them all, even in such a good section as New Ontario.

WHICH IS YOUR WAY?

Two men were leaning over the pasture bars. Their conversation is related in the Western Farmer of Spokane, Washington, as follows:—

"Yes, sir, that colt is for sale, but he belongs to my son in the field yonder. You'll have to bargain with him," said the farmer, motioning to the boy. "He'll be here presently and you can talk to him."

"That boy!" ejaculated the stranger.

"Yes, George is seventeen, and a smarter boy never was raised on any farm—if I do say it. You ought to hear him in debate. He can hold his end with the best of 'em. He raised that colt and the sale money goes into the bank in his name. He's saving for a course in an agricultural college; then I'll step down and out and he'll run the old farm. Here, George, this man is looking at your two-year-old."

The bargain was soon concluded, but not before the buyer had learned that the seventeen-year-old boy was a keen judge of horse flesh and knew the worth of his colt.

Two men were leaning over the pasture bars.

"Yes, sir, them steers are as good as ever was raised in this town. That boy over there calls 'em his, and has fussed with 'em ever since they were calves. Hey? Oh, that makes no difference when it comes to selling. They were fed from my mow, and I reckon the cash goes into my pocket. Boys are ungrateful nowadays. He keeps talking of quitting, and I can't keep him longer than he is twenty-one. He might take the old farm and let me have a rest, but he will not listen to that. Well, it can't be helped, as I see. You don't offer quite what I consider the steers worth, but there's no use in feeding 'em any longer. They're yours."

Which boy made a successful, contented farmer, and why?

GRAND TRUNK ANNUAL REPORT

The annual report of the Grand Trunk Railway, presented at the general meeting in London of April 18, 1916, shows that the railway carried last year 12,082,228 passengers a decrease of 698,762 as compared with 1914. The average fare per passenger showed a small decrease. The receipts from the passenger traffic amounted to £2,100,240 a decrease of £277,092 as compared with 1914. The mileage of passenger trains in 1915 was 8,271,001, a decrease of 674,492 as compared with 1914.

The railway handled 20,026,500 tons of freight and live stock in 1915, a decrease of 777,255 tons as compared with 1914. The average rate per ton on the entire freight business was 0.70 of a cent. The receipts from this source being £5,382,701, a decrease of £54,107 in comparison with the previous year.

The gross receipts of the company in 1914 amounted to £8,282,688, a decrease of £791,080. The working expenses, excluding taxes, amounted to £6,306,162, or 76.05 per cent. of the gross receipts as compared with £6,673,876, or 77.67 per cent. in 1914.

After meeting the revenue charges for the year there was a surplus of £5510,683. Adding the balance of £4,323 7s. 9d. at the credit of Net Revenue Account on the 31st December, 1914, to the above surplus for the past year of £510,683 18s., the total amount available for dividend is £515,007 5s. 9d., out of which an interim divided of one and one-half percent. on the four per cent. Guaranteed Stock, amounting to £187,500, was paid out on the 9th November last, leaving a balance of £327,507 5s. 9d., from which the directors recommended the payment of a further dividend of two and one-half per cent. on that stock, making the full dividend for the year. This will absorb £312,500, and leave a balance of £15,007 5s. 9d. to be carried forward to the next year's accounts.

Prorogation Of Ont. Legislature

Removal of Restrictions Enabled Good Number of Public To Attend

TORONTO, April 27.—A concrete idea of the amount of the work undertaken during the past session of the Legislature was given in the speech from the throne declaring the House prorogued this afternoon. In it were summarized practically the whole activities of the session, from the Temperance Act to that improving the quality of dairy products.

Sir John Hendrie also gave his assent to the 118 bills passed this session.

The ceremony was of unusual interest this year in the military aspect it took on, practically all the brigade officers and commanding officers of the various units in the Second Military District being in attendance, as well as a good representation from the headquarters staff.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the Lieutenant-Governor, Lady Hendrie, Miss Hendrie, and their suite, accompanied by Colonel Caldwell and a mounted guard from the Royal Canadian Dragoons, passed up the crescent of Queen's Park and drew up at the main entrance, while a salute of fifteen guns was fired by the 48th Depot Battery, C.F.A., C.E.F. The guard of honor from the 95th Battalion stood at the present.

Met By Acting Premier

Advised of the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor, Colonel the Hon. Dr. R. A. Pyne, Acting Premier, left the chamber to meet the party, and escorted His Honor up the main stairway, into the chamber, and to the Speaker's throne, which was vacated by Dr. Jamieson.

The lengthy list of bills was then read by the Clerk of the House, who announced that the Lieutenant-Governor had given his assent to them.

Following the reading of the speech from the Throne, the Provincial Secretary asked that the prorogation of the House be declared, to which His Honor assented.

Owing to the removal of many of the restrictions which prevailed on opening day, rather a large representation of the public was present at the ceremony.

ALASKA A NEW TOURIST'S PARADISE

By inaugurating a fine steamship service from points on the North Pacific Coast to Alaska, the Grand Trunk Pacific has unlocked the gateway to a new Tourists's Paradise. This delightful region abounds in expensive lakes and beautiful fords, whose shimmering waters nestling at the foot of snow capped peaks and glittering glaciers, reflect the gorgeous colors of the northern sky. In addition to possessing scenic glories similar to but often transcending those of Norway, Alaska has charms peculiar to its climate, geographical situation, and traditions. Here reside the bronzed Indian, with his strange customs and stranger totem poles, recording the history of his tribe and symbolizing his religion; the quaint Eskimo of the Seward Peninsula, and the hardy pioneer of all nationalities. Then the unequalled opportunities for fishing and hunting in this region of abounding natural life and natural beauties are attractions which make an especial appeal to the sportsman.

The big, excellently appointed oil-burning steamships of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the "Prince Rupert" and the "Prince George," are providing service this season from Seattle, Victoria, Vancouver, and Prince Rupert to the Alaskan points of Ketchikan, Wrangell, Juneau and Skagway. These steamships link up with the Grand Trunk Pacific's transcontinental line at Prince Rupert, and passengers are enabled to save at least two days on the Alaskan trip by using this route.

A new folder describing and picturing this Alaskan trip and the journey through the "Norway of America" has just been issued by the Grand Trunk, and a copy of this publication may be obtained on application to H. C. Thompson, G. T. R. Agent or C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH SOLDIER MEETS DEATH BY DROWNING

Pte. J. Boik, With Young Woman Falls Over Embankment Into River—His Companion Saved By Resident

PETERBOROUGH, April 27.—Pte. John Boik, a member of the 93rd Battalion, was drowned, and Mary Anderson is in the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from nervous shock as the result of falling into the river near the foot of Sherbrooke street.

Shortly after 9 o'clock last night, Wm. H. Lytle had a number of men unloading flour at the C. P. R. siding on Water street, when he was startled by hearing a woman scream. He jumped between the cars and looking down towards the river, he could not see anyone, but he yelled "What is the matter," and heard a woman answer "I am drowning." He quickly grabbed a rope from the truck and with his father rushed down the steep embankment to the water's edge, and then they could see the young lady with one hand above the water. An accurate throw of a hook and rope, made the hook fast in the girl's clothes and she was drawn to shore, where with the assistance of some ladies of the neighborhood she was revived.

"Save Him," Girl Cried

At once Miss Anderson by the remark "save him" told Mr. Lytle that there was a man in the water and they immediately went back to the same spot to investigate. The water is very black and deep at this point and it was not until P. C. Blade and Sergt. Kidd arrived with Fire Chief Howard and the pulmotor that they were able by means of a lantern to locate the body. They succeeded in getting it in to shore and the pulmotor started at work. Sergt. Kidd did his best by artificial respiration to resuscitate the unfortunate soldier, but all efforts were in vain.

Dr. Eastwood arrived during the progress of the work and advised a hot bath. The young man was taken to the Empress Hotel, where two hot baths gave no sign that a spark of life was left, and the body was taken to Comstock's undertaking rooms and Coroner Greer notified.

Miss Anderson was taken to the hospital, where Dr. Morgan found that she was suffering from a very bad nervous shock.

Mrs. Petrie, sister of Miss Anderson, stated today that her sister was very weak, but had given the information that she had slipped at the top of the embankment and that both had fallen into the river.

Coroner Greer has decided that an inquest will not be necessary and has issued the necessary certificate for burial.

Coal Strike Is Anticipated

Miners Now Willing to Yield the "Check Off" But Closed Shop Never

NEW YORK, April 27.—With both sides obdurate on the proposition of a "closed shop," there is not much chance for the anthracite miners and operators to reach an agreement at the final conference of their general committees today. If there was any move toward a compromise, it emanated not from the operators, who are threatened with a strike of 176,000 miners in the anthracite region unless they recognize the union, but from the miners themselves. Without yielding an inch in their demand for a closed shop, they nevertheless announced their willingness to withdraw their demand for a "check off."

As a matter of fact, it was stated at the union headquarters in the Continental Hotel today that the miners, even at the subcommittee conference on Tuesday, had declared themselves willing to relinquish the "check off." This the operators emphatically denied. According to a statement made on behalf of the operators at the Hotel Seville, the miners insisted upon the "check off" as being inseparable with the complete recognition of the union.

YOUTH IN OLD AGE

HOW TO LIVE TO BE ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD

With proper attention to diet, prevention of colds, exercise, plenty of sleep, proper care of the skin and the use of a strengthening tonic like Vinol, years may be added to one's life.

A Civil War Veteran, Mr. W. H. Bowers, of Steubenville, Ohio, says, "I am 77 years of age. I suffered from general weakness, nervous breakdown and dizziness. An old doctor recommended Vinol. It built me up so that I was able to go to work as strong and well as ever."

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it contains the very elements needed to replace declining strength with renewed vigor, viz.—the medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, peptonate of iron, beef peptone and a mild tonic wine.

If Vinol fails to build up the feeble weakened system of old people, we will return the amount of money paid us for it. J. S. McKeown, druggist, Belleville, Ont.

SOLDIER DIES FROM BEATING

Montreal Police Looking For Men Who Assaulted Him

MONTREAL, April 27.—From information laid before Coroner McMahon yesterday, it is conclusively shown that J. N. Taillefer, the discharged soldier who died in the General Hospital on To-day morning as a result of a fractured skull, came by his death through a beating administered by two men whose identities are as yet unknown. A man told the coroner that he had seen Taillefer in conversation with a woman at Sanguinet and Demontigny streets, when he was attacked by two others. One of them knocked him down and the other kicked him in the head. The inquest has been postponed until tomorrow to give the police a chance for further investigation.

ANOTHER ZEPPELIN RAID ON ENGLAND

LONDON, April 27.—Special—The War Office announces that Zeppelins visited Kent, on the east coast, at 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday night. No reports of their penetration inland have been received up to 2 o'clock this morning.

Because of the mist prevailing over Kent, it is thought probable the Zeppelins retreated before midnight.

It is reported that one bomb dropped fell into the sea.

Britain's Great Arsenal.

Woolwich is suffering to-day from a house famine. There is, so far as is known, not a single private house in the borough or district rented at under £50 a year to let. The slightest intimation that a house is likely to become vacant brings a flood of applications. It was rumored late one night that a small house, old and not very convenient, might be available soon, as the present tenant had been ordered abroad. By eight o'clock next morning thirty-six people had applied for it. It had been let, however, by 6 a.m.

The magnet that has drawn skilled workers to the Arsenal is the big money to be made. Clerks formerly rich on 38s. a week now make their £4, with overtime and bonuses. Boys often earn 28s. a week or more. The skilled workman receiving his £5 or £6 a week is a commonplace individual. People point out particular workmen employed on special jobs, and say that they sometimes make £15 or £16 a week. Often several members of a family are working. With the father earnings £6 a week, and four or five others receiving smaller amounts, up to maybe 25s for the boy, it is easy to see that the family income may reach a total that many a supposedly prosperous professional man might envy.

A Big Business.

Two million and a quarter dollars are spent in the Toronto Military District every month on the maintenance of the organization under the command of Brig.-General Logie. This estimate includes the payment of all overseas troops, officers, and the up-keep of all military organizations in the 2nd Military District for the prosecution of the war. The man who handles this money is Lieut.-Col. J. R. Forbes, paymaster-in-chief of the district. He has a staff of thirty-five officers and men immediately under him, and his department is the clearing house for all the financial affairs of the units and details, which at the present time aggregate about fifty thousand men. This forms the most extensive business concern in Canada, but no money is being made, it is all out-goings. Lieut.-Colonel Forbes is a paymaster of old standing, and the business of war has grown upon his hands enormously during the last two years.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

VIIVID PRODUCTION OF THE BIRTH OF A NATION

As a matter of historical education in connection with the American Civil war, with what immediately followed, aside from the spectacular presentation as a whole, the Birth of a Nation at Griffin's Opera House last night, can easily be numbered among the greatest and most successful efforts of the manipulators of the camera.

The screen dealt vividly with quiet life in Washington Governmental and high social circles; the election of Abraham Lincoln; the threat of the South to secede from the Union; alternating between the Northern and Southern elements and their attitude; the final outbreak, followed by the affecting home scenes; the heartrending episodes of the battlefield, in which the heroic Southern soldiers, led on by Col. Ben. Cameron, fought inch by inch, only to go down by defeat, including a realistic encounter of opposing forces by night, and kept the audience in a state of awe.

Then came the famous theatrical scene, in which John Wilkes Booth shot President Lincoln as he sat in his box; the leap of the murderer to the stage, effecting his escape; the sorrow of the nation, even extending to the South, as depicted by the words of Col. Cameron, his heroic enemy: "We have lost our best friend."

One might presume that the freedom of the slaves would have created peace in the South; but not so. The ecstatic joy of the downtrodden race, upon realizing a sense of freedom, brought an ambition for equality with the white element, accompanied by disfranchisement of their previous masters at the ensuing election, and elevation to office of an overwhelming colored majority. The desire for intermarriage; the molestation of white women, and finally, the death of Col. Ben Cameron's pet sister by a leap from a cliff to escape from a negro, resulted in the formation of the Ku Klux Klan, which later clarified the social air. The portrayal of this section of the photodrama was beyond description, the ghostlike horzemen, as they swept the Southern country creating a terror among the colored people that was pitiable to behold.

Many incidents of historical events were here made clear, proving an educator to the unlearned in this regard of great value.

As the drama progressed, the large orchestra, ever in touch with the play, even to the bugle calls, the report of the gun or cannon, the sharp-noted whistle, and the call of the Klu-Klux, resounded through the theatre, creating a natural effect.

A vein of love between Col. Ben Cameron and Elsie Stoneman, the daughter of a Northern official, and a like feeling between Col. Cameron's pretty sister and Miss Stoneman's brother, was made deeply interesting because of the patriotic proclivities of each to be finally harmonized in marriage at the close of the play.

To the author, Mr. D. W. Griffiths, the country has every reason to doff the hat for a production exquisite in smoothness of action; truthfulness to nature and history; as an educator above price; and finally, as an entertainer pleasing beyond expression.

The play will be reproduced this afternoon and evening, also to-morrow afternoon and evening, when it is hoped every lover of real merit will be present.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

..At Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday and Thursday evening will be exhibited, the great photo spectacle that has created a sensation in the United States and Canada, "The Battle Cry of Peace." This photo-drama which shattered all records for business at the Strand Theatre, Toronto, where 8 performances daily had to be given to accommodate the large attendance, will be again shown in Toronto this time at Massey Hall with its 4,000 seats, the week of May 8th, by Manager H. S. Marvin of the Strand There have been pictures upon war pictures shown in Belleville, until the public has become pretty well accustomed to them, but this one is the biggest sermon on preparedness that could possibly be imagined. The war scenes on the screen deal with conditions at the front and armies opposed to armies. The Battle Cry of Peace shows what an organized army might do against a defenceless population, in this case the United States, with the city of New York as the scene of carnage. You see what looks like a real war panic. Fires break out, bombs drop from aeroplanes, and burn huge office buildings from the ground. Innocent people are shot and women maltreated by brutal soldiery. All of it is portrayed with unbelievable realism, and through it all their is the story of what happened to one family, which brings it home all the stronger, t. what happened in Belgium and what might happen in Canada. A special musical score played by a large augumented orchestra fitted to the different scenes and details of the picture, is also a special feature.

THE RED CIRCLE

Owing to "The Birth of a Nation" being exhibited at Griffin's Opera House, tonight and the balance of the week at Griffin's Opera House, the 9th episode of the popular serial photoplay "The Red Circle will be exhibited at the Palace Theatre this week, the title of this episode is, "Dodging the Law." In addition to the above offering a thrilling 3-part wild animal story entitled, "The Lion's Ward," featuring the famous wild animal trainer, Paul Bourgeois, will be exhibited in addition to a program of amusing comedies.

TO SAVE AND SERVE

The Quinte Chapter, I.O.D.E., of this city, has been actively engaged during the last six months in carrying out the suggestion of the Government regarding the campaign to save and serve. It was decided to form a committee and to collect old newspapers, books, and magazines. The convenors succeeded in gathering together about 13 tons, through the efforts of the members of the Chapter and others. The expenses were very small, as Mr. Hogan gave his services free when carting the loads to the station, and the Smith Hardware also gave aid gratuitously. Mrs. C. H. Vermilyea assisted materially by allowing the various donations of paper to be deposited in her barn, and as the location was very central, an immense amount of labor was saved. The coffers of the Chapter were, replenished to the tune of $130.55, which is a remarkably good showing and is indeed a credit to all concerned. The sum realized will be used for Red Cross work.

OFFICIAL COURIERS ON G. T. R. STEAMSHIPS

Special Guides to Handle Passengers on the Alaskan Run.

MONTREAL, April 19.—The Grand Trunk Pacific announces the introduction of a novel feature in connection with its Alaska service this summer.

An official courier will be attached to the steamships, "Prince Rupert and "Prince George," on their Alaskan trips, commencing in June. The officials engaged have a wide acquaintance in Alaskan and Yukon circles.

Their special duties will be the entertainment of the passengers who patronize the two Grand Trunk Pacific flyers on their Alaskan trips this year, and will consist of explaining points of interest along the route, giving short and breezy sketches of the history of the settlement and development of the country, legends and folklore of the Indian tribes of the coast, the glaciers and many special beauty-spots from a scenic point of view, as well as conducting passengers who may desire to go ashore at ports of call, and in addition will organize entertainments on board in the way of concerts, lectures, dances and card parties. They will see that passengers receive proper attention as to the baggage customs and immigration arrangements, railway connections, hotel accommodations, etc., and endeavor to make the voyage on the steamship of interest throughout its entire length.

Soldiers Would Agree With This.

Even Presbyterian ministers with Scotch names make jokes occasionally, sometimes unconsciously. In Peterborough one Sunday morning, recently, notice was handed the minister, written in one of those educated hands that are hard to make out. This notice was from an officer of the local battalion, and was gravely read to the congregation in the following manner: "The officers and men of the 'nth Battalion are very graeful to the ladies for what they have done, and wish to take this opportunity of informing them that they are in need of more Janes, and will the ladies please deliver them at headquarters." It is almost obvious that the minister had misread the word "jams," but it was too late to recall the error.

THE MEANEST MAN.

Montreal Social Workers Have at Last Struck the Limit.

Robert C. Dexter, General Secretary of the Charity Organization Society, told The Montreal Standard recently of the meanest man in Montreal, appropos of the man on Upper Esplanade avenue, whose two little girls were recently found hungry and half-frozen and who received ten cents a day from their father for their keep. The man Mr. Dexter refers to owns several houses, his wife is in delicate health, and he has three small children. He beats his wife often, and gives her twenty-five cents a week for household expenses.

"We tried to argue him into treating his family better," said Mr. Dexter, "but we simply could not move him, and so as a last resort we had him arrested quietly. He is being examined at the present time as to his sanity, while we are taking care of the wife and children, but I am doubtful in my mind about his mental condition, and really believe his action is caused by pure meanness on his part."

While there has been very little lack of employment this winter as compared with the last two winters, or poverty and misery due to that, Mr. Dexter's records show that there has been much more insanity, consumption, and wife desertion.

The insanity he ascribes to the general unrest that is prevailing on account of the war, which seems to have thrown the majority of people, and particularly young women into a state of intense nervous excitement. It is, in fact, amongst young women, and particularly those from the United States coming here for positions, that this has been noticed mostly.

What makes the thing worse is that the cases are not so violent that immediate action by the authorities can be urged, and much red tape which is necessary to send the girls that come here from the United States and suddenly become deranged, back to where they come from.

Wife desertion is due to somewhat similar influences.

There are hundreds of men who want to go where the fighting is and who are turned down at the medical examination of the army doctors.

They then try to obtain positions as helpers on transports and ships carrying horses and other war material so as to get to France, and the wives are left.

As to tuberculosis, that is mostly due to la grippe.

"Well-to-do people," says Mr. Dexter, "take care of themselves when they have la grippe, but working men and women, unable to stand reduction in their wages, keep on working, get pneumonia, and through the same inability to fight the grippe properly, allow the pneumonia to degenerate into consumption.

"We have looked after several cases, and amongst these we found one, where the father was very far gone, and where the only support of himself and three children was the mother, while the children looked after the father. We guaranteed the mother as much money as she was earning if she would stay home and look after the husband, following whatever instructions our doctors might give her, and let the children be cared for in such a manner that they would be safe from being impregnated with the disease.

"She agreed to do so, and whatever can be done to save the man is now being done.

"But in many cases the people refuse to do as we ask them to do.

"There was one case not long ago of a woman with children who was destitute and sick, but refused to go to the hospital although she was compelled by whatever illness she was suffering from, to stay in bed.

"Finally our visitor told her that unless she would do as she was told and have herself examined, she could not receive any help whatever, and after considerable arguing, she finally gave in.

"That insistence on the part of our visitor saved her life. At the hospital it was found that she was suffering from an aggravated case of appendicitis and that the appendix would surely have burst in another twenty-four hours.

Cross Has Arrived.

The Chevalier's Cross of the Legion of Honor bestowed on the late Captain George T. Richardson has arrived in Kingston. The cross is a most beautiful piece of work. Beside the cross and a picture of the late captain, a card bearing the following words is shown: "Presented to the late Captain George T. Richardson by the French Republic, 1916, for his country's sake, not for his own."

SPORTING NEWS

Ottawa has the lacrosse fever again. They will not only have a team in the N. L. U., but it is expected that a city league will be formed of four good junior aggregations.

The New London club of the Eastern League has purchased Pitcher Hearne of the Toronto club of the International League. Hearne was with the Pittsburg Federals last year.

Keith (Honey) Waugh writes his parents in Whitby that he has passed his examinations for the air service, obtaining first place. This has won him the rank of Flight Lieutenant and an appointment as instructor at Calshott Camp.

It is explained that Johnny Evers' failure to get banished in any game of the season so far is the result of a sore throat, which is rapidly yielding to treatment.

Jack Britton, of Chicago, wrested the world's welterweight championship title from Ted Lewis, of England, at New Orleans, when he was awarded a referee's decision over the Britisher at the end of a twenty-round bout. Dick Burke, of New Orleans, refereed the match.

Only six of the athletes who won world's championships for the United States at the Stockholm Olympic games of 1912 are now in competition, namely, Ted Meredith, Frederick Kelly, Patrick McDonald and Matthew McGrath, Alva Richards and Platt Adams. The others have either retired or turned professional.

The Ontario Jockey Club will not only give Canadians the preference in the employment of the men to operate the mutual machines at the Woodbine, but those already seeking their old positions have been informed that returned soldiers will be given the preference above all, which is no more than justice.

"Ty" Cobb, king of base stealers, and "Buck" Herzog, veteran infielder, believe that third base is the easiest cushion to steal. "Ty's" reason for thinking so is that runners can take a bigger lead off second than off any other sack. "Buck" says the runner is helped by the fact that the third sacker must take the ball at a hard angle and the runner has more room in which to slide around him.

Emilio Parlmero, the Cuban left hander, who was in the Canadian league, will be one of the Giants' regular pitchers in future. McGraw is convinced that the idol of Havana fans has the necessary quality and skill to win games in the National league. Palmero's work in the box against the Phillies on Thursday was called to the Cuban newspapers in detail at five cents a word.

Pitchers are badly needed by the Toronto club, and unless some of the negotiations now in progress do not result favorably the club will be in a sorry plight before the season is very old. The infield and outfield positions are well looked after, but this may be further changed. Birmingham may replace Reed. Wright and Trout are still competing for the third base job.

Gordon and Douglas Latimer, brothers, are two more Ottawa athletes to enlist. Gordon played with the Aberdeens, and also Douglas, the latter also rowing with the New Edinburgh war canoe championship crew. They came to Kingston May 4th to attach themselves to the 13th Brigade.

Gordon Johnson, rugbyist, hockeyist, and swimmer, has made a record in getting through the infantry course at Kingston in six weeks. Almost daily Ottawa athletes continue to enlist.

Neal Ball, the Toronto shortstop, has won out in his fight against playing for the Leafs, and this season will manage the Bridgeport club. President McCaffery, of the local club, made the sale last night, although he regretted parting with Ball, but at the same time didn't want any disgruntled players on his team.

The Bridgeport franchise was declared forfeited to the Eastern League, but at a meeting of that body on Monday at Boston, it was sold to new blood, and everything now appears to be on solid footing.

He Joined Up.

A Liverpool contemporary vouches for this story. Religious instruction was in progress at a Liverpool school, and the master asked:

"What did St. Paul do at Derbe?"

The reply given at any rate showed an appreciation of the present national situation, if not exactly an intimate acquaintance with St. Paul's achievements, for the answer was: "He joined up under the 'Derbe' scheme, sir."

Sleeping to Order.

The late Lord Alverstone could go to sleep at any time and wake up at a predetermined hour. This exceptional capacity has also been attributed to the great Duke of Wellington and to Lord Roberts.

Only One Athens Now.

There is and has been for many centuries only one Athens. But antiquity knew no fewer than nine cities or towns of that name in various parts of Greece, and even in the time of Plautus it was sometimes felt necessary to distinguish the great one as "Attic Athens." It was natural that Greek cities should take their name from Athena, the goddess of wisdom, warlike prowess and skill in the arts of life, who, according to some legends, herself founded the City of the Violent Crown. Others ascribed the naming of the city to Theseus or other mythical kings. The "s" of the termination is a real plural, for the city was given a plural name (Athenai), as being made up of several constituent parts.—London Chronicle.

Courting In Spain.

In sunny Spain etiquette is so very restrictive in the matter of courtship that it is a wonder that young people ever manage to get married at all. Even when, after many difficulties, the engagement is accomplished, the parents have a deciding voice in fixing the date, and, as they prefer long engagements, the wedding day is usually fixed somewhere in the dim future.

The best man and maid of honor are expected not only to fulfill the usual duties, but to contribute—sometimes very substantially—to the expenses of the wedding feast. Wedding cake is unknown, but instead packets of sugared almonds are distributed among the guests and sent by post to those who are unable to be present.

A Tiger Story.

There is a story current at Kuloang, central China, about a tiger which gave trouble in that quarter. A missionary and his wife had been worried by the tiger prowling nightly around their home. They determined to be rid of it and one night tied a cow up in the back yard and a dog at the front of the house. Then they armed themselves with guns and kept watch. The tiger appeared. The missionary fired and killed the cow. The wife rushed to see what had happened, and in her absence the tiger ate the dog.—Exchange.

"Ships of Fate."

As nuts are plentiful at this time of the year, the following game can easily be played:

Prepare as many half shells of walnuts as there are guests. In each fasten a small candle with a drop of wax.

Fill a tub with water, and before sailing the boats the water should be agitated, so as to have it wavy. Two at a time may sail their boats, lighting their candles as they do so. The life of the owner is prophesied by the seaworthy qualities of his ship.

If the storm overcomes the ship the owner will be wrecked by adversity. The ship sailing across the tub signifies a long sea voyage, while those remaining by the side show that the person loves home better.

If the two ships stay together throughout the trip the couple owning them will have a happy marriage. If they bump together that signifies a quarrel, and if they sail in opposite directions each person will lead a single life.

Watches for Heroes.

Secretary of Commerce Redfield sent to United States Shipping Commissioner Grant at Boston one gold and six silver watches awarded by the Canadian Government to Captain Lawrence Norris and the crew of the fishing schooner Josie, for "gallant and humane service" in the rescue of the captain and crew of the Canadian schooner Harry on May 28, 1915. British Ambassador Spring-Rice received the testimonials from the Canadian Government and presented them at the State Department. Secretary Redfield immediately forwarded them. The gold watch was given to Captain Norris and the silver watches to John Kenney, Thomas Powers, Patrick Gibbons, Samte Moulouson, Everett Moulouson, and George Hubbard, the rescuing crew.

Another "General."

They are telling a "good one" on Colonel Frederic Nicholls, of the Canadian General Electric Co. of Peterborough. One of the Colonel's friends passed him one day and said in the most natural way in the world, "Good day, General," and passed on. Colonel Nicholls stopped him and said: "Look here, I'm not a General, I'm only a Colonel." "Oh, I beg your pardon, Colonel. I was thinking of General Electric."

Port Hope Has A Bigamy Case

Mrs. Mary Dovey Has Acquired Too Many Spouses

PORT HOPE, April 28.—Mrs. Mary Davey appeared in the Police Court this morning, charged with bigamy. Mary is sixty-five years of age, and was more fortunate than some of her fair sex, having been married three times. Her first husband, Thompson, died several years ago, and then she was united in the bonds of matrimony to John Davey, of Bowmanville. Three years ago she left Davey because he would not support her, and since then has been working at the Royal Hotel. Another admirer, one Wm. R. Hoffman, a soldier from Peterboro', came along and won Mary's hand. On the 5th of February last Mary and William were united in marriage by the Rev. T. D. McCullough, the bride giving her name as Emma Thompson. John Davey, hearing of this marriage, hustled down from Bowmanville, laid information against his wife, and she appeared on a charge of bigamy. In the court this morning she pleaded guilty, and was sent down for two months.

The third husband, Hoffman, is "Somewhere in France."

PREPARE FOR NEW, WORLD

PARIS, April 28.—Special—President Poincare to-day personally welcomed the delegates to the International Commercial Conference assembled here for the first session of the Congress.

The object of the conference is to protect the trade and commerce of the Allied nations after the war. It is expected to result in a grand economic alliance such as the world has never seen before. Parliamentary delegates from all the nations in the Entente Alliance are in attendance.

IRISH CONDITIONS ARE PRACTICALLY UNCHANGED

Normal Telegraph, Telephone and Mail Service Not Yet Restored—Disturbances In Various Localities are Slight—No Heavy Fighting is Reported—Rebels Control Certain Sections of Dublin

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 29.—Although the story of the early hours of the Dublin uprising has now been disclosed in considerable detail, England is still without authentic information as to the pr[illegible] of later events. Normal telegraph, telephone and mail service with Ireland has not been restored, and the existing means of communication are subject to such strict censorship that it is possible to obtain only fragmentary information. Such news despatches as came through this morning added little to the information contained in last night's official advices and stories of eyewitnesses. So far as official reports show, the situation in Dublin is gradually being brought under control. The most important recent news, that rebels have been driven [illegible] of St Stephen's Green with[illegible] sustaining heavy losses [illegible] killed, wounded and prisoners, has not been confirmed officially. There seems to be no doubt, however, that the rebels are still in control of various pa[illegible] Dublin, and that street fighting [illegible] with a lengthening list of c[illegible]. It is reported the casualty list already exceeds one hundred. Of the situation outside of Dublin li[illegible] is known beyond the official admission that disaffection had spread t[illegible]rious localities in the west and s[illegible] French's statement [illegible] night [illegible]ed these disturb[illegible]s as local in character, and so fa[illegible]s has been revealed by information which has passed the censorship they have not been attended by heavy fighting.

Choquette's Much Criticised Speech

Explanations and Defence—Uses Warm and Interesting Langrage—Likes Robert Hazelton

OTTAWA, April 28.—When it was announced in the Senate yesterday that Senator Taylor wished to drop his question as to whether the Government intended to take any action in reference to the Montreal Star's editorial demand "that Choquette should be kicked out of the Senate," the Quebec Senator defended himself. "I do not care," said Choquette, "for the barkings of dirty dogs or blackmailers like Graham, of the Montreal Star, or Willison, of the Toronto News, but I would not degrade the Senate by raising a question of privilege. To have done so would have been an insult to the members of the Senate by indirectly admitting that my speech had been insulting to the soldiers of Canada, and that the Senate had listened to it without resenting it. If I had insulted these soldiers the leader of the Government in the Senate should have called me to order; but, on the contrary, when I spoke the first time in the Senate I praised and congratulated the soldiers and never said a word against them."

Stands by Hughes

He had been one of the first to congratulate General Hughes on the great work he had done in a few weeks in Quebec, and "now, when he has been accused and blackmailed, I still congratulate him upon his organization of the soldiers."

Senator Choquette said he had spoken on Jan. 19, but had not said a word against recruiting, but against increasing the authorized number of men for overseas. As a result, his brother, for ten years in the Immigration Department at Montreal, had been dismissed.

As for Robert Hazelton, of Todmorden, whose letter had been read in the Senate by Choquette, he was a man of character who had merely criticized the quality of the immigration which the Salvation Army had brought from the slums of London to Canada. He was an educated man and a courageous man who had put his back against the wall when attacked by a mob and sought to reason with them.

The Senator charged that newspapers had printed distorted versions of his speech, but, with the exception of two Conservative papers, had refused to publish his correction. He had written the Toronto Globe repudiating their accusation that he had cast slurs on the soldiers, and offering to appear at a public meeting in Toronto and disprove the charge that he had attacked the soldiers. The Globe had declined to publish his letter. "He had written to them more than once, and finally he had received this reply: "The Globe will not publish your letter. This is the third refusal; please regard it as final. (Signed) Lyon." Choquette said that in reply, he wrote: "Then you are a cowardly slanderer; regard this as final. (Signed) Choquette." Choquette denounced the attack of Hon. Mr. Kemp, the Acting Minister of Militia, as most unfair.

Senator Beaubien hoped that the explanation of Choquette would, to some extent, remove from the minds of the people of Ontario the belief that the opinions expressed by Choquette were those of the people of the Province of Quebec. In reading that letter in the Senate and putting it on record for publication, Senator Choquette had made himself responsible for it. The effect had been to set further apart the two great races of Canada, and that was a real crime. People who commit such crimes will stay branded for their act, he said.

Not Endorsed

Senator Gordon declared that Senator Choquette had no right to assume that, because English members of the Senate had not risen to contradict him they were in accord with his sentiments. Senator Daniel said the long explanation given by Choquette amounted to nothing but again showed that his remarks were an insult to the soldiers of Canada, and the whole English-speaking race.

KING IN CONFERENCE WITH ASQUITH AND KITCHENER

LONDON, April 29.—Special.—Considerable gossip was occasioned in local circles tonight over an official announcement that King George made a journey from Windsor to London this afternoon with the special purpose of a conference with Premier Asquith and Earl Kitchener, and immediately returned to Windsor.

The war council of the cabinet sat for two hours this morning and assembled again this afternoon for another long session, after which it was understood to have adjourned until tomorrow morning. Whether another cabinet crisis has arisen is not known.

Rapid Trial And Death For Casement Urged

He is Now Recognized in England as a Calculating Traitor

LONDON, April 28.—There is a fierce demand for Sir Roger Casement's rapid trial and execution. The evidence against him in his own writings and acts since the war began is now reported to have been supplemented by a complete statement furnished by him since his arrival in London.

When he first appeared as a German agent it was charitably supposed that he was mad, and it was commonly said that if captured he would by dealt with as insane, but his systematic scheme for corrupting the loyalty of the Irish soldiers, and the disclosure that he had been in communication with the German secret service since 1911, has disposed of the idea of lunacy, and has shown him, in English opinion, a calculating traitor.

The World's correspondent says Sir [illegible] identity was not recognized when he was first arrested, as he had greatly altered his appearance by shaving his beard and moustache. On his arrival in Dublin he was recognized and admitted his identity. He was even then in bad nervous shape, and steadily grew worse being now in a condition of collapse.

It is said he has expressed belief that the uprising in Ireland will be a failure on account of his capture. His leadership, he said, was necessary to its success.

EXCELLENT CONDITIONS IN PROVINCE OF ALBERTA

Canadian Press Special.

MONTREAL, April 29.—So far as Alberta is concerned, the weather conditions for farming in the districts served by the C.P.R. have been excellent, ploughing and seeding are general. The land is in good condition of moisture and the seed being put in is in first class shape. Along the main line and branches north to Red Deer and on the branches south of the main line, 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. of the seeding is completed.

Business conditions in Alberta are considered to be in better shape than at any time since the commencement of the war. There is a steady increasing demand in practically every line of staple goods. The past winter has been the best in the history of dairying. In Manitoba thirty creameries are working the entire twelve months of the year.

CASUALTY LIST INCREASES

Canadian Press Special.

LONDON, April 29.—British casualties this month compiled from published lists are slightly in excess of those in March. The total from all fields is 1,255 officers and 19,256 men, compared with 1,107 officers and 19,317 men in March.

SPIRITED ENEMY ATTACK REPULSED BY ALLIED FIRE

Liquid Fire Used By the Enemy—Hand Grenades Figure Freely In Attacks and By the Defence—Attempted Infantry Drive Nipped By Opposing Lines

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, April 29.—Afternoon statement—In the Argonne district a surprise attack executed last night at a point to the north of Four de Paris made it possible for us to clean up some of the enemy trenches and bring back some prisoners.

On the left bank of the river Meuse yesterday at five o'clock in the afternoon the German troops were massed in communicating trenches to the north of Hill 304 with the idea of attacking our lines. They were at once attacked with hand grenades and prevented from coming out, and then dispersed. Our artillery caused the explosion of a depot of munitions in the same region.

During the night there was a general bombardment in this sector, the fire being particularly spirited in the regions of Avocourt, Esnes and Hill 304.

On the right bank of the Meuse yesterday, after a violent preparatory artillery fire directed against our first lines, together with a curtain of fire of great intensity, the Germans delivered an attack against our trenches to the east of Thiaumont farm, in which they employed flaming liquids. Cut down by the shells of our artillery and the fire of our machine guns, the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses. At the same hour an attack upon our positions between Douaumont and Vaux also was checked by our fire. The remainder of the night passed in relative quiet on this part of the front.

In Lorraine we have repulsed a strong reconnoitering party of the enemy in front of the Wood of Banal, to the south of Domevre.

In the Vosges a small German attack with grenades against one of our trenches at La Chapellotte was effectively checked by a curtain of fire.

GASOLINE AT TWO CENTS PER GALLON

NEW YORK, April 28.—Louis Enricht, the aged inventor of Farmingdale, L.I., whose mysterious green gasoline at 2c per gallon is engaging the interests of motorists the world over, conducted no experiments yesterday, but spent most of his time explaining certain incidents of his past career which have come to light since his new automobile fuel brought him into public gaze.

The inventor with the long, white mustach admitted without hesitation that he had been in the courts several times, and that his name is really not Enricht, but Henricht.

Enricht has not made any definite deal with Henry Ford to take over his discovery. Gaston Plantiff, Ford's right-hand man in the east, had a long talk with Enricht, and then went to Detroit, where he will make a report to Mr. Ford. Plantiff will return Monday or Tuesday, probably with a definite idea of what Mr. Ford is going to do in the matter. Until his return Enricht will not even conduct any private experiments with his fuel, lest someone discover its nature.

RUSSIANS PUSH SOUTH IN MARCH ON DIARBEKR

PETROGRAD, April 29.—Special—The Russian war office reported today that the Russian forces are continuing their advance southward by the Bitlis region upon Darbekr. They have captured Sasun, a small but strong fort, built at a height of over 2500 feet, and due west of Bitlis. The garrison fled after holding the post only for a day.

Dublin Is In Flames

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, April 29.—A despatch received from Ireland this afternoon says Saskville and Grafton streets in Dublin are in flames and that artillery is being used in houses, the inhabitants having been removed. Street fighting continues and there is much looting, but the reinforcement of military is making steady progress. Most of the shops are closed and passenger communication is still cut off.

Uprising In Mexico Feared

It is Said The President is in Imminent Danger of Assassination—Villa in Evidence

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Special—Reports received within the past 24 hours at several of the European Embassies here have aroused grave apprehension in regard to the Mexican situation. These reports were to the effect that the Carranza Government is on the eve of a complete collapse, and that conditions in and around Mexico City are more threatening than they have been at any time since the overthrow of Porfirio Diaz.

Villa, the report shows, is fast assuming in the eyes of the Mexican populace the figure of a national hero. Availing themselves of this fact intriguers at the national capital and in the very household of Carranza are plotting for his overthrow. It is said that Carranza is in imminent danger of assassination.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST NINE BOMB PLOTTERS

Eight Germans Under Arrest, But Supposed Leader Is At Large

NEW YORK, April 29.—Special—The federal grand jury returned an indictment today against the eight Germans recently arrested on the charge of engaging in a conspiracy to place incendiary bombs on ships carrying munitions for the entente allies, and against Dr. Walter T. Scheele, president of the New Jersey Agriculture Chemical Company, the alleged leader of the conspiracy, who has not yet been arrested.

Kaiser Appeals To President

Begs Him To Maintain Friendly Relations with Germany—Sent For U. S. Ambassador

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Special—The true significance of Ambassador Gerard's visit to German Grand Army headquarters, where he will have an audience with the German Emperor, was explained yesterday in official advices from Berlin. The visit has been made at the Emperor's request in order to permit him to convey, through Ambassador Gerard, an earnest plea to President Wilson to maintain friendly relations with Germany.

No discussion of the submarine issue between the Emperor and the Ambassador is expected. Details of the negotiations and the framing of the German reply to the American note are now in the hands of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. The German Kaiser's message to Mr. Gerard will deal primarily with the necessity of averting war "between the friendly peoples," over what German officials here describe as "technical interpretations of international law," which could be satisfactorily adjusted by arbitration or by an international tribunal.

It is expected by those in touch with Berlin that the Emperor will appeal directly to President Wilson's firm belief in the doctrines of peace and arbitration, while adroitly indicating that severance of diplomatic relations would be universally regarded in Germany as a preliminary to actual hostilities.

No Commission On Contracts

Col. Carnegie Denies All Knowledge of "Rake-offs" on Shell Orders

OTTAWA, April 29.—Special.)—A sensation was sprung on the Royal Commission to enquire into the Kyte charges regarding fuse contracts at the close of the session yesterday afternoon when, after a long examination regarding details of contracts and other facts as to fuses, Mr. Hellmuth, counsel for the Government, suddenly turned on Col. David Carnegie, the ordnance expert for the Shell Committee, with the first direct questions regarding any rake-off or commission.

The sudden rapid fire of questions in this direct manner came as a complete surprise and took the Liberal members of Parliament and the counsel who are representing their views completely off their guard.

In a dramatic silence Col. Carnegie replied that he had never heard of any such a thing until he read of it in the Hansard reports of Mr. Kyte's speech in Parliament on March 27, when he made the charges against the Shell Committee and Sir Sam Hughes.

The affair was in every respect most enjoyable and the attendance was large. A beautiful spread was provided and heartily enjoyed by all present. After supper, brief addresses interspersed with music were given.

Macannish's Style.

"Publicity is the most pleasing thing in life," says Mr. A. S. Neill in "A Dominie's Log" (Herbert Jenkins), "and that's why patent medicines retain their popularity. At present the village cobbler is figuring in the local paper as a 'Cured by Bunkum's Bilious Backache Bunion Beans" example, and beneath his photograph (taken at the age of nineteen; he is fifty-four now) is a glowing testimonial which begins with these words: 'For over a decade I have suffered from an excess of Uric Acid, from Neurotic Dyspepsia, and from Optical Derangements. Until I discovered that marvellous panacea ——'

"I marvel at his improved literary style. It is only a month since he wrote me as follows: 'Sir, I will be obliged if you will let peter away at three oclock tonight hoping that you well as this leaves me I am your obidt servant peter Macannish.'"

A Mere Mushroom.

Sir Watkin Williams-Wynn, talking to a friend about the antiquity of his family, was told roughly that he was "a mere mushroom."

"How is that?" he asked, indignantly.

"Why," said the other, "when I was in Wales a pedigree of a particular family was shown to me which filled more than five large parchment skins, and near the middle of it was a note in the margin: "About this time the world was created.'"

Canadian Falcons.

Locating the Peregrine falcon was interestingly described by Dr. C. K. Clarke, Vice-President of the Canadian Society for the Protection of Birds, in his lecture recently in Toronto. This bird breeds in almost inaccessible places, and has rarely been found in Ontario, but Dr. Clarke cited three instances where he had come across it. Although not a very large bird, it has been known to carry away a duck much larger than itself without serious effort, the lecturer stated.

Made His Own Glasses

(New York Sun.)

The fact that his parents could not afford to buy glasses for him did not prevent a six-year-old boy, who was advised to wear glasses by a school inspector employed by the Indianapolis board of health, from supplying himself with a pair to relieve nearsightedness. When the boy was advised to wear glasses by the school inspector and when his parents told him they could not afford to buy them he made a pair.

He broke the bottom out of a milk bottle and obtained two thick pieces of glass. He then obtained a quantity of wire from a hat frame and constructed the frame. When the school inspector visited the school where the boy was studying he found him wearing the homemade spectacles.

The glasses were confiscated and taken to the office of the city board of health. The boy was then sent to an optometrist and will be supplied with glasses from the fund the health board has for that purpose. Dr. Herman G. Morgan, city sanitarian, said the boy's name would not be made public, because it is the policy of the board to do everything possible in orde not to 'embarrass aprentsr in such cases.

A BROTHER'S LAST TRIBUTE

The following excerpt of a letter from Signaller "Ted" Yeoman to his father, Dr H. A. Yeoman, of this city, explains in a concise manner, the work and death of his brother and chum, Horace E. ("Pat"), on the field of battle. While it is with regret that the Intelligencer publishes the following, it is also a pleasure to give to its readers the final tribute of a loving brother to one of Belleville's loyal sons. The letter:

"Pat has been putting his whole soul into his work as he has always done and since he was made Sergeant he has been the heart and soul of the telephonists' staff and has worked like everything to make them as efficient as possible. But he, as others, has been called on to make the supreme sacrifice for his country.

"Perhaps I should lead up to this in a gentler way, Dad, but I think you would rather I told you straight out. Pat was killed to-day by a shell that exploded near the battery lines. I am leaving it for you, Dad, to break it more gently to the others, for I cannot do it by letter.

"I am praying God who has seen best to take Pat away to a happier world that He will give you all strength to bear the news which though appearing so awful to us, is really the greatest blessing that God could give such a man as Pat.

He experienced no pain at all, but died without regaining consciousness five or ten minutes after he was hit. Perhaps it would be better now to give you more details.

The Germans shelled the battery heavily shortly after we moved in, but no one was hurt. I was doing duty at the telephone station in the wagon lines when Pat called me up and told me not to be alarmed if I should be unable to get the battery station at any time as the Germans were shelling heavily and the line was liable to be cut at any time. He remained at the 'phone about fifteen minutes, telling me where the shells hit. I had to attend to some work and had to leave the phone.

Pat then went over to the battery to see if everything was all right there. The shelling continued and those at the telephone hut got orders to leave the phones and take cover out of the shell area, so Pat, Harry Wiseman and Sergt. Evans ran off.

Hearing a shell whistle through the air they dropped to the ground (the only safety when in the open), but this shell hit almost on top of them throwing Harry in the air but without harming him. Sgt. Evans also was not hurt. They got on their feet and thought Pat was safe as he started to his feet as though getting up, but plunged forward and again fell to the ground.

First aid was attempted at once but was of no use for Pat died a few minutes after.

One fragment of the shell had slightly scraped his left side and another the fatal one had entered his neck in the hollow just under the left ear, passing through and upwards penetrating the brain.

They notified me at once and I hurried up at once but didn't arrive until it was all over.

I interviewed the chaplain who had charge of the remains, and he showed me all Pat's personal effects, including the three stripes he had worked so hard for. He will send them on to you through proper channels.

I then went down to where the remains had been placed awaiting burial and when I looked at his face, Dad, I knew he had passed away without any pain for it looked so peaceful that I would have thought he was sleeping quietly in his bed.

The remains are to be committed to the ground to-morrow at three. I was lucky in finding Ed O'Flynn by telephone and he and all Pat's old Belleville friends possible will be present.

I will write again to-morrow and tell you about the last service."

Why Germans Fail in Their Verdun Effort

Petain's Army Said To Have Become Self-hypnotized by Phrase" They Won't Pass

PARIS, April 28.—"The fundamental secret of French resistance before Verdun was psychological," said a high French officer, incapacitated from service by wounds, to our correspondent. "It was universal auto-suggestion on a vast scale. All were so self-hypnotized by the constant repetition of the phrase: 'They won't pass,' that no idea save that of resistance to the uttermost could enter their heads." Continuing his novel explanation of the French success, the officer said:

"Anyone familiar with crowd psychology must have noticed the immediate response of bodies of men to suggestion. Of all the peoples on earth the French are the most sensitive to such influences. Imagine, then, the result when General Petain transferred doubt and discouragement into iron determination when throughout the whole army flashed his resolution that the Germans should not get through. That is what enabled the infantry to undergo unexampled bombardments and then rush forward with the bayonet as eagerly as fresh troops. That is the explanation of the confidence in victory, seen even in captured Frenchmen, which has amazed their German captors.

"In all battles morale is present, but at Verdun it is literally the decisive factor."

The officer's theory is strengthened by a surgeon who spent five weeks in a dressing station close to the front.

"The most remarkable thing about the wounded," said he, "was their general attitude of determination. In some cases their faces seemed fixed in an expression of ferocious resolution, especially among those suffering from shell shock. I treated the wounded at Chalons in the Champagne offensive, but I never noticed a similar phenomenon there, though the majority of the soldiers were equally confident of victory. But at Verdun it was more than confidence; they appeared obsessed by the one dominating idea to the exclusion of everything else."

An American who visited the Verdun front made a similar observation. He said: "I saw one regiment coming back to rest after six days in the trenches. There was less laughter and talk than usual, but all seemed animated by an intense spirit of determination. When asked their opinion of the battle, the general reply was just "The Germans won't pass."

THREE YEARS' START

"Why do you always insist upon having the largest piece of pie, Harry?" asked the mother reprovingly. "Isn't your big brother entitled to it?" "No'm," said Harry; "he was eatin' pie three years before I was born."

CHAUFFEURS WAGE

A Good Medicine For The Spring

DO NOT USE HARSH PURGATIVES —A TONIC IS ALL YOU NEED

Not exactly sick but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches, and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as so many people do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you this is true. What you need in spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine makes new blood which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong. L. R. Whitman, Harmony Mills, N.S., says:—"As a tonic and strength builder I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills wonderful. My whole system was badly run down, and although I faithfully took a tonic given me by my doctor I could note no improvement. Then I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was soon restored to my old time health. I can most heartily indorse this medicine."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

SERGT. J. WILLIAMSON

The following letter referring to the death of Sergt. J. Williamson will be of interest to Intelligencer readers in that deceased was a brother of Mrs. P. C. McLaurin of this city:

W. Williamson Esq.,

Point Fortune, Que., Arpril 11, 1916.

Dear Mr. Williamson,—

It is with deep and sincere regret that I write of the death of your son Sgt. J. Williamson, who was killed in action early this morning, he was hit with a fragment of a German shell while cooly rallying his men. I cannot speak too highly of his great services to his King and Empire. He was always cheerful under the most depressing circumstances, willing at all times to undertake the most dangerous tasks and always displayed good judgment.

His loss is most keenly felt by all the officers, N.C.O.'s and men, for he was a great favorite with all. He died almost instantly. The stretcher bearers had given him first aid, and he was being moved on a stretcher, by his comrades, when he passed away.

Personally as Company Commander I was brought into very close touch with your son, and can testify to his personal bravery on all occasions. His passing is a great grief to me and whole we mourn we will surely ever remember his unselfish devotion to duty and the giving of his all to King and Country in the defence of those principles for which the British Empire stands to-day.

The officers, N.C.O.'s and men desire me to extend our sincere sympathy to you, sir, and the relatives of our late comrade Sgt. Williamson.

Believe me to remain,
Yours respectfully,
FRANK L BROWN,
Captain

FROM PTE. CHARLES DOYLE

France, April 8, 1916

Dear Mother, Brother and Sister— Just a few lines to let you know that I am well, and sincerely hope that you people are all the same. Tell Annie that I got her photo tonight; it was good, and she is looking fine, and so are the children. I hope I will see you all some day. This war is terrible and you can't imagine what it is like. Annie was telling me you were worrying over me, mother. Don't do that. I know it is pretty hard, but God knows best. I received those pretty verses and also the book you sent me. Annie was telling me that a lot of the Belleville boys were putting on the uniform. That is what will end this war. Tell them all to fall in line.

Well mother, it is getting very dark, so I will close, hoping to hear from you soon, also send along some papers.

Your loving son,
Pte. Charles Doyle.

Mrs. James Doyle has one son in France, one son in the 80th and one son in the 155th, and two sons-in-laws.

BELLEVILLE RIFLE ASSOCIATION SHOOT

Some wonderfully consistent shooting took place at the Armouries last night when the last monthly spoon competition was held, and also the final competition for the handsome 22 calibre target rifle, presented by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. Mr. Harry Day wins the rifle with the magnificent score of 100, a highest possible, which considering the conditions, is most creditable, and goes to show that our local talent can still hold its own with the best yet. Mr. Day also wins a spoon, with Mr. H. C. Thompson and Mr R Tannahill, both of whom have shown wonderfully improved form of late. Considering that seventeen members took part last night, the average of 94 must be considered extremely good. Highest possible score 100. Result:

THIS IS THE 635TH DAY THE BRITISH EMPIRE HAS BEEN AT WAR WITH GERMANY.

WHAT FORM WILL IT TAKE?

If present indications are to be accepted, it is apparent that the Allied nations will decline to entertain a peace policy which does not provide for the absolute eradication of Prussianism. It is increasingly evident that the time is not very distant when they will have the power to compel such a peace. Turkey is rapidly going to pieces. Bulgaria is comatose. Austria is gasping, and in Germany terrible anxiety is succeeding the confidence with which the war was begun. The German authorities, who themselves constitute the very Prussianism which must be destroyed, doubtless already realize their impending doom, but they will hold on till the last moment in the hope that some unexpected event will occur which will allow them to escape their fate.

The mass of the people of Germany do not yet know that they are beaten, although doubt is beginning to fill their minds with dire forebodings. They do not know the truth either in regard to military events or as to the barbarisms committed by German submarines and Zeppelins.

"There is little question but that the necessary destruction of Prussianism is what primarily stands in the way of peace," says an authority on military tactics. "Matters of boundaries, of restoration, of indemnity, if any, might be arranged. If it advantage her to do so, Germany will throw over Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria as lightly as she commandeered their services. But Prussianism itself will never consent to a destruction of Prussianism; that must come from outside of Prussianism."

There can be no doubt but what the terms of peace with a Republic of Germany erected by revolution upon the wreckage of Prussianism would be far easier than the terms which would be made with the existing German empire. The destruction of Prussianism from within would be both easier and less costly than from without; but either from within or without destroyed it must be.

SETTING IRELAND FREE.

That the United States Government had knowledge of the plot to land munitions on the Irish coast through the Von Igel papers and warned the British Government, which warning resulted in the capture of Sir Roger Casement and the German expedition, is the charge made by John Devoy, editor of the Gaelic American, says the New York Times. In a characteristic editorial Devoy declares that "The worst blow the insurgents received was the sinking of the German auxiliary cruiser with a load of arms and ammunition on board. The silence with which the first blow was delivered proved that the secret was well kept. There was no informer or British spy who was able to learn the plans of the insurgents, but that deficiency was supplied by the Washington Government, which paid the Irish handsomely for putting Woodrow Wilson in power and thus enabling him to do this timely service to his mother country, which is dearer to him than the one in which he was born."

Rumours are current that the Von Igel papers seized in the Wall Street office contained much material on the Irish situation. These reports persist, in spite of denials from officials connected with the Department of Justice. It is recalled, however, that the news papers last week had evidence of German intrigues in Ireland which was found among the documents now demanded by the German embassy, including letters which referred to "what a fine thing it would be for the world if Germany went over and made the Irish free."

In view of the fact that two Ottawa hotels have gone into the receiver's hands within the past few days, the temperance people and those who have been actively behind the abolish the bar movement may have a big problem forced upon them sooner than they expected. They accepted in some measure the responsibility of providing accommodation for the travelling public after the bars were closed, but if signs are not wrong, this responsibility is settling upon them sooner than looked for. If the banish the bar movement is to be a continued success and the accepted thing for this province, says the Ottawa Free Press, good hotel accommodation must be provided, and the temperance people and the Ontario Government cannot act too quickly to secure this.

The Dublin riots are to be deplored as most unfortunate, but it is just as well that the disloyal forces have shown their hand. In doing so, they have shown the authorities how to suppress the trouble. It was expected that the smouldering fire in Ireland would burst into flame. It has. But what is now recognized as an elaborate and daring conspiracy, aided by Germany, was niped in the bud when Sir Roger Casement's venture came to grief, and latest advices from Ireland tell us that the situation is satisfactory. From the standpoint of the enemy, the expected "Irish rebellion" is already a fiasco and Germany has played another card to no purpose.

The right of an armed merchantman without losing its peaceful character to protect itself either by flight or resistance—is insisted upon by the United States Government. On the other hand, the attacking vessel must display its colours before exercising belligerent rights: and while it may use force against a resisting merchant ship, the attack must cease as soon as the resistance stops. Only when it is impossible to take the captured enemy merchantman into port may it be sunk, and in such case the persons on board must be put in a place of safety.

Montreal Herald-Telegraph: Sir Charles Fitzpatrick's speech in Montreal on the Irish attitude provides a good tonic for every loyal British subject. It is inspiring to know that the noble sentiments he expressed represents the feeling of the vast majority of the Irish people. The stand which the Irish leaders are taking in the present troublous situation shows what they think of the rebel minority who are doing their best to besmirch the good name of Ireland at a time when not only the Empire but civilization itself is at stake.

Current Comment

Germany was most indignant at Britain's seizure of von. Papen's papers. The attempt of German spies to steal mail from the British consulate at New York shows the gentlemanly methods of the polite Hun.

The revolt which broke out in Dublin Monday has spread to other parts of Ireland, chiefly to the west and south. This information, together with the fact that the rebels are still in possession of parts of the city of Dublin, has been given to the nation by the Ministers in Parliament.

It took a Chicago Circuit Judge to decide off-hand the puzzle that has bothered some of the brightest minds of a century or more. Bacon, not Shakespeare, he rules, wrote the plays Somebody should now ask him who started the war. It would be a shame to let such omniscience go to waste.

The Poets' Corner

HOW CAN YOU SLEEP?

How can you sleep, Lord of the Teuton race,
When in the night, alone, you have to face
The Voice of Conscience, that with bated breath
Whispers—or does it sob?—the one word, "Death!"
Kaiser, how can you sleep?

How can you sleep, when over all the land
Are broken hearts, broken by your command;
The homes of thousands crumbling into dust,
And all to satisfy Ambition—Lust;
Kaiser, how can you sleep?

How when you see your troops go marching by;
And know how many of them soon must die;
Brave men, but falsely taught the "Hymn of Hate."
How can you send them forth to such a fate?
Kaiser, how can you sleep?

Kaiser, some day the people of your race
Will learn the lesson—learn to hate the face
Of him who preaches War—and in that day
Peace will return — and peace will come to stay.

TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS

JOHN A. THIRTYACRE.

TESTIMONIAL.

I swallowed a large tack in April, 1910, and it lodged in my lung. This developed into tuberculosis. Four doctors treated me but I gradually became worse. Then my sister learned of Nature's Creation and got the medicine for me. When I began taking Nature's Creation, I was having night sweats continually, pains in my chest and both lungs. Several physicians said I could not live over 30 days. After taking the first bottle of Nature's Creation, a wonderful improvement was noticeable and I continue to improve. Weighed 107 pounds; now 150, and never have had any return of the old trouble.

CHAPTER VI.
Blood Thicker Than Water

The white walls of the Signal Tower gleamed from the summit of the hog-backed ridge of Gibraltar, twenty-five years after the great Lisbon earthquake.

Looking eastward to the Mediterranean, sheer precipices went down a thousand feet to the water. On the north another grim wall frowned on the low, sandy isthmus which connects the great rock with Spain. To the west and south there was just enough slope in a series of precipitous steps to afford foothold for the batteries of "Willis's."

Under the muzzles of the guns nestled the town of Gibraltar, protected in front by the Old and New Moles, with their batteries at the water's edge. The sandy isthmus at the north was marked with lines of earthworks, hardly to be seen from the town. A stranger would have thought all peaceful in the harbor, but those low banks of sand were the worst menace Gibraltar had yet had in seventy-five years of sieges.

For the place was strictly blockaded, and a general bombardment was expected to open almost any hour.

In the light of a glorious afternoon the lookout at the top of the hill signalled the Old Mole battery, and the officer of the guard read the message from the signal book.

"A brig trying to run the blockade. We may have a chance to scale a gun or two, sergeant."

A party of the Seventy-third—McCloud's—Highlanders was on duty at the battery, and the officer who spoke was a gentleman who had recently exchanged into the regiment, where he had the disagreeable distinction of being the only Englishman among a number of poor, proud and very jealous Scots—Highland and Lowland.

As he laid down the book he saw that several blockaders were stretching out to sea to meet a white speck on the horizon.

The wind was blowing freshly into the harbor, and within half an hour the speck had resolved itself into a small, swift brig, which could be plainly seen from the battery, coming on like a race-horse.

The blockaders were tacking to and fro to meet her, as she yawned from side to side to confuse them as to her real point of passage.

A French frigate that had gone out first, was the swiftest of the pack of hunters, and followed every movement as the hound follows the scent.

But the strange brig seemed to be very swift and well handled, for she eluded all the ships that were trying to intercept her, and ran within range of the Mole before the French frigate could get close enough to fire a gun.

And when this occurred, the young officer of the guard went to where Sergeant McPherson—a brawny, hard-featured Scot, with a shag of red hair on his bare legs as thick as the fur of some animals—was standing by a heavy gun, and told him to "try a shot at the Frenchman."

The order was given none too soon, for the brig was covered with the spray from the French shots as McPherson sent a thirty-two pounder cannon ball with so good an aim that he struck the heel of the Frenchman's foremast, and sent him to the right-about in double-quick time to avoid a second visitation.

Ten minutes after, the brig had rounded to at the Mole, and a boat was shooting from her side, in the stern of which was distinguished the uniform of a British officer of the staff.

The young ensign who had command of the battery picked up the telescope he had by him for signalling purposes, and took a look at this man who came in at such risk.

Something he saw astonished him greatly, for he put down the telescope, raised it to his eye again, as if doubtful of his vision, and muttered under his breath:

"Who the deuce could ever have thought of seeing him here? This is uncommonly awkward."

He was interrupted in his soliloquy by the strident voice of the officer of the day, Captain Matthew Fraser—a Scotch martinet—who hated him for no other crime but being an Englishman, and who, delighted to have an opportunity to find fault, broke out:

"Weel, Mr. Seymour, I must say that for a young gentleman that's been in the sairvice as long as ye have, I'm surpreesed at ye."

Seymour faced round on him, asking:

"Why, what have I done now?"

"It's no what ye hae dune, sir," blurted the irate Scot, "but what ye haven't dune. Hae ye nae mair sense than to leave thae puir men standin' at the guns all day, when the duty for whilk they were brocht here is over? Dismiss the men at yance (once), sir, and gang doon to the Mole to gie you officer a proper reception. Dinna ye see he's an officer of the staff, maist probabloo wi' important dispatches for the general? On me conscience, Master, Seymour, I'm thinkin' we'll ne'er make a soger of ye."

And the captain strutted awy.

As soon as he had dismissed the men, Seymour took his way to the Mole with a slow and reluctant air, arriving at the water-steps as the boat reached it, and the strange officer got out.

The glittering aiguillettes on the breast announced him, as Fraser had said, to be an officer of the staff duty, and the moment he saw Seymour he exclaimed, in tones of great surprise:

"Herbert Seymour, as I live! Why, my dear boy, this is an unexpected pleasure. I am ever so glad to see you!"

Whether the pleasure was mutual could hardly be told, for Herbert Seymour took the offered hand with an air of some constraint, and said, without any great effusion of manner:

Lord Neville, I am glad you got through safely. I am ordered to take you to General Elliott."

The other—a young man about his own age, or a little younger, handsome and lively in expression—stared at him a moment, as if surprised at the cold tone, and then burst out:

"Why, Cousin Herbert, what are you talking about? Confound it, man! there is no need for us two to look glum because our governors hate each other. 'Lord Neville' and 'Mr. Seymour' had better be dropped, as they were at Eton. Blood's thicker than water, cousin—isn't it?"

His frank young face showed he meant what he said, and Herbert Seymour could no. resist it, though he had been brought up by his father, Oliver Seymour, with all the bitterness of feeling that gentleman had felt from the day Lord Warwick married his steward's daughter to prevent Oliver from succeeding to the title.

Herbert had inherited from his mother a better disposition than Oliver could boast, and it stood him in good stead now in meeting his cousin's frank advances, as he replied, with more cordiality than he had hitherto shown:

"Cousin George, no one regrets more between our families; and if you are willing, I will be a cousin to you in deed as well as name."

The young lord squeezed his hand warmly.

"It's a bargain," he said.

Then, as they went up the steps, he added:

"Do you know it gave me a shock, to see you just now. When did you join McCloud's? I thought you were in the Twenty-fifth."

Herbert nodded.

"I was. But don't speak of it too loud. I exchanged into the Highlanders on purpose to get into active service. My father—you know he is peculiar—is anxious I should never run into danger, so he does not know it yet."

Lord Neville burst into a laugh as he got to the top of one flight of steps, only to behold another before him, Gibraltar being chiefly composed of steps.

"Well, by Jove, Herb," he cried, "they are as like as two peas. Your father is always wishing I should die for your sake; and mine is just as anxious to read your funeral notice in the papers, for my sake. If they thought we were both here together, what a row there would be! My governor would be half mad with anxiety, for fear you would put poison in my tea, or stick a knife into me some dark night; and I make no doubt your father would be just as uneasy if he knew I was here."

"But how did you get here?" asked the other, as they rested at the esplanade of Willis' Battery, before approaching the governor.

To be Continued.

The British Government is giving $2,500,000 a month to keep Belgium from starvation. A dollar a month from every Canadian able to give would solve a big problem.

Belgians Are Still In Dire Need Of Food And Clothing
Conditions Grow Worse rather than Better in the Martyr Kingdom

How our sensibilities have been dulled by nearly two years of war news! A few thousand men swept away by the "curtain of fire" in a frontal attack—a merchantman or a hospital ship torpedoed—a score or more fallen victims to the baby-killing Zeppelins—these no longer excite or impress us. Perhaps it is well, for our interest or sympathy could do nothing to prevent these horrors of war.

FLOUR FROM CANADA

But are we becoming equally callous about sufferings which we could alleviate? Are we losing interest in the millions of hungry Belgian mothers and children, left in the power of the ruthless Huns, and becoming more dependent every day on our help? Is our sympathy for them evaporating?

God forbid that, grown familiar with tales of suffering, we should fail to respond to this urgent appeal from the Belgian Relief Commission to support the magnificent work they are doing.

Every day they provide an allowance of food, meagre enough, it is true, but still sufficient to support life, to nearly three million destitute Belgians who would otherwise have to go without. The continuance of the supply depends on us! Will you do your share?

Why We Should Save And How

A pamphlet has been issued by the Parliamentary War Savings Committee in Britain entitled "Why We Must Save and How." As it is intended to illustrate the possibilities of saving by all classes there are necessarily many hints calculated to be of value the world over and especially in affiliated countries. In the first place it combats the notion that those people who spend all they make are necessarily benefitting trade. On the contrary those who save wisely advantage themselves, their neighbours and their country. Spending money on luxury gives a certain amount of employment, but nothing like the employment that investment in desirable and necessary articles does. The best way to convey the meat in this useful and timely pamphlet would seem to be to summarize its contents in brief, emphatic sentences, as follows:—

Thrift is a national duty, so that the money thus saved may be invested with the Government.

The more goods we buy at home and the more we make and send abroad the richer the country becomes.

Every dollar borrowed abroad that might be obtained at home means money going out of the country.

By devoting all our energies to producing things useful and abandoning the purely ornamental and the luxurious we are helping the country.

The only money judiciously spent is that, that keeps ourselves in health of mind and body and that by investment in productiveness helps in the progress of the land and the country.

Women are the main power in the campaign for thrift. As leaders of the home they can best foster economy in food and clothing.

Reduction in meat-eating might be generally practised without loss of strength.

Cheese is one of the best and most wholesome substitutes for meat.

Economy and good digestion are aided by never eating bread that is not at least 24 hours old. Ten per cent. of the cost of bread would be saved by rigidly adhering to this simple practice.

Fewer courses at dinner would not mean any wearing on the health, but less work and more saving.

It is in dress that women could best economize. Simplicity of material does not mean less attractiveness.

Excessive expenditure on weddings and funerals should be avoided.

Labour released from the manufacture and sale of things that can be dispensed with is available for other and more useful work.

Expenditure on golf, tennis and other games of pleasure could be beneficially curtailed.

The giving of presents on all trivial occasions is to be discouraged and, when given, they should be of an inexpensive and useful character.

Presents and gifts might take the form of war-loan vouchers.

Much money might be saved by spending less on hobbies.

Neighbors could benefit each other by systematically combining to buy food in quantities and sharing it.

Economy to-day means riches in the future.

The only luxury the Empire can afford is victory.

Wife Heard Dying Soldier Call Her

Mrs. James E. Gillard Related Her Exserience on Late Husband Died—Called "Laura" Three Times

MONTREAL, April 28.—To hear her husband calling to her three times distinctly on the same night he died of wounds in France is the strange experience of Mrs. James E. Gillard, of 1028 St. Andre street. Pte. Gillard, who was in yesterday's list, succumbed to gunshot wounds, which penetrated the abdomen and shoulder, on Palm Sunday, April 16. At two o'clock Sunday morning Mrs. Gillard said she was reading in her bedroom when clearly and distinctly she heard him call "Laura Laura." Just as she realized that it was her husband calling she heard it again, less distinctly, calling "Laura." She jumped up and turned around, only to find herself looking out of an open window into the night. Then her nerves, strung by many sleepless nights of worry, gave way completely, and the other members of the family found her calling out wildly to her husband.

Next morning she was inclined to view the occurrence calmly, although she marked down the day and hour and as the days passed bringing another cheerful letter from her husband she gradually thought less of it. Then the official telegram from Ottawa arrived Wednesday night telling her that her husband had died the same day.

"Ever since it came," said Mrs. Gillard last night, "I have been walking around in a dream. I just can't believe that he is dead. His letters were so cheerful, and in all of them he always said that "the scrimmage," as he called it, would soon be over and he would be coming home. Why in his very last letter," she said, her eyes filling with tears, "he told me to cheer up and not worry, as the scrimmage would be over soon and he was looking forward to sailing up the St. Lawrence to Montreal—God's country. Nor can his mother believe it, because he always spoke so surely of coming back. He was a good boy and we'll miss him. And our little boy was born just two months after he left. He always wanted a boy, and I know he was longing to see him."

Pte. Gillard enlisted November 11 and sailed on May 11, and died just 11 months after he enlisted. He was 42 years old and a gold finisher in book binding establishments by trade. At the time of his enlistment he was secretary-treasurer of the Book-binders' Union, a delegation of which called on Mrs. Gillard last night. He was popular with the fraternity, and particularly football. He was a member of the Strathcona Football Club.

In his last letter he made use of the same phrase used by several other Montrealers recently killed or wounded, saying that they were to be moved to "a hotter part of the line." He also stated that there was nothing startling to report except that "we captured a Hun in our wire entanglements, which are outside our front line of trenches. He is a big man, and had a nice bomb and revolver, but he did not have time to use them before our boys got him. I am still hale and hearty. The mud, of course, is still with us, although the weather is clearing up. Tell Buddie I hope she is getting along fine at school, and that she and Rita do not forget papa, as he never forgets them!"

Mrs. Gillard's two brothers have also enlisted. Pte. James Arthur Taylor, aged 17, is at Levis, and Pte. Herbert J. Taylor is with the 148th. Two little girls are left with their mother.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS
Relieve Constipation while Healing the Kidneys

Gin Pills have an almost world-wide reputation as a Kidney medicine—their healing, cleansing, soothing effect has earned unstinted praise from thousands.

But their virtues do not end with the relief of Kidney and Bladder Troubles. Gin Pills are excellent for the relief of constipation. We have hundreds of testimonials from people telling us they have found that in taking Gin Pills for Kidney and Bladder trouble, the Gin Pills also acted as a gentle cathartic and bowel stimulant.

This is only logical, as in building up a medicine to restore the Kidneys to perfect health, the bowels must receive attention as the other organs of excretion.

If you are constipated, you will find the real relief you desire in the use of Gin Pills, which will also regulate your kidneys even though you have so far failed to notice alarming symptoms of trouble in these organs.

Your dealers sell Gin Pills at 50 cents a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50.

Obsequies of Rev. Amos Campbell

Impressive Service For Aged Patriarch In Church Work—Eulogies by Fellow Ministers—Body Laid At Rest In Belleville Cemetery

At one o'clock yesterday afternoon the remains of the late Rev. Amos Campbell, who passed away here on Tuesday night were conveyed from his late home on Victoria Avenue, to the Tabernacle Methodist Church, where for one hour they lay in state and were viewed by many, not only from the city, but the surrounding country.

At 2 o'clock an impressive service was held, conducted by the Rev. H. B. Kenny of Cobourg, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, and a former pastor of the Tabernacle church. There was a large number present at the service, and many ministers were in attendance, occupying seats about the pulpit. All the Methodist ministers of the city attended, and some of them took part in the service. Rev. Mr. Kenny was arrayed in his khaki uniform, as he has enlisted and will go overseas with a Canadian Battalion. Other ministers of Evangelical churches in the city were present, including Rev. A. M. Hubly of the Reformed Episcopal church, and Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrew's church.

The remains were placed in front of the pulpit, and upon the casket and altar railing were numerous floral tributes from relatives and friends.

The services were opened with invocation by Rev. Frank Anderson of Ameliasburg, followed by the hymn "How Sure a Foundation." Rev. S. A. Duprau of Belleville offered up an appropriate prayer.

The quartette of the church choir rendered most harmoniously and with effect a selection entitled "Beulah Land." Rev. R. I. Edwards read as a lesson the 23rd Psalm, following which the hymn "Forever With The Lord," was sung.

Rev. Mr. Kenny in a few appropriate words stated that the deceased had for some time lived on the border land and had now entered into the rewards of his labor.

Rev. S. C. Moore, pastor of the Tabernacle church, spoke eulogistically of the deceased, stating that his personal acquaintance with Rev. Amos Campbell had been limited only about a year. In that brief period he (the speaker) however, had been able to be closely identified with the deceased. He was a man of wisdom and characteristic tack. He was a wise, thoughtful and tactful friend. No man was more true, loyal or ready than the deceased, and he was a devotional man. He was deeply interested in the Tabernacle church, religiously, financially and socially. The Rev. gentleman here read a lengthy tribute to the departed saint from Rev. Dr. Dyer, who was for many years Principal of Albert College.

Rev. W. G. Clark of Bowmanville, a former pastor of the Tabernacle church, pronounced a beautiful and touching eulogy of the deceased, whom he characterized as one of nature's noblemen. He (the speaker) had known Rev. Amos Campbell all his life and he was a man who loved children and everybody else. He was a sympathetic man in every respect, and generous. He was in fact a soul of geniality and sociability. He was a great financier and a great laborer. He raised money for the glory of God. He was a man of strong religious belief, and was a great man in body and soul. He loved supremely God and His people, and especially did he love the Tabernacle church. That church is a monument to his worth. The Tabernacle church and its worship was his peculiar joy. He loved that place of God and was always attendant at its religious service. In every social gathering deceased, with his beloved widow, was a great helper. He is now gathered in the courts of the Lord forever. His was a unique life. His memory will ever be revered. He was one of earth's great men, and he had been gathered to his reward.

Rev. Dr. Baker, Principal of Albert College, spoke at some length upon the virtues of the deceased, his worth and life to the church of his choice. He (the speaker) had known Bro. Campbell for years, and to know him was to love him. It was always a joy and an inspiration to meet and converse with him. Know ye not that a Prince and a great man has this day fallen in Israel, Rev. Amos Campbell.

He was a prince in finance, everything he touched seemed to turn to gold. He was successful in church finance and in his own finances, but not in a selfish way. He was not coveted, but in helping others he helped himself. He was a leader in giving and his hand was open for giving to all worthy objects and especially for church purposes. His heart was open for all worthy objects. He came to the rescue of Albert College, and as Bursar had done much for that institution of learning. Besides a financier he was loyal to the church and his God. Rev. Amos Campbell was a great revivalist and through his efforts numbers were led to the feet of Jesus. His love for humanity was proverbial, and in this atmosphere he abode. He was a great man in his home, and his door was ever open to all who desired to go in and commune with him. He was a most upright man and always walked in the fear of the Lord, and he was now enjoying blessed rest from his labor.

Rev. H. B. Kenny, in concluding the services, referred to the fact that the departed had lived his life, and was gone to receive the reward of the faithful. His life would long live in the hearts and memory of all citizens of Belleville. He (the speaker) had known deceased personally for years and loved him. He was ever solicitous for the good of mankind, honored God and served him faithfully. He was gone but his memory would remain.

The service was brought to a close by the singing of the hymn, "Servant of God Well Done," and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Mr. Egan.

As the remains were being taken out of the church the Dead March in Saul was played upon the organ.

The remains were then conveyed to the Belleville cemetery and laid away in the tomb, to await the resurrection of the just. At the grave Rev. Mr. Kenny and Rev. Mr. Moore officiated. The bearers were six ministers, namely: Revs. W. G. Clarke, J. N. Clarry, H. S. Osborne and Dr. Baker of Belleville; M. W. Jones of Foxboro, and J. E. Robeson of Shannonville.

The following, which is kindly furnished by Rev. Dr. Baker, President of Albert College, is in a condensed form, the career of the deceased:

Rev. Amos Campbell was born in Camden Township, County of Lennox, on the first of January, 1832. When a young man he entered Albert College, and there prepared himself for the teaching profession, which he followed for some years. In 1863 he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he gave many years of faithful and arduous service, being stationed on the following circuits, Brighton, Madoc, Stirling, Sidney, Belleville, with a second term at Brighton. During his second pastorate at Brighton he was appointed presiding elder, and six weeks later was called to the bursarship of Albert College, and for eight years remained connected with college work. Failing health forced him to resign from this position, and seek a much needed rest. He returned to the active work of the ministry, and was stationed at Deseronto, a second time at Stirling, and at Belleville North. From this charge he superannuated in 1895, and since that time had been a resident of Belleville, and an active member of the Tabernacle church.

Whether he served as teacher, preacher, presiding elder, or bursar of the College, the late Amos Campbell exhibited exceptional qualities of head and heart that won him success in every department of his work. Possessed with magnificent physical strength, he threw himself into his work with such zeal that multiplied demands were continually being made upon his time and energy, for work outside his own personal charges. His clear-headed financial ability made him a notable figure in enterprises where money was needed. In the dark days of Albert College, financially, he came to the rescue, and as bursar succeeded in lifting the burden, though at the cost of his health.

Not only was Amos Campbell lavish in the gift of himself, body, mind and heart, to every good cause, but he was also generous in the distribution of his material substance. A noble citizen, a true friend, a faithful minister of the gospel, a courageous leader in all moral reform has passed from our midst. Truly we may say that "a prince and a great man hath fallen."

Pope Anxious But Salient

Watches U-Boat Controversy With Grave Concern

LONDON, April 28.—A despatch to the Daily Chronicle from its correspondent at Rome says: "I am informed that the Pope is daily following closely every stage in the controversy between America and Germany but, adhering strictly to his policy of neutrality, has not expressed any opinion regarding the merits of the dispute. Much less has he used, or will he use, his influence on either side. His Holiness, however, is gravely concerned; in the first place, because he is relying on the influence of America, which he has hitherto described as pre-eminent among the neutral nations of the world, to move when the time comes for peace, and, secondly, because a rupture in diplomatic relations between the two nations would hinder the magnificent work being done by America on behalf of sufferers through the war, and especially her diplomatic efforts on behalf of prisoners of war.

"In this connection, I am informed that in case of a rupture, the Pope will endeavor to organize more thoroughly the present activity of Catholic bishops throughout Europe to safeguard the well-being of prisoners in the various concentration camps."

A British officer inspecting sentries guarding the line in Flanders came across a raw-looking yeoman.

"What are you here for?" he asked.

"To report anything unusual, sir."

"What would you call unusual?"

"What would you do if you saw battleships steaming across the field?"

"Sign the pledge, sir."

CANADA WAS TO BE INVADED BY GERMAN RESERVISTS

$14,000,000 Contributed By Teuton Sympathizers For This Purpose, According to This Amazing Tale

NEW YORK, April 27.—Max Lynar, who includes the name of Count London among his aliases, and whose activities have included desertion from the United States army, told a long and melodramatic story to Assistant District Attorney Minton to-day about the collapse of the German plot to invade and seize Canada with an army of 120,000 German reservists financed by a $14,000,000 contribution from German sympathizers.

Lynar had just been sentenced to not less than six months or more than three years in the penitentiary for bigamy when he sent for Mr Minton and volunteered an amazing tale. He insisted that the facts were known to many reputable persons, and that he himself had placed in the hands of ex-Secretary for War Lindley M. Garrison the perfected plans to seize Canada.

Throught German-American interests the plans were made in 1914, he said, and a fund of $14,000,000 was subscribed to carry out the details. Secret meetings were held in New York, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Detroit and Milwaukee and other large cities and at these meetings, Lynar asserted, it was agreed that a force of 150,000 men, mostly German reservists was available to seize and hold the Welland Canal, strategic points, munition-centres and so on. Of this number 120,000 were to be sent into Canada to garrison these points for the Kaiser.

"We had it arranged," said Lynar, with apparent seriousness, "to send our men from large cities following announcements of feasts and conventions, and I think we could have got near enough to carry out our plans had it not been for my arrest on the charge of bigamy. The troops were to have been divided into four divisions with six sections. The first two divisions were to have assembled at Silver Creek, Michigan. The first was to have seized the Welland Canal, the second was to have taken Windmill Point. The third was to have gone from Wilson, N.Y., to Port Hope, Canada. The fourth was to have proceeded from Watertown, N.Y., to Kingston, Canada. The fifth was to have assembled near Detroit and land near Windsor. The sixth section was to have been used to leave Cornwall and take possession of Ottawa.

It had been planned to buy or charter 81 excursion and small boats to use in getting into Canada. All of the equipment was to have been put aboard the boats and when quarters of 120,000 men had been found it would have been easy to continue the expedition. The German Government was cognizant of the plan, and maps, etc., were to have been furnished by the German Government.

French Hair Dressers are Clever

Scientists in France have given much study to the care of the hair, and nowhere in the world do men, women and even children have such luxuriant hair.

It was Dr. Sangerbund, of Paris, who discovered that falling hair, faded hair and dandruff were caused by germs, and it was a Frenchman that first gave to the world a hair tonic that would destroy the germs.

Since the introduction of Parisian Sage into Canada the people have learned that dandruff can be quickly abolished, that falling hair or thin hair is unnecessary, and that everybody can have an abundant head of vigorous hair, full of life and beauty.

PARISIAN SAGE

It is because Parisian Sage works such wonders that the sale all over Canada is phenomenal. It is guaranteed to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

Parisian Sage costs 50 cents a large bottle at your druggist's. The Girl with the Auburn Hair is on every package.

For aches, pains, rheumatism, etc., try Parisian Mustard Cerate. Its effect is wonderful. Use in place of mustard plasters, poultices or hot applications. Will not blister. 25c. a tube.

How the Blood Is Purified

By the Searching and Painstaking Work of Healthy Kidneys.

In its circulation through the body the blood not only carries nutrition to the cells and tissues, but also collects the waste material resulting from the breaking down of cells and tissues, the ashes left by the fire of life.

In due course the blood passes through the kidneys to be purified of these poisonous impurities, and these filtering organs extract each day about 50 ounces of liquids and 2 ounces of solids, 500 grains of urea and 10 grains of uric acid, the material which is found in rheumatic joints.

Sudden changes of temperature throw a great strain on the kidneys, but it is overeating and drinking that are the usual cause of trouble. In a vain effort to remove the excess of waste matter the kidneys break down, uric acid and other poisons are left in the blood and the whole system is poisoned by impure blood.

Pains in the back and limbs, severe headaches, lumbago and rheumatism are the natural result. Hardening of the arteries, excessive blood pressure, weakening of the heart's action, Bright's disease may be anticipated unless prompt action is taken.

We like to think of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as preventive treatment, for by their timely use you can readily prevent all these dreaded disorders. Unlike other medicines for kidney troubles, they awaken the action of liver and bowels as well as the kidneys, and thereby effect a prompt cleansing of the whole filtering and excretory systems.

There is no way by which the action of the kidneys can be so quickly aroused and the blood cleansed of impurities as by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. It is therefore the greatest of blood purifiers and much sought for at this time of year, when everybody feels the need of a medicine to cleanse from the system the accumulation of poisonous matter.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations disappoint.

SILVER NOW HIGHEST IN COBALT'S HISTORY

The silver production of Cobalt in 1915 was 23,653,913 ounces, and the average price for silver for the year was 40.6 cents an ounce. Yesterday silver rose to 69 cents in New York an advance of 1 3-4 cents an ounce over night. The average price of silver for 1916 promises to run well above 70 cents, but if only 70 cents is admitted the return to Cobalt companies this year will be $2,750,000 above that of the previous year. This is, of course, admitting only a like production, but as the output was curtailed because of lower silver values in 1915, it is fair to assume that the production this year will be much larger. In the palmy days of the early Cobalt the high price for silver was less than 67 cents an ounce, and some comparison of stock values of the shipping companies might be drawn therefrom.

Yesterday was perhaps the first day that investors in silver stocks showed a disposition to review the new order of conditions. Timiskaming, which had slowly advanced to 67 cents, made a sudden spurt to 70 cents. La Rose, however, made a significant rise of 17 points from 60 to 77. New York reports that it is very difficult to get prices set for future deliveries of silver, and any present offerings are being bought by speculating investors who prefer to buy the white metal to hold rather than other commodities or securities. Wall street is taking a livelier interest in Cobalt stocks than for several years, and brokers there are predicting $10 for Nipissing; $6.50 for Coniages; $6 Kerr Lake; $2.50 Buffalo; $1.25 Timiskaming; McKinley $1; Beaver 65 cents, and Peterson Lake 40 cents. These look to be big advances will appear small during the boom.

There should be an effort on the part of every man who is not going overseas to turn out at these parades and get some instruction so that they may be better fitted for defence and maintainance of law and order. PRESENTED WITH A WATCH

Last evening a number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thompson, residing on Catherine street assembled at their home for the purpose of enjoying a social evening and also to make a presentation. Mr. Thompson is a member of the 155th Battalion, and in consequence is wearing the khaki. After the company had gathered at the home the object of their visit was apparent. Mr. Thompson was called upon and in a few appropriate words, Mr. R. H. Ketcheson on behalf of those gathered, presented him with a wrist watch. Although the recipient was completely taken by surprise he made an appropriate reply. The remainder of the evening was spent in games and music, and refreshments were served.

IN MEMORIAM

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear son Fred, who passed away one year ago today, April 29, 1915.

His sorrowing mother.

Within the Military Circle

BELLEVILLE

The 155th Battalion will attend Divine service at John St. Presbyterian Church to-morrow morning.

The strength of the 155th Battalion up to date is 1,148.

Lieut. Porter of the 155th Battalion returned this morning from Kingston, where he qualified in the examinations of the I.S.I.

Six men of the 155th battalion were passed by Dr. Harper at the Bridge St. Recruiting office yesterday.

Capt. Hyman of the 155th Battalion, has returned from Ottawa.

KINGSTON

Colonel Hemming has received a sample of the cap and collar badges of the 230th French-Canadian Battalion of Ottawa commanded by Lt.-Col. DeSalaberry. The badge is a most artistic one, and consists of a circular wreath of lillies and maple leaves, surmounted by the Royal crown, and at the base the Canadian Beaver. In the center is the fleur-de-lis, and on its face the battalion number, 230th. The badge is beautifully and appropriately conceived, and artistically executed.

Major Wilson is on the sick list. He is at his home in Belleville, suffering from an attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

The children of Ottawa have undertaken to furnish the 207th Battalion with bugles. Seven bugles costing $6.50 each have already been purchased by money collected by the children.

A small detachment of the A.S.C. are in camp getting things ready for the opening, early in May.

The battalions which will occupy Barriefield camp will be arranged from the western end of the camp grounds in the order of their numbers, beginning with the 77th and ending with the 256th. In this way it will be easy to find any battalion in camp.

The examinations for the school of signalling are over, and the men have all left for their different units.

The strength of an imperial battalion is 1,023. The Canadian authorities allow 1,052, without a base company, which has been abandoned in the establishment. The difference between the Imperial and Canadian strength is due to Canada making allowance for 30 bandsmen, who at the front act as stretcher-bearers and water carriers.

Officers commanding districts are allowing battalions to recruit an extra one hundred men to cover the real work of a base company, although no battalion can take a base company overseas, nor any number beyond the actual strength allowed, which is 1,052.

All units entering Barriefield camp this summer will have the required number if they enter with 1,052 men, and it now looks as though they will all have this number on entering.

Jatkins of the above township, had some cattle killed, and the affair was investigated by Detective Reburn, with the result that Sanford was arrested. The accused has been committed to the County Jail until Friday next, the 5th of May, when he will receive his trial. In the meantime he will remain in jail.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE SONS OF SATAN

The methods of a certain detective agency of ill repute which flourished on blackmail some ten years ago are faithfully reproduced in "Sons of Satan," the five-reel Red Feather Universal photoplay which comes to the Palace Theatre on Monday and Tuesday. This agency worked in conjunction with a scurrilous sheet which employed the servants of the metropolis to obtain the secrets of their employers. The back-stairs scullery maids were paid a few dollars for their slanderous gossip. Their reports were printed in the town gossiper or suppressed if a liberal consideration was forthcoming from the parties interested in the threatened exposure.

THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE

To do justice to the extraordinarily powerful photo-drama "The Battle Cry of Peace," which will be presented at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday and Thursday evenings one would have to write almost wholly in superlatives. A strong plot is needed to thread together scenes so stirring and so terrible as those of which the photodrama is full, and the unsupported appeal of which is at once so potent and so poignant. And the plot of "The Battle Cry of Peace" is the strongest of the strong. Chief among the characters are an ardent advocate of disarmament and his family, who are hoodwinked by a foreign "sympathizer," who is in reality a "Ruritanian" spy. The "Ruritanians"—the nation with which the United States is supposed to be contending—have, indeed, with a modified German helmet, adopted the full German moral code. When the crash comes the spy (splendidly played by Mr. L. Roger Lytton), who is in love with his dupe's daughter, fires at a passing "Ruritanian" regiment and succeeds in attaching responsibility for the deed to his rival (played by Mr. Chas. Richman), who with other helpers—civilians—is shot down by the troops, but escapes death —only to meet it later in attempting to rescue his fiananee—"dearer to me than life itself"—from the brutality of an officer. The girl kills the spy, only to fall into worse peril, and the tragic end of the story comes when the mother, locked in a room with her two daughters while invading officers carouse in the next apartment, kills both daughters and herself rather than submit to dishonor. Miss Norma Talmage, Miss Louise Beude, Mrs. Mary Maurice, and Mr. James Morrison have, with Messrs. Richman and Lytton, the principal parts. A special musical score, played by a large augumented orchestra, will be in itself a revelation of absolute appropriateness.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

The second night of "The Birth of a Nation" was given at Griffin's Theatre last night before an appreciative audience, the attendance, while large, not being as numerous as the merits of the production called for. The scene displayed and superb work of the orchestra were fully up to the standard, proving a marvel in unity of action. It will be repeated this evening for the last time.

ARRAH NA POGUE POSTPONED

In respect to the memory of the late Mrs. F. M. Barrett the performance of Arrah Na Pogue, which was to have been given Monday evening at Griffin's, has been postponed until the following Monday, May 8th. Three members of the Barrett family are in the cast. On that evening the performance of this the most beautiful of Irish plays will be given in its entireness, for the benefit of the 155th Batt C. E. F. Our own "Quinte Boys." The entire proceeds will be given to the regiment. No one connected with the performance receiving any remuneration whatever. Anyone having tickets can exchange same at Doyle's Drug Store on Friday, May 5th. The prices will remain the same, 25c, 50c and 75c.

How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take with each meal

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little, Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

"A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations. I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

..J. S. McKeown and W. H. Lattimer fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will gladly fill yours.

Over One Hundred Thousand in Line—Strike on Tugs and Barges Looked For

Canadian Press Special.

NEW YORK, May 1.—A parade of Labour demonstrators this afternoon is expected to be one of the most notable ever seen in New York. It is estimated one hundred thousand men and women will be in line, including sixty thousand garment workers locked out by employers in a contest over the closed shop question. A great mass meeting will be held in Union Square and thirty to forty smaller meetings throughout the city. Among the strikes looked for is one by the engineers on three hundred harbour tugs and one thousand barges, who asked for fourteen per cent. increase in wages.'

HEROIC GIRL WHO RESCUED WOUNDED

HOLYHEAD, April 29—Eye-witnesses arriving here state that when they left Dublin Thursday night Sackville street was completely in the hands of the rebels and was blockaded with barbed wire entanglements. Hundreds of visitors in the hotels were unable to get away. Looting of shops was in progress in many quarters and horses were lying dead in the streets.

A resident of London returning from Dublin praised the heroism of an Irish girl 16 years old who ran from her home like a deer in the face of a hail of snipers' bullets to rescue wounded soldiers. The informant said:

"She grasped a wounded soldier under the arms—a stranger to her for he had just arrived from England—and dragged him to where others stood ready to carry him to a hospital. Then back she ran for another of the stricken soldiers. Her example inspired scores. She repeatedly led nurses and doctors from a hospital, almost in the face of a rain of fire from buildings, to places where the wounded lay. Loud were the cries that she deserved a Victoria Cross."

ALLIED MACHINE GUNS DO HEAVY DAMAGE

Enemy Cannot Face the Shot and Shell Delivered By Expert Marksmen—Assaults and Counter Attacks Met With Withering Fire—Hill No. 304 Objective Of The German Troops

Canadian Press Special.

PARIS, May 1.—Afternoon statement—After a violent bombardment yesterday to the west of the River Meuse the enemy at the end of the day delivered a powerful attack in a dense formation upon the trenches captured by us to the north of Dead Man Hill. Our curtain of fire, together with the fire of our machine guns, caused enormous loss to the enemy and all assaults of the Germans were broken. To the north of Cumieres two German counter attacks delivered at about the same hour of the day upon a trench captured by us yesterday also were repulsed. In the course of the third endeavour at this point, the enemy, who had gained a footing in our lines, found it impossible to maintain his positions and he was at once driven back with heavy losses.

There has been a violent and continued bombardment of Hill No. 304, and also in the region of Vaux. The night was quiet in Woevre district.

During the night of April 29-30, French aeroplane squadrons threw down numerous projectiles on railroad station and supply and munitions station at Sebastopol, to the south of Thiacourt line at Etain on certain bivouacks near Spincourt and on the railroad station at Apremont, Grand Pre, Challerange and Vouziere.

During the course of these operations it was noticed that numerous fires broke out and a number of explosions were effected on the railroad.

FORTY-TWO MILLIONS PROFIT GAVE IT UP AND GOT ABUSE

Extraordidary Legal Position of the Four Manufacturers on the Bertram Shell Committee—War Office Refused to Regard Them in Any Way But in Role of Contractors

OTTAWA, April 29.—Messrs. Bertram, Cantley, Watt, and E. Carnegie, the four Canadian manufacturers on the Bertram Shell Committee, made a profit of $42,000,000 as the result of their operations up to November, 1915.

They were legally entitled to retain personally this $42,000,000 profit.

Instead, these four manufacturers, by a simple resolution, turned the $42,000,000 over to the Imperial Munitions Board which superseded the Bertram Shell Committee.

Sounds like a fairy story, but all the distinguished lawyers who have examined the relationship which existed between the Bertram committee and the war office agree with Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., that the facts are as stated.

When Sir Sam Hughes created the Bertram Shell Committee he had never an idea that the four named manufacturers were to be given any such Monte Cristo opportunity of coining money by the car load. His scheme was that he, as Minister of Militia, and the committee should be purchasing agents in Canada for the war office.

But the war office, while content to have Sir Sam as agents, refused to recognize Messrs. Bertram, Cantley, Watt, and E. Carnegie in any capacity other than as contractors.

The war office insisted upon these four men entering into binding contracts through Sir Sam Hughes to supply certain specified munitions in specified quantities and at specified prices. One such contract was made at the outset for 200,000 empty shells, another in July, 1915, for 5,000,000 completed shells, and there were still others.

"The contracting members" of the shell committee, to use Col. David Carnegie's term, solemnly obligated themselves personally to supply these munitions; as contractors they could have been sued personally by the war office for non-fulfilment; and as contractors they were legally entitled to all the profits connected with the deal.

Now, up to November, 1915, upon quotation given by them, the four contracting members of the shell committee had received orders from the war office for munitions to the appalling amount of $300,000,000.

They had sublet these orders to manufacturers, nearly all in Canada, at prices which showed a net profit of $42,000,000.

WORTHLESS CHEQUES PASSED IN KINGSTON

Young Man Believed to Be Member of a Gang Taken Into Custody

KINGSTON, May 1.—Special—In the arrest here of a young man, giving the name of Robert Coadkie, about 25 years of age, the police have one of a gang, who have been passing bogus cheques on the Department of Militia and Defence, and who have given the Dominion police a merry chase for several days. Coadkie was caught by the police at Marshall's hardware store, where he was endeavouring to pass a Government cheque for $20. Previous to this he had passed one for a similar amount at Mahood Bros.' store, and another at Livingston Bros. He went to the store of Kinnear and D'Esterre. Mr. Kinnear refused to accept the cheque, believing it to be forged and notified the police, with the result that Coadkie was rounded up. Inspector Parkinson, of the Dominion police, is here working on the case.

Coadkie arrived in Kingston Friday midnight, accompanied by a woman, and registered at the Randolph Hotel under "T. M. Grant and wife;" another man and woman registered at the same time and it is believed that the quartette are members of a gang putting over a smooth swindle on the Government. It is claimed that the prisoner in addition to registering at the Randolph, also registered at the British-American and appeared there in civilian clothes.

The head of the police departments of the various cities in Ontario have been notified of the operations of the gang referred to and also of their modus operandi. A man and two women are alleged to be members of the gang and their whereabouts are very much desired by the authorities. It was suspected that they came to Belleville some time Saturday, but every effort made failed to locate them here.

Oddfellows Hold Annual Church Parade

Both Lodges Visit Tabernacle in a Body—Rebekahs Also Attend Service—Appropriate Sermon

According to previous arrangement the Oddfellow lodges of Belleville, No. 81, and Mizpah 127, formed on Bridge street yesterday morning, and headed by the Oddfellows' Band marched to the Tabernacle Church, where they were joined by the Quintenna Lodge of Rebekahs. The centre of the auditorium was given over to the visitors, who numbered two hundred or more, and made a fine appearance, the uniforms of Belleville Canton, No. 8, being particularly attractive.

The pastor of the Tabernacle, Rev. S. C. Moore, also a member of the order, occupied the pulpit, and preceded his discourse with some interesting details regarding the number and work of Oddfellows in Ontario.

Taking for his text Philippians, 2, 4 "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others," the speaker drew from the words many admirable thoughts on the theme of action for the benefit of those around you. The subject had a close connection with the constitution of Oddfellowship, in that it had to do with a work for humanity in general.

The fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man, as recognized in the ritual of Oddfellowship bars atheism from the order. The prayer "Help me to live for others, that I may live for God," ever created an inspiration toward the serving of others; in serving humanity you are serving God; bless the next man to you, and that man will extend your blessing, creating a never-ending chain of blessings. Upon the cross Christ gave himself for others; He looked not upon His own things, but extended his life's work in the blessing of others.

Loving our neighbor means much; "to thyself be true," and you cannot be false to others; first seek to develop yourself, and then seek to develop others; measure up in your own home and you will be ready to serve others—richness in moral character means richness in all things. We cannot do without each other; let our acts for those about us demonstrate our love.

The chorus choir, in charge of Mrs. James Grant, added much to the interest of the service.

IRISH RIOTERS SUBMITTING IN GROUPS TO SOLDIERS

The Only Result of Rebellion is Destruction of Property and Loss of Life—Sniper Caught in a Chimney—Prisoners Will Be Dealt With According To Their Part In The Uprising

Canadian Press Special.

DUBLIN, May 1.—General [illegible] announced last night that reports from the country district showed quiet being restored everywhere, and the rebels coming in by groups to surrender especially at Ashbourne and Enniscorny. O'Reilly is one of the prisoners. The opinion prevails on every side that the only result of the rebellion has been the destruction of a certain amount of property, and the loss of several valuable lives of British soldiers. Many prisoners were captured redhanded with weapons. [illegible] of others are being detained on suspicion of complicity in the outbreak. One man was caught in a chimney, from which he had been sniping four days and nights. He held a position of trust in the office of a steamship company. The fate of the prisoners is in the hands of the Government, which possesses very wide powers under the martial law. Snipers who hold out will probably be dealt with very severely. The casualties so far are said to be numerous although the troops have not suffered as heavily as expected, considering the risky nature of their work, clearing houses from cellar to garret, which they undertake without hesitation. The rebels suffered severely, and hundreds of peaceful citizens were killed or wounded by them.

SMUT CAPTURES CONVOYS

LONDON, May 1.—Special—A British official communication concerning the operations against the Germans in East Africa says:

"Lieut. Gen. Jan Christian Smut's, commander of the expeditionary forces telegraphs under date of April 29, that his mounted troops captured in the vicinity of Kondoa, Irangi, various convoys of munitions, including two hundred slaughter oxen, eighty rifles, a large amount of ammunition, a herd of 600 mixed cattle and 200 donkeys with saddlery and supplies."

Tommies Are In Mud up To Their Armpits

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 26 (via London, May 1.)—The physical difficulty of an extended movement until dry weather sets in is exemplified by the experience of a battalion which took a section of a German trench on the Ypres-Langemarck road after two days' spring rains: The attacking forces sank up to their armpits in the morass, which was spotted with shell craters filled with water, helping themselves along with their rifles, half crawling, half swimming under shellfire.

After the trench had been taken the men dug out the wounded and those stuck in the mire who were not wounded. One Corporal, himself, wounded, took two and a half hours to bring another wounded man six hundred yards through a bog.

A German counter-attack, caught floundering in the mud by machine gun fire, gave up the attempt and withdrew.

Rapid Rise In Cobalt Stocks

Biggest Business in Years Done in the Silver Shares Today—Silver Goes Up Still Furthur

TORONTO, April 29.—Another two-cent jump in silver occurred to-day and the morning market whooped it up accordingly, doing more business in the two-hour session than they have often done lately for a whole week. There was heavy buying all through the Cobalt list and new high prices for the year were registered in many of them. Profit-taking was heavy, but the demand was so good that it had little effect on prices, which closed around the top. Sales ran close to 275,000 shares.

Local mining interests are highly jubilant, and claim that the market is on the verge of the biggest mining boom in history. The universal slogan is "watch our market from now on."

A bet was made yesterday in New York that silver would reach the dollar mark before September. The man who is making the bet is the same one who some months ago made the apparently rash assertion that silver would touch 70 before the first of May.

The public has scarcely realized as yet the meaning of the late remarkable appreciation, but is better able to do so when the statement is made that a car of ore shipped to Cobalt a week ago, and which has not yet reached its destination, has risen in value during transit to the extent of $5,000. The increase in the valuation of the natural output of the Temiskaming mine has now amounted to $220,000 annually in the last few weeks.

IRELAND'S BANK SAVED BY TRINITY COLLEGE LADS

Young Officers Drive off Rebels With Heavy Rifle Fire—Story Is Told By A Resident of Liverpool Just Returned From The Scene

LIVERPOOL, May 1.—Special.—How Trinity College students saved the Bank of Ireland is told by a resident of Liverpool, who has just arrived from Dublin.

"It was the intention of the Sinn Feiners," he said, "to take this institution and its valuable contents, and a body of rebels came along with the express purpose of putting their intention into execution. Opposite the bank stands famous Trinity College, where an officers' training corps of students is stationed, and the young officers had a warm reception in readiness.

"The rebels came along in great style, anticipating no trouble and shooting down the half dozen soldiers always on guard at the bank. But as they advanced there was a rifle volley and some of the attacking party dropped to the ground.

"The college had been transformed into a veritable fortress. In the windows were sandbags, loopholed, behind which the officers were waiting to give battle. The insurgents were stupefied, and for a moment hesitated as to what they should do. Then several sprang forward, shouting to their comrades, and the rebels pressed on.

"Again came a volley from the windows of Trinity College. More men fell, and the rebels broke in disorder and fled."

Tribute To The 80th Battalion

Mayor of Napanee Writes To Col. Hemming and Capt. Lockett Regarding Conduct

NAPANEE, April 29.—On the departure of the 80th Battalion from Napanee, the following correspondence took place, which speaks for itself.

Napanee, April 19th, 1915.

Col. T. D. R. Hemming,
Officer Commanding, Third District,
Kingston.

Dear Colonel:—

Following their orders, C Company, of the 80th Battalion left Napanee at noon today, in a very orderly manner. After my report to you on Sunday and the threatened disorder here and after the visit of Colonel Ketcheson with his Adjutant, Sunday afternoon, that the officers of the 80th would take special means to prevent any rioting or disorderly conduct by any members of "C" Company and pay what little damage had already been done in breaking windows. This understanding by the officers has been carried out to my entire satisfaction although I realize that under the circumstances it was no easy undertaking to fulfill, I having been one, in the ranks myself for a time, know the temperament of a corps when they are under excitement of passing to the front and moving out of a town. "C" Company has behaved exceedingly well with the exception perhaps of a very few. The personnel of this Company during the whole of their stay in Napanee, proved themselves to be exceptionally gentlemanly men and in no way took advantage of or abused the hospitality and liberty of the town, which were freely given to them by the citizens and corporation and I would ask on behalf of the Council and the citizens, that any slight disorder that might have occurred within the last few days be overlooked as a trifling matter and no discredit be brought to the record of the officers of the 80th, by reason thereof.

I must again thank you for your courteous treatment to me and the Town Council, and any troops that may be assigned to Napanee in the future will receive every kindness and attention from the town authorities and the citizens generally.

I have the honour to be,
your obedient servant,
G. F. RUTTAN.

NAPANEE, Ont., April 19th, 1915.

Capt. L. C. Locket
"C" Company, 80th Battalion,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Captain:—

I enclose you herewith a copy of a letter I am sending to the District Officer Commanding, which I hope will be satisfactory to you and to the Colonel of the 80th and will avoid any disagreeable trouble, to any of the officers from anything that might have arisen during your stay in Napanee.

Wishing "C" Company every success in their future activities and a safe return to Canada with all the honours that are possible to be obtained.

I have the honour to be,
Your obedient servant,
G. F. RUTTAN,
Mayor.

Headquarters, Military District No. 3,
Kingston, Ontario,
22nd of April, 1916.

My dear Mr. Mayor:—

I have your letter of the 19th instant, relative to the movement of "C" Company, C.E.F., from Napanee, and desire to express my appreciation of your kindly consideration regarding the behaviour of the troops during their stay.

Your remarks regarding the temperament of a corps, during the excitement of preparing to proceed overseas, are conclusive proof that you realize the difficulty experienced in maintaining absolute order and discipline among such troops and I am sure the officers of the 80th Battalion have performed their duty indefatigably.

Sincerely yours,
COL. R. HEMMING.

The Mayor,
Napanee, Ontario.

KINGSTON

The city of Ottawa is suffering among its business men from the passage of bogus military department checks. Several business men have been swindled for various amounts, and the police are making an effort to locate the perpetrators. All checks issued by the paymaster of a military district are printed specially for the use of the militia department, and it is said these have been cleverly imitated.

Maj. Wilson, D.A.A. and Q.M.G., for the third military district, is still confined to his bed at his home in Belleville with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE DAYLIGHT BILL

Belleville, Ont., May 1, 1916.
To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—You have doubtless noticed that in several cities in Canada and the United States the municipal councils have passed what is called "The Daylight Bill." This means that on 1st May the clocks are put forward one hour at midnight, and during the months from May to October all the people living in those municipalities have one hour more of daylight. During those months it becomes light from four to five in the morning, and most people are in bed an hour to three hours after daylight. By adopting this daylight scheme we arise one hour earlier in the morning and have one hour extra daylight in the evening. This has been in operation for some years in some parts of Europe and is found to be very satisfactory. After the first morning no one would ever know the difference as everything would go on in the regular way, except that we would be rising an hour earlier and retiring an hour earlier.

This would be a great boon to all people doing inside work; as factories, offices and shops would really be closing at five o'clock instead of six, leaving three to four hours of daylight for outdoor work or pleasure. As it now is we are in bed during the most beautiful part of the morning daylight hours and then sit up and burn artificial light in the evenings.

It is exactly the same as in travelling across the continent, where you have to change your watch an hour at various points, or in crossing the ocean, where you change your watch each night from thirty minutes to an hour, and when you arise in the morning you never know the difference.

As regards railway time tables we would just realize that trains arrived or departed one hour later than our clocks registered.

Is there any good reason why our Council should not pass this very desirable bill for Belleville?

Yours respectfully,
C. M. REID

Rids Poisons from the Blood Clears Up the Complexion

Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used

The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. The sallow complexion tells him that your liver is not doing its work; the pimples tell him that the kidneys are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons.

You can apply this test in your own case and may be able to add other symptoms, such as headaches, pains and aches through back and limbs, spells of biliousness and indigestion.

If you have not used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will be surprised to find how quickly they will rid your system of poisonous impurities and thereby remove the cause of pains, aches and skin troubles.

Mrs. F. N. Hall, 102 Queen street, St. John, N.B., writes: "I am glad to say I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with splendid results. I was greatly troubled with constipation and pimples on the face. I tried other remedies and used liquid arsenic three times a day for a year to get rid of the pimples but received no benefit. I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and it was not very long before I was completely cured. The pills acted on the bowels, kidneys and liver and cleansed them of all impure matter. I think they cannot be beaten as a means of ridding a person of that tired aching due to weak kidneys, and I would not be without them in the house for any money."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Gypsy Smith At Bridge St. Church

Well Known Evangelist Delivers two Discourses to Large Congregations

Gypsy Simon Smith, a well known evangelist, yesterday occupied the pulpit of the Bridge Street Methodist church in this city, and gave two sermons, which were appreciated by the congregations present. In the evening the subject of his discourse was "Conversion," and previous to its delivery he sang a solo entitled, "I Shall Know Him." He has a rather sweet tenor voice, which was heard to advantage in the hymn song.

In his opening remarks the speaker said the subject he would speak upon was a most important one, namely "Conversion."

Conversion may be a mystery, but the New Testament definition was easy to understand, namely that if any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things have passed away, and all things become new. What a fine thing it would be if all business men were converted. The speaker then referred to the mystery of the new birth, and stated that no man could explain the mystery of the new birth. Such a thing as conversion exists, as I have passed from death to life. It cannot be explained [illegible]. We cannot see the wind blow, but we can see the effects of it. You must exercise faith as we do [illegible]. No two persons in giving their testimony as to the hour they became converted, their story will be different, but we don't [illegible] the conversion. Conversion can take place the moment you say, "I will accept God." Memories of the past come to you, the voice of God through memory. Conversion can take place at any place and at any time. It will take place when we are willing to be converted. Whosoever will may come. There are the whosoever will and the whosoever won't. It takes different way for the Lord to convert. The Philippian jailer was converted by an earthquake, and the earthquake at Los Angeles caused more prayers to be said in that city than anything that had occurred before. The European war now being waged has caused Europe to bow down before God as never before. We want a spiritual earthquake in the churches to-day. We want an upheaval in our midst. We want something to arouse us. Some people imagine they will become good by attainment like a story. Some are trying to get converted in this way, but it cannot be done. There are steps leading up to conversion, and one is conviction. Do not mix conviction with conversion. The young man who said he would arise and go to his father was stricken with conviction, but was not converted. Gipsy Smith then related how he was convicted and how he became converted. Christ died of a broken heart on Calvary's Cross for sinners. He is ready and able to serve. In concluding the address the speaker appealed to the young people especially not to disappoint their parents, and especially their mother who was praying for them. It was a terrible thing to disappoint them, but a more terrible thing to Jesus Christ, who died for the redemption of all mankind. Repent and be converted.

At the conclusion of the sermon Prof. Cameron and Mr. Staples sang most effectively, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say."

ANAEMIC PEOPLE

NEED MORE IRON IN THE BLOOD.

If you are anaemic, you need more iron in your blood, and the tell-tale symptoms are a pale face,—colorless lips, ashen finger nails, poor circulation, and short breath, and more serious diseases are easily contracted when in this condition.

Mr. W. H. Hodges, of Kansas City, Mo., says:—"I suffered from the effects of bad blood, was run-down, dizzy, had headaches and did not feel like working. I had tried Beef Iron and Wine without any help. After taking Vinol four days I noticed an improvement and its continued use built up my blood and my bad feelings disappeared like magic."

The bad effects of poor, devitalized blood cannot be overestimated, and it is the peptonate of iron and the true cod liver extracts contained in Vinol together with beef peptone, that enriches the blood, improves the circulation and in this natural manner builds up health and strength. Try it on our guarantee. J. S. McKeown, Druggist, Belleville, Ont.
